AGRI-HORTICULTURAL DINNER, &c.

On Thursday evening last, at 7 o'clock, a party of about one hundred and fifty gentlemen, members and friends of the Agricultural Society, sat down to the Anniversary Dinner at the Town Hall. The repast, in material and arrangement, was in Science's best style, and gave universal satisfaction to the guests. Sir Edward Ryan was in the chair, and around him were seated some of the most distinguished characters of the presidency as well as some from other parts of India. Among the company were Sir Jasper Nicolls, the Commander in Chief, and many military officers, Sir J. P. Grant and several members of the Calcutta bar, including Messrs Clarke and Prinsep, the Governor of Serampore, Mr Marshman, of the Serampore Press and Messrs Smith, Stocqueler, and Johnson of the Calcutta Press. The mercantile interest had several representatives, and there was a very fair sprinkling of indigo planters and Mofussil gentlemen of all professions.

The festivities were enlivened by the attendance of the fine band of the Camerons, which performed a great variety of good old tunes in the usual brilliant and touching style.

On the removal of the cloth, the Chairman proposed the health of Her Majesty, which was drunk with an enthusiasm which testified that our young Queen is at all events, not very unpopular with her lieges in this distant part of her empire. The toast was welcomed with three times three cheers, the band playing the National Anthem.

The Chairman then, premising that he was happy to have to propose the toast in the presence of the Commander in Chief of the Army of India, gave THE ARMY AND THE NAVY, which toast was received with loud applause (Au—Rule Britannia)

SIR JASPER NICOLLS, in returning thanks on behalf of the Army said that he would gladly have said something for his own profession leaving the Navy, though he believed, unrepresented it to speak for itself, as it had done most ably, had it been necessary. But he believed that "the least said, the soonest mended," he was sure the Army would ever support its own honor, and that was all it was necessary for him to say of it. In the name of the Army he returned his hearty acknowledgments for the compliment they had paid it, and he hoped that himself and his brethren in arms, would ever deserve their regard. He then complimented the Society on its exertions to promote the good of the country, and testified from his own personal observation, that, though yet but in its infancy it had done much towards forwarding the true prosperity of the land.

The Chairman then proposed the health of Lord Auckland, whom he described as one of the most efficient patriots of the Society; one who, to the great power and influence, he could bring into operation for the promotion of the objects of the Society, added a thorough knowledge of those subjects to which the careful attention of the Society was more particularly devoted. In proof of this, Sir Edward instanced his Lordship's very able minute relative to the cultivation of cotton in this country, a Minute which he (Sir E.) supposed, had been read with admiration by most of those whom he was addressing.

The toast was drunk with cheers, the band playing "The Sprig of Shillelah."

SIR J. P. GRANT then rose and said, that he had the Chairman's permission to propose a toast which he was sure would meet with the warmest approbation of the company. It was the health of a distinguished guest; a countryman of one to whom the Society was very much indebted, indebted even for its very existence. This he was sure no small recommendation to their illustrious guest, but he was happy to be able to add, that he could recommend him on account of his own services in their cause. He knew that the gentleman to whom he alluded had done all in his power to forward the interests of Agriculture, ever since he had become an inhabitant of this country. With these recommendations he had no doubt they would with pleasure drink the health of the GOVERNOR OF SERAMPORE.

When the toast had received due honor, the Governor of Serampore returned brief, but evidently heart-felt thanks, for their kind remembrance of him.

J. H. STOCQUER, Esq, then rose and spoke to the following effect. When I was an interesting youth, of about twenty years of age, there were two actors at Covent Garden Theatre. One was a John Kemble, of whom you may have heard, who performed Brutus, Coriolanus, and all the first rate tragic characters, the other was a Mr. Atkins, John Thomas or Richard, of whom, I dare say, none of you ever had the honor of hearing, who used to shift the scenes, carry banners and was occasionally allowed the high honour of snuffing the candles. Now it so happened one night, that the great man, Mr. Kemble, being unwell, and the manager being put to his wits to fill up the vacancy suddenly made in the list of characters for that night, Mr. Atkins was permitted to read the part of Hotspur, which had been assigned to his more highly famed brother player. He read the part and esteemed himself a great man ever after. A parallel case, gentlemen, is about to be presented to you in this room. In consequence of Mr. Norton's unavoidable absence, I have been called upon to read his part. And when you remember what he, if he had been here, would have said, and imagine the manner in which he would have said it, you will be ready to agree with me, that a bare reading of it will be all you will get from me. But yet I am as proud of my temporary dignity as Mr. Atkins was of his, and would as unwillingly give it up, and, as I dare say he did, I will do my best to maintain

It. If I was disposed to say as much in the way of compliment to a man's face as I would behind his back, I could do it largely upon the excellence of the distinguished individual whose name I am about to mention, I would take you to the Supreme Court, and there show you that individual sitting as a Judge, and dispensing justice between man and man honestly and impartially, but I cannot do so without offending the modesty of that person, so I will forbear; I might also take you to the Council-Chamber of the Education Society, and show you that person dispensing the benefits of instruction through the country, I would take you to the chambers of the Asiatic Society, and show him there forwarding the spread of knowledge of this country, and of its inhabitants. And only look to what that individual to whom I allude, and to whom can I allude, but to Sir EDWARD RYAN (loud cheers) has done for this Society, how much he has contributed to forward its prosperity, and to extend its influence. He is now brought to trial, for what he has been doing for years past. He often sits in judgment upon others, he must now expect to be judged himself. If he is now acquitted of having done anything for this Society, you will receive my toast in contemptuous silence. If you find him guilty of having done every thing in his power for the Society, of having devoted his business like hahna to spread its benefits throughout the country; as I would say, gentlemen, he is guilty, you will pronounce sentence upon him to have his health drunk with three times three. And now, without troubling you with the evidence, guilty or not guilty?—(Cries of Guilty! Guilty! and long continued laughter and cheers.) Atr. "St. Patrick's Day in the morning."

SIR EDWARD RYAN, Gentlemen I appear before you as a convicted felon, and receive with all humility, the sentence just upon me. To say that such a sentence is unjust, would not be decorous in me, after conviction of the offence of which you have pronounced me guilty. I therefore submit to my fate and thank you for your mercy (Laughter.) I might say a word or two about the gentleman who has undertaken, as he says, to read the part assigned to another person. I only wish that all actors would perform their parts as well as he does his. I might ask you, in return for the kind turn he has done me, to convict him of having acted his part to admiration. But I would rather devote the few words with which I shall trouble you, to some remarks and congratulations upon the state and prospects of our Society. I am going to propose as your next toast the prosperity of that Society, and before I do so, I may be permitted to show you how it is flourishing (cheers) I am happy to announce that such is its present state. The state of its finances is most cheering. The number of its members continues to increase year by year, as I have had year after year the pleasure of informing you. This last year we have added to our list 95 members, making a total at this present time of 485. I would next allude to the class of which our Society is made up, and to a remarkable fact attendant upon its gradual increase.* It has been observed that whenever a great deficiency was found and remarked in any particular class, the Society has immediately received a considerable accession from that class. Such has been the case with the Indigo Planters in particular; for two years a great deficiency had been observed in the actual number of those on the list, when compared with that of the profession in this part of the country. Now they ranked next to the civil service, which stood first, having a hundred and fifty names in our list, while the Indigo Planters have now a hundred and four. I hope and expect that we shall yet have a further increase from the class so much within the sphere of our operations. In the instance of one class we have still to lament a great deficiency. We have very few native members. I speak in the presence of a native gentleman of much influence among his countrymen, (Prothonotary Tagore) and who takes a great interest in their prosperity, which he is one much to forward, and I tell him, I tell you all that I regret exceedingly to announce, that we have yet only twenty native members. That, from a class who have so large an interest in the results of this Society's labours, so few should come forward to join us, seems strange and is most certainly to be deeply deplored. But I will not trouble you with dry details of numbers, but will hasten to tell of what we have been doing. But first I may be excused reiterating in few words the assurance that the Society is still increasing in numbers and strength. At the last meeting sixteen new members were proposed. An increase in the number of members is always desirable, it gives an addition to the funds of the Society, and thereby increases its power of doing good. We have now in hand a balance of Rs. 12,000, arising from the subscriptions of our members. Such is a general statement of the means of the Society at the present time, and of its expectations for the future.

And now, gentlemen, a word or two on what we have been doing during the year. It is too much to practice in India to think that Societies of this kind do not progress with sufficient rapidity. It is not the same here as in England, from the nature of things we can proceed here only slowly. I cannot give you a better instance of how slow a progress we must make, than by referring to my statement that we have as yet only twenty native names upon our roll. And these few are not of such as are exclusively zemindars, of those we have not one, but of the mercantile and other gentlemen of Calcutta and the vicinity. And yet it is only by native agency that the great objects of the Society can be fully carried out; judge then how slow our progress must be. Our Society cannot be assimilated to those of Europe, in their rapid strides to prosperity and usefulness; we must patiently await the operation of time in our behalf.

And now, after this digression, a word or two as to what we are doing. We have become to a certain extent the organ of the Government for the collection and arrangement of statistical information relative to its territories. A reference has been made to us for the purpose of obtaining an account of the products of each zillah or district, and the prices which those obtain in the various marts. We have undertaken by a Committee to obtain the desired information, and at a considerable expense of time and trouble, we have formed a statement which is in the course of preparation which we shall lay before the Government and I trust it will be ere long before the public.

To turn to another subject. We have endeavoured to introduce the cochineal, the true grana hua, into this country, and for that purpose have been engaged in various experiments, the result of which is yet to be known. We have got the tree insect from the Isle of Bourbon, from whence it was procured for us through the kindness of M. Rodier the Governor of Chandernagore.

While on this subject it is well paid I have to allude to the loss the Society has sustained in the death of one of its ablest and most indefatigable members—I refer to the late Mr. George Pringle. He it was who first proposed and materially assisted in carrying into effect the experiments to which I have called your attention.

We have, as I have informed you, endeavoured to carry out the object of the Government in the reference already alluded to, and now I may have made another reference to us on a subject of great importance to the welfare of this country. The Court of Directors are extremely anxious to ascertain if by the introduction of qualified planters from America, and the construction of proper machinery, this country can be made to produce cotton of quality and value equal to that of the United States. They have referred the question to our Society, and solicited our advice as to the means it would be best to employ to further the desired end. We shall determine at our next meeting what course we shall recommend the Government to adopt, and our report will be before the public in due time. In the meantime I may say that it seems to be the opinion of most of us, that we should recommend Government to introduce the foreign seed and the improved modes of dressing the cotton for the market. We shall, I believe, further recommend the offer of premiums for the cultivation of cotton to a large extent. The cultivation of it to a small extent is of no value as an experiment. It is only by the production of large quantities that we can ascertain whether or not the country could produce cotton of a staple to compete with that of America.

I will next refer you to our endeavours for the improvement of the sugar manufacture of this country. With this object in view, we have endeavoured to procure the best Orinole cane, and I am happy to say we have been successful. We have procured the cane to a large amount, so large indeed that we distributed in six weeks 32,000 of them. We shall shortly have more to distribute to those who apply for them. We hold nothing but for the purpose of distribution, and we have devoted much pains to the collection of seeds, plants, &c. of species which we desire to see introduced into, or improved in this country, and these we are ever happy to distribute to those who will undertake their cultivation.

There are many other subjects about which I might talk to you for some time longer, but I am afraid I should tire you. I will barely allude, then, to our endeavours to introduce an improvement in the rearing of silk worms and in the management of their cocoons. We have offered a large premium with this object, and a further sum of Rs. 500 has been offered by one individual, Capt. Jenkins, for the same purpose.

In conclusion I will briefly advert to the losses the Society has sustained in some of its valuable members, in addition to that of Mr. George Pinsep, which I have before touched upon. Death has deprived us of one of our most active and talented supporters, the late Mr. Ewart Mr. Cherrin, another zealous member of our association, has gone to Europe, and last though not least we have lost in the same way the late Commander in Chief, Sir Henry Fane, who ever displayed a great patriotism, and a thorough practical knowledge of Agriculture. I have now troubled you with my observations to a considerable extent, but will do so no further than to propose the toast which I have to recommend to you. PROSPERITY TO THE AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF BENGALEE.

THE CHAIRMAN then awarded medals to the following gentlemen, who had earned them by their successful endeavours to promote the objects of the Society.

To M. B. dier, the first prize, a gold medal, for introducing the true Cochineal insect from Bourbon into this country.

To Mr. W. F. Gibbon, a gold medal for the best wool ram, and a silver medal for the second best ditto.

To Mr. W. G. Rose, for the best sample of raw silk, and

To Mr. W. Ballestier, of Singapore, for the best Muscovado sugar.

This business finished, Sir Edward Ryan called on Mr. Stockequer to favour the company with a song. Mr. S., obligingly disposed to obey the call, forthwith commenced a song, composed, it is said, by Capt.

McNaghten, expressly for this occasion. Finding, however, that his vocal powers had not completely overcome their after dinner lethargy, he went no farther than the second stave, and begged to be excused from further exertion at that early period of the evening promising, however, to call upon to give the entire song at a later hour. Unfortunately, however, the song seemed to have vanished from the memories of Sir Edward and the guests, for no farther mention was made of it. The Englishman has, much to its credit, prevented this unjustly slighted chanson from sinking into silence into oblivion, by pre-erring it in its columns. As "for once in a way" we agree with the Englishman in thinking it "as a composition, much too good to be lost," we readily do what we can to prevent its becoming an abortion, and going to the place of things that were,

"Unread, unhonoured, and unused"

SIR J. P. GRANT rose to propose another toast. After, he said, the exposition which had been given of the successful labours of the society, it would be unnecessary to make any encroachment upon the time of the company, by enumerating the benefits which such associations were calculated to bestow upon the country. Nothing more would be necessary than for him to propose the Agricultural Societies of India at large. Besides the sixteen branches of this, the parent society, scattered over this part of the country, similar societies had existed at Madras, Bombay, Singapore, and Malacca. These, in disclosing, and tending to render available the Agricultural resources of the country, must contribute greatly to the prosperity not only of their own localities, not only of India, but of the mother country, of England itself. It was very true, he observed, that the number of these societies was but small in proportion to the extent of country over which they were scattered; but things of this kind must necessarily be begun with small means. They had not the means of proceeding with rapid strides, but when the work was once begun, and the seeds sown, they might look forward with confidence to an abundant harvest of prosperity.

SIR JOHN then proposed the AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETIES OF INDIA, and the toast was drunk with much applause.

LOXOUVILLE CLARKE, Esq., then rose and said, Gentlemen, I have received a secret command, I have been told that I must propose the next toast and I need scarcely say that our President could hardly command anything which I or any one here would not attempt. We have drunk the health of the noble patron, and of the chairman of the society, but there are others whom gratitude calls upon us to remember. Societies of this kind always remind me of the economy of the vegetable kingdom. As a tree draws its nourishment from the root, so have our societies their subscription list, from which they draw their strength and their power of doing good. Again a tree has its stem, and whether it be that of the British oak or of the cedar of Lebanon, still it may be compared to our admirable president, the stem, the support of our society. Again, from the stem we have the branches which collect the nourishment of, and are the ornaments of the tree; so in the talents of a Wallich and a Robinson have we the life and health of our society. We have drunk the president, the stem, let us now drink to the noble branches of the society. THE VICE PRESIDENTS. (Drunk with cheers).

DR. WALLICH then addressed the company to the following effect. Gentlemen, I stand forth on behalf of myself and colleagues, to return thanks for the honour you have rendered us. For them I do it without embarrassment; but for myself, I feel that I scarcely deserve your kindness, for if I have done anything for the society, I have done nothing more than my duty. But I may assure you that my heart and my best endeavours have been and ever shall be devoted to the interests of the society. Gentlemen, I have to propose a toast which I am sure will kindle a glow of gratitude in every heart. We have paid a just tribute of highly merited respect to the living, let us now pay the merited of gratitude and veneration to the memory of one who is now no more; of one who when living stood forth the foremost in his exertions for the welfare of this society, and who may be said, even from the grave to influence us in our labours. Gentlemen, I need not assure you with what diffidence I enter upon the task which has been assigned to me. Year after year have I entreated that this task might be entrusted to able hands than mine, and into hands less capable of doing it justice, it could not possibly fall. I shrink from it when I consider the eloquence to which you have already listened, and to which you will doubtless yet listen this evening. All I can do is to claim your indulgence, and to entreat of you to take the will for the power.

Gentlemen, we have this evening heard repeated statements of the wonderful progress made by the society during the past year, of its increasing means, of its increased objects of exertion. We have been gratified by a detail of those objects, which are such as do honour to those engaged in their prosecution. To have been the founder of a society like this, to have founded it, to have inspired feelings which have led to such results, might be the object of ambition to the best of men. But the illustrious individual who founded this association, in a sphere of action was not confined to this. His whole life was devoted to acts of beneficence, to promoting the glory of God. No mortal ever lived less for self, cared less for self, or cared more for mankind at large than he, Dr. CAREY (cheers) I do do good in the greatest proportion to all, and to injure nobody, were the chief aim and object of his life. Gentlemen, what would that venerable man have said, what would have been the feelings of that noble heart, could he have had the satisfaction of hearing what we have heard announced from the chair this evening? His heart would have danced within him for joy.

But it was not in agriculture or in matters connected with this society only, that Dr. Carey was distinguished. We read of him as one of that illustrious band, the missionaries of Serampore, men whose lives were devoted to the dissemination of our holy religion in this land. As a linguist he was respected for his talent. As an Oriental scholar he was one of the first of his day in his knowledge of the various languages of the East. Such, Gentlemen, was the founder of this society, such was the man to whose memory I call upon you to do honour. I am ashamed to speak of the benefits I have personally received from my beloved friend, benefits which commenced from the day of his landing in India, and continued to the day of his death. I feel myself unable adequately to express my obligations to him. I will, therefore, content myself with simply proposing the toast with which I am proud to be entrusted. But while I do this, allow me to exceed a little the limits assigned me, and permit me to introduce the name of one whom I am sure Dr. Carey, if he had lived, would have been happy to know—the name of William Leycester. I never in my life witnessed such devotion to Horticulture as in him, except in the founder of this society. His income, his house, his splendid library, all were at the service of any one who would use them in the promotion of his favourite science. I cannot illustrate his zeal for the cause in a more striking manner, than by showing you how, on his return from the Cape, whither he had gone for the recovery of his health, he engaged three cabins in the ship which brought him back to this country; one for himself, and two for the plants which he had collected during his sojourn at the Cape.

I will now conclude with calling upon you to drink with full glasses and full hearts, but in solemn silence, to the memory of the illustrious founder of this society, Dr. CAREY.

(Drunk accordingly)—Air "The light of other days"

CHARLES PRINCEP, Esq. The Stewards have called upon me to propose a toast which they certainly might have entrusted to a more impartial and disinterested person, though not to one who would give it more willingly. I was born and bred, gentlemen, in the metropolis of the commerce of the world when at the zenith of its prosperity. So nurtured, I learnt to know the value of commerce and to appreciate the worth of those who were engaged in it. Judge then, gentlemen, if I can speak impartially, on this important branch of our national resources, and of the members of the mercantile profession. Alas, as an agnostic, for strange as it may seem to some who see me here, I am both a farmer and an Indian planter, I cannot but feel assured that when I invoke success for the enterprising sons of Commerce, I am wishing my own prosperity. But as that is a wish which I may innocently indulge, I will with full confidence and without further stoppage of that intimating medium which is the soul of trade, propose my toast of PROSPERITY TO THE MERCHANTS OF CALCUTTA.

JOHN ALLAN, Esq., returned thanks briefly, but with feeling, for the protestation of which he is an esteemed member.

H. PIDDINGTON, Esq., then rose and addressed the company, in a speech replete with eloquence and of considerable length. We regret, however, that as the whole length of the table was, most unfortunately, between us and the speaker, who, moreover, spoke somewhat rapidly and in a rather low tone, we could not note down his oration with sufficient accuracy to enable us to give a connected report of it. So far as we could collect the meaning of the orator, it was to the following purport. After pointing out the triumphs of Agriculture in America and the rapid strides it had taken since the first colonization of that country by the English, about 230 years ago, he exhibited the crimes which that country had upon the kind remembrance of us here in India. He then drew a forcible contrast between the agriculturist of America and the native of India, the energy and industry of the former, and the apathy and indolence of the latter. He pointed out the causes of this difference, attributing the apathy of the native of India to the absence of all motive to exertion. "We take away," said Mr. P., "all the springs of action, and then we blame him because he won't go!" The Hindoo, he said, was not always so indolent and apathetic, and there was a time when the Hindoo had his colonies, his kingdoms and empires far away from his native land. He hoped that the active agriculturist would yet have motives of action presented to him, and that he would again take his place in the scale of nations, and emulate the active and energetic agriculturists of the United States. He concluded by proposing THE AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

(Drunk with cheers)—Air "Yankee Doodle."

Dr. HOFFMANN, in returning thanks, said,

This is the fourth occasion, gentlemen, upon which I have had the honour to represent the agriculturists of the United States, and to acknowledge on their behalf your flattering brotherly remembrance.

I would be destitute of all sensibility if I could witness the kind manner in which you have received Mr. Piddington's very eloquent address, without being grateful, and under the influence of such feelings, I offer you my sincere thanks.

The formation of associations similar to your own, has materially promoted the advancement of agriculture, as a science throughout the United States. The American farmer is not the mere "hewer of wood and drawer of water," by ingeniously constructing his implements of husbandry he contrives to save his labour; and by judiciously feeding the soil to enhance the value of his land. In India, gentlemen, with many difficulties to encounter, you have an immense field for improvement before you—deep-rooted prejudices—and an utter detestation for all innovation are to be overcome, but the prospect of gain, must eventually prove an irresistible temptation, in your favour. Go on then, and prosper. Again accept my thanks for your recollection of my countrymen, and best wishes from the other side of the globe for your complete success in remedying the defects, and hastening the improvement of agriculture, in a land, where Nature does so much and Man so little.

BABOO PR SONOOGOMAR TAGORE, in a neat speech, described the advantages of Agriculture to the colonies of England, and through them to England itself. He then referred to the President's remark upon the limited number of natives who had joined the Society and attributed it to the want of education among them which rendered them blind to their own true interests. With regard to the observation that the United States had in about two hundred years made such progress in Agriculture and Commerce, he remarked that it was only of late years that they had made that progress, and that if they would wait for his countrymen, after having spread the benefits of education among them, half as long as they had waited for the Americans, they would find them coming forward to join the Society in such numbers as would give them a large majority over the European members. In conclusion, he begged to be allowed to propose as a toast, PROSPERITY TO COLONIAL AGRICULTURE, (Drunk with cheers.)

DR. SPRY. Gentlemen, I have to propose the Committee of Agriculture and Commerce of the Royal Asiatic Society. I do it with more than ordinary pleasure, as I consider myself in a manner connected with it. When in London in the winter of 1835, I was present at and took a part in some of the preliminary meetings which led to the establishment of that Committee, and was present to witness its official introduction to public notice. It is intended for the special promotion of the Agricultural and Commercial interests of India, and was established through the exertions of a few friends to the cause, who thought that their object would be best promoted by having a section, a committee of its own, apart from, and yet in connection with the Parent Society. The good this Committee has done you all well know. It is presided over by one of the ablest men the Bengal Government ever had in its service, a man, who though retired from the service of the Government, still gives his attention, and exercises the strongest energies of his mind in the promotion of the benefit, and the development of the resources of this fertile land. The name of Mr. Holi Mackenzie is too well known amongst you to require any eulogium which I could bestow upon him. With him is associated in the Committee, Dr. Royle, a gentleman whose talents have rendered his name famous throughout the world; who has produced a work in which is blended such a knowledge of science with what is more plainly useful, as renders his book most acceptable to the general reader, and thus renders it capable of producing the greatest good. After some further eulogiums on Dr. Royle, Dr. Spry proceeded—The last year, gentlemen, may be considered as an era in the annals of British India, for never has the public mind in Europe been more fully alive to the claims of India, and we hear of the establishment of associations at home for the purpose of watching and protecting its interests. Among other things which deserve particular attention, is the resolution to send out teachers to instruct the natives in the most approved processes of agriculture and of husbandry. This, however, is not a new idea. So long ago as 1670, when our trade was confined to the little port of Hooghly, there were two companies of English traders in the land. One of these rival companies sent out weavers and dyers for the express purpose of teaching the natives to please European fancies. Now various bodies at home, beside the Government, have it in contemplation to repeat the same thing; to send men out for the purpose of teaching the natives, if not to please European fancies, to teach them something more useful, how they may most largely benefit themselves. The Committee to which I have been calling your special attention, is particularly addressing itself to this object, and it is therefore with much confidence and satisfaction that I call upon you to join me in the toast. Success to the Committee of Agriculture and Commerce of the Royal Asiatic Society. (Cheers.) Air—"Over the hills and far away."

THE CHAIRMAN then proposed the health of the worthy Secretary to the Society, Dr. Spry, and the toast was welcomed most heartily, the band playing, "Burns's Farewell."

DR. SPRY, in returning thanks, assured the members of the Society, that his most strenuous exertions had been, and should ever be devoted to the welfare of the Society of which he had the honour to be the Secretary.

G. W. JOHNSON, Esq., then rose and spoke as follows:—Mr. President and gentlemen, I feel much confidence in proposing to you the toast which has been entrusted to me for that purpose, not because I place too much reliance on my powers of doing it justice, but because it is one of those to which you would give your warmest pledges, even if no one should speak a word for it. The toast is "Success to the Indigo Planters and other Agriculturists of India." I conceive that in those few words we have laid before us the object for which this Society was established. And for British India, at least the expression may be allowed to be much to the point. When we reflect what has been the fate of Commerce, how it has passed from land to land, from Venice to Holland, from Holland to England, and how America is now sharing it with the mother country. With manufactures it is the same; the Flemings were once called the world's weavers, now England has deprived them of the title. With Agriculture it is not thus. It remains the same for ever. Look at England, there Agriculture has ever been a prominent object of attention, and there it has always prospered, and such is its state there now. I have been forestalled in some observations which I intended to make upon the Agriculture of India, I will therefore content myself with drawing your attention for a moment to some improvements in the Agricultural prospects of India? Whatever have been the obstacles to its progress (and it is certain there have been obstacles) they are now being rapidly removed. If you refer to the pages of History, you will find that wherever Agriculture has been established it has still continued to proceed till it arrived at the height of prosperity and usefulness, India has many advantages over other nations in the prosecution of Agricultural pursuits; independent of her vast resources she has the command of labour at the lowest possible minimum. There are other topics to which I would gladly direct your attention, but I will not so wear away the evening. But I must say a few words on one subject connected with the interests of this society and of Agriculture in general. There is about to be established an association of Indigo Planters which, if it avoids one stumbling block will, beyond doubt, become a most useful and efficient coadjutor of this Society. If they avoid becoming political they will do well. I would strongly recommend them to eschew politics above every thing else. I am sorry that I do not see around me more of the class of which I am speaking. I have heard that Indigo Planters are a great horror of venturing within the precincts of the Supreme Court, but I think it must be a mistake. I think at all events that if some of the A^s had been here, and heard the kind manner in which our worthy president has referred to them, they would not have been glad in venture and would, if they had come, have found us treat them as old friends. Watson recommended the angler to treat his bait "tenderly as if he loved him." In conclusion let me request you to drink from the bottom of your glasses and from the bottom of your hearts, PROSPERITY TO THE INDIAN PRATIVES. (Cheers) Aye "Hurrah for the bonnets of blue."

THOMAS BRACKEN, Esq. The task I have undertaken is an easy one, but it is one which I have no right to be called upon to perform, for I am sitting under false colours. I have no right from any knowledge I possess to be a steward of this Society. I protested against being made a steward, but except as a rather steady consumer of the products of Agriculture, I had no claim to the honour. Having thus promised it, I will propose my toast, which is one that I am sure you will all respond in with pleasure. I will venture to say that whatever differences there may have been upon minor points, there has been amongst the body whom we are about to pledge, no difference among them when they spoke of this Society. On this, as on every subject affecting the true interests of the country, they were unanimous. Allow me then, gentlemen, to propose to your warmest remembrance THE PRAIRIES OF INDIA. (Drank with three cheers.)

Messrs. SMITH, STROQUEN and JONNISON, the Editors of the Hucknuck, Englishman and Courier, here stood up in acknowledgment of the toast and the first, as senior member of the press of Calcutta said as follows.—On this occasion, at least, though I don't happen to be either "grandmother" or grandfather of the Press, yet as one of its members is rather young in the business, and my half-brother on my right is so extremely modest as always to make way for me—I take upon myself to return you thanks for the honour you have done us. Honourable mention has been made of our services in behalf of this Society, but I am sure that if the gentlemen of the Press had neglected to give their best exertions to the cause, they would have failed in their duty to the public. We are not always unanimous on all subjects as you very well know, but on this we are and ever have been, and I hope ever will be, unanimous. We all I am sure, feel most grateful for the honour you have done us, and will ever strive to deserve it. I will not trouble you with a long speech at this hour of the evening, but will content myself with assuring you, that as we have here, I am sure, so we shall all do our best to promote the interests of Agriculture in India. (cheers)

J. H. STROQUEN, Esq., said, for once in a way I coincide with my morning contemporary. But for myself I feel that I do not deserve the honour you have done me as I am constantly receiving flappers from Dr. Spry for not inserting the Society's reports which I have been sometimes compelled by the press of more urgent matter, most reluctantly to postpone. I will, however, behave better hereafter, and publish them all without delay, even let them be twelve yards long. (Laughter and cheers).

G. W. JONNISON, Esq., added his acknowledgements to those of his brethren, and returned thanks for the honour done him.

Mr. SMITH again rose and said, that he had just learnt that there was another member of the press in the room who had not been upon his legs to acknowledge the toast. The gentleman certainly was not a member of the press of the metropolis, but the toast was the press of India, and he thought a member of the Serampore press ought to acknowledge it. He hoped the gentleman would rise and return thanks like the rest of his brethren. (Hear.)

Mr. MARRINWAY, of the Serampore press, got up and returned thanks accordingly.

SIR EDWARD RYAN then said, that there was one toast which he had yet to present to them. Had Mr. Furion been here they would have heard something about the Precursor Steam Association, but for himself he would say nothing of particular schemes, but would speak of Communication with Britain by steam. As to the merits of the Comprehensive and the Precursor, there might be and there had been differences of opinion; but as to the necessity for a more efficient and certain communication by steam, there was but one opinion. There could be no doubt we were in hard circumstances, looking for news from Europe which still did not come. He would say nothing then of Comprehensive or of Precursor, but give them COMMUNICATION BY STEAM. (Loud Cheers).

The party broke up a few minutes before 11 o'clock, having passed the evening in the most perfect harmony and social enjoyment.

THE UNSUNG SONG.

While some plough the ocean, and others the land,
And all reap their harvests, let us keep our hand,
To the hoe, pruning knife, dibble, and spade.
Let some of us turn some study, so we fight,
And Ne clout out Dives die I've seen a sight,
O'er the heavens and the earth, to guide enterprise on,
We may honestly boast of what triumphs are won,
With the hoe, pruning knife, dibble, and spade.

Though nature has cursed on the soil in my love cast,
We can make it a bar, smiling garden at last,
With the hoe, pruning knife, dibble, and spade.
If we will do it, its powers we can use,
From a lot with luxuriance its virtue release,
And by culture improving it, as noted by skill,
Can it be a bright Eden where it will,
With our hoe, pruning knife, dibble, and spade.

For it is given to make gardens appear,
Where before might be thought a wilderness drear,
With the hoe, pruning knife, dibble, and spade.
To nature a guide at the worth we impart,
Lays the plot for the fruit tree's silent art,
And by culture improving it, as noted by skill,
Can it be a bright Eden where it will,
With our hoe, pruning knife, dibble, and spade.

The mountains are rugged, the rocks bleak and bare,
The jungle is wild, for the magic is not there,
Of the hoe, pruning knife, dibble, and spade.
But before our approach, the wild aspects give way,
For the cracks may be dug in our final day,
And the rough face of soil may yield to our toil,
And the rough, solid soil, change its frown to a smile,
By the hoe, pruning knife, dibble, and spade.

Thus here, where the soil 'neath a vertical sun,
Is by noxious and coarse vegetation overrun,
With our hoe, pruning knife, dibble, and spade,
With industrious diligence the evil overgrow,
And compel the far west pulse and fruit to grow,
Till the millions over whom Britain's scepter extends,
Acknowledge the honours which it from such friends
As the hoe, pruning knife, dibble, and spade.

The husbandman joys in his grain teeming field,
But the sweet with the untolled harvest yield,
But the hoe, pruning knife, dibble, and spade.
But his flourishes without any domain,
And Pomona rewards with profusion our pains,
By our hands ye shall know us, for bush, bed, and tree,
Are laden with fruits of how potent we are,
With the hoe, pruning knife, dibble, and spade.

The garden was man's first and fairest abode,
And supplied all his wants, without labor bestowed,
With the hoe, pruning knife, dibble, and spade.
But when barrenness fell on the doom-stricken land,
And the sweat of his brow, and the toil of his hand,
Were needful to draw its reluctant gifts forth,
It was then he was taught to conquer the earth,
Of the hoe, pruning knife, dibble, and spade.

Then still let us labor our blessings to shed,
On the face of the land, and its fruitfulness spread,
With the hoe, pruning knife, dibble, and spade,
May the Gardener and Farmer together contend,
Who most shall the land which they live in befriend,
Till over the nations at length it be poured,
The wide Cornucopia, overflowing stored,
By the plough, reaping hook, dibble, and spade.

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL EXHIBITION.

The annual exhibition of vegetables and fruits at the Town Hall yesterday, attracted a large concourse of ladies, gentlemen, ~~babas~~ and ~~babas~~ of every colour, class and age. The sides of the hall were crowded with ed the place, inspecting the specimens. The best specimens having been removed to the table, the distribution of prizes commenced. From these best samples we were sorry to find, that in some respects the present exhibition was not near so satisfactory as in the last and some former years. The cabbages, for instance, did not appear to be of that giant growth, as we have had some specimens on previous occasions, nor were there any extraordinary sized carrots and turnips. There were, however, very fair specimens of celery, red heat and beans, both the French and English broad beans. Among the fruits there were none of a remarkable sort, but a bundle of sugar canes, contained the largest ever seen in Calcutta. But there were some curiosities, however—curiosities because out of season—of these there were some green mangoes, custard apples and jacks. The following is a list of the prizes distributed on the occasion.—

English Broad Beans.—For the best sample, a silver medal and 8 rs.; and for the second ditto 3 rs.

French Beans.—For the best sample 5 rs. and for the second 3 rs.

Red Beet.—For the best sample a silver medal and 5 rs.; for the second ditto 3 rs., and for the third ditto 2 rs.

Vegetable Marrow.—For the best sample a silver medal and 10 rs.

Celery.—For the best sample a silver medal and 10 rs., and for the second ditto 5 rs.

Turnips.—For the best sample a silver medal and 5 rs., for the second best ditto 3 rs., and for the third 3 rs.

Carrots.—For the best sample a silver medal and 5 rs. and for the second ditto 3 rs.

English Spinach.—For the best sample 5 rs.

Endive.—For the best sample 5 rs.—Hark, Jan. 10.

THE SOCIETY'S ANNIVERSARY MEETING.

The Anniversary Meeting was held at the Society's Room, Town Hall, on Wednesday, the 8th January, 1840.

The Honorable Sir EDWARD RYAN, President, in the Chair.

(TWENTY-TWO MEMBERS AND A VISITOR PRESENT.)

The Proceedings of the last Meeting were submitted and confirmed.

MEMBERS ELECTED.

The Gentlemen proposed at the December Meeting, were duly elected Members of the Society, viz.

Major THOS. ROBINSON, Dr. J. M. BRIDGER, Messrs Henry ARMSTRONG, J. S. MENDES, Henry HILL, James MACAUGH, ARTHUR, A. DRUMMOND, and James DAVIS,

FOR ELECTION.

The names of the following Gentlemen were read as candidates for election:

B. R. MANHEAL, Esq., of Sezonee Factory, Zilla

Monghyr, proposed by Mr. W. F. GIBBON, seconded by the Secretary.

Captain DE RUDE (Offg. Sec. Military Board,) proposed by Dr. SPRY, seconded by Mr. F. C. SIMPSON.

seconded by Dr. Strong

H. R. LEYBURN, Esq., (of Nunnoo Factory, Shahabad) proposed by Dr. Spry, seconded by Mr. C. Fiebeck.

J. O. BECKETT, Esq., (Shahjehanpore) proposed by Mr. Chas. Lyall, seconded by Dr. Spry.

J. A. DEVERELL, Esq., (of Cootooreah Factory Zillah Merai) proposed by Mr. W. G. ROSE, seconded by Mr. I. A. GREGG.

T. C. MORTON, Esq., (Barrister) proposed by Sir Edward RYAN, seconded by Mr. W. G. JOHNSON.

GEORGE L. LEVAY, Esq., (civil service, Benares) proposed by Major CARTER, seconded by the Secretary.

GEORGE VINT, Esq., (Calcutta) proposed by Mr. David HARE, seconded by Mr. A. C. DUNLOP.

ROBERT MACNAIR, Esq., (of Joradiah Factory, Jessore) proposed by Mr. David HARE, seconded by Mr. A. C. DUNLOP.

E. G. DUBUS, Esq., (of Nohutta Factory, Jessore) proposed by Mr. David HARE, seconded by Mr. A. C. DUNLOP.

E. DUBUS, Esq., junior, (of Nohutta Factory, Jessore) proposed by Mr. David HARE, seconded by Mr. A. C. DUNLOP.

P. BARNETT, Esq., (of Nohutta Factory, Jessore) proposed by Mr. David HARE, seconded by Mr. A. C. DUNLOP.

D. LETHBRIDGE, Esq., (of Gidgut Factory, Jessore) proposed by Mr. David HARE, seconded by Mr. A. C. DUNLOP.

Election of Office bearers for the ensuing year.

The meeting on assembling proceeded to the nomination of office bearers for the ensuing year, on the scrutiny being declared, the following gentlemen were found duly elected

MUSEUM AND GALLERY.

1. A supply of thirty-two seeds of Mauritius Maize, grown at Chitragong. This Maize is very fine and is under distribution, Presented by Charles Bury, Esq.

2. The model of a Sugar Cane Mill in common use in the Cuttack Province. Mr. Cumberland, civil surgeon at Pooree, who favors the Society with this model, states that he has not met with any thing like it out of the province, and that from its cheapness, simplicity of construction,

- and perfect adaptation to the complete expression of the cane juice, it appears to him to be worthy of general use in the country. The whole cost of the Machine is only three rupees. It is made entirely of wood without a particle of iron. Presented by Mr. Cumberquid.

In allusion to the above Mill the Hon'ble the President took occasion to draw the attention of the meeting to a facsimile sketch of it which has been published by Dr. Spry in his work "Modern India," wherein particular notice is paid to this most efficacious machine for the above very desirable qualities.

- 3. Five samples of flax grown in the district of Shahabad, Province of Behar, illustrating the fact of the Indian soil being capable of producing flax of equally as good a staple as that from other countries.

Also a sample of Flemish, Archangel, Riga and Peterburgh flax, for the purpose of comparison. Likewise a machine obtained from England, from Mr. London, for the purpose of scutching the stalk. Presented by George Leyburn, Esq.

- 4. A sample of flax made on the Neilgherry and a sample of hemp (Cannabis sativa) obtained from the same quarter. Presented by Mr. Wallich on the part of the Hon'ble L. Tulhuan.

These two specimens come very opportunely to be placed in comparison with the specimens of Behar flax above noticed, and the whole was ordered to be made over to the flax committee for inspection and report.

- 5. A small sample of a climbing plant, the provincial name of which is "Konga." The beauty and strength of the fibre of this plant is very apparent, and as the tree is very abundant in Chota Nagpore, Captain Hannington, who presents it, thinks that there can hardly be a doubt that it might become useful. The bark is readily separated from the fibre by lightly beating it, and the fibre might be had of any desired length from feet to yards, clean and unbroken. The only use made of it by the people of the country, is for the purpose of stringing beads. Also referred to the flax committee. Presented by Captain Hannington.

- 6. A sample of coffee and arrow root grown and prepared in his garden at Ballygunge. Presented by G. F. McClutock, Esq.

- 7. A basket of very fine oranges grown in his garden at Behampore. Presented by Cowar Krishnutt Roy, Bahadur.

- 8. A portion of consignment of sixty-four kinds of flower seeds, weighing 144 lbs., grown in the valley of Deyrah, by Lieutenant Kirke. Also a portion of a large consignment of vegetable seeds dispatched from the Deyrah Division, by Lieutenant Kirke, on the 21 August and the early part of September, to the care of Dr. Wallich.

In explanation of the reason why the above valuable consignment of seeds has been so long in reaching the Society, the Secretary mentioned, that the boxes containing them had been sent to Dr. Wallich, Superintendent of the Botanic Garden, who had accidentally omitted to transmit them to the Society. Lieutenant Kirke has a further large supply under dispatch.

- 9. A beautiful specimen of the gum of the Pulass (Butea Frondosa). Presented by Mr. Rose.

- 10. A glazed box of fruit trees, about twenty in number, indigenous to the Eastern Archipelago, brought to Calcutta by General Biggs, from Singapore, and presented to the Society by that gentleman on the part of the Rev. Mr. White.

The above most valuable consignment is in excellent order and was ordered to be transferred to the nursery.

- 11. A fruit of the Strychnos Spinosa, native of Madagascar, from Port Natal. This fruit, which is a great crucifera, as belonging to a family of poisons, has been brought to India by Major Cox, who obtained it from Baron Ludwig, who informed Major Cox, that it is edible when the fruit is ripe, and that he (the Baron) has himself tasted it. Presented by Dr. Wallich on the part of Major Cox.

Major Cox, in his note transmitting the above fruit mentions having succeeded in bringing alive with him, Sparmannia Africana, Spirea Craegelita, and Microlophos Lincata, which he believes have not yet been introduced into Bengal.

- 12. A valuable supply of seeds of various kinds, procured from the vicinity of the hill station of Darjeeling, Presented by Lt. Col. Lloyd.

- 13. The model of a flax mill of his own invention (a description of which appeared in the Bengal Hurkaru of the 5th Novr. 1839.) Exhibited by Mr. E. Preston.

Report of the cotton committee.

The paper which first occupied the attention of the meeting was the report which had engaged the consideration of the special Cotton Committee, relative to the mode of carrying into effect the intentions of the Supreme Government of India, with respect to the extension of the cotton cultivation of the country on improved principles. The Hon'ble the President adverting to the great importance of the subject, intimated that as the report was a long one and, moreover, could not be hastily judged of, if then read that he thought the most desirable plan to be adopted, would be to have the document printed in order that it might obtain an extensive circulation as possible, and an opportunity thus be afforded to the public to peruse it and offer any remarks through the Press, that might be thought useful. This measure was resolved on and the final adoption of the report by the Society was deferred to the next General Meeting, or a special call for the purpose, as may be deemed desirable. The following is the report.

Proceedings of a meeting of the Cotton Committee of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India, held at the Society's rooms, in the Town Hall of Calcutta, on the 27th December, 1839.

PRESIDENT.

F. C. SMITH, ESQ., CHAIRMAN.

Sir E. Ryan, C. Huffnagle, Esq.
Bahadur Ramcomul Sen, and Dr. Spry. Major Carter.

Read a note of the proceedings of the committee under date the 19th November, 1839.

Read a letter from Mr. Secretary Halliday, to the Secretary A. and H. S., under date the 22d October last.

Read a minute by the Governor-General of India, under date the 14th August, 1839.

Read a rough sketch of a memorandum, submitted for the consideration of the Committee by the chairman, and the notes and minutes of the other members.

Resolution.—Resolved, that the following report be adopted by the Committee, and submitted for the consideration of the Society.

REPORT.

Your Committee remark, that it will be no doubt, in the recollection of the Society, that their assistance and co-operation in furtherance of the views of the Home Authorities for the improvement of the cotton cultivation with the presidency of Bengal, including the North Western Provinces, has been requested by Government; that the Society have been informed by Mr. Secretary Halliday by his letter, under date the 22d October last, that several American workmen, expected to arrive in Calcutta in the month of December, 1839, would be placed under their directions and orders, should the Society undertake the charge, that in "reply" the Government were informed, that the Society accepted the proffered trust; and that the cotton committee, reinforced by several Members conversant with the subject under discussion, have been in consequence requested to prepare a report, and propose a plan for carrying into execution the contemplated project.

Your committee, having taken the subject matter referred to them, into their most serious consideration, are of opinion, that it will be advisable to discuss the subject under the various heads which naturally suggest themselves.

1st. Station and disposal of the located American workmen. 1st. The stations at which the workmen should be employed, and the mode of disposing of them.

As only three American cultivators and four machine workmen are intended by the Government to be assigned to the Bengal presidency, it will be necessary to place at each selected station, one cultivator and one machine workman, leaving one machine workman to be disposed of hereafter as circumstances may suggest. It would doubtless have been advisable for obvious reasons, had the number of workmen, which your committee originally had been informed, were to be assigned to this presidency, been placed at the disposal of the Society, to have located the cultivators by pairs, to prevent the delays and inconveniences likely to ensue from sickness and other similar causes; but as the number is so much restricted, your committee are of opinion, they should be located at three sunder stations, in the neighbourhood of which the best cotton is grown, and to abandon for the present any intention of trying experiments in those parts of the presidency where the least doubt as to success may be entertained.

Your committee are of opinion that the stations for the workmen should be in the North Western Provinces and entirely on the right bank of the river Jumna, the cotton cultivation in that part of the country being so far superior to the Doab cotton, that the latter is extensively imported into Bundelcund for the fraudulent purpose of being mixed up with the Banda and Julawn cotton.

The stations selected by your committee are 1, Agra—2, Banda* in Bundelcund—3, Jabulpore in the Saugar and Nerbudda territories.

Your committee have not failed to take into consideration in the selection of the stations the necessity of placing them in situations where facilities of transport abound. It is obvious that there can be no reasonable objection made to the extension of operation by the Society to these districts from which private speculators can with profit transport cotton to Calcutta for sale, on the score of difficulty of access, or deficiency of transport, and other similar impediments; but the facilities, and the selected stations, it is known to your committee much exceed any difficulties which may be expected to arise. For Agra and Bundelcund are situated close to the river Jumna; and from Jabulpore to Mirzapore, on the banks of the Ganges, the great cotton mart of the North Western Provinces, a bridged and metalled road of 239 miles in length, equal to any in England, has been made by Government; and at all the stations, the means of transport, viz. to the river, hackeries, galleys, and bullocks, and on the river, boats of every description abound.

Your committee are fully impressed with the conviction, that in order fully to carry out the wishes of the Government and of the home authorities, an experiment for the improvement of cotton should be undertaken on a grand scale. For which purpose, a quantity of land should be cultivated, under the special superintendence of the Society, and on the principle of Neer cultivation; and they should also take a considerable quantity of land to be cultivated according to the ryottee system. The Neer cultivation should be situated close to the sunder stations of the workmen, and should not exceed the number of acres each workman can personally superintend, both in the ploughing, in the sowing, in the weeding, and in the gathering of the cotton crop. The quantity should not be less than 200 acres for each workman, and the soil should be the average cotton soil of the district and not the choice garden grounds. The ryottee cultivation may with advantage extend to a considerable distance from the stations, and the quantity of land should be, the extent the workmen and their assistants can with facility properly superintend. As the villagers refuse to let the whole of the land of their villages for any particular crop, and as some parts of the land are more favorably suited for cotton cultivation than others, for instance, the land close to Nullah quaters best in the Nerbudda valley the ryottee cultivation will extend to a considerable distance from the sunder station. It therefore appears to your committee requisite to assign to each workman.—1st, an associate or assistant, conversant with the language and Agricultural processes of the country; and 2d, zilladars selected from the best cotton cultivators, who will be placed each in charge of small districts, under the superintendence of the American workmen.

The duty of the associates or assistants should be to act as interpreters to the workmen, and to aid and assist them in every way they may be required, but they are to be considered subordinate, and under the orders of the workmen. The difficulty of obtaining persons qualified for such duties in the North Western Provinces, your committee acknowledge, but they would suggest that the local authorities of the districts in which the workmen will be located should be consulted, both as to the selection, the rate of pay, and other subsidiary arrangements, before any final decision be arrived at.

The zilladars who must be inhabitants of the cotton districts, should be

3d. Cultivation of cotton. selected by the workmen with the sanction of the agent of the society, and to them a salary of six hundred rupees per mensem should be assigned. A liberal salary has been suggested, in order that the best men may be procured, and to remunerate them for the sacrifices they will have to make it, by giving up prejudices, and in performing duties on which they are unaccustomed.

The Neer cultivation should be kept up more as a pattern for the agriculturists, and as evidence of what may be done by care, attention, and skill; and for the purpose of acclimating and bringing into general notice foreign seeds; but the workmen should likewise be left at liberty to cultivate on their khas lands the indigenous cotton of the country, with a view to its eventual improvement, and to ascertain to what extent it can be brought to the perfection necessary to cause it to compete with American cotton.

* Culpore and Julawn are also good situations within the province of Bundelcund.

The object of the ryottee cultivation should be principally for the culture of the best indigenous Cotton. The seed should be furnished by the Society, and should consist of the country, best Doses, seed of the best description procurable and free from all admixture with other grain. The land should when procurable on such terms, be rented from the zemindar or the person to whom it has been let; and the renter should engage to plough, and sow the land and reap the crop, under the superintendence and according to the directions of the American workmen and their Assistants—they should, by them instructed, be bound under a penalty to prepare the land according to a prescribed system; not to sow as they usually do other grain with the cotton to weed the crops when required by the workmen: and to pick the cotton, at such times, and in such a manner, as the workmen may direct.

Your committee observe, that these measures and precautions will ensure the growth of the best Native crops, and will enable the workmen to collect and transmit to the society cotton cleaned by machinery, well picked and free from dirt or leaves.

The payment to ryotts or
4th. Payment for the zemindars should be a certain sum per mound over and above the huzar rate, deducting the land rent: but in cases where the Society may rent land from the zemindars, and have it cultivated by the Ryotts, then the land should be let out to the ryotts if possible, on the above conditions; and they should in a similar manner be remunerated for their labour. It will be obvious, that by this intermixture of Nees and ryottee cultivation, the former cultivated exclusively by the workmen, and the latter by the ryotts, subject to the superintendence of the workmen and their assistants, we shall obtain the best description of cotton both from foreign and native seeds, with no more expense in the ryottee cultivation than the cost of superintendence and the premium over and above the market price of Cotton, we shall diffuse the superior knowledge and manner of proceeding of the American system; we shall educate a body of at least 80 or 100 intelligent Natives into the mysteries of the new and improved system of agriculture, and the Society will have at their service in the course of a couple of years, a body of well instructed agriculturists fit to form stations, to educate more pupils, all to be obtained at a small price, comparatively speaking, for the superior nature of the Cotton produced under such advantageous circumstances will, we may calculate on with great certainty, nearly repay the expenses incurred by the experiment. It should, the committee observe, always be borne in mind that the chief object of our ambition should be, rather to improve the produce of the Country, and to stimulate the people to adopt our improvements, than to introduce seeds or new agricultural implements, which may or may not succeed, and that we can, comparatively speaking, do little good by Nees cultivation, except with the view above mentioned.

The aid of the commissioners of Revenue, of the collectors of the districts, or both, will be essentially necessary for the superintending, advising and guiding in a general way the workmen who should be directed always to apply to them for advice and assistance when requisite, and your committee are of opinion, that the ~~Huzoor~~ Tehsil Peckars of each district should be the officers selected by the local officers to choose the fields, make the previous arrangements and bargain for the land, and to pay the rent and make the requisite advances, but the purchase money of the cotton which will be sent to Calcutta to the Society, the workmen should pay. Your committee further desire to observe, that the civil servants of the Government in charge of districts although perfectly competent, and no doubt willing, to afford the Society all general aid and assistance, yet their proper avocations will in general prevent their undertaking any minute supervision, and it would therefore be advisable to appoint at each station, a person of well known influences, and general knowledge of the customs of the agricultural classes, as Agent to the Society. At Agra, it is understood, Dr. Falconer's services will be available for this purpose and at Jubbulpore, Lieutenant Charles Brown, Junior Assistant to the Commissioner, will willingly grant his valuable aid; but in Bundelcund, there is no information before them by which your Committee can be guided in their choice, but they entertain no doubt, but that a competent person willing to afford his assistance will be found either at Banda or Culpur. It has been suggested, that the Oulals attached to the Opium department of Bundelcund who have lately been discharged on the abandonment of the opium cultivation in that Province, may be available for the cotton experiment; and your committee would recommend that this suggestion should be taken into consideration, and if approved of and deemed expedient be adopted.

The cultivators and assistants should report progress periodically to the Society through the agent, and should also furnish copies of their reports to the Commissioner of the division, who should be requested to forward the Society.

Your committee observe, that in ignorance of the arrangements made by the Hon'ble Comt of Directors with the American can workmen, and from the nature of the proposed measures, it will not be possible to prepare an estimate of the expenditure which will be required to work out the scheme except in regard to the assistants and to the zalladars, whose salaries will probably be as follows.

3 Assistants 300 rupees each	900
60 Zalladars at 6 rupees each,	360
Office expense, peons, &c for each station 100, 300

Cur Rs. per mensem, 1560

Finally, on this point your committee are of opinion, that the labours of the Secretary to the Society will be much increased by the correspondence which the Agents and local officers will hold with the Society on the subject of this interesting experiment, and although they are not at present prepared to suggest any specific addition to his salary and to his office establishment, yet they consider it but just and proper to draw your attention to the subject, with a view to future consideration.

The premium to be offered in accordance with the intentions of the hon'ble Government will best be divided, the committee think, into two scales of rewards, the first division of scale to be for the management of the cotton cultivation of the country, so as to raise it on an equality with the average price of the best upland Georgian cotton realizable in the Liverpool market for the time being, and for this purpose the committee propose the following terms:—

1st SCALE.—For any cotton, the growth of the provinces appertaining to the Government of Bengal and Agra, not less than 300 bales in quantity (each bale to weigh 320 lbs. avoirdupoise,) and to be cleaned by machinery, which shall realize in the Liverpool market at the time of sale, the average price of the best lots of American upland Georgian cotton sold at the same time in the same market, the sum of 20,000 Company's Rupees, or 2,000 Sterling.

CONDITIONS—The cotton must be bona fide, the property of one individual, and be the produce of the province of Bengal, Behar, Orissa, Assam, Benares, Oude, Rohilkund, Agra, Delhi, Bundelkund, Mahab, or Saugor and Nerbudda territories but of no two or more provinces conjointly.

2d. The proprietor must furnish a certificate on honor, countersigned by the Commissioner of the province or other chief authority, that the cotton exhibited by him for competition for the reward is the property of himself solely, and has been obtained by him from a single province. All cotton entered for competition shall be duly registered at the office of the Secretary, on or before the first day of October 1831, at which time the Agricultural and Horticultural Society will enter on the examination of the bales, and the documents which have reference to them; and should the Society deem the sample bale selected for examination to contain cotton likely to realize the object for which the prize is offered, that then the proprietor shall make over the whole quantity to the custody of the Society, and be furnished in return with a duly attested acknowledgment to that effect.

3d. The cotton so made over shall be shipped at the port of Calcutta, and be forwarded to Liverpool, where it shall be brought forward at as early a day as possible, after being landed, and sold at the ordinary public cotton mart in the town of Liverpool to the highest bidder, having first being appraised by two sworn brokers of that town.

4th. On the receipt of the account of sales being received by the Society, from the consignees, the sum realized for the cotton so sold, shall be duly compared with the official Price Currents of the day, and if the amount realized by the sale of the aforesaid cotton, be one that can be fairly considered to average the current price of the best upland (Gazian cotton of America, that the prize shall be considered to have been justly won, and a certificate, signed conjointly by the President and Secretary of the Society to that effect, shall be furnished to authorize the payment of the reward out of the Government Treasury to the individual who earns it.

5th. The cotton under transport to England to be hypothecated for the benefit of the proprietor, and on the receipt of the account sales, a statement to be duly made of the out-turn of the consignment, and balance struck, which, whether the object in view be realized or not, shall be duly furnished to the competitor, and monies appertaining to the transaction, be immediately made over to him, without any deduction whatever on the part of the Society of commission, or other money paid.

6th. The cotton shipped under these conditions, shall be insured in one of the Calcutta offices, and the charge for the same be borne by the competitor.

7th. No lot presented for competition shall be entitled to gain more than one prize.

8th. Prizes to the foregoing amount shall be offered annually for a period of three years, commencing from the 1st day of October 1840.

9th. The Society reserves to itself the right of rejecting the claims of any competitor without assigning a reason for so doing.

2d SCALE.

For any cotton the growth of the provinces appertaining to the Governor of Bengal or Agra, not less than 300 bales in quantity, each bale to weigh 320 lbs., avoirdupois, and to be cleaned by Houldworth Churka, or any other more approved machinery, which shall realize a price in the Calcutta market, very much superior to that of the ordinary indigenous cotton of the country sold at the same time.—

1st. Prize. The sum of 10,000 Co's Rs. or 1,000 £ Sterling.

2d. Prize. The sum of 5,000 Co's Rs. or 500 £ Sterling.

CONDITIONS.

The cotton brought forward for competition must be the property of one individual, and the produce of a single province of either the Bengal or Agra Presidencies, Oude included.

2d. The proprietor must furnish a certificate on honor, countersigned by the Commissioner or other chief appointed officer of the province, that the cotton offered for competition is the growth of that Province.

3d. The cotton entered for competition under this Scale, shall be duly made over to the Agricultural and Horticultural Society for examination, and eventually, if it thinks proper, for public sale.

4th. Before the cotton so offered to the Society is disposed of, an appraisement by at least three well known cotton dealers shall be obtained, which appraisement shall contain a statement, whether the party or parties so appraising is, or are prepared to take the lot at the price mentioned by them in their valuation paper.

5th. On the Society being convinced that the cotton presented for the competition is very superior to the ordinary indigenous cotton of the country, and can therefore realize a superior price, the same shall be sold by public auction at Calcutta, after which the produce shall be made over to the competitor, and a certificate, signed by the President and Secretary of the Society announcing the reward shall be furnished to him, which certificate shall be authority for the payment of the prize of the Government Treasury.

6th. The Society reserves to itself the right of rejecting the claims of any competitor, without assigning a reason.

7th. Prizes to the foregoing amount shall be offered annually, for a period of three years, commencing from the 1st day of October 1840.

AGRICULTURAL STATISTICS OF THE EMPIRE.

The Hon'ble the President announced to the meeting that he held in his hand a large number of returns from the medical officers of the service, throughout the provinces, in reply to the circular which had been addressed to them in the early part of the year on behalf of the Government of India, soliciting their aid in procuring for the Court of Directors and the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland, statistical information on the chief products of each Province at the chief mart and obscure village conjointly. The mass of information which the reports embodied were of a most interesting and valuable nature, and in order to arrange them geographically with respect to the course of trade, they were made over to the committee specially appointed for the preparation of these Statistics.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL ON THE SUBJECT TO A NEW SPECIES OF MULBERRY FOR THE SUPPORT OF SILK WORMS.

The subject which next engaged the attention of the meeting was a letter from the Government of Bengal, giving cover to one from Colonel Sykes, addressed to the hon'ble the Court of Directors of the East India Company on the propagation of silk worms on a new species of Mulberry (Morus Multicaulis.)

To Dr. H. SPRY,

SECRETARY TO THE AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Sir,—I am directed by his honor the Revenue Deputy Governor of Bengal, to request that you will lay the accompanying copy of a letter from Lieut. Colonel Sykes before the Society with an intimation that when the work alluded to therein is received from England, his honor will have much pleasure in placing a copy at its disposal.

I am, Sir, your most obedient Servant,

FRED. JAS. HALLIDAY,

Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

Fort William, the 12th December, 1839

47, Albion street, Hyde Park, 15th July, 1839.

JAMES COMO MILVING, Esquire, Secretary.

Sir,—On Friday last a book was put into my hands by a friend, printed at Philadelphia, with the date 29th April 1839, and bearing the following title.

"The silk culturist's manual, or a popular treatise on the planting and cultivation of mulberry trees, the rearing and propagation of silk worms, and the preparation of the raw material for exportation, addressed to the farmers and planters of the United States."

"By John D'Homerque, published and for sale by Hogan and Thompson, at 30, North Fourth Street Philadelphia."

I take the liberty to bring this book to the notice of the chair, and the Court of Directors, not only on account of the author's stating that almost a miracle prevails at present in America with respect to silk, in the expectation of producing a better and cheaper kind, than either India or China affords, (and in which statement the author is borne out by an American gentleman with whom I conversed previously to seeing his book) but because he brings to notice the very important fact of the recent introduction and rapid extension of the cultivation in Europe and America of a new species of mulberry, the consumption of the leaves of which by the silk worms, materially improves the quality of the silk they spin, and the which is otherwise highly valuable for its hardness and the facility with which it is propagated.

These species of mulberry brought from China and the Philippine Islands is unknown in India, according to the enumeration of Doctors Wallich and Lush, in their official reports, those gentlemen only mentioning the Morus Atropurpurea of Roxburgh in private gardens in Bengal as coming from China and Cochinchina. As the interests of the silk producers in India are likely to be affected by the new competition from American (setting aside the political question of enhancing the already serious dependency of the manufacturing industry of England upon America for raw material) it may be thought advisable by the honorable Court to take measures for the immediate introduction into India of the mulberry of which the following accounts are given in Mr. D'Homerque's book.

"The mulberry of the Philippine Island (morus milticaulis) thus called by Monsieur Perottet, and often confound, by amateurs in general with the ordinary mulberry of China (Morus Alba Sinensis) which though resembling it a little in exterior appearance, differs materially from it in essential qualities.

"This is a new and most valuable species of mulberry, which has been of late the object of very great observation and experiment among cultivators in Europe as well as in the United States. It is represented as possessing such decided superiority over all other as to be speedily substituted for them in every part of the globe.

"The tree was brought from Manilla, the capital of the Philippine Islands, to France in 1829, by the Samuel Perottet, a celebrated naturalist employed by the French Government. The Chinese inhabitants assured him that to this tree the disciples of Confucius are indebted for the prosperity of their empire, and that it is the only species used by them in the production of the finest silk, such as they weave into stuffs exclusively for their own use.

"The morus milticaulis is already propagating in many parts of Europe and the United States, and probably will be substituted for and preferred to all other varieties. It is generally known in Europe by a name derived from its origin, that is the mulberry of the Philippine Islands. In botanical language M. Perottet has called it morus milticaulis on account of its roots having the property of putting forth many branches. Another eminent agriculturist (Matthew Bonafons) has thought it a better designation to call it morus cucullata, because the leaves have a concave form, inasmuch as the botanic description marks it by the following characteristics: morus folia cordatis, basinqueaulibus, viz. lobatis, dentatis, amplissimis, cucullatis, (mulberry with leaves, heart shaped, unequal, at the base, scarcely divided into lobes, indented, very large, and concave.) Among the other qualities of this tree it is affirmed that a less quantity of its foliage is required for the precious insect, than of other species.

The lower branches of the morus milticaulis are ordinarily straight and small, so that they bend easily under the weight of the leaves, in the manner of a weeping willow, but those which grow from the crown of the roots attain often a height of six feet perpendicular. The fruit which was unknown in Europe until 1839, consists of a small number of black pulpy grains, which only a few arrive at maturity. It is said that those grains, used as seed, seldom give a tree resembling the one upon which they grow. To obtain one precisely similar it is usual to resort either to inoculation or to cuttings; this last method is the best for the rapid propagation of this tree, because the cuttings take root in a very short time and grow quickly. This species having its origin in the most northern part of the Philippine Islands, where the climate is much cooler than further south, it would seem easy to naturalize it in all those countries where the White Mulberry is cultivated. In fact the experiment has already justified the hope. In the dreadful winter of 1829-30, in the coldest districts of Italy where this Mulberry had been introduced, only the smaller extremities of the limbs perished. It also withstood the hard winter of 1828, in the field of Mr. A. Eyries, at Havre. We are also informed that it has resisted the rigor of several winters, uninjured and unprotected, on the plantation of Madame Parmentier of Brooklyn, L. J. Prussia, Bavaria and Sweden, are in possession of this very useful tree, and we are informed that it grows in those Countries perfectly well. The experiment made in France by Messrs. Audibert of Tarascon, Barthère of Toulouse, and Meslong Champs of Paris, and those made by Messrs. Bonafons and others in Italy, on this interesting question, have confirmed all that has been previously asserted respecting the quality of silk produced by the plant. They have further proved, that the cocoons made by the worms fed with this quality of leaves are heavier and produce silk comparatively finer, more elastic and in greater quantity than those fed with the leaf of the common tree; it has been ascertained.—

* The different specimens were laid on the table of the Society.

1st.—That the morus multicaulis does not require any particular soil as exclusively suited to its growth, but prospers even in a wet soil, which it seems to prefer.

2d.—That it yields very little fruit, so that the leaves are more easily cleaned, and less matter of a fermenting nature is introduced into the body of the silk worm.

3d.—That it does not rise too high and yields a greater quantity of leaves, which can be easily gathered by women and children.

4th.—That it puts forth its thin, tender and soft leaves earlier than other Mulberry, which permits the period of hatching of the silk worms to be anticipated some days.

5th.—That the roots possess the remarkable property of throwing up numerous small flexible stalks, without forming properly a principal trunk.

6th.—That these stalks assume in a very short time a great length.

7th.—That the leaves speedily acquire a remarkable development and are promptly renewed.

8th.—That these stalks or branches, strike root cuttings, with extraordinary facility without particular care even before they have acquired a ligneous or woody consistence."—Pages 12 to 16.

Various other persons bear similar testimony, particularly that it is "destined to replace the common white Mulberries everywhere for feeding silk worms" India, therefore, it is to be desired, should not be the last industrial enquiry into which it is introduced.

I regret that I have not a copy of Monsieur D'Hormerens's small volume to offer to the court, but sufficient may possibly have been said to lend the hon'ble Board to deem it desirable to obtain a few copies from America through the medium of its booksellers, which copies might be useful to the court's collectors in the silk districts in India.

I have the honor to be, &c.

SUCCESSFUL CULTIVATION OF FLAX IN INDIA.

A highly interesting communication was next brought forward, relative to the successful cultivation of flax, which had been received from Mr. George Leyburn, of Nanton Factory, Shahabad. This gentleman states that since his residence in the interior, he has given his attention to the natural resources of the soil, and that the production of flax from the linsseed plant has come particularly under his notice; it being a plant which is most extensively cultivated all over India on account of its seed, but the valuable fiber of which is left unheeded, owing to the want of knowledge on the part of the native farmers of the mode of preparing it.

Three years ago Mr. Leyburn prepared his first sample of flax in the common way, from plants which had borne seed, and forwarded the same to London, where it was submitted to the inspection of the respectable firm of Freeman and Cook, who reported that any quantity of a similar article would find a ready sale at £35 a ton. On the following year, Mr. Leyburn entered on the cultivation rather extensively. He found a defect in the mode of culture as well as a difficulty of preparing the flax wound as he was with machinery. Notwithstanding these perplexities, Mr. Leyburn succeeded in producing an article of lengthened staple and of a quality vying with the flax of Russia and elsewhere. A portion of the cultivation was carried on the sandy bed of the Soane river, and part on the uplands of the district. Some of the flax has been prepared before the seeds were ripe. The following is the result which Mr. Leyburn has arrived at in his calculation of the profit to be expected in the prosecution of this valuable culture.

Per Bighah.*	Rs. As. P.	Produce.	Rs. As. P.
Rent of land ..	1 8 0	Linseed, 5½ mds.,	5 8 0
ploughing	0 8 0	Flax, 4 mds. at say
Seed,	1 8 0	£34 per ton, ...	46 10 8
Pulling, beating

(nearly all		per contra,	25 1 3
hand labour,)	16 0 0
		Profit on one bighah
	25 1 3	of land,	27 1 5

In most parts of India where the linsseed plant can be grown for flax, the land rent of which will be less than the estimate here given, and with the aid of Machinery, the cost of manufacture, Mr. Leyburn considers, would be materially lessened.

Should the plant be put before the seed is allowed to ripen, Mr. Leyburn states that the quality of the flax will be much raised, and the enhancement in commercial value consequent thereon, will much more than exceed the price of the seed sown when a factory is brought into full play and effective machinery set up. Mr. Leyburn considers that the manufacturing price of the article for the market, would not be more than from 3 to 4 rupees a maund, which is equal to about £9 or £12 sterling a ton. Mr. Leyburn has imported from England some machines,† which he thinks, if circulated throughout the country, will soon tend to bring the article of flax into notice, and induce many who now neglect the culture to embark in it.

After giving the subject a fair trial, Mr. Leyburn feels assured that to give effect to the production of this important staple the aid of European enterprise is necessary, for even with the remunerating profit which the above statement shows, Mr. Leyburn states that he failed in overcoming the deep rooted prejudices of the native cultivators, and could not induce them to enter on a cultivation which held out to them a prospect of more than ordinary profit for their labour. To Indigo Planters, Mr. Leyburn considers the subject is one deserving of particular attention, as there is scarcely a spot of ground in which the one plant will not grow equally well with the other. In a political point of view, Mr. Leyburn considers there is no product which merits the fostering care of the Indian Government more than this article, as the home market is mainly dependent on the foreign supply for its consumption, and to countries none the most friendly to the interests of England.

* The bighah of land in Shahabad is something more than the Bengal bighah, which is 1,600 square yards, the third of an English acre, and less than the Turboot or Dankunnee bighah, which is 3,200 square yards.

† One of these, Mr. Leyburn has kindly placed at the disposal of the Society, and is ready for the inspection of the public at the Museum.

In conclusion Mr. Leyburn mentions, that he shall be glad if his remarks shall be instrumental in bringing this important staple into notice.

The accompanying is an extract of sales in London on July 17th 1838, in Flax now alluded to.—"Five Six per Windsor is landed sound—No. 1 sold for £28 per ton and No 2 at £14 per ton 9 months' credit. My broker has examined the 2 bales per Windsor, and reports it could be used to a considerable extent—its great fault is harshness and the absence of that softness and quality common, as you will have observed, to the Russian Flax. prices of the latter article being lower than usual, P. T. R. selling here at this time at £40 per ton

NEW APPLICATION OF WOOD OIL TO ECONOMICAL PURPOSES

The Secretary next submitted a letter from Mr. Lantley, communicating some valuable information relative to the application of the wood oil, obtained from the Dipterocarpus trees of the Tenasserim Province, in acting as a solvent to caoutchouc. Mr. Lantley mentions that he discovered this property some months ago, and he prepared some cloth with the solution for the purpose of submitting it to the inspection of the Society. The process adopted was simply to cut the caoutchouc into small pieces, and then drop a sufficiency into a bottle of the oil. In the course of a few hours the caoutchouc swells, and must then be frequently stirred to facilitate the process. If heat be applied, complete solution is speedily effected, but several days are required at the ordinary temperature of the atmosphere.

The solution thus prepared may be spread on cloth which is rendered waterproof.

LAC INSECT ON PEEPUL TREES.

Mr. Rose, of Ramanaghur Factory, Moorsheadabad District, forwarded an interesting communication to the Society, relative to the existence of the lac insect in great quantities on several peepul trees in a village in his neighbourhood. Mr. Rose considers, from enquiries lately made, that the lac insect will thrive on many trees peculiar to the plains, and is at this present moment to be found on such trees. The subject is one which may be regarded as of great importance, and Mr. Rose is anxious, therefore, to give the result of his knowledge on the subject.

ARRIVAL OF SAXON RAMS IN CALCUTTA.

A note was read from Mr. Storm, wishing to make known in the Meeting of the Society, that he has imported from Van Dieman's Land, a certain number of Saxon Rams for the purpose of making an experiment to improve the wool of this country, and that having more Rams than he requires for that purpose, he should be glad to dispose of a few of them at 250 rupees each, the price they cost him.

For all the foregoing presents and communications, the best thanks of the Society were accorded.

HENRY D. SERV, M. D., Secretary.

† Ficus Religiosa.

THE SANS SOUCI.

JANUARY 2, 1840.

Ships from London, boats from up-country, and merry holiday times concurred in filling the Sans Souci on Thursday night, to an extent unprecedented even at that well frequented theatre. The stalls were full from one end to the other; chairs were stuck into every corner where a chair could stand, and gentlemen stood where chairs could not. The boxes too, what with their own peculiar patrons, and what with the "crowding out" of the stall, were tenanted more respectably both as to quantity and quality than they ever were before.

The first piece was CATHERINE AND PETRUCHIO, Shakespeare's lively comedy trimmed and clipped so as to render it presentable to an audience more fastidious than those which applauded its broad humour at "the Globe" in ancient days. There is nothing like a bit of Shakespeare after all. Now this CATHERINE AND PETRUCHIO, though about the least imaginative production of the great bard, and though its language is somewhat quaint, and its figures somewhat strained, is, for liveliness of dialogue, and strength of delineation, vastly superior to many a smooth modern play, with greater pretensions to stage effect. "The taming of the shrew" furnishes a hint for those who may be misled as Petruchio &c. But would it be prudent for any young gentleman to link himself to such a Xantippe, relying on the use of similar means for her reformation? We know not. The chances are about equal, that such a course of training might either release the refractory fair-one to obedience, or drive her into open revolt. But whatever may be thought of the plan adopted by the hardy Petruchio for taming his curst "Kate," there can be no question that the development of it is in the highest degree entertaining. The haughty, scornful bearing of the young lady, at her first interview with her rough wooer, her mingled astonishment and chagrin when she finds that she has "caught a Tartar," the pride with which she addresses herself to his subjugation; and finally the meekness, the humble watching of her husband's eye and obedience to his most absurd commands, which mark the change produced in the quantum shrew, are most strikingly and naturally displayed.

The chief characters in the piece are those of Catherine Petruchio, and Grumio, represented by Mrs. Leach, Algermon, and Master Mollus. How the first performed her part it is hardly necessary to tell—admirably of course. Notwithstanding that her recent illness must have left her somewhat weak, and that the character of Kate, calls for no ordinary strength in the exhibition of her bursts of passion, Mrs. Leach poured it with a spirit and fidelity that was surprising. The contrast betwixt the haughty, and apparently indomitable maiden, and the timid, affectionate wife, could not have been more forcibly presented even by our Prima Donna herself in her full glow of health and strength.

There is a wonderful improvement in Algermon; that stiffness and inclination to rant, which made him at first, a by no means promising debutant, are gone altogether; and now there is a freedom, a force, a correctness in his delivery and actions, that render it difficult to believe it is the same man. One absurd piece of unnatural mannerism however, remains. It is in his gait when retiring up or off the stage. Let any one observe the pompous, studied, and above all that beating of the boards with the toe of the foot which happens to be last, and say if such motion is either natural or dignified. In Petruchio he was quite at home; he had conceived the character correctly, and carried out his idea of it very well. He should, however, we think, have been less sparing with his whip upon his servants, for, with the exception of properly easy going Grumio, they were the laziest and most lifeless pack that “ever served such a master. Petruchio's first dress was a very tasteful and most splendid affair. Master Modus as Grump displayed his usual drollery, and elicited, as usual, abundance of hearty laughter. There are in Skakespeare plenty of characters of a similar stamp, and they could not have a more efficient representative than Master Modus.

Baptista (Heartwell) Hortensio (Mowbray) Biondello (Sam Sharpset) and Bianca (Mrs. Francis) not forgetting the Music Master and the Taylor, both by the Secretary, were creditably represented. But what a lucky voice Sam Sharpset has got! Is it natural or assumed? If the latter, we advise him to drop it, and to give the public the benefit of his “most sweet voice” on his next attempt.

The farce of THE MIDDLE TEMPLE is of itself no great thing. There is neither plot nor dialogue to recommend it. It simply shows how Mr. Prattymon, a very bland and tidy like old gentleman, who apologises for every thing, even for his apologies, is in search of his natural son, who has arrived at manhood, ignorant of his own parentage. That son is Briefless, of the Middle Temple, who is safely beset by duns, takes his papa, on his coming to claim him, for one of his tormentors, and makes his newly hired boy Brutus Hottibrain, pass for him much to the chagrin of the old gentleman, who finds his supposed son a half-witted little fellow, who does nothing but dance. Briefless so enamoured of Julia, the daughter of Mrs. Middletonist, and on the discovery of the old man's mistake, which is rectified by means of a miniature, the hero and heroine are united, as is usual in such cases.

Almost all the fun of the piece lies in the heels and toes of little Ballin, who, as the dancing youth “Hottibrain Junior,” kept the house in a continued ecstacy. It was a character which none but a maître d'ordonne could have undertaken with any hope of success, and one in which Ballin displayed his peculiar abilities in perfection. His every motion, every posture was a la Togliatti,—the “Dance of Life” exemplified. Briefless was not much for Modus, but he made as good a thing of it as any body could, and what more could any body do. The Secretary, as Mr. Prattyman, was quite in his element: it was one of his best old men.

Mrs. Leach, as the little rustic servant girl, Penelope was all her self, in spite of a little languor, and so was Mrs. Francis as Mrs. Middletonist. But what can we, as impartial and fearless critics, say for the Debutante who is Julia? Alas! after making a liberal allowance for every thing for which allowance must be made in the case of a debutante, we can only say of her that, we think she will never shine as the heroine of a piece, however insignificant that heroine may be. There is not a glimmer of romance, either in her face or figure, no spirit in her action, or power in her voice, and she has apparently no idea of the animus of the character. Some of these defects may, if further practice is allowed her, wear off; but we fear that even in that case, enough of imperfection will remain to unfit her for the vocation to which she has aspired. These remarks are not made in an uncharitable spirit, but merely in justice to the play going public. We do not know the lady, even by name.

The concluding piece of forty and fifty, is a farce with no great claims to commendation, though it affords opportunities for the display of some good acting. Mr. and Mrs. Lilywhite, a very amorous old couple, have lived together for four and twenty years, without any difference more serious than an occasional “passing cloud” consequent on transient fits of jealousy on the side of Mr. L. On the day on which they solemnize their twenty-fourth bridal anniversary, one of these squall-arrives, owing to Mr. L., finding Cornet Allamont Esq. white on his knees before Mrs. L., he being, perversely bent on believing, that the said Cornet had not assumed that humble position to interest Mr. L.'s sanction to his passion for the youthful Clementine, but for the purpose of wooing the adorable old Arabella herself. Consequent on this, Mrs. Lilywhite discovers that the young Fitzwhite, is a “natural” branch of the house of Lilywhite, in short, that he is the son of her beloved Damon, and some lady of the island of Antigua, to which business had led the fond husband about twenty-one years before. In an animated scene, she makes known her discovery to her astonished spouse, and thereby brings him penitent to her feet, where he vows never more to be jealous of her. In the joy of this reconciliation, Allamont obtains the consent of the happy pair to his union with the fair Clementine, their niece, and so the piece closes to the satisfaction of all parties interested.

Mr. and Mrs. Lilywhite (Master Modus and Mrs. Francis) had it all to themselves. The piece was entirely dependent on them for its effect and they did it more than justice. If they had not done so at the conclusion of a night so laborious to both of them, who could have blamed them? But what could have tickled Master Modus's fancy so much as to elicit these undisguised outbursts of genuine mirth, in which he indulged himself during the two last pieces. They seemed somewhat out of place, and with a less indulgent audience, might have called down some unequivocal tokens of disapprobation. The youthful pair Allamont and Clementine did not reach the same standard of excellence as their seniors, Mowbray as the former, and Mrs. Tomson as the latter, were alike distinguished by that cold stiffness, which clings so pertinaciously to their action and delivery. We had hopes of Mrs. Tomson once, but where are they now? Echo answers, where!

We are informed, that considerable allowances must be made for certain little defects in the acting of the pieces under comment, as, owing to the holiday times and other causes, the performers have been so scattered about, as to render a good rehearsal out of the question, such being the case the wonder is not that there were a few blunders, but that there were so few. In the rearing of the various parts, there was no very striking deficiency; but there was a want of concert among the performers, that plainly enough arose from the circumstances mentioned above. But a Calcutta audience is the most indulgent possible, and the very defects of the performance furnish additional food for mirth. When Master Modus laughs, where he ought not, the good humoured audience not only indulges him, but joins him. When Master Heartwell struts out upon the stage with all the pomp and circumstance of the leader of a procession, and finding that (not to make a pun) his followers remain behind, retire in some confusion, the mirth of the audience becomes voracious; and when that little wag, Ballin, skips forward to indulge himself with a pas seul, and finds himself cut off from his confederates by the curtain, which has fallen unperceived behind him, the storm of laughter and applause was almost smothering. Well! so let it ever be while any imperfections (so called) remain. People go to the Sau Souci to be amused and to laugh, and what matter how it is, if they be not disappointed. “What's the odds so long as they remain happy?”

The next performance will be on Wednesday next, Thursday being the day appointed for the great Agricultural Dinner. We would suggest, that the last piece be withdrawn and one of those which have been already favourably received, substituted in its stead.—Hunkaru, Jan. 4.

MEETING OF THE CALCUTTA BIBLE ASSOCIATION.

A General Annual Meeting of the above Association was held at the Town Hall, on Tuesday evening, which was very numerously and respectably attended. The Venerable Archdeacon T. Dealtry being called to the chair, the bible Secretary, Rev. T. Sandys, read a report of the proceedings of the Association during the past year, which contained very encouraging accounts for those that take an interest in the distribution of the bible.

It was then proposed by the Rev. T. Boaz, and seconded by C. W. Smith, Esq., that the report now read be received and that it be printed and circulated for general information.

The Rev. Wenger next proposed, and the Rev. Morton seconded, that this meeting feels particularly called upon by the increasing attention paid to the education of the rising generation, to endeavour to communicate to the various classes of their fellow men the volume of divine inspiration, in order that they may thereby be preserved from infidelity and error, and be led to an acquaintance with the Gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

The Rev. Wenger in moving this resolution, delivered himself at some length on the subject of education. He laid it down as an education axiom, that instruction which excluded religion was calculated to breed infidelity. He referred to France and Italy with regard to this fact, countries, he said, that were overrun by infidelity and all its concomitant errors and evils, just because their systems of education discarded the bible as the basis and source of solid improvement. He likewise alluded to the religious condition of the natives of Greece, who, though they have from the few past years been emerging from an age of intellectual darkness, and stirring up the ashes of their ancestral knowledge, yet they are only rising from the sinks of ignorance, superstition and prejudice, to be imbued with the heathenish principles of frank and infidelity. The learning of Europe, it is true, is spreading among them, yet excluding the knowledge of the bible from the educational systems, they are increasing in infidelity only. The Rev. gentleman went on to say, that this country bears a strong resemblance in these respects to modern Greece. The natives are daily growing to knowledge and learning, and unless the distribution of the bible and religion keep pace with that growth, they will also exchange Hinduism, ignorance and superstition, for the perverted principles of infidelity. The heathen man, he continued, is characterized with natural corruption and an horrible proneness to all that is wicked and evil. Knowledge is power, and when we give the natives an education which does not embrace the restraining and renovating influences of Christianity, we add to the wickedness of the heart the power to exercise that wickedness, then was he to the people and was to the Government. He concluded by relating the following anecdote. About two weeks ago, he heard a young man mention to a friend in his presence, that when he read the Hindu scriptures he learnt the evils of the gods; but when he read the New Testament he became acquainted with the love of God. The Rev. Mr. Morton in seconding the resolution, made a very eloquent speech, enumerating and expatiating at considerable length and with great force of language on the reasons that should induce to increased exertion. In the course of his address he referred to the Government schools, as being founded on infidel principles. He said that Hindus never object to read the bible, at least none of the educated classes of rising generation. During the whole course of his experience, he never found one native that was afraid to read or examine the bible, and if under the circumstances of their willingness to read it, and their ability to do so, we denied it to them, we were involving ourselves in the guilt of murdering of souls and destroying immortals.

The Venerable Chairman in putting forth this resolution alluded in flattering terms to the speeches of the above two gentlemen, and expressed a wish to see them published in all the new-papers, as he thought them to contain the most powerful arguments against the exclusion of religion from educational system. Having gone to the Town Hall without being provided with a sufficient allowance of China paper and black lead, we could not take notes, and therefore regret our inability to gratify the wish of the Venerable Archdeacon.

It was next proposed by the Rev. Innes and seconded by the Rev. Ewart, that this feeling with all its endeavours, without the divine blessing are unavailing, earnestly prays that the enlightening influences of the Holy Spirit may be so vouchsafed, that those scriptures which are distributed by it, may prove instrumental in disseminating abroad a knowledge of the way of salvation through faith in our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

This resolution being put to the meeting, the venerable chairman said, he would not do in the ordinary way of holding up the hands, but by quieting the meeting to engage in mental private prayer. Accordingly a silence of a few minutes ensued after which.

It was proposed by Rev. Sutton, and seconded by Rev. Pickance, that the following gentlemen be the committee and office-bearers for the ensuing year.

The Venerable Archdeacon F. Dealtry, President.

The committee of the Auxiliary Bible Society, Vice Presidents.

COMMITTEE.

Rev. C. C. Aratoon, W. Balton, Esq. Rev. T. Boaz, W. Barn, Esq., J. T. D. Cameron, Esq., A. G. Cole, Esq., C. N. Cooke, Esq., G. E. Henwood, Esq., A. D. Jones, Esq., C. Kerr, Esq., P. Rev. K. M. Banerjee, Minis. Secretary.

Mr. W. Hyrn then proposed and Rev. K. M. Banerjee seconded, that the thanks of the meeting be voted to the chairman for kindly presiding on the present occasion.

Another valedictory address then followed from Rev. T. Sandys and one from the chair, after which the usual doxology was sung, a collection made, and the meeting separated at 10 o'clock.—Hark, Jan. 10.

STEAM COMMUNICATION.

NOTICE.

Referring to the meeting of the subscribers to the New Bengal Steam fund, and of parties who have paid first instalment under the resolutions of the public meeting held on the 15th April last, who has been called by the steam fund on the requisition of certain of such subscribers and parties for the purpose of taking into consideration the step most advisable to be adopted, in consequence of the communication received from Mr. Curtis, by the last Overland mail, and made public through the medium of the newspapers, the committee deem it to be their duty to submit their view of the position in which they consider the question of Comprehensive steam communication now to stand."

"After the adoption by Lord William Bentinck, then Governor General of the committee's plan for effecting such communication, and his Lordship's recommendation of that plan to the favorable consideration of the authorities at home, the committee endeavoured to support that recommendation as well by obtaining petitions in India to the Honourable House of Commons and Members to the Board of Control and the Court of Directors, as by urging the adoption of a similar course of proceedings at home, with a view to the establishment of a company there under the auspices of such authorities."

"With this view, on the appointment of Captain Barber as their agent, the committee wrote him as follows, under date 9th April 1838, para. 3 "The great and leading principle of your exertions must be the establishment of the communication to the three presidencies, by whatever means the communication is made to India—that is whether directly by the public authorities or by a private company, whether by one agency in each of the latitudes, or by one agency throughout the whole line."

4. "The view of the committee, however, are still directed to the establishment of a communication from the three Presidencies and Ceylon direct to England under one Agency. They are satisfied that mode of communication is highly perfect. They are sensible that the establishment of the French Mediterranean steamers, and the probable diversion of the mails through France, considerably reduce the value of such single and uninterrupted agency, but still, looking at the manifest importance of an individual being enabled to pass the whole way to and from England and India, without being obliged to make intermediate arrangements, and without being subject to probable delay and interruption consequent in there being no room for him on the steamer on his arrival at Alexandria &c. and considering how essential it is to a perfect intercommunication between the two countries, that means should be afforded for the secure, direct, and speedy conveyance of packages and parcels, which cannot be effected if they are to pass through various hands and responsibilities, they consider that means should be provided for such direct conveyance of passengers and parcels."

5. "The general outline of the committee's views is as follows, viz., that means should be afforded for the conveyance of passengers and parcels direct the whole way, with of course permission to passengers to quit at any intermediate place; that a steamer of the largest size and power should proceed from Calcutta; that a certain portion of her accommodations should be rigidly reserved for each of the presidencies and Ceylon, so that individuals at each place might secure their passage without risk or difficulty; that the steamer should pick up the Indian passengers, &c. either at that place or by means of a separate steamer at Galle; that the Bombay passengers, &c. should in like manner join the main steamer at Galle during the height of the S. W. Monsoon, and at Socotra during the remainder of the year; that this steamer should touch at Cussier for the purpose of there landing such of the passengers as might have engaged their passage to that place only; that she should then proceed to Suez, at which place all such passengers as desired to pass to the continent via Cairo and Alexandria, should from Suez find their own way; that the remainder, having engaged for the whole passage, should proceed under the same agency that brought them to Suez, direct from that place north in the Mediterranean there, to embark on a steamer for England."

"In October, 1838, on the personal application of Captain Barber in his capacity of Agent to the committee, a public meeting was called in the city of London, at which Sir Robert W. Horton presided, and at which Lord William Bentinck, Mr. Curtis, Sir John Rae Reid, and many other influential gentlemen attended. At that meeting, a committee was formed of which Mr. Curtis was appointed chairman, "to investigate the plan submitted to this meeting by Capt. Barber, as also any other suggestions that may be submitted to them, for establishing a Steam communication with India, via the Red Sea, on a comprehensive plan."

"When this became known in Calcutta, the following resolution was passed at the half yearly meeting of the subscribers to the fund and to the petition to the House of Commons, and forwarded to the parties named,—that the thanks of this meeting be given to the Right Hon'ble Lord William Bentinck, for his continued zeal and exertions; to the Right Hon'ble Sir R. Wilmot Horton, for the promptitude and energy with which immediately on his arrival in England, he exerted himself in favor of an extended steam communication with India, and particularly for his able conduct as chairman of the public meeting held at the Jerusalem Coffee house on the 12th October last, and to the committee appointed at that meeting, for the devotion which they have made of their time to the cause of a Comprehensive steam communication between England and India by way of the Red Sea, and especially to Timothy A. Curtis, Esq. the chairman of the committee for his disinterested exertion,—and the committee addressed Mr. Curtis under date 5th February as follows:"

"It is wholly impossible, sir, for us to adequately express the satisfaction we have felt at this measure, we have been now engaged since the month of June, 1838, in endeavouring to cause this important matter to be properly taken up at home with a view to practical effect."

"From the appointment of your committee, we feel assured that the whole question will be settled, and such information obtained as must necessarily bring it to a conclusion one way or the other; and as it is as we have already seen, that with but moderate aid from the authorities, a steam communication in its most comprehensive form, between England and India, would not only pay but confer incalculable advantages on both countries, we cannot permit ourselves to doubt the result."

"In January 1839, a public meeting was held at the London Tavern, to receive the report of Mr. Curtis' committee. In the mean time, referring to Mr. Tait's departure from England having prevented making use of the list of conditional subscriptions which had been forwarded to him, and desirous that such a manifestation of the desire of the people of Bengal for the establishment of a perfect communication should be known in England, the committee forwarded under date 7th July, 1838, a complete list of the conditional subscribers to Capt. Barber with the following intimation :—

"Accompanying is a list of the names of firms and individuals who have subscribed, with the number of shares taken by each, amounting at present to No 766, Shares 2,577 upers 12,88,600.

"In the Englishman of the 29th ultimo, which will be sent to you, you will perceive that the Governor-General approves highly of the proposition eventually to establish the Communication by means of a company. He considers there can be no doubt that within reasonable limits the favor and encouragement of all the authorities in India and at home will be given to an undertaking promising advantages so entirely without measure, you will also see that the Governor of Ceylon, the Right Hon^{ble} J. Stewart Mackenzie, equally approves of the measure, and is willing to give it all the support in his power."

"In the event, therefore, of the question of establishing a Comprehensive steam intercourse between England and India by way of the Red Sea, by means of a company again coming before the public, you can make known the number of shares, conditionally subscribed for here, to such parties as may be moving in the matter; or you may move parties with reference to such number of conditional shares, and to the approbation of Lord Auckland and Mr. Stewart Mackenzie to come forward at home."

"It is, however, necessary you should distinctly understand that these subscriptions are indultually conditional—that the committee have no power to bind the parties—that each individual on a plan being submitted will judge for himself, but I am to state the impression of the committee to be, provided the conditions referred to by Mr. Tufon are adopted and that the plan has the support and assistance of Her Majesty's Government and of the Hon^{ble} Court of Directors, that not only will all the subscribers in Bengal complete their subscription, but that many who have held back from various reasons will now come forward. The committee have already communicated to you the outline of the views they entertain on this matter, and all they will now say is, that they are under the sentence should be comprehensive in its most extended sense—comprehensive in regard to the communication extending to all parts of India, to its being conducted with the utmost despatch consistent with the convenience and comfort of passengers of all classes, to every possible arrangement being made to secure the comfort and accommodation, including large class steamers with the best possible arrangements of cabins and ventilation, &c., &c., &c., and to facility to passengers proceeding only to intermediate places as well as through out the whole line. In short the more perfect, the more comprehensive in its details, the more, this committee think, the plan would receive support by subscribers of shares in this country."

"Although the subscriptions at Madras have not been as yet great, there can be no doubt that on such a plan being promulgated, corresponding aid would be derived from that presidency."

Capt. Barber received this communication in Dec 1838, immediately before the meeting above referred to took place. He brought it to the notice of that meeting in conformity with his instructions, and it necessarily became connected with the resolutions come in at that meeting, which were briefly that "it was highly necessary that that (quick and certain) intercourse should be maintained by a private company, whose sole object would be to afford such means of conveyance of letters, newspapers, and periodicals, and such accommodation to passengers, as shall ensure a constant and certain monthly communication between Great Britain and the three presidencies of India with Ceylon, and whose future views may be directed to the extension of that communication to the Straits, China, the Maldives and Australia, that T. A. Curtis, J. P. Taskias, J. Bagehew, and Jas. McKillop, Esqrs., be requested to carry out the proposed company, and that the East India Association of London, and the respective Chambers of Commerce of Liverpool, Glasgow, Bristol, and Birmingham be respectively invited to co-operate with the proposed company." In reporting the appointment of the committee, Mr. Curtis thus writes in January last to the Calcutta committee.

"I most sincerely congratulate my fellow subjects in India, on the progress which that question has made in the public mind in this country—which I trust will be confirmed by the readiness which will be exhibited in contributing to its being practically carried into effect and responded to with alacrity in the Peninsula of India."

"It would seem that nothing now remains to be done but to carry it into practical operation. With that view the general meeting of yesterday has appointed Mr. Larkins, Mr. Bagehew, Mr. McKillop, and myself, to take measures for the establishment of a company, and to solicit the co-operation of the Chambers of Commerce of the principal ports trading to India. To this duty we shall immediately apply ourselves; in the mean time I must hope that your committee will organize so substantial a subscription in Bengal, that it will leave no doubt of the deep feeling and interest which are felt on your side of the water, in the success of this great enterprise, and which can only be inspired by a strenuous unequalled effort in its outset. We have always understood from Captain Barber, that the amount subscribed in Calcutta for the contemplated object, was equivalent to £140,000; taking the proportions of Madras and Bombay, this amount of subscription would justify an expectation of at least £220 to 230,000 for all India, and a certain number of shares representing a considerable portion of that capital, will be reserved for India in the proposed company, and in this calculation I hope not to find myself disappointed, as the people of England will surely expect, in a matter in which your local interests and personal conveniences are too much involved, that your contributions will equal the importance you have attached to the question. Your steam committee will, I am sure, spare no exertions to realize this expectation, and as I am happy to learn from Captain Barber, that the Madras committee have placed themselves in communication with you on the subject, the united efforts of those two important places cannot fail to produce the desired effect."

"We have still much to do in England before we can come fairly afloat. I think it is probable there will be subscriptions enough, but the plan must be contingent on the concurrence and contributions of the East India Company and the Government, and his offers the difficulty of obtaining subscriptions sufficient to constitute a company before obtaining that concurrence, whilst on the other hand the Government and the East India Company will only treat with a body already formed and ready for action, and not with a prospective company, to be created upon their undertaking to contribute. This latter consideration will act as an additional stimulus to your steam committee, to urge forward substantial subscriptions and to transmit them at as early a period as possible. The first call will be for 10 per cent."

"I shall conclude with assuring you, that though commercially unconnected with India, I take the liveliest interest in every thing that can promote its social, political, and commercial prosperity and happiness, and am anxious to promote any thing that can add to the comfort, conveniences, and social intercourse of my Indian fellow-subjects."

This letter was dated 10th January, 1839.

In reply the Calcutta committee, under date 1st April, said "On their own parts, the committee feel earnestly desirous, and they cannot doubt the public at large will be equally so, to manifest their grateful confidence in those who have laboured so sedulously and disinterestedly in the good cause at home. The committee therefore, although the details of the scheme are still incomplete will, after publishing the present correspondence and the proceedings of the 18th January last, at once call a full meeting of the conditional subscribers on the list advertised by you, at which the public generally will be invited to attend, and the committee will then urge the shareholders as the most conclusive proof of the sense we entertain of the warm feeling in favor of the comprehensive scheme established by your meetings, as due to our own honor and consistency, and as manifesting in the most unquestionable manner, the unshaken and intense interest we feel in the settlement of this vitæ question, to pay up immediately an instalment of ten per cent on their respective shares, as shareholders in our scheme under which steamers will start monthly via the Mediterranean and Red Sea for Ceylon, Bombay, Madras and Calcutta, in the manner contemplated by your proceedings, held on the 18th January last, and which scheme may afford, in the opinion of the London committee, the fair prospect of a moderate return upon the capital invested."

And at the meeting of Conditional Subscribers, which took place in Calcutta on the 15th April, the following resolutions were passed:—

"With reference to the determination of Her Majesty's Government and the East India Company, only to treat with a body already formed, and prepared to establish a Comprehensive steam communication between England and India by way of the Red Sea, it is, in the opinion of this meeting, expedient that such a Company should be forthwith established on the most substantial foundation."

"That Messrs. Timothy A. Curtis, John P. Larkins, James McKillop, and John Bagshaw, having been appointed a committee in London to organize such a Company, the conditional subscribers, having entire confidence in those gentlemen, and feeling earnestly desirous to manifest, in the most incontrovertible manner, their intense and undiminished interest in the scheme of Comprehensive steam communication between Great Britain and India, do forthwith pay up ten per cent on the amount of their subscriptions, or at the rate of 50 Rs. per share of 500 Rs. into the Union Bank, to the credit of the committee of the New Bengal steam fund, as trustees of such Company."

"That the committee of the New Bengal steam fund be authorized to remit, by the earliest opportunity, after receipt of the prospectus drawn up by the committee appointed for that purpose in London to the Directors of such Company, whatever sums may have been paid in, up to the date of its despatch, to be subject to such rules and provisions as may be established in regard to subscriptions for shares in England."

The result of the above resolutions has been, that rupees 1,02,700 have been paid into the Union Bank as 1st instalment.

In the meantime Mr. Curtis had entered into communication with the authorities at home. In the first instance he addressed himself to the President of the Board of Control; and under date 11th May 1839, in reply to the letter of this committee, under date 5th February above quoted, Mr. Curtis wrote as follows.

"It is a gratifying reward for the labour the committee appointed at the general meeting in October last, undertook, to learn that their endeavours were duly estimated by the important body which your committee represents, and by the Indian community in general."

"For myself, highly honored and flattered as I feel by your kind notice of me, I am conscious how little claim I have to it, but, I accept with great gratification, the expression of your approbation of the part I have taken in this important business; and, as far as my humble abilities will permit it, make the free offer of my best services in the endeavour, to carry into complete effect, the great scheme in which I have embarked."

"The course of the negotiations with the India Board has now become somewhat impeded, and perplexed, from two causes, 1st, from the East India Company, not choosing to recognize as official in respect to itself any communications made to the India Board, and requiring a direct application to the Court from the projected Company. (you will observe, however, by the introductory paragraph of my letter of the 21st February, that it was at the instance of the President of the India Board, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer, that I entered upon that course of proceeding) and 2dly, from the succession of Lord Melbourne's Administration from office, which will throw the negotiations into new hands."

Thus in May last, Mr. Curtis had to recommence his application by addressing the Hon'ble Court of Directors, which he did under date 14th of that month, the letter is published in the Calcutta papers of the 17th and 18th July and the letter from Mr. Melville, which appeared in the Calcutta papers of the 28th December, and dated 14th October was the reply.

The letter of Mr. Curtis, to the Hon'ble Court, published in the Calcutta papers of the 17th July last; and, by it, it will be seen that Mr. Curtis at the same time forwarded copy of the correspondence which he had held with the President of the Board of Control, which was published in the Calcutta papers on the same date. The committee under date 16th July, expressed themselves to Mr. Curtis as follows:—

"The Committee desire me to express their unbounded thanks to you and your colleagues, for the able and judicious course adopted by you in furtherance of your project for establishing a Comprehensive steam communication between England and India by way of the Red Sea, from which they cannot but anticipate so early and satisfactory settlement of this long pending question. At the same time, I am directed to state, that, in the event of still farther delay in the realization of what is admitted by high authority to be the just expectations of the people both of England and of India, you may rely on the active co-operation of not only this committee, but generally of the people of India."

At the following half-yearly meeting, held on the 19th August last, the following resolution was passed, with reference to the above documents:—

"That the report be received, that the thanks of this meeting be conveyed by the Right Reverend the Chairman to Messrs. Curtis, Larkins, Bagshaw and McKillop, and to Captain Barber, for their zealous and well-directed efforts to obtain the immediate establishment of a perfect comprehensive steam communication between England and India, and that they be assured that no exertion shall be wanting in Bengal, in aid of their endeavours."

And again in October, at the public meeting of the inhabitants of Calcutta, the following resolution was adopted:—

"That the steam committee be requested to forward copy of this petition, with such explanatory and other observations as they may consider necessary to their agent in England, and that they will be pleased to instruct Captain Barber to print two thousand copies of the petition and observations, for distribution to the Members of the House of Commons, taking an interest in India affairs, to the British India Association, and to the chambers at the principal trading cities.

The prayer of the above petition addressed to the Supreme Government, was to the following effect:—

"Your Petitioners, however, most respectfully trust and entreat, that your Honor in Council, witnessing and feeling the mischief which has been occasioned to the most important public and private interests by the present imperfect system, will urge upon the Hon'ble the Council of Directors, on the part of the Supreme Government, most respectfully on the part of your Petitioners, and in the name of all India the Hon'ble the Court, will be pleased to close with a proposition, approved by Her Majesty's Government, which has been submitted to the Hon'ble Court by Mr. J. A. Curtis, of London, on behalf of a Joint Stock Company, which Company is, under pledges and penalties (to be prescribed by Parliament) prepared to convey the mails between Bombay, Calcutta, Madras, Point de Galle and Great Britain, by means of powerful steam vessels, calculated to accomplish their voyages with certainty, and celerity, at all periods of the year, and at a cost to the state less than that of the present inefficient system.

The Supreme Government in reply have stated, "that copies of the memorial have been forwarded to the Honorable Court, with the expression of a strong opinion in favor of the local Government, in favor of establishing a scheme of steam communication with all the presidencies, either through individuals and private associations, or through Government steamers."

In conformity with the resolution just above noticed, the committee have directed the attention of their agent, Captain Barber, to the resolution and the petition.

The Committee purposely abstain from making any opinion as to the course to be pursued, they are, however, after laying the facts before the public, to allow the meeting to come to their own resolutions. The Committee, however, think it right to add, that in his letter under date 10th September, Mr. Curtis reported, if the reply should be unfavorable, that it was his intention to call public meetings in different parts of England, to memorialize the East India Company and the India Board, and he concludes by observing, "I trust you will see that the subject has lost none of its interest in the hands of the Committee, and that it has not been their fault that so many months have been lost in bringing it to hear."

On the 6th ultimo, the committee received through their Agent a printed copy of a Pamphlet by Mr. Currie, intended to be laid before the meeting in London, which was to be called on receipt of the refusal by the Hon'ble Court. They regret that they are not at liberty to publish that pamphlet, it not having appeared in England when the October mail left, because from it the public would have been able to gather from his own words the views entertained by him, and the course of negotiation intended to be adopted by him, with a view to move the authorities by the influence of public opinion.

By order of the committee N. B. S. F.

C. B. GREENLAW, Secy.

Calcutta Jan., 9. 1840.

[Husk., Jan. 11.]

The steam meeting on Wednesday, the 15th instant, drew a very numerous and crowded attendance at the Town Hall. On a motion of H. M. Parker, Esq., seconded by Major Forbes, J. Pattle, Esq., was called to the chair, at whose request C. B. Greenlaw, Esq. read the requisition, calling a public meeting, as advertised in the public prints. Mr. Greenlaw, with the consent of the meeting, proceeded to read the correspondence between the Lord Bishop of Calcutta, as chairman of the Comprehensive scheme, and Mr. Timothy and Captain Barber, both of London, to enter with a letter from Mr. Curtis to the committee, of which the following are copies:—

Bishop's Palace, Calcutta, August 22, 1839.

TO CAPTAIN BARBER.

DEAR SIR,—I should never forgive myself if I conveyed to you the accompanying Resolution, without at the same time assuring you of the sincere gratitude I feel, in the bottom of my heart, to a gentleman who has laboured so assiduously and differently and successfully in one of the greatest causes that ever interested humanity. I can truly say, that the consequences, immediate and remote, of such communication between India and Europe, defy calculation. Such a wonderful adaptation of science is full of "the seed of things," as was said of Lord Bacon's philosophical writings and principles two centuries since. The invention of printing and the discovery of the magnet's compass, did not more immediately bear upon the happiness of mankind. The human family is now indeed approximating, and by an inter communication of knowledge, the times may be expected to draw on, when the illumination and elevation of the more prosaical nations will be brought down to the most remote and excited. Allow me, Sir, to conclude with saying, that not only as a chairman, but as a man and a Christian, I have some pleasure in transmitting to you the following resolution, and am, Sir,

Yours, &c.

(Sd) D. CALCUTTA.

November 4, 1839.

MY LORD BISHOP,—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter under date the 22d of August last, conveying to me a resolution that was passed at a public meeting held in Calcutta, and at which your Lordship presided. Under any circumstances such a document would have been a most conclusive testimony. The knowledge that my humble efforts have been rightly understood and appreciated is very dear to me; but, when I reflect upon the channel through which it has been conveyed, the circumstances itself becomes doubly gratifying, and it is in instance that will be cherished in my heart so long as that heart continues to beat.

I have laboured diligently and faithfully in discharge of duty which I unhesitatingly accepted, but I am nevertheless fully sensible that the extent and the value of my services are much overrated and particularly so under the kind and benevolent feeling of your Lordship.

If ever there was a nation blessed by Providence with the high privilege of conferring advantages upon mankind, that nation is England. It surely then behoves us Stewards to bestow those blessings which the Divine Almoner has entrusted to us to dispense.

I do most heartily and fully concur in anticipating all those glorious and mighty results which your Lordship has so eloquently, so forcibly, and so feelingly pointed to, as the probable consequences of approximating India to England.

Should I be permitted to see that great end accomplished, there is no period of my life upon which I shall look back with greater self-approval than that which has been employed in promoting it.

With many very sincere and grateful thanks to your Lordship, and through you to those who passed the Resolution,

I have, &c.

(Signed) JAMES BARBER,

To THE RIGHT REVEREND THE LORD BISHOP OF CALCUTTA.

Bishop's palace, Calcutta, August 22d, 1839.

To T. A. CURTIS, Esq. &c. &c.

DEAR SIR,—Though only slightly known to you in person, I presume you will excuse me in expressing to you the admiration with which your correspondence has filled my mind, as it has been communicated to me by the committee. Indeed, sir, you have done eminent service in the most distant and populous of the countries under the influence and protection of Britain, and at the same time the country most in want of western civilization, and most eager, so far as we can judge, to receive it. Go on, dear sir, in the course you have so nobly begun. The blessings of unnumbered millions will descend upon the head of him who thus stepped forward at the critical juncture in your upon India the civilization, the teaching, the commerce, the science, the morality, and ultimately the religion of Europe.

In conveying to you, Sir, and your friends, in this great cause, the accompanying Resolution, I am not only obeying the impulse of duty as Chairman, but the deep sentiment of individual gratitude as your faithful and obedient,

(Signed) D. CALCUTTA,

London, 4th Nov. 1839.

My Lord Bishop,—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the letter of the 22d August last, which, your Lordship, as Chairman of the public meeting held at the Town Hall, Calcutta, on the 19th August, addressed to me, accompanying a copy of a resolution passed at that meeting, expressive of appreciation of the exertions of the committee of which I am the Chairman, in the great cause of pioneer steam communication between India and England. I have laid your Lordship's letter and the resolution before the Committee, and I have to express to your Lordship and the meeting, that no reward can be more acceptable to the Committee for all their labour and anxieties than the assurance of their being rightly appreciated by the Indian public, in whom we take so lively and sincere an interest. The manner in which your Lordship has been kind enough to express yourself, in respect to the correspondence with the Government and the East India Company, calls upon me to say that I have only been the organ and Interpreter of the sentiments and opinions of the gentlemen with whom it may have been my good fortune to be associated, and that although the correspondence bears my name, and may have been mainly constructed by myself, it has been modified and arranged entirely by the Committee. Highly, therefore, as I should prize any commendation of the manner in which the communications with the Home Authorities have been carried on, and particularly the eloquent and feeling language in which it is conveyed by your Lordship, the merit of these communications belongs to my Hon'dle colleagues, without whose assistance I fear my attempts to effect the object in view would have been at once overthrown. Your Lordship will learn with regret, that the East India Company still pertinaciously oppose any scheme which may interfere with their present imperfect system; the only resource we have now left, is to appeal to the public, and effect that, by external influence, which wider proceedings have failed to produce.

The committee beg to offer to your Lordship their thanks for your communications, and to express their great satisfaction at seeing the prominent position which your Lordship has placed yourself in this great interesting and important question.

I have, &c.

T. A. CURTIS.

P.S. I have taken the liberty of sending to your Lordship's address, a pamphlet which I have published on the state of the questions of steam communication, and which I trust will meet the approbation of the great community with which your Lordship is so blessed. A this pamphlet is my own off-print, I would say to the public,

Be to its virtues very kind,
And to its faults a little blind;

and I must hope it will not undergo a very severe criticism.

T. A. CURTIS.

London, 4th November, 1839.

C. B. GUFENAW, Esq., Calcutta.

DEAR SIR,—Since my last letter of the 12th August, I have received your favour of the 12th and 16th July and 24th August, and I have to thank you for the highly interesting and important information they contain. On the question of the Docks, there seems no doubt, judged, my mind was made up upon that subject from what Captains Glenharon and Warden had told me. With this packet you will receive a pamphlet I have written, and which is now published for sale and distribution. Each day brings fresh proofs of the inefficiency, and, I may say, scandalous mismanagement of the present system. I think of there being no steamer waiting to take this last mail when it arrived at Alexandria from Suez, and which happened to contain such brilliant and important news, I shall put out another pamphlet soon, which will be a selection of Paragraphs and a summary of meetings, &c. &c. &c. taken from the various newspapers and, which will show that the Indian community are intensely bent upon the accomplishment of the object, and I shall not fail to give the world another edition of the failures which mark the present system. The mail was detained 4 days at Alexandria, was after all sent forward by a private boat, and was 17 days in coming to England! By our plan a steamer would have been waiting for the mail and the passage would have been made in 12 or 13 days, making a difference on this side, of 8 days, at least, and in the whole, of about 32 days. I shall address all the Chambers of Commerce, and the Trade committees, in the towns in which the Indian Trade interests them, with a copy of my correspondence, and with a prospectus, which will be drawn up and approved by the committee on Wednesday next, the 6th instant. We shall urge these bodies to immediate action, and, I trust, you will very soon see that the example you have so nobly set, has not been lost. I attach a high value to the names of the natives who have subscribed.

The committee have learnt with deep grief the lamented decease of Captain Cockere; they feel that a powerful supporter of this interesting and important object, has been lost to the world.

I am, &c.

(Signed) T. A. CURTIS.

After the letters had been read, the Chairman rose, and briefly addressed the meeting, saying, that he thought it unnecessary to enter into any explanation, in regard to the objects of the meeting, which, even were it necessary, he could but imperfectly do after what had so often been expressed in such glowing language. He would, however, only say, that they had assembled to consider the best means of establishing a steam communication, and, since the means hitherto adopted had failed, to devise other means more likely to prove successful.

Before the proceedings went further, Mr. Greenlaw read a public letter from Captain Barber, a great portion of which, however, he was obliged to omit, in consequence of mention being made therein of parties, in a manner which might prove prejudicial to them, by being thus publicly promulgated.

East India rooms and General agency, 64, Cornhill, Nov. 4, 1839.

To C. B. GREENLAW, Esq., Calcutta.

SIR,—The mail reached London on the 30th ultimo, but the letters were not delivered till nearly four P.M., the time occupied in weighing them to fix the penny postage was the cause of delay. By this arrival I received your several letters, dated August 11th, 12th, and 13th. It gave me much satisfaction to find, that the opinion of your committee, indeed of the whole community, coincided with my own, as respects the correspondence that has passed between Mr. Curtis and the authorities.

When you receive the copy of Mr. Court's letters in reply, dated 14th ultimo, I can imagine what will be your surprise and disappointment. I did not think Sir John Holhouse would have so readily conceded the point after his Letter to the Court of 12th July last, nor did I think the East India Company would venture to draw upon themselves the odium that cannot but follow the publication of the correspondence already alluded to. The letter is an evasion, and it is difficult to imagine upon what ground their continued opposition is based, neither is the enquiry now worth pursuing, the knowledge if it could be come at, would answer no good end. They have now taken a decided stand, and, as I have before observed, it will require high pressure to induce them to retrace their step, whereas I shall always think that had pressure been vigorously and judiciously applied before the final reply, it probably would have had a good effect.

There are two circumstances, either of which has encouraged resistance, fostered the Court's hope of ultimate success, and much increased their opposition to the grant asked, viz. The divided opinions in India and the want of united effort here, among the merchants. I write adversely, when I say that Mr. Laipent to this hour promotes the opposition, but, as I have before observed, as Mr. Laipent has influence would be comparatively nothing, but Mr. Laipent, chairman of the East India and China Association, he has done much injury to the Comprehensive cause. Had that association been favourable and warm advocates of the plan, as propounded by Mr. Curtis and the committee, I question whether the Court would not have yielded, and if not, the Government would have been more urgent in compelling them. I allude to this lost cause now, because I foresee the same will in a degree operate against the subscription whenever a prospectus may be issued. It gave me much satisfaction to see, by the papers received, that your half yearly meeting to August was so well attended and so well supported.

By Thursday evening, I had that portion of your committee's report, and the speeches of those who moved the resolutions, i.e. all that could prove interesting or useful here, printed, and, together with the Memo, I sent it to the whole of the London Papers; but at present the effect has been but little. The statement of facts, a proof of which I now enclose, will be ready tomorrow, and I shall forward that to every newspaper throughout the country, of any note, if it does induce proper attention. I shall then insert it in the Times, for that journal lately has several times, in an ambiguous manner, endeavoured to lead public opinion from our project, and to induce the community to rest their faith upon that of the Court.

This week, Mr. Curtis will publish his pamphlet, I wish, if possible, to excite the press a little previously, that they may be on the qui vive when the correspondence appears. In my last I stated our committee had determined to address the Chambers of Commerce throughout the country, but, on reconsideration, Mr. Curtis thought it more advisable to wait the arrival of the mail, foreseeing it would furnish the Committee with some new matter. I am glad it was done, because the knowledge of your half yearly meeting and the information gained from your committee's report at that meeting, cannot fail to operate favourably on the minds of the several Chambers of Commerce. I shall take care they be abundantly supplied from the Hurkaru of the 20th August. The Committee meet on Saturday, and discussion took place on the letters and news that had been received. It was resolved the Chambers should be addressed, and the correspondence be forwarded. I hope also to see a prospectus adapted, to be sent at the same time. I urged it strongly, and I think with success. The committee will meet on Wednesday to decide.

The state of the money market is certainly much against sanguine expectations of a large subscription, still I am willing to believe, if the effort be made with energy, success will follow. Shares to the extent of £100,000 should be taken in London before any public meeting be convened, that done, I would then call a public meeting in London, which should be followed immediately by others in all the provincial towns interested in carrying the project carried out, a good example we must hope would be readily followed.

Whether success does or does not attend the endeavour, it is the best, indeed the only means left to effect the object.

If £500,000 that fund will certainly carry out a monthly communication with your side and Ceylon. Should it be less, then we must be content with the communication being less frequent, but to me it is quite clear, that proper vessels, under a good system once started, they will soon increase to the number required for every efficient purpose, and as for revenue, it must, it will come.

Under all the circumstances, therefore, I think you need no longer doubt, that some decided measure will be taken before the next mail goes, and I prognosticate that success will attend it.

(Signed) JAMES BARRER.

Mr. Turton then came forward, and in reference to the last letter read, said, that he was assured that Captain Barber did not care, if its contents, which were thought objectionable for the public to hear, were made known, since Captain Barber wrote the letter, merely as secretary to the committee; yet though the London committee have not assented to write the epistle, we, as the Indian committee, should not read it. Mr. Turton went on to say, that he did not put his friend's (Mr. Greenlaw's) modesty to the blush, by calling on him to read the letter, because it contained passages which he could not respond to, but because Captain Barber and the Directors have expressed opinions, all of which concurred to render the letter strongly in favour of the Preceptor plan—all parties seeming satisfied that something must be done by ourselves. I have called on you, gentlemen, to exert yourselves since October.—I have shown you that Mr. Coffin and Capt. Barber, instead of trying to raise capital, are multiplying correspondence as much as possible, and circumstances contained in the letter, confirm this view. The letter, however, speaks in one place of "divided opinion," which part of it was energetically read by Mr. Greenlaw. Yes, there is divided opinion but the disagreement is between my friend, Mr. Greenlaw, and the Bombay people. And there is such a divided opinion, on one ever doubtful, and Capt. Barber refers to this when he speaks of divided opinion—yes, to this and not to any division between the advocates of the Precursor and Comprehensive. Capt. Barber next speaks of want of united efforts—not in India—not in Bengal—but "here"—that is in London. "Here," he says, "some plan must be adopted." But we might as well sleep off our beds, and let our arms on our bosoms, wishing for success, as go to them for unanimity. To trust to them would be as futile as the prayer of the waggoner to Jupiter. On the occasion of one meeting my friend, Mr. Greenlaw, said, that he would not wish to hear words only, but to see deeds performed. So do I wish to see deeds done, —and I want heart, and soul, and pocket too in the cause.

Here Mr. Tutton made some allusion to parts of the letter, referring to Mr. Larpent, which positions Mr. Greenlaw had misunderstood. Mr. Greenlaw, upon this, got up and requested the chair to be permitted to read the suppressed portion, since Mr. Tutton had made allusion to it, and mentioned names. To this Mr. Tutton said that he had no objection provided Mr. Greenlaw confined himself to the reading of the letter only. The letter was then read, after which Mr. Tutton proceeded to refer to the apprehension expressed in the letter, in consequence of the separation of Mr. Larpent from the Comprehensive cause, which, he said, would operate against it a "great deal."

Mr. Parker. "Not a 'great deal,' but in a small degree."

Mr. Tutton. "Well in a small degree." The speaker next went on to say, that he was not opposed to steam communication being established via the Mediterranean. Let the Mediterranean, said he, be all crowded with steamers—let it be all covered with smoke, and I will rejoice to see the day when it is so occupied, but before that day arrives, a very long time must elapse, if we depend on the creeping Comprehensive. But let us meanwhile put our shoulders to the wheel and get our waggon out of the mire, and when others see us strive to assist ourselves, they will come forward to our assistance. Another thing that we should bear in mind is, not to rely on those on the other side the Channel. Captain Barber says, that he sent all the proceedings in the English papers, perhaps the gentlemen of the press present here will say if they have seen them in the English papers, but I am certain no such thing has been published. Captain Barber says farther, that at present there has been but little effect, —not in a small degree, but little, which is, gentlemen, nothing at all. Capt. Barber likewise speaks of exciting the British Press. We too can try but will we produce that excitement?—No, and yet we can do a great deal more than Capt. Barber thinks. He says that before a company is formed, shares ought to be taken to the extent of a thousand pounds. Thanks to our friend, Mr. Greenlaw, we can boast of one hundred and two thousand pounds. I say again that we can boast of a hundred and twelve thousand pounds in Bengal only. Captain Barber more over, says, he does not entertain very sanguine expectations on the subject of the formation of a company, and talks, of great energy and an example as necessary to success. But Captain Barber's good sense has been blinded by a desire to oblige Mr. Greenlaw. To talk about an example of a hundred thousand pounds, while we have in Bengal subscribed a hundred and twelve thousand pounds, one-tenth of which has been actually paid down, is absurd. This letter, therefore, instead of advancing the cause, would directly do the contrary. People would say, that the merchants at home did not favor the scheme: that a number of shareholders were connected with it: and if the Secretary himself is not sanguine and satisfied, who can the Company do otherwise than refuse their request, and how can the people be expected to join with readiness. Instead of satisfying any person of the possibility of success, they asked to embark in the undertaking. First satisfy the Company of success, and then, no doubt, they will comply with the requisition made. But I am not willing to throw the failure on others as we deserve the blame. Originally there were on hand seventeen thousand pounds, with interest for six years—so which add the hundred and twenty thousand, and thirty-five thousand of Madras rupees in subscription, being equal to pounds—, which, including the Old Bengal Steam Fund, make two hundred thousand pounds, a sum fully adequate for steam communication. Yet, with the seventeen thousand pounds, we have done nothing (Cries of no, no. Time wastes and delay increases; let us, therefore, at once pass resolutions and establish steamers between this and Suez. Every country in the world almost, is crowded with steamers in every part, but India has only one sea-going steamer. Let us not idle time others for our deficiency in this respect, but assist in establishing a direct communication. Let us put our hands into our breeches' pockets and help ourselves. Mr. Tutton then enumerated a great number of mercantile ports on the European continent, every one of which, he said, had private steam companies and steamers for intercommunication. India only was an exception, and it were idle, therefore, to talk about examples. He concluded by proposing the resolution, which was second by Baboo Dwakannah Tagore.

"The Under the existing circumstances, in which Steam Navigation between Great Britain and India is placed, with reference to what is usually termed the Comprehensive scheme, no Company having yet been formed in England on the purpose of prosecuting that scheme, it appears expedient to this meeting, that the inhabitant of the presidency of Bengal and Madras, and of the Government of Ceylon, should unite all their energies and resources for establishing, immediately, a direct steam communication between Calcutta and Suez, via Aden and Ceylon, as frequently as the funds which may be raised will allow."

Mr. Greenlaw then got up and said:

Gentlemen, I need scarcely say that I am opposed to the motion:

It may appear somewhat presumptuous in me to rise so immediately after my friend Mr. Tutton, fully aware as I am that I cannot venture to compare with his eloquence, his power, of argument, his wit or his humour; nor would I have presumed to do so, did I not feel myself strong in the cause, the honor, the integrity of my cause. (Cheers.) Depending on that strength, I shall do my best endeavor to explain why I oppose the motion.

Gentlemen, not being aware of what might be the exact nature of the "step" which might be submitted to you as that you should adopt, but feeling that in reality the question is a very simple one, I had prepared, not a motion, but a memorandum of what the real question was, which you would in fact have to determine, that is as far as you can determine it, for you are only a section in India—and I am happy to say, with reference to the motion now made, that I do not see occasion to alter one word of that memorandum, which is as follows.

QUESTION TO BE DECIDED.

"Whether after fostering a great public undertaking, up to the point to arrive at which very nerve has been strained, you will now, just when your aid is most required; abandon it to support what, if not strictly a private enterprise, partakes more of that character than of a great public work." This, I contend, gentlemen, is the question you have now to determine. The motion itself bears out in this view of the question, for it goes at once to the root, and calls on you to withdraw all further concert and co-operation with those at home, who are engaged in your own cause, for the purpose of joining in the support of that which, up to this hour, is a private undertaking. If it is not a private undertaking, where are the evidences of its being a public one? Did it originate in a public meeting in this Hall? Did it even originate in the Chamber of Commerce? No, gentlemen, it originated in the Chambers of our worthy friend, Mr. Tutton; so truly was his proposition not, nor is it yet, a public enterprise, that only those individuals who were in silly town, have been at all invited or admitted to have any share in the proceedings connected with it up to this very hour.

A prospectus has certainly been issued, requesting parties disposed to join in the undertaking, to communicate their names; but, gentlemen, it is not possible to answer the question, and being possible, if an answer were given, I should like to know the promotion of shareholders obtained by the publication of the prospectus, and that secured by means of private application. If it is not a private enterprise, then why have not the public been apprized of the names of the shareholders, and of the amount subscribed and paid? Who, as a public individual, knows any thing about it? They may have got a sufficiently large subscription, but calling now in the public to abandon their own hitherto favored scheme, they ought to have let us know whom and what we are invited to join at such a sacrifice—a sacrifice, as I take it, of our honor and our dignity.

Gentlemen, this is the history of the Projector. In February last, the establishment of a single steamer to run between Calcutta and Suze was first mooted. I was invited by the late lamented Mr. Cockerell, to be present at a meeting at the Chamber of Commerce, not of the members of the Chamber of Commerce, but of individual Merchants at the Chamber. There, gentlemen, I had an opportunity of becoming acquainted with the suggestion, and asked whether it was intended to call on the public to subscribe, or in that case it might interfere injuriously with the eventual call for subscriptions from home. The late Mr. Cockerell rejected the suggestion with indignation. Another gentleman also, at that time, declared that it was a private matter among the Merchants themselves, and that they would not subscribe one rupee less to the home subscriptions when required, nor make any condition that the Steamer should be taken over. This gentleman was Dwarkanath Tagore. One gentleman only, as far as I understood, was disposed to consider that the vessel should be taken over, but even he did not say a word of appealing to the public for subscriptions. Gentlemen, the proposition, if carried out, would have been worthy of the merchants of Calcutta. It was abandoned; why I know not, unless because it did not meet adequate support. The suggestion, however, was revived on the arrival of Mr. Tutton, with an assurance that if he thought it would injure the Compagnie's scheme he would not say a word about it. I have noticed how it has hitherto been managed as a private enterprise, and it is now for the first time brought under discussion as a public measure on grounds similar to those lately advanced in the Chamber of Commerce, viz. that the struggle at home is hopeless and should, therefore, be abandoned; and that the communication on the other side, in direct connection with that from Calcutta, is useless.

Gentlemen, I readily join issue on these two points; and I am happy that the question is put on these issues.

Gentlemen, I shall first address myself to the latter ground, namely that the communication on the other side, in direct connection with that from Calcutta, is useless.

Now, in the first place, let me bring to your notice the fact that the public authorities at home, in notifying the arrangements for conveying the mail through France, recommend that the "heavier despatches," should be sent, not through France, but by sea between England and Alexandria. This, gentlemen, constitutes a prima facie admission of the necessity of a steamer between Alexandria and Falmouth, in connection with the steamer on this side. Next, gentlemen, I shall produce a witness as to the necessity of the Steamer on the other side, to whom I am sure no gentlemen here will object. He is a man gifted with sound judgment, and in this case speaks from experience.

I find, at page 68, of the Minutes of Select Committee of the House of Commons, under date 28th June, 1837, the following entry.

Thomas Edward Mitchell Tutton, Esq., called in and examined.

Now, gentlemen I think you will see, that the evidence of Mr. Tutton as to the necessity of a steamer on the other side, is not weakened at all by any additions which may have taken place to the number of steamers between the different European ports in the Mediterranean and Alexandria, if any addition has been made since June, 1837. The evidence of Mr. Tutton on this point was as follows:

"We consider that the return which we shall give from the three presidencies of Calcutta, Madras and Ceylon, would not be less than 133 600£ towards the expenses of the plan, supposing the route to be complete, not only from Calcutta and Bombay to Suze, but from Alexandria to me, which we consider would contribute very much to the profit of the whole scheme, as well as to their advantage."

Again—

"We also consider that there would be a considerable freight if it went the whole way, and particularly for specie, between Madras and Ceylon, and Calcutta, and Bombay, exclusive of plate and jewellery, &c."

And again—

"We also consider that if steamers of adequate power and tonnage were placed upon the whole line, there can be no doubt, that one half the passengers and one half the letters, at the rate of which I say, would go by that route in a very short time."

In answer to this question,

"Will you state the plan you would purpose for carrying this communication into effect?"

Mr. Tutton replied,

"I should propose that a sufficient number of steamers of 800 tons and 220 horse power, be placed on the whole line between Calcutta and London, and Bombay and London, taking charge throughout the whole distance of passengers, parcels, specie and cargo."

Yet again—

"To like manner, the Indian passengers and mails will cross to Alexandria by the 22d of June, and proceed to England, only transshipping into another steamer at Gibraltar, where they will arrive by the 11th July; 57 days from Calcutta. The committee will allow me to state why we are very anxious that this plan should be adopted. I am satisfied myself that it is the best and the most efficient course, and would be the cheapest in the end, because I feel assured that I very much underestimate the intercourse there would be after a short time, between the different presidencies and London, in saying that one half the passengers and one half the letters would go by that route; and I think (what seems to be the most difficult matter in any other way) that families of children would invariably go that route and not round the Cape. It would also save the whole quarantine which would be performed at sea, instead of Malta. By transhipping at Gibraltar into a fresh steamer, keeping the Alexandria steamer in quarantine after the passengers quit her for ten days, during which time she might be efficiently fumigated, and allowing one or two days for inquiries after the passengers arrive in London, all the rest of the quarantine would be saved, and this seems to me the only method to induce families to send their children. It is impossible to interfere with the quarantine in the Mediterranean, because it involves all our relations with the whole of the continental ports, and if we were to make an alteration that would lessen the quarantine, the result would be that there would be a second quarantine to perform in the Mediterranean ports. If we keep it entirely in our own possessions at Gibraltar and London, then we can by that means make any regulation that we like. By this mode a person might come home to London, and might be out again at Rome infinitely sooner than he could by leaving Alexandria, going to Malta, performing quarantine there, and going from thence to Rome by the speediest conveyance they could get. Supposing we availed ourselves of the French Steamer, it would be impossible to induce families to trust their children to vessels of that kind, with which they had no communication in Calcutta. Besides the passage through France would not do, but taking the route I have described, I feel no doubt that if the expense were made the same that it would cost to go round the Cape, almost every person would go that way and send their children that way."

Now, gentlemen, it appears to me that nothing can be more clear, than that no increase in the number of steamers between Alexandria and the European ports in the Mediterranean, no arrangements whereby their regularity is maintained, can at all invalidate the above testimony to the necessity of the steamers of the other side in connection with that of this side. Mr. Taiton tells us

"Supposing we availed ourselves of the French Steamer, it would be impossible to induce families to trust their children in vessels of that kind with which they had no communication in Calcutta."

Nor is this all, for, even allowing that such was done, he still emphatically tells us that "the passage through France won't do." He had before said that making the whole route complete, would at once contribute very much to the profit of the whole scheme as to the advantage. He had also previously most emphatically impressed on the Select Committee, the reason "Why we are very anxious that that the plan should be adopted," and what is the reason. It is this, "I am satisfied myself that it is the best and most efficient course and would be cheapest in the end."

This, gentlemen is, Mr. Taiton's testimony to the expediency or necessity of a steamer on the other side in connection with that on this.

While I am referring to Mr. Taiton's evidence on this point, I may as well observe that one of Mr. Taiton's present objections to the connecting steamer on the other side, is the difficulty opposed by the quarantine. Mr. Taiton has not now alluded to this difficulty, but he has elsewhere; and, therefore, I consider it expedient to address a few words to you on the subject, in the hope that I may satisfy you that the difficulty is or will be nominal. First, in the evidence of Mr. Taiton before the Select Committee, you will remember that he recommended the connecting steamers on the other side among other reasons, because the quarantine would, under the proposition of changing steamers at Gibraltar, bear more favorably on the connecting steamer than on the French steamer to Marseilles. He says expressly,

"By this mode, (i. e. a Steamer from Alexandria to Falmouth changing at Gibraltar) a person might come to London and might be out again at Rome infinitely sooner than he would by leaving Alexandria, going to Malta, performing Quarantine there and going from thence to Rome by the speediest conveyance they could get."

Then how much sooner could a person get to London by such means? Mr. Taiton afforded further evidence, on this part of the question, not exactly on the preference to be given either to the one mode of conveyance or to the other, but to the degree of necessity for any quarantine. In reply to a question,

"Were you in any degree inconvenienced or impeded by the plague or the apprehension of coming into contact with persons infected by it?" He answered; "Not in the slightest degree. It was not, however, the season of the plague though there were occasional cases of plague, and I had four bills of health from Alexandria. There were occasional cases of plague at Cairo, but both at Cosseir, at Ghensh and the whole way down the Nile to Cairo, we intermixed freely with the natives of the country without the slightest precaution whatever, and both myself and my child, including even the infant, rode about the Buzas at Cairo to see what there was there, and intermixed with every person we met, and never felt the slightest apprehension, nor, I believe, had any cause for it. I consider the plague, except at certain seasons, a mere bugbear, for at the very season I went I met Lord and Lady Brudenell, who, I think, expressed some apprehension of coming into contact with the natives from it. They had come from England fresh with the prejudices of England as to the plague, and felt an apprehension which I did not in the slightest degree. I found that every person in Egypt treated the subject of the plague very lightly indeed."

But the question of quarantine has not been overlooked by Mr. Curtis. It is referred to in the report of the committee to the public meeting in London. It is thus observed, "In the homeward voyage some allowance is to be made for quarantine, but your committee have to observe, that the steamer will not perform it at Malta or any other intermediate port, but on arrival in England, and they confidently anticipate that agreeably to the custom which obtains in her Majesty's Service, the duration of quarantine will be diminished by the number of days she may be on her passage from Alexandria to England. So that the objection which only applies to the homeward voyage, will not generally affect the computation beyond an additional five days."

And Mr. Curtis, who preferred the Port of Bristol, expressly ascertained from Mr. Claxton the managing Director of the Great Western Steam Company, that there was good quarantine ground in the Severn, where the Great Western always took in her coals, cargo and passengers. Moreover, in a letter dated 29th March last, I was informed to the following effect by Col. Campbell.

"It is, however, probable, that quarantine in Europe will soon be much shortened and the whole system freed from many vexations. I have by the last Packet a despatch from Government to inform me that a congress is to be held for that purpose of Members of all the powers having ports in the Mediterranean, and I have had a series of questions sent to me relative thereto, to which I am to procure replies from the best informed medical and other authorities in Egypt."

Now, there can be no doubt, whatever arrangements may be made for the modification of quarantine in the Mediterranean, that the British Government will not be *found backward in general arrangements connected with England, and certainly disposed to go as far as possible in respect to the communication from India in particular. I therefore cannot but think the question of quarantine will become a bugbear, as Mr. Turtion says, the very question of plague itself is considered in Egypt.

But there is yet one more important matter connected with the expediency or necessity of the connecting steamer in the Mediterranean and it is this gentleman—it is no secret office, it is a matter of public notoriety, that by the present mode of communication between the public authorities in India and in England, very considerable periods necessarily elapse between orders sought and orders given. The present system of written communication certainly provides for the speedy transmission of points of great moment, but even these can only be communicated in very reduced form, no detail can be given. But for the great bulk of the communication on which depends the constant daily conduct of the Government of India, nothing can be done, and I have heard individuals, unconnected with the Government, complain that matters referred home have not been replied to in some cases for two or three years. Now, gentlemen, I may say that in the various conversations I had with our late lamented Governor-General, Lord William Bentinck, while his opinion was strongly in favour of the necessity for first establishing the communication for Bombay, I frequently adverted to the above circumstances. I pointed out that by the existing arrangements all the detailed proceedings of the different Governments and boards were in quarterly volumes, not compiled for a month or six weeks after the expiration of the quarter. These most important documents did not reach home for many months after the occurrences recorded in them; that under the operation of steamers from all the ports in India, in connection with one in the Mediterranean, the proceedings being compiled monthly, could be conveyed home and arrive in London in two months after the occurrences recorded, and in like manner the most detailed communication on all points could be received from the Court of Directors, and I believe most sincerely that this had more effect in inducing him to give up his opinion in favor of the restriction in the first instance to Bombay, than any thing else.

But, gentlemen, on this point let me quote an authority of some weight. I mean Mr. Peacock.

Mr. Peacock has observed in his evidence before the Select Committee.

"In time of war expeditious communication is advisable, but in time of peace regularity is the thing, and perfect knowledge when we get it. If we have irregular communication, and imperfect knowledge, occasional expedition will not make up for it."

Now, gentlemen, it is only by the operation of a steamer in the Mediterranean, proceeding to England in connection what that on this side, that this at once "expeditious communication" and "perfect knowledge" can be maintained; it follows therefore that to obtain this most desirable end, the authorities will be far more ready to make a grant for the whole way to England, than for this side only; and here I would observe that a connecting steamer on the other side, is necessary to secure to you the capital of England.

My own opinion is—and if I am wrong I can be corrected by the numerous Mercantile Gentlemen present—that capital sufficient to establish a monthly communication cannot be obtained in India even although it should be supported by the authorities. The people of Bengal have subscribed most liberally to Mr. Curtis' proposed Comprehensive scheme, and occasion has been thereby taken to undervalue Captain Barber's proposition, that £100,000 should be subscribed before a public meeting should be called in London. The subscription of £112,000 in Bengal, has been opposed to Captain Barber's suggestion. But this is scarcely fair, inasmuch as the £112,000 in the subscription of Bengal, and the result of several months' subscription, whereas the £100,000 of Captain Barber are, what he says, should be obtained in a few days in London before any meeting is held. If Mr. Turtion had compared the £60,000 subscribed in Calcutta in one week, I would have been much more to the purpose. In connection with this correspondence Mr. Turtion has alluded to the lukewarmness at home. Why, in the course of my connection with this matter, I have been more than once or twice, and at various periods, been told, and it has been declared in the public papers, that the people of India themselves were lukewarm. I declare to you, gentlemen, that when in 1836 I first suggested to the Committee that a public meeting should be called to petition, I was told by a man whose heart and soul were in the measure, Mr. W. H. Macnaghten, that he feared it would not succeed, and that if we failed we should do injury to the cause. I myself felt the attempt to be hazardous, so satisfied was I at the time of the general apathy. You have now, however, certainly given the strongest possible proof of your feelings, and of your liberality; you have subscribed the sum mentioned by Mr. Turtion to the whole scheme; and if finally driven to the communication on this side, I do not doubt you would contribute as much; but that would not be enough. The Merchants of Calcutta set the example, but would they or could they quadruple their amount? I cannot think they could do it, and even then larger public contributions would be necessary, than have been accorded to the whole measure; and without the connecting steamer on the other side, whereby the management of the communication is retained at home, I do not consider that you would have any assistance from England. Here then again, is a reason why there should be a connecting steamer.

As to the other point at issue, gentlemen, viz: that the struggle is hopeless, that we can expect nothing from the parties at home, and must, therefore, abandon all reliance on them, the chief ground, as I understand, on which this is contended for, is the letter of the Court of Directors to Mr. Curtis, except indeed that to-day Mr. Turtion has, by his version, brought Capt. Barber's letter to bear on his side. I on the other hand, gentlemen, hope to satisfy you that it rather belongs to us.

However, to the letter of the Court to Mr. Curtis. How can it be said to render any future struggle hopeless? Does it not expressly state that the Court are fully sensible of the advantages of maintaining an efficient Steam communication with India, and that their anxious endeavours have been, and still are directed to the accomplishment of that object? Let me ask, then, gentlemen, what is the object Mr. Curtis has in view? Is it not that very object which the Court express their wish to see accomplished? and have they not also said, that "no very well devised measure by which the established means of communication may be extended, the Court would be ready to afford due encouragement?" Well, again, what does Mr. Curtis propose, but well devised measures to this very end; and not only to it but to improve the established means of communication, and the question is, shall we or shall we not support him in those well devised measures?

But, gentlemen, ground has been taken to depreciate any further dependence on Mr. Curtis and our friends on the other side, on account of the delay which has occurred.

On this point, gentlemen, let me observe, that Mr. Curtis's committee was appointed in January last, and in February he commenced a series of correspondence with the Board of Control, which he believed to be the proper medium of communication with the Joint Authorities. In May, however, he found that he was expected to also address the Hon'ble Court of Directors. He did so, thus three months were lost, and, finally, he did not get his reply till 14th October; but, gentlemen, it is most important to bear in mind, that Mr. Curtis was all along prepared for that reply and ready to act on it.

In his letter of 6th July last to your committee, after expressing his gratification at the approbation of his conduct, and his determination to show that he was not undeserving of that approbation, "by the exertions which are to come," he adds, "those which are passed being light as air in comparison with what I fear is before the committee, in whose name and under whose sanction I act." In this letter he intimated the change of purpose as to the immediate forming of a company; he also intimated his intention eventually to "convene public meetings in Bristol, Liverpool, Birmingham, Manchester, and Glasgow, to pray the House of Commons to insist upon the extension to the presidencies, or to call upon the company to make arrangements with a private company," and in conclusion he said:—

"I shall not prolong this letter, further than to assure you, that my zeal for the cause is not only not diminished, but greatly increased, and that the kind stimulus afforded in the expression of good opinion of those who are so well able to judge of the value of my exertion, will not be lost on me."

On the 12th of June, he intimated as follows to the Chairman of the Court, alluding to the eventual reply:

"If that answer should be favorable, there will be no occasion for any ulterior proceeding, but if on the contrary, the question is delayed, and no answer returned, or should the opinion of the Court be unfavorable, I think it right to apprise you, that both in Parliament and throughout the country, measures will be adopted to express the feelings of the public on this important question. I trust you will not think that I offer this as a threat, my respect for the Court would never allow me to assume such an attitude, nor am I as you well know, of the tribe of Agitator; I have wholly abstained indeed from all agitation of the public mind, in the hope that the East India Company would spontaneously have adopted our plan; but the time is come when I cannot in propriety allow the matter to rest where it is, and therefore I think it right to apprise you at once of the course I shall be compelled to adopt."

On the 16th of September, in his letter to the committee he still refers to his intended purpose of obtaining the expression of the public wish, and referring to the native subscriptions in the Mofussil, which he says have great influence on the public mind at home. He observes that he trusts the desire thereby expressed "will be echoed from one end of the empire to the other, as an incentive to the sympathies of Englishmen, if the East India Company should still refuse to listen to the appeal which on behalf of the committee I have again made to the Court."

This letter was dated 10th September, and in it he again refers to the ulterior measures—he says:

"As the case at present stands, it will be manifest that if the project should be given up, the failure may be attributed to a want of discreet patience on the part of the committee, whilst, on the other hand, the greatest anxiety prevails both in England and India, to see the proposal adopted. I therefore venture once more to express my hope, that your honourable Court will be able to meet the wishes of the whole of India and a large portion of the British public, in consenting to the proposal I have submitted on which instant steps will be taken to present the notice of your Hon'ble Court, such a company, and such names as directors to it, as I think will not fail to give entire confidence and satisfaction."

Thus, gentlemen, Mr. Curtis was prepared to act in case of refusal of the required grant on his personal application. He was prepared to move the people of England to make a similar application. And at whose instigation did he, who is entirely unconnected with India, hold himself thus prepared to act? Is it not at the instigation of your Agent? Have you not up to this hour, upheld and supported Mr. Curtis in his exertions for you, not his own, cause? and will you then now abandon him just at the moment when he is about to use the most powerful weapon in your favor? He has not desponded, or despaired, because of the Court's letter; on the contrary, he was on the point of acting with energy.

Here some interruption took place amid cries of "go on," "go on."

Mrs. Greenlaw was proceeding, when Mr. Turton asked to him, that Captain Vint had invited every one to dine with the Indigo Planters' Association, and if he would accept the invitation? On which Mr. Greenlaw said that the was in the hands of the committee; that he was then doing his duty and was equally ready to go on or adjourn.

The sitting then adjourned till Saturday next, (this day) at 10 o'clock in the morning.—Herk. Jun. 16.

The Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund publish the following letter and enclosure from Mr. Curtis, for general information:—

London, December 4, 1839.

C. B. GREENLAW, Esq., Calcutta.

Sir,—Since my last letter of the 4th ultimo, I have had the pleasure to receive your duplicate letter of the 5th June.

By the last packet, I sent you a copy of a pamphlet I have written, and which, I trust, whatever it may want in ability, will convince you and your zealous coadjutors, that there was no lack of earnestness in my desire to serve the great cause of social and commercial intercourse with India.

I have addressed circulars to the Chambers of Commerce of Glasgow, Dublin, Manchester, Liverpool, Birmingham, Bristol, Leith, Newcastle, Paisley and Hull, and to the East India and China Associations of London, Liverpool, and Glasgow, and to the Australian Association of London.

I have only received answers from Glasgow, Newcastle and the London East India and China Associations. The Glasgow chamber cannot meet until the return of the chairman, which will be in about a fortnight. The Newcastle Chamber will meet to-morrow. The question will be taken up in both. I have also heard that the Liverpool Association will meet in a short time to take my letter into consideration. The London Association has sent me the accompanying printed statement and resolutions, which I consider a most curious document. I am not aware how many persons attended the meeting at which these resolutions were passed; but I have understood that it frequently happens that not more than two or three are gathered together on such occasions, and that the dicta of the Chairman are generally the resolutions of this Association, as the committee was "specially convened" possibly the meeting of the 29th of November last may have been more numerous. I deem it scarcely necessary to dilate upon this continued embarrassment which this body opposes to the wishes of the Indian community, and the false view it appears to take of the real and right interests of the country at large. The first resolution confirms those of the 21st February last. Thus consistently adducing dissatisfaction to prove satisfaction.

The arrangements of the Government and East India Company had not in February answered the expectations of the public, but in December arrangements were improved, but rather had been still further proved to be incomplete and inefficient, the committee are of opinion that it would not be "prudent to disturb the present system" until, what? "private speculation is fully prepared" to accomplish the comprehensive scheme. In the first place, the Association was not asked to disturb the present system, until means were taken to accomplish the comprehensive plan. Mr. Larpent was invited to be present at the meeting, which took place at my office yesterday, but he neither came nor sent any excuse. We courted his assistance and advice in the adoption of the steps necessary for the formation of a Company, but he did not deign to respond to our request, and therefore difficulties are, pro tanto, thrown in the way of private speculation, being so fully prepared as it might be to answer the tenor of the the East India and China Association. I think you may now remit the money you have collected and send it to the order of Messrs. Roberts, Currie and Co. (who will be the bankers of the New Company) to be placed to the credit of the "East Indian Steam Navigation Company," or to be retained at the disposal of such nominees as you may afterwards direct should that Company not be formed.

This contingency must be provided against though it is highly improbable to arise. In the estimate I have made, I have taken 100 passengers for each ship each voyage, and divided them into 65 for Calcutta, and 35 for Madras, and into 60 Calcutta, 35 Madras and 15 Ceylon, as casual. Capt. Henderson calculates that steam ships of steamships, and which are advocted to in the last paragraph of the vote (X) of the appendix of the printed paper of the Association, that body should still adhere to the opinion that the conveyance of the mails by way of Marikell, which does decrease the postage (vide 4th resolution of 21st Febr.) and does increase the time necessary for conveying the Mails to Alexandria, secures the facility and regularity required.

The result of this meeting seems, however, mainly to resolve itself into this, that the East India and China Association will only sanction the trial of the experiment of building steam vessels to run between Calcutta, Madras, and Galle to Suez, leaving the whole question of the transmission of parcels and the conveyance of passengers from Suez to England, and from Alexandria to India in the same unsatisfactory predicament as it is now! I have dwelt more at large upon this curious document than I should have done, because it appears to me very remarkable that an Association, having at its head so conspicuous and influential a member of the India commercial community, should be so unwilling to lend its zealous aid in accomplishing an object which must so materially and so substantially benefit its interests.

A meeting of several gentlemen connected with India took place at my office yesterday. There were present, Jn. Bagshaw Esq.; J. F. Laikins, Esq.; J. McKillop, Esq.; George Arbuthnot, Esq.; Henry Roberts, Esq.; Charles Kerr, Esq.; John Small, Esq.; Major Head, Captain Nairne; Captain Henderson, John Small, Esq., N. Rothschild, Esq., and M. Rothschild, Esq.

It was resolved, that the prospectus, which had been prepared by Messrs. Keshfield and Sons, should be adopted as the basis on which a Company should be formed; and a committee, consisting of Mr. Laikins, Major Head, Mr. Bagshaw and myself, were appointed to draw up a formal prospectus as the governing principle of the Company. This meeting must be considered rather in the light of a preliminary one, and the members who attended it must not be thought bound to become directors, although I may say the great majority of them will. It will be our endeavour to strengthen the Directors by as many good names as possible.

You will observe that the East India and China Association deem the cost of the British Queen £80,000. I have taken £88,000 in my calculations as the cost of each boat, and still handsome profit will accrue. I send you a rough estimate I have made of the outlay, and income. I trust you will now see that the measures being taken on this side are such as to stir up the commercial community, and that a prospect is opening of an efficient and well regulated system being set in motion, which will entirely accomplish the object in view. Our Money Market is somewhat averse to speculative projects at present; but for such a legitimate purpose, I think we shall not want subscribers, though I confess I am disappointed at the cold water thrown upon the whole scheme by the President, but you must recollect I have made no allowance for the increase of passengers, which the facility and accommodation will give to travellers from China, the Straits, Batavia, Singapore, &c. &c. all of which will be benefited by this comprehensive plan.

I think it necessary to remark upon the absence of Captain Barber from the meeting held yesterday. As the intention is to give him a prominent appointment in the Company, which will make him a paid officer under its orders, it was thought inconsistent that he should take part in the discussions as to its formation and rules. Captain Barber was in attendance, ready to have afforded any information or assistance had they been required, but the meeting being deemed preliminary, there was no occasion to call him in.

I beg to avail myself of this opportunity of repeating my testimony to the zeal and efficient services of Captain Barber, to whom the great cause will owe much of its success.

I have, &c.

T. A. CURRIE.

P. S. You will oblige me by forwarding a copy of the prospectus, &c. to Mr. Cator, of Madras, to whom I have been unable to forward one direct.

THE EAST INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY—TO BE INCORPORATED BY ROYAL CHARTER.
CAPITAL £1,000,000

The practicability of maintaining a steam communication with India by way of the Red Sea has been fully proved by the experiments tried by the East India Company, though under every disadvantage from the insufficiency of the vessels employed by them.

The communication however has been of small value to passengers, because confined to that part of the line between Bombay and Suez; and other reasons arising from the exigency of the public service, will ever prevent the East India Company from maintaining it with the required certainty. The British Government has recognized the necessity of entrusting the Post office service to private associations, in all cases of distant steam navigation, and the considerations which have led to this conclusion, apply with ten-fold force in the case of the East India Company. It is therefore proposed to establish a Company to carry into effect a plan by means of such steam boats of large tonnage and powerful Engines, as shall connect the intercourse between Calcutta, Madras, Ceylon, and London in an undivided chain of management. It would be most desirable that the Presidency of Bombay should also be included in the general arrangement, and there can be no doubt that eventually this will be done, but for the present the East India Company propose to maintain this in their own hands.

It is estimated that to accomplish the communication between Calcutta, Madras, Ceylon, and Suez, four steam boats will be required, and two more will be necessary to perform the service between England and Alexandria; careful calculations have been made of the expense of the vessels, and of the necessary establishments, and, upon an estimate of the annual expenditure as well as the income, there is no doubt that the undertaking will yield a liberal profit on the capital employed even with the computed amount of passengers, but which will greatly increase, judging from precedent, as the plan advances. To carry into effect the plans of the Company, the following outline is proposed:—

That steam ships shall start on a fixed day in each month from England and Calcutta, the time calculated on for the performance of the route being from England to Alexandria 15 days.

Ceylon,.....	38	„
Madras,.....	41	„
Calcutta,.....	45	„

Two ships will be employed in the service between England and Alexandria, and four ships between the presidencies of Calcutta and Madras and Ceylon and Suez.

The route across the Isthmus of Suez to be at the charge and under the superintendence of the Company.

It is conceived that a capital of £600,000 will amply suffice for the present objects of the Company; but the capital is fixed at one million to enable the Company to undertake the Bombay station, and also to provide boats for such French Lines as may hereafter be thought desirable—so as to extend the conveyance of the mails to all parts of India and the Islands to the Eastward.

Application will be made to the crown for an act of incorporation to limit the responsibility of the members of the Company.

The capital stock of the Company to be £1,000,000, in 20,000 shares of £50 each—£10 per share deposit to be paid on the allotment of the shares; £10 in three months from that time; £5 in three months from second payment; and the remainder by instalments of £5 each; when called for by the Directors upon three months' notice.

In case of failure to pay the deposit or any instalment when due, the shares and all previous payments made in respect thereof, to be forfeited.

The affairs of the Company to be managed by a board of directors, the qualification of each of whom shall be 25 shares.

In all the affairs of the Company the Proprietors holding 10 shares to be entitled to 1 vote.	} but no persons to have more than four votes.

100 „ „ „ 4 „

The first directors are to remain in office five years after which three of the Directors shall go out of office annually, and an election by the proprietors shall take place to supply the vacancies, but such Directors may be re-elected.

There shall be two annual meetings of the Company at which dividend will be declared, and all other usual business transacted. The charter will prescribe the constitution of the Company.

By order of the Committee,

C. B. GREENLAW, Secretary.

Town Hall, Calcutta, Jan. 23, 1840.

[Hark., Jan. 25.]

The adjourned Steam Meeting on Saturday last, was not so fully attended as on the first occasion. On the chair being taken, Mr. Pattle opened the postponed proceedings, by explaining, that it was now for the meeting to decide on what had been, to some extent, discussed on the former occasion. He referred to the opposing plans on the tapis, and said that it would entirely depend on those present whether either of these plans was to be adopted, or both together.

Mr. GREENLAW.—Gentlemen, not having concluded my address, on the adjournment of the meeting, I certainly expected that I should, as a matter of course, have been called upon by the chairman to resume; however as such has not been the case, I presume to offer myself to your notice.

And first, gentlemen, allow me to express my sincere thanks for the patient attention which you bestowed on me on the last occasion. I fear, however, that I must still trespass largely on your patience. Notwithstanding it has been intimated to me from more quarters than one, that I have no right to occupy your time largely, I contend that I, as well as any other individual, am entitled to a full and fair hearing, however long I may detain you, if I confine myself to the matter before you; but I claim your attention on another plea. Mr. Turton, referring to his desire to have Captain Barber's letter read, intimated that he did not do so with any desire to put my modesty to the blush. I hope I am not a very vain man, but I certainly shall not allow any false modesty to prevent my claiming specially as lengthened a hearing as I may desire to obtain. Gentlemen, the chairman in his short preliminary address, as well on the present occasion as at our opening meeting, stated what he considered the meeting to have been called for. On the first occasion he said it was to determine what should be done in consequence of the measures hitherto pursued having failed; and now he declares it to be to adopt the best means of establishing a Steam communication between Calcutta and Suez. With all deference I submit that the meeting was not called for any such specific purpose. We were called together simply to consider, with reference to the letter of the Court of Directors to Mr. Curtis, what step it would be best to take under the circumstances of the refusal by the Court of Mr. Curtis's offer; and on the motion being made, which is now before you, I ventured to state to you what I considered it amounted to, in these words, viz:

“Whether after promoting a great public undertaking, up to the point to arrive at which every nerve has been strained, you will now, just when your aid is most required, abandon it to support what, if not strictly a private enterprise, partakes more of that character than of a great public work”

I observed to you that the motion was supported on two grounds—first, that there was no necessity for a connecting Steamer, on the other side: and secondly, that the struggle at home was hopeless.

For the first, I shewed you that Mr. Turton himself, in his evidence before the Select Committee of the House of Commons, expressly advocated such Steamer, especially with reference to the Quarantine Question; that, independent of any number of Steamers whatever, he emphatically declared that it would not do to go through France; and that he impressed strongly on the minds of the Committee why he was for continuing the route, viz., that he was convinced that it was the best, and the cheapest in the end, I referred to the recommendation of the authorities in their announcement of the arrangements made for carrying the mails through Marseilles, that the heavier despatches should still go by Sea, between England and Alexandria; and on this point all I shall now urge is the following General Order lately published, and remind you that Mr. Curtis, in his letter in this day's papers, expressly refers to the proof he has afforded that the Mails would be carried quicker on proper Steamers than via Marseilles. The order I refer to runs thus:

“16th January.—A practice having recently arisen of Commanding Officers of Regiments in India, transmitting returns and letters by the Overland Mail via Marseilles, by which a very considerable expense has been incurred to the public; the Commander-in-Chief has been instructed by the General commanding her Majesty's Army 'to forbid, in the most positive manner, this mode of transmitting returns; and other communications, on ordinary subjects.' " Commanding Officers of regiments will transmit their returns and official communications to the several military departments, as prescribed in the general regulations and orders of the army, and cause to be superscribed on the covers the words " via Falmouth."

This order refers to the expense of the conveyance through France; and Mr. Curtis also refers to this expense as an objection; but, gentlemen, there is, notwithstanding, the still further expense of the Steamer, which takes the heavier despatches to Falmouth; why then might not this Steamer be put on in connection with the Red Sea Steamer, thus carrying the whole packets, heavy and light, on to England at once? The expense of the Steamer is actually incurred, whether the lighter packets go through France or not; and all that is required is that the Steamer should be of the speediest character, and become connected with the Steamer, on this side under one agency.

Touching the other point, viz., that the struggle at home was hopeless, consequent on the refusal of the Court of Directors to accept Mr. Curtis's offer, I shewed you that he did not think so. I shewed you, on the contrary, that from the date of his sending in his letter, viz. 14th May, to that of the reply, viz. the 14th October, he was all along prepared for the refusal, and ready to act; and I am now borne out to the letter, by the documents received by the present mail, and published in the papers of this morning.

I would now direct your attention to the circumstances under which Mr. Curtis has been acting, and is still acting, with a view to put it to you whether you can with out inconsistency and a manifest breach of public faith abandon him.

Gentlemen, on the receipt of the copy of Mr. Curtis's letter to the Court of Directors, I was one of those who hardly thought the Court would give up their objection to transfer the carriage of the mails to a private Company on Mr. Curtis's private application. I feared that nothing but the expressed wish of the people of England would produce that effect. Many others thought with me, and in reply to the letter of Mr. Curtis, forwarding copy of his letter to the Court of Directors, the Committee wrote as follows:—

"At the same time I am directed to state that in the event of still further delay in the realization of what has been admitted by high authority to be the just expectation of the people of England and India here, I would observe, that the anticipated delay referred expressly to the apprehended refusal of the Court of Directors; and the Committee added, "You may rely on the co operation not only of this Committee, but generally of the people of India."

This was certainly the act of your Committee only, but the letter was published in the papers, in July last. In August following you had your half yearly meeting, at which Mr. Turtton was present, when it was noticed and you passed the following Resolution:

"That the report be received; that the thanks of this meeting be conveyed by the Right Reverend the Chairman to Messrs. Curtis, Larkins, Bagshaw and McKillop, and to Captain Harber, for their zealous and well directed efforts to obtain the immediate establishment of a perfect Comprehensive Steam Communication between England and India, and that they be assured that no exertion shall be wanting in Bengal in aid of their endeavours." Thus you stood in respect to Mr. Curtis in August last.

I would now beg to be permitted to make a few remarks on what fell from Mr. Turtton in respect to the letter of the Court of Directors; and here I must acknowledge, that notwithstanding the aid of my friendly instrument, I may have been mistaken in what I understood him to say. I shill therefore be obliged, by being corrected if I am in error—I understood Mr. Turtton to refer to his connexion with the East India Company, and to observe that probably it might be supposed that he was influenced by, that connexion in what he was about to say touching the reply, which was to the effect that he thought the Court right in making that reply. Now, gentlemen, no one here, I am sure, will believe that Mr. Turtton can be influenced by any thing but conviction; but I too am connected with the East India Company, and my connection is not of an hour or a day. Since I was twelve years and a half old, I have eaten no bread that was not earned in the service of the East India Company. I have received favour from the executive body, the Court of Directors, and I hope to receive more; my inclination and duty, therefore, unite in leading me to entertain the highest respect for the authority of the Court; and I must say that whereas the duty which I owe to the Court would shurely preclude my being able to express disapprobation of the reply, if I felt it, so the duty I owe to myself would not allow of my saying that they did right. My duty to the Court not allowing me a shadow of right to condemn, my duty to myself would necessarily preclude by expressing approval. But it happens very fortunately, that no necessity whatever exists for any question being raised on the Court's reply to Mr. Curtis; because Mr. Turtton did not say that he held the reply to be right, with reference to the abstract question of giving support to the grand measure of bringing the two countries together; but solely on the ground of the mode, manner and principle of Mr. Curtis's application; and, if I understand him right, chiefly on the ground of there not being a formed Company; but the particular objections to Mr. Curtis's application, which Mr. Turtton mentioned, are of no consequence to me at present; it is sufficient that he stated he considered the Court right in refusing the offer on the ground that the application was in itself objectionable; yet, gentlemen, in October last, when every act of Mr. Curtis in respect to this application, when every line he had addressed to the authorities, including the Court of Directors, was known, and before the reply was received, Mr. Turtton thus spoke of Mr. Curtis's proceedings, including of course the application.

"But now to leave these matters for a while, let us think of those who have done us good service in England. I think you will agree with me, that there is no man there who has done more for us than Mr. Timothy Curtis—(Loud cheers!) Loud cheers, gentlemen! your cheers. "No man has done us more service"—what—by making an application to the Court of Directors so objectionable as to warrant its refusal? But Mr. Turtton went on, "and yet he has received but cold thanks—such in appearance, but not really so. In England, it is not in the nature of things, that his labours in this cause can be so universally known and appreciated; but here such an acknowledgment is a matter of course. Therefore, to give the meeting an opportunity of testifying its gratitude to Mr. Curtis, for his exertions in the comprehensive cause, I will put to it the following resolution."

"That this meeting return its hearty thanks to Mr. Curtis for his valuable, persevering and unabated exertions in the cause of Comprehensive steam navigation."

Here then, in October last, you approved of all his acts, as regards his application to the Court of Directors; nay; you went farther, you petitioned the Supreme Government to urge on the Court of Directors the adoption of Mr. Curtis's proposition; you have been told in reply that the Court would be urged either to establish an efficient communication or to accept Mr. Curtis's offer; and yet you are now called upon to abandon him, and that this very application which you sought in October to get complied with, was so objectionable that the Court of Directors were right in refusing to grant it.

I now wish to say a few words touching the fâtit of Capt. Barber, which was read at our first meeting. It will be in the recollection of the meeting, that I did my utmost to prevent the name of Mr. Larpent, mentioned in that letter as being opposed to the comprehensive scheme, being brought forward, and at my suggestion that part of the letter was not then read. Mr. Turton, however, subsequently mentioned Mr. Larpent by name, as the gentleman referred to, and added that his son was then present, ready to answer any thing that should be advanced touching his father. After this I could not in justice to Capt. Barber do otherwise than require that the passage might be read, as otherwise it might be supposed that it contained language unbecoming Capt. Barber to use, and reflecting unfairly on Mr. Larpent, and that I had objected to the reading rather on account of Capt. Barber than from a wish to prevent Mr. Larpent's name being brought forward. The passage contained nothing in itself objectionable; it imputed to Mr. Larpent, that he was opposed to the comprehensive scheme; that in his private capacity his opposition was of little consequence, but that as chairman of the East India and China association, it had great weight.

Here the matter might have rested; but Mr. Turton dwelt long and largely on the folly of our depending on the people at home, with a divided party, headed by so influential a gentleman as Mr. Larpent. I, gentlemen, agree with Mr. Turton and consider that, independent of his situation of chairman of the East India and China association, he has great influence as the head of the house of Sir Charles Cockerell & Co., and as I have reason to believe from a pamphlet just come out—for pamphlet it is, and a party pamphlet too, although it purports to be the proceedings of a meeting of the East India and China association—that the precursors will track unto themselves with Mr. Larpent and the East India and China association, I think it right briefly to show, Mr. Larpent's connexion with this question.

When it was determined in 1836 to establish a home agency. Funds were remitted to parties of whom the late Sir Charles Cockerell was one. He at the time was on his death bed, and Mr. Larpent voluntarily undertook to act for him. On the lamented death of Sir Charles Cockerell the committee asked Mr. Larpent to take his place, and I will now read the words in which he accepted the offer. The letter is dated the 27th of November 1837.

"I beg you will convey to the committee my acknowledgments for the honor done me, assuring them that I have much pleasure in acceding to their request, and that my best endeavours shall at all times be used, in conjunction with my colleagues, in forwarding the object of the committee, namely, a direct steam communication by way of the Red Sea, between England and the principal Ports of India."

This was Mr. Larpent's voluntary pledge in 1837, and all I can say is, that I am not aware of any single act of his in redemption of that pledge. No communication was ever received from our Agent, intimating such acts, but the contrary. Mr. Turton was, however, himself at home, and a member of the committee there, and he, perhaps, may be able to bear testimony to Mr. Larpent's proceedings in redemption of his pledge. But I referred to a pamphlet under the denomination of "proceedings of East India and China association." This bears the signature of Mr. Larpent, and it is an apology for things as they are. It admits the evils of the present system, but it declares that nobody is to blame—that convenient nobody. To show, however, the reliance that is to be placed on this pamphlet I shall merely notice one document. Mr. Larpent professes to give the times taken by the Mails between Calcutta and London, and viz. as follows, during a certain period. These are taken from the half yearly reports made by your committee. He gives the date of the June Mail leaving London viz. on the 8th, that it arrived at Bombay on the 27th July, and at Calcutta on the 12th August, intimating that it took sixteen days from Bombay to Calcutta; but he entirely omits the remaining diables which on that occasion were eked out to twenty-one days. So much for the fairness of Mr. Larpent's party statement and for the reliance that may be placed on his co-operation in any measure calculated to establish things as they ought to be.

Gentlemen, when Mr. Curtis's letter, which appears in the papers of this morning was sent to the press, the pamphlet referred to therein had not been received. I shall only bring to your notice one short paragraph, but I assert that the Press of Calcutta will not do its duty unless it publishes the whole of the Pamphlet.

The Paragraph to which I have referred, would appear to have been written almost in a prophetic spirit. It has all but anticipated the state of things into which we are thrown by the unfortunate division among us. The party alluded to by Mr. Curtis, it is known, is an influential member of the Court of Directors. Thus, says Mr. Curtis:

"But it has been said to myself personally, 'only have a little patience, and it will be given into your hands!' Patience! It is not for me, but for the Proprietors of India Stock, and the Indian and British public to have the patience. But to what end is the patience to be exercised? To prove the failure still more? If the business must fall into the hands of a private company at all, does it not stand to reason that the sooner the contract is made the better? Why put off, I was going to call it, the evil day, but it might rather be designated the beneficial change? Time is now uselessly lost, patience will not build Steam Boats, but it may itself evaporate; and then the opportunity for establishing the much desired boon to the whole Indian community, may be lost." And, gentlemen, it does appear to me that the impatient movement now in agitation is eminently calculated to verify Mr. Curtis' apprehension.

Gentlemen, one other appeal I must be permitted to make. In June 1833, you appointed a committee to conduct the important affair. I ask, has that committee done its duty? I challenge any charge being made. If, then, we have done our duty—and up to October last, you have gone with us and upheld us, why are we to be abandoned now? But we are part of ourselves, and you may feel yourselves warranted in taking liberties with us—but I would ask you, gentlemen, whether faithful, active, and zealous agents of Indian affairs in England, are so abundant that you can afford thus cavalierly to treat an Agent than whom you never had one more faithful, more active, or more zealous?—but he again is your paid Agent, and you may feel no compunction in thus treating him—but Mr. Curtis is your disinterested Agent, has undertaken your cause at your request, and can you, without a breach of public faith, without a sacrifice of public honor, abandon him? Let Mr. Turton shew that Mr. Curtis has not done his duty. If he cannot do so, why then will you abandon him? Can you do so without a breach of public faith and a sacrifice of public honor? In a word, will you remove the conduct of this important matter from the hands of those of whose measures you have hitherto expressed your approbation in the most unqualified manner, and place it in the hands of untired men.

After continuing his forcible appeal for a few minutes more, Mr. Greenlaw sat down amidst much loud cheering.

* We were unable to procure a copy of the letter addressed to Mr. Curtis. — Rev.

Mr. W. P. Grant came forward and said, that he was as anxious as Mr. Greenlaw, or any body else, to get a speedy communication between England and all the ports of India; that nothing could be more desirable and important to this community, than a sure, steady, and rapid communication with the ruling State; but however desirable this communication may be, it was not so easily and immediately attainable as was attempted to be shown. He begged leave to say, that the active, honest and zealous Mr. Greenlaw had a great deal to say but little to do; and that the object of the present meeting was to decide what was best to be done in order that we might have an immediate communication with England. The Comprehensive, and its supporters, have been promising the attainment of this object for the last six years, and yet nothing has been done, and the Precursor plan is to put into immediate operation what the Comprehensive has thus failed in doing. The object of both is the same, namely, a speedy communication; and while he acknowledged the debt we owe to Mr. Greenlaw, both here and at home, for his exertions in this great cause, yet in matters of detail he must be allowed to differ with him. Besides now that the Comprehensive Scheme is virtually defunct, it remains entirely optional to parties whether they support it farther or not. Its existence was dependent on two conditions, the first of which was that Government would consent to support it—Government have refused this support, and it therefore no longer exists.

Mr. Grant here entered into minute details in regard to the respective expedition and expense of the different routes, together with the feasibility and profit of the Comprehensive and Precursor plans. Intermediately he adverted to the new prospectus published by Mr. Curtis in the public paper of the day, in reference to which he said, that a more crude and ill-digested plan was never put forward, and it could not be expected that people would be gulled by it, or that it could secure honest subscribers. He likewise observed, that the whole question hinged on this point, viz., are we avowedly for establishing the communication on this side of Suez only or on both sides? The Comprehensive requires six steamers, the Precursor plan proposes four, if we approve of the former one, are we prepared to raise capital to support six steamers?

Mr. Grant said, that he was convinced that a communication on both side of Suez would not pay, while the contrary would be the result of a communication established on this side only. In respect to the latter he referred to the opinion of the late Lord William Bentinck, who, he said, stated the whole question thus:—If you can find a steamer to Bombay, incur a little more expense, and take her to Calcutta. Lord Bentinck was no sucker for the Comprehensive, but he took a liberal view of the subject; his opinion was, if taking a steamer to Bombay would pay, to take it to Calcutta would pay. Mr. Grant, moreover, expatiated on the subject of four vessels intended by the Precursor for the communication, and what he said would draw both Government and general support, not only by the conveyance of packets and passengers from Calcutta only, but likewise from Bombay; while taking the route of Alexandria would not only increase expense without a proportionate increase of profit, but likewise place our Steamers beyond our superintendence. The same will be the fate of the steamers in England, which will be thrown entirely on the system of English jobbing. As, therefore, it thus appeared that the communication confined to Suez was the cheapest and the most profitable, the best thing we could do was to get our four steamers ourselves, and surely this could not be called interfering with other plans and schemes. With a view to carry out this plan therefore, we have already got subscriptions, notwithstanding we had to contend with Mr. Greenlaw's popularity, and it to the amount of the Precursor subscriptions he added the funds of the defunct Comprehensive, including Madras and Ceylon, with a little more trouble we might become independent, and with an immediate and regular communication between this and England.

Mr. Grant, in conclusion, defended himself and the Precursor party, from a charge brought against them of being against Mr. Curtis, in not having intimated to him their intention of carrying out the Precursor plan. In confutation of this charge, he read the following letter addressed to Mr. Curtis,* he also read a letter from Capt. Henderson and another from Chittagong:—

Extract Letter from Andrew Henderson, Esq., London, 4th Dec. 1839.—"We have been fighting hard here. The Directors have frustrated all our endeavours and given Jesuitical answers after seven months. And now Sir J. Hobhouse is also against us. Notwithstanding which we are determined to go on without them. Yesterday the Directors met for the first time; but there was not much spirit in the meeting, and in the present state of the money market we shall not get many subscribers just yet. It will take some time to draw up a prospectus and to bring the matter properly before the public here. The determined opposition of the E. I. Directors, the Bombay interest and the E. I. and China Association, are the causes of this long delay. Mr. Larpet is also much against it, though why I know not. But I don't despair of ultimate success, though we must incur some risk who start it. The best thing just now would be for the Bengal people to begin and build one vessel themselves. One vessel of 2,000 tons actually building, would do more to open the eyes of the public here, than all the prospectuses you could bring forth, and as it must be done, whoever does it, the sooner it is done the better. If we succeed in carrying out the scheme here, we shall want to build four vessels at once, which would be difficult to do here now, as the West India Company want fourteen vessels at once. It would be best to build our Indian vessels, two at Calcutta and two at Bombay, and if we do not succeed in getting subscribers here, and in falling back on the Bengal Fund, it would be the only feasible plan to build one vessel in Calcutta and have a vessel to meet her at Alexandria. I have asked two of the large Companies, and a vessel could be got for about £2,000 a voyage from London to Egypt and back. I must confess my fears that this in all we shall be able to accomplish after all—and I thought so at first, and stated so in one of the printed papers a year ago."

Chittagong, January 3, 1840

"GENTLEMEN.—As present aid from the Court of Directors to the Comprehensive Scheme of Steam Navigation between India and England appears hopeless, I beg to propose that we, the Chittagong subscribers to that scheme, take steps to signify our willingness to support, by the amount of our shares, the scheme which has recently been set on Mr. Taiton and other gentlemen in Calcutta, and commonly called the "Precursor Scheme," which, as you are undoubtedly aware, limits the communication to the Indian shore of the isthmus of Suez, should all the Bengal, Madras and Ceylon subscribers to the Comprehensive, back the Precursor Scheme, a steady and regular intercourse can be kept up between Calcutta, Madras, Galle, Aden and Suez, and though the funds may not at first admit of a monthly communication, the first results of success, will be such increased support from the Government, as well as from individuals, as to make it eventually quite certain. As for the European half of the communication, there can be no doubt, that if the Indian community convey mails to Alexandria, neither the mercantile community at home, nor the Board of Control, will suffer their accumulation there, and accommodation is now afforded every ten days to passengers from Indian and English Steamers leaving Alexandria once a month and French Steamers twice a month, to Malta and Marseilles respectively.

I propose, therefore, that we signify to Mr. Turton and to Mr. Greenlaw, our concurrence in the views of the projectors of the Precursor Scheme, and that the 10 per cent we have already paid on our shares, be made available for the purchase and starting of a Steamer to ply from Calcutta to Suez, via Madras, Galle and Aden.

N. B.—The shares in the Comprehensive Scheme being only 500 rupees, while those in the Precursor are 1,000 rupees each, some adjustment is required on this head; but a general proposition (and plan) for the continuation of the two sets of subscribers, is looked for, from those residents in Calcutta, who have carefully studied the question.

Mr. A. DE H. LARPENT here came forward, and gave some explanation in respect to the real state of things with respect to Mr. Larpent, of London, regarding whom allusions had been made, and who was originally to superintend the Comprehensive cause, on the condition of Government assistance, which being withheld, it became a matter of opinion whether we did so longer or not.

Mr. PARKER. Gentlemen,—I rise to address you, and the best thing I can pronounce for my speech is, that it shall be as short as I can possibly make it. The honourable gentleman, who, last but one, addressed you has deprecated long speeches, and admonished upon long speeches, and set an example in the matter, which I shall endeavour not to follow;—to the point then at once. My honorable friend, Mr. Grant, has told you to the effect, that nothing can be more important to this country than a sure, steady and rapid Steam Communication with the ruling State. Mr. Greenlaw has declared to you, that it is the most important thing in the whole world, and over and over, again this Hall has heard my own vociferations for better or worse on the same subject. Yet, gentlemen, after all these vehement declarations, there is one thing to my mind infinitely more important, and that is the honor, good faith, and consistency of the public of this Presidency. It appears to me that these are compromised, if at this juncture we desert Mr. Curtis and his Committee—by "we" I mean the original subscribers to the Comprehensive Scheme of Steam Communication, which that gentleman has been labouring to create. I say, it appears so to me, that our desertion now would be a breach of faith with Mr. Curtis, though it is a point which every individual must necessarily determine for himself; and God forbid that I should presume to think any man deficient in any of the virtues I have named, because he differed from my opinion on the point at issue. He may be right—I may be wrong—but this I may perhaps venture to say, because it concerns only myself—namely—that I should consider myself guilty of bad faith towards Mr. Curtis, if, at this juncture, I could, without one word to Mr. Curtis, withdraw my support, feeble as it is, from that Comprehensive Scheme of Steam Communication which has so frequently been applauded to the echo in this Hall, while the applauses have been followed by the most devoted expressions of determination to support Mr. Curtis and his Committee in carrying that scheme into effect.

Mr. Chairman, it is my disadvantage to follow gentlemen eloquent by nature and practice, and standing deservedly high in the estimation of this community. Opposed to those who have the honorable gift to wield and mould the public mind almost at will, who at once demand our respect by their talents and character, and command our judgment by their power of persuasion, I feel a poor, and insufficient advocate indeed, of the cause I have considered it my duty to espouse. I shall attempt no more, therefore, than to put before you a single plain case—a not impossible, a not improbable, case, leaving every one present to decide how far it bears upon the question now before us, and upon the opinion I have expressed that we are in good faith and consistency bound to support Mr. Curtis. Or at least not to abandon him in the sudden manner we are now called upon to do. Even while we are discussing the point, Mr. Curtis and his Committee may have assembled the merchants of London—Aye, gentlemen, the merchants of London; for notwithstanding the opposition of Mr. Larpent, than whom there is none more respectable or respected, I may say, with King Henry in the Old Ballad of Chevy Chase.

"Thank God I have within my realm five hundred as good as he."

Notwithstanding this gentleman's opposition, I say, to Mr. Curtis's Comprehensive Scheme, Mr. Curtis may have engaged wealthy and influential men to come forward, to subscribers largely to that scheme of Steam Communication, on the faith of his opinion, backed by the strongest documentary evidence, that they might rely upon Calcutta and Madras for about one hundred and thirty thousand pounds sterling, in part of the Funds of a chartered joint Stock Company. Mr. Curtis, gentlemen, shews that he at least relies upon us for this support by the very letter which has this day appeared in the newspapers. Well, an Indian Mail arrives some fine morning in London, and Mr. Curtis finds himself in the pleasant predicament of appearing before the capitalists, whom he has led into the scheme by bidding them expect from the "Gorgeous East" not "barbaric pearl and gold", but a solid one hundred and thirty thousand pounds; in the most humiliating position which it is possible to conceive. Gentlemen, does the man who has devoted his time, his influence, his zeal, his energy to our service, under repeated encouragement from us, under repeated declarations made in a spirit of standing by him through thick and thin as long as there was a fair chance of the Comprehensive Scheme being carried.—Does this man who has given us that time which is worth more than gold to one in his eminent position as a great London merchant, who agitated for us, and slaved for us, and thought and battled for us, deserve no better return than, the practical declaration you are now called upon to make, that he and his scheme is dismissed at a moment's warning and without a thought as to the effect such an abrupt, unannounced, unexpected separation may have upon his character as a man of sense and honor at home. Gentlemen, I ask these questions, it will be for every man to answer them for himself, but for my own part I should shrink as well of the soldiers, who, having followed so far with loud hurrahs, let their leader crash unsupported up some imminent "deadly breach" as I should of the public of Calcutta, those I mean who have all along supported the Comprehensive Scheme, if they were at this juncture, and without one previous hint to that effect, to abandon Mr. Curtis and the Committee whom, up to the present point, they have cheered on with every expression of confidence and devotion,

Mr. Chairman, There still appeared to me certain means available by which I, and the Gentlemen of the Steam Committee, who think with me, might be enabled to come to an amicable understanding with the gentlemen engaged in the Precursor Scheme, yet still maintain our own consistency as well as the respect we considered due to Mr. Curtis's proceedings, and our connection with that Gentleman's Committee and their plans. I therefore sketched a set of healing Resolutions which I intended, with the assent of our Precursor friends, to get placed before this meeting—I did more, Gentlemen. You have heard of King Codrus, of Curtius, and Mutus Scevola. Well, gentlemen, with a devotion to the public good equal to all three devotions of those three devoted personages, I adventured, where do you think gentlemen? into the very penetralia of the Precursor Committee To be sure I received a safeguard, and assurances of good treatment (I don't remember whether they included a quart of double X and a pipe) from my friend Mr. Turton. Armed then with the best intentions, and sketches of Resolutions, I entered the Lions' den; and I must say that the good treatment I met with was unexceptionable, barring the absence of the double X. But as for my resolutions! alas, they found no favor in the eyes of my "most dear enemies," and were, so to speak, negatived without a division. They were rejected, gentlemen, though so entirely on all main points in accordance with the views of the Precursor Association, that had I not unhappily been assured to the contrary, I should have said that the speech of my honorable friend Mr. Grant, would have ended by his proposing them to the favourable notice of this meeting. It was the singular accordance of Mr. Grant's address with the tenor of the sketched resolutions, which caused me to point to the paper now lying on the table so frequently in the course of the honorable gentleman's speech. But I beg to submit, that it is due to the motives and efforts of those who thus sought to bring matters to an amicable adjustment, that the paper should be more than pointed to, and I am only deterred by its being rather long, and by your time having already been much occupied, from soliciting permission to read it—(read, read, read.)

This meeting having given its attention to the present prospects of Steam Communication between England and the most wealthy, populous and important divisions of this great Empire, and having considered

First—The refusal of the Hon'ble the Court of Directors (which refusal has not been overruled by her Majesty's Government) to aid in substituting an efficient Scheme of Communication, at a less expense to the people of India, in lieu of the present miserably defective and more costly system.

Secondly—The projection of a chartered joint Stock Company in England by Messrs. T. A. Curtis, N. Rothschild, M. Rothschild, Jao. Small, J. Hagshaw, Arbuthnot, Roberts, Major Head, Captains Nairne, Barber, Henderson and others, to effect such communication, without the aid which has been so unaccountably denied, and

Thirdly—The anxiety manifested by a large proportion of the Bengal and Madras community that Steam Communication should be established with the least practicable delay between the two great Indian Presidencies, Point de Galle and Suez—Resolved as follows.

Resolved—That adhering generally to the Comprehensive Scheme of Steam Intercourse between Great Britain and India, adopted by the Resolutions of the Meeting held at the Town Hall on the 15th April 1839; continuing, to entertain unabated gratitude for the past exertions of Mr. Curtis and his committee, and the most entire reliance on their zeal, judgment, and disinterested wishes for the prosperity of the great undertaking they have in hand,—it is the earnest desire of the subscribers under the above Resolutions of April last, here present, that the line between Calcutta, Madras, Ceylon and Suez may be completed in the first instance and with all practicable dispatch, by the establishment of four Steamers for the service, as proposed in the prospectus of the Joint Stock Company, which has been placed before this Meeting—and that the line between Alexandria and Great Britain should be subsequently established.

2. Resolved.—That, under the condition of the immediate establishment, in the first instance, of the line between Calcutta, Madras, Ceylon and Suez, the subscribers in question are prepared to invest the amounts severally subscribed by them under the Resolutions of the 15th April (10 per cent thereon being paid up) as shareholders in the capital of the Chartered Joint Stock Company above adverted to, And, further.

Resolved, that absent subscribers be invited to give their assent to the same appropriation of the amounts respectively subscribed by them.

Resolved.—That the subscribers to the old and new Bengal Steam Fund here present, concur in the desire expressed by the first resolution, and are willing to appropriate the amount now standing at the credit of such funds in aid of the immediate establishment of a line of powerful Steamers between Calcutta, Madras, Ceylon and Suez, in such manner as may be considered by the committees of the two Bengal Steam Funds most likely to promote the objects in view.

Resolved.—That the Projectors of a scheme generally known as the Precursor scheme of Steam communication, be invited to aid in carrying the measures above contemplated into effect by a junction with the committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund.

Resolved—That in the event of such union being formed, the committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund be instructed to apprise Mr. Curtis's committee of the same, as well as of the substance of the several preceding Resolutions; and further to request that Mr. Curtis's committee will place themselves in communication with the Agents of the Precursor committee in London, for the purpose of giving effect to the union adverted to by bringing the Precursor steamer into the projected line, as part of the Joint Stock between Calcutta and Suez.

Resolved.—That our brethren at Madras, who have so nobly supported us in the struggle, and who are equally interested in the success of our present efforts, be requested to continue their invaluable aid; and that the public at large in the Madras and Bengal Presidencies, in Ceylon, China, and the Straits, be earnestly entreated to afford an uncompromising and efficient support to this final effort to secure by our own exertions the greatest benefit which has ever been sought for or withheld from British India.

Gentlemen, this healing, this conciliatory overture was rejected by the Precursor committee. I leave them to say why. For my own part the rejection forces upon me a measure which I would gladly have avoided; but it is really requisite that the committee to which I have the honor to belong, that Mr. Curtis and his committee, that the Indian public should know how far the subscribers to the comprehensive scheme consider themselves bound by the repeated declarations to which I adverted in this address; or how far they are determined to abandon them without notice to the parties, who have hitherto been so painfully and diligently working up to their spirit. I shall, therefore, Mr. Chairman, with your leave, submit the following amendment upon the resolution now before the meeting:

"That the Subscribers under the Resolutions of the 15th April 1839, here present, and to the old and new Hongkong Steam Funds, feeling the utmost confidence in Mr. Curtis's committee and the deepest sense of gratitude for their admirable zeal and disinterested exertions, will await the result of the measures now taking by the committee for the establishment of the comprehensive scheme, until the arrival in Calcutta of the mail which leaves London in May next; and that in the event of the mail adverted to not bringing official intimation from Mr. Curtis's committee, that a Joint Stock Company is actually formed, with sufficient means to carry the comprehensive scheme, or a scheme for running steamers monthly between Calcutta, Madras, Ceylon and Suez, into effect, (the scheme itself offering a moderate return for the capital invested) the subscribers will then feel it their duty to this country to aid and assist such measures for promoting and securing a regular and speedy steam communication between Calcutta, Madras, Ceylon and Suez, as may appear to them most expedient."

This, gentlemen, is my amendment. It is for you to determine whether it is better to be patient for a few months, or to abandon all our past declarations of devotion, and, to use that unhappy figure of speech which conferred immortality on its proprietor, "turn your backs upon yourselves." Others will tell you, have told you, that having waited so long you can wait no longer. I tell you, that you had better wait for ever, than fail to redeem pledges which have been so repeatedly and solemnly made. But I do not ask you to wait for ever. I only ask you to wait for the May Mail; and if that does not bring the fullest, the most satisfactory accounts of the actual formation of a Comprehensive Company, with capital paid up in proportion to your own—if it does not show that all we can desire for the Comprehensive system is in full operation—money subscribed, Steamers contracted for, and Charter in progress of attainment, then shall I feel warranted, as I hope you will also feel warranted, to cry—Forwards! The Precursor for ever!

Mr. PATTLE, in putting the amendment to the meeting said, it was not usual for the Chair to enter into the discussion before the meeting, but being a subscriber to the old and to the comprehensive steam fund, he would trespass on the patience of the meeting for a few minutes, and briefly notice Mr. Parker's most forcible appeal to the honor of all assembled not to desert the comprehensive, to which they are pledged as men of honor; and surely after such an appeal, none will depart from the pledge of honor. But, said Mr. Pattle, I deny any such pledge,—no honor whatever is in jeopardy. We were pledged to support the Comprehensive as it stood, when we originally subscribed for it; but it is now changed. We were to support it on its original terms, and not under changes and new arrangements. The plan is now another and different from what it was at first, and in withdrawing now, no pledge is broken, no honor is lost—and so far from any thing derogatory being said in England by our joining the Precursor, they will only say that the Calcutta people are true to the cause of Steam communication, and still ready to give their money, since by the Precursor, we are doing for ourselves exactly what Mr. Curtis would do for us. And there is not the least doubt, but that when he receives our letter, he will both approve of and join the Precursor plan. The chairman observed, that every one was therefore at liberty to withdraw his subscription from the comprehensive, and that if he were bound to any body, it was to Mr. O'Connell. Six years had already passed away without any thing to the purpose being done, and it was time that we should do something for ourselves.

The intelligent assembly he was addressing, the Chairman observed, must have had frequent experience of the strange delusions under which people act when strongly prejudiced. There can be no doubt that Mr. Parker believes, that there exists the pledge to Mr. Curtis, as he has represented it, but that no such unconditional pledge has ever existed is most certain and most true. A conditional pledge only, was given, and the conditions of it cannot be carried into effect. Let any one prove that the pledge conditionally given is not extinct by the impossibility to fulfill the condition. Mr. Parker desires that the public should wait until the arrival of the June mail. After six years waiting, you are now asked to wait six months more, and when that period has expired, you will be asked to wait again. The Precursors have already written to England instructions to carry their schemes into immediate effect. The question, therefore, now is, will you support those who act with promptitude and effect, or will you prefer assurances and promises, which for six years have invariably terminated in disappointment. The Precursors have lost no time in addressing Mr. Curtis, and with every mark of respect, deference and attention, have informed him of their intention to execute immediately and without delay, that portion of the Comprehensive Scheme, which had it not been crushed by the Ministry and the Court of Directors refusing all support, would, under that Scheme have been performed.

In conclusion, the chairman begged that all who heard him, would bear in mind, that the Precursors were merely carrying into effect with zeal and expedition, half of that which the comprehensives had been projecting for six years without doing any, whilst foreign steam companies have been long since furnishing steamers from Alexandria, doubtless much delighted to find, that there existed no chance of their being interfered with, or their profits interrupted by the appearance of comprehensive steamers.

Mr. D. ELLIOT then rose and said a few words on the importance of English capital as necessary to carry out an efficient Steam communication between England and India, and also adverted to the obligations by which we were bound to continue our support to the measures of Mr. Curtis.

Captain Harrington brought to the notice of the meeting, the fact of his being a sufferer from the non-arrival of the Falmouth mail.

Major Forbes rose and said, I rise to express my opinion, that if the vote of this day is for deserting Mr. Curtis, it will make Calcutta a bye word for bad faith, a proverb for dishonor.

Mr. J. W. Cragg expressed his satisfaction at the paper read by Mr. Parker, which, he said, put the matter beyond a doubt, of the unsuitability of division and desertion, and adverted to the expediency of an amalgamation of the two plans.

Note.—The peculiarity of Mr. Turtin's address, renders it impossible for us to follow him with any degree of accuracy; we have, therefore, been able to give but a meagre outline of what fell from him. We regret, also, that the speeches of several other gentlemen, have been short of their fair proportions, in consequence of our not being able distinctly to catch all that they said.—RACONTER.

Mr. Turtun then rose and objected to joining the plan, and putting the whole in the hands of Mr. Curtis. On the contrary, he strongly dwelt on the more recommendable course of immediately establishing one steamer, and he was assured that others would soon follow. He went on to advert to the course now pursued at home, where instead of husbanding the funds, they were being frittered away by extra expenses, so much so, that even the house where meetings were called, was paid for. But in regard to this point he was interrupted by Mr. Greenlaw, who said that Mr. Turtun should not be allowed to introduce new matter, and bring charges of meanness against absent parties, since no one could answer him in defence of the parties attacked.

Upon his waiving that point, Mr. Turtun touched on the fact advanced by Captain Harrington, of the non-arrival of the Falmouth Mail, in regard to which he said, that gentlemen in Calcutta had received letters by that mail. If however this mail be so tardy, why prefer it to the Marcellus route? He next alluded to what had fallen from Mr. Parker, in rather a jocular strain, as also the desertion proving by a word for 'bad faith,' as mentioned by Major Forbes, the real cause of which he exclaimed to be the inability expressed by Mr. Curtis to carry out the plan, unsupported by the aid and interference of Government, who had abandoned the plan, (cries of no from Messrs. Parker and Greenlaw.) Then, said Mr. Turtun, Mr. Curtis had said that which is false. He however knew Mr. Curtis to be too honorable a man to mislead others, but he might mislead himself; and in explanation of this Mr. Turtun entered into details respecting the expenditures that would necessarily be incurred in carrying out the comprehensive Scheme. From this Mr. Turtun proceeded to remark on the new prospectus put forth by Mr. Curtis, when he was again interrupted by Mr. Greenlaw, who said that Mr. Turtun was introducing another new point. Mr. Turtun then reverted to the Comprehensive and Precursor plans, and left the public to decide whether they had not the same end in view. Mr. Turtun concluded by dwelling at some length on the charge of inconsistency brought against him, and the alleged point of honor. In respect to the first, he said that it was true he joined in voting thanks to Mr. Curtis, and he would do so now; but between this and his abandoning the creeping Comprehensive, there could be no inconsistency. And as to the point of honour, there was no honour compromised by abandoning the comprehensive, when it exists no longer. He also read an extract from a letter signed Jas. C. McRille.

Mr. C. W. Smith came forward and said, that during the proceedings of the day two bywords had been iterated, one of which was, that the Comprehensive was defunct and had been deserted. He read an extract from the Madras Spectator, from which he said it appeared, that no defunction had taken place, and that not one had deserted. He went on to say, that all were pledged to support Mr. Curtis. He asked, after all the energy displayed by Mr. Curtis in stimulating the people of England in adopting active and effectual measures, issuing circulars, calling meetings, and stirring up the commercial community for a Steam communication between England and India, whether we would be justified in deserting Mr. Curtis and the cause, after all his unobscured zeal. He would further ask, if thus failing in good faith and common honesty and consistency, it would not become byword at home, that "those Calcutta fellows deserted the Comprehensive." Let us rather be consistent. Let us show the people of England, that India can be depended on. After dwelling with considerable eloquence on the subject, he concluded by pointing out the advantage of the Comprehensive over the Precursor plan.

Captain Johnsons here attempted to speak, but on being reminded of the understanding, that none should speak after Mr. Turtun, he withdrew.

Captain Harrington, however, begged to explain, that the information, which he had given to the meeting regarding the Falmouth Mail, he had obtained from the Deputy Post Master, Mr. Bodde, and he still maintained that letters dated the 31 December, by the December Mail, had not reached Calcutta.

After this, Mr. Parker's amendment was put to the meeting, and the opposing parties having divided, it was triumphantly carried by a majority of 28 against 15.

Mr. Grant next got up to propose the second resolution, which was as follows:—

"That it appears to this meeting, that the object of a full and efficient Steam Communication between India and Great Britain, via the Red Sea, is not likely to be properly attained by two companies acting in concert, but separate and distinct, the operations and objects of one being confined to the European side on the Indian, and the other to the Asiatic.

After reading the resolution, Mr. Grant said he would not take up time in further discussion, but referred principally to the terms used by several gentlemen present, expressing those belonging to the Precursor party.—The phrases were point of honour, bad faith, inconsistency, want of common honesty, and so forth, which terms were given in very bad taste and equally bad temper, and which aspersions, had they affected any gentleman of their party he should insist on their being recalled. He, however, hoped that gentleman would be little more guarded in the use of terms and not put forth absurd and offensive imputations. He adverted to what had fallen from the foregoing speaker, and said, that there was but one conclusion people could come to in regard to the comprehensive, and that was that it is dead, and that the people at Madras are endeavouring to revive it. He concluded by intimating, that the Chamber of Commerce had decided on joining and supporting the Precursor, and withdrawing from the Comprehensive.

Mr. Turtun seconded the resolution proposed by the above gentleman, and said that he was not angry at the Billingsgate that had been levelled at him and his party, by Mr. Greenlaw and others, by their being called ruthless scoundrels, and being blackguarded, but that he would declare war with Mr. Greenlaw—and although Mr. Greenlaw's two hours' speech had driven away his (Mr. Turtun's) supporters, he would yet get together his party in his own back parlour, and establish one boat as an earnest of the Precursor plan.—He would also write to his friend Tim Curtis, and tell him that though they once pulled together in the same boat, they must now split and pull against each other.

Mr. GREENLAW rose to propose an amendment to Mr. Grant's resolution, and, ex passant, said—it appears to me that there has been some mistake as to the point of honor and good faith. It has been argued on the other side, as if it was confined to mere money. Surely there are breaches of faith and honor in other matters than money. As regards the sum accumulated by payment of first instalment, which certainly has been undertaken by private applications to join the Precursor, which could not be done without deserting the other, there cannot be a question but that every individual payment at its owner's disposal.

When it was known that Sir John Cam Hubhouse had proposed to Mr. Curtis to give up the Rohmby line, he was informed by the committee, that this subscription was made expressly on the understanding that the communication was to be made to three Presidencies, viz. Calcutta, Bombay and Madras. It should be abandoned, it would be necessary to refer to every individual subscriber before remitting his payment, and to which the concurrence of the authorities by a grant was a condition. It cannot be therefore said, that the amount is absolutely pledged to the present proposition, and thence there can be no direct breach of faith in not remitting it, or in withdrawing the payment; although to a certain extent the payment did convey a moral pledge of support. It is not, therefore, against the withdrawal of the money that a charge of breach of faith can be directly brought, but against the community of Calcutta, here now present, abandoning Mr. Curtis in his further endeavours to establish the Communication, express pledges having been given that he should be supported. It is true that we are not bound to follow Mr. Curtis blindly and unreservedly. If we are of opinion that his future efforts must be unavailing, let us tell him so, and tell him that we must now do our utmost by ourselves; but do not let us adopt measures calculated to interfere with his arrangements without previously making known to him our intentions. I say without making known our intentions, because we know nothing of what any number of private gentlemen, however respectable, may communicate to Mr. Curtis.

Mr. GREENLAW was here interrupted by Mr. W. P. Grant, who asked what was meant by private gentlemen.

Mr. GREENLAW replied, Gentlemen associated together for a particular purpose, as distinguished from a publicly recognized body. Mr. Greenlaw then took occasion to observe, that it was impossible that any thing that had been said could in the most remote manner affect Mr. Grant, if, indeed, what was solely applicable to the community could be at all made personal; but Mr. Grant had all along been conscientiously and consistently opposed to the Mediterranean connection, and in his present proceedings he was acting on principles constantly avowed by him.

Mr. GREENLAW then adverted to the charge of inconsistency brought against Mr. Curtis and the parties at home, who, it was said, had started with the avowed declaration that the Comprehensive Scheme could not be carried out without the pecuniary aid of the authorities, whereas now they were claiming support to a scheme which it was said would pay without such aid. Mr. Greenlaw was not aware that Mr. Curtis had ever so started. Such, indeed, was the impression here, and the impression on his own mind; but Capt. Barber had, from the very commencement of his correspondence with him, constantly and emphatically expressed his opinion that no such aid was necessary, and always urged the formation at once of a Company to commence operations. Indeed this was the original intention of Mr. Curtis, and it was under this intention that he suggested the immediate payment of the first instalment of 10 per cent. It was, however, thought preferable to try to secure the support of the authorities; why, he, Mr. Greenlaw, could not tell; perhaps in deference to the opinions entertained here, and also by Lord William Bentinck—so that there was no inconsistency at home on this point.

Mr. GREENLAW then proposed an amendment on Mr. Grant's motion, which he afterwards withdrew; but, before sitting down, he observed that he had forgot to notice a charge brought against him by Mr. Turton, to the effect that he had abused the Bombay people; he challenged Mr. Turton to produce a single instance of any such abuse.

Mr. C. W. SMITH then proposed an amendment for the meeting to adjourn, upon which Mr. Greenlaw withdrew his amendment.

A great deal of desultory discussion followed between Messrs. Turton, Smith, Greenlaw and Grant, as also Major Forbes, on the point of good faith and honor, when Mr. Greenlaw observed, that the whole matter had reference to the public character of the community, and in no degree to private honor—he said:—"Is there no such thing as public faith, public honesty, and public character? and are we—when we hold certain public measures to be such breaches, to be told that we should recall our words, or that the protection of the chair should be sought, without its being shewn that such measures are not breaches of public faith and public honor?" He agreed in all that had been said on that point, and considered if the result should be the denotation of Mr. Curtis, that Calcutta fides would be but another name for Punica fides.

Mr. SMITH's amendment for an adjournment was then carried unanimously.

Thanks being then voted to the Chairman, the meeting broke up at a quarter past 2 o'clock.—Hurk., Jan. 27.

THE LANDHOLDER'S SOCIETY.

Honorary Secretaries

MEETING OF THE BENGAL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Extract from proceedings of a general meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, 7th January, 1840.

It was moved by Mr. Cragg, seconded by Mr. Beattie, that a public advertisement having appeared in this day's newspaper, calling a general meeting of the subscribers to the "New Bengal steam fund," it is inexpedient for the Chamber, at the present moment, to express any opinion upon the subject referred to, in the letter of Messrs. Hurry and Grant, Secretaries to the Eastern steam navigation Company.

Mr. Colquhoun moved as an amendment, that the Chamber do now express an opinion on the subject referred to in Messrs. Hurry and Grant's letter, viz.: the most advisable plan of establishing steam communication between this and Suez.

This amendment having been carried by a majority of votes, Mr. Colquhoun, seconded by Mr. Prinsep, moved the following resolution.

1st.—That a number of causes combine to render a modification of the original plan for the comprehensive steam communication with England, absolutely necessary.

That the exertions of our able and most disinterested advocate, Mr. Currie, have been ineffectual in overcoming or even lessening the powerful opposition of the Court of Directors; nor do the Chamber find any reasonable grounds for expecting extensive support from the lukewarm sympathy of the British public; whilst the time wasted in what now appears a hopeless struggle, if confined to England, is diminishing our means and energy in India. Death and departure from this country are gradually lessening here the number of original supporters of steam communication with Europe; and many, finding that nothing is done, have become careless and indifferent. These causes amongst others, force on the Chamber of Commerce the necessity of recommending most strongly to those connected with the original and comprehensive scheme, as well as those who support the new one, to combine in such manner as may soonest carry out the original intention of a direct communication between Calcutta, Madras, Ceylon, and Suez.

As amendments to this, Mr. Beattie moved, that instead of expressly countenancing the object referred to in the letter of Messrs. Hurry and Grant, in the present state of the question, the Chamber of Commerce would second its deep regret and astonishment at the letter in which publicity has been given by the committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, as the answer of the Hon'ble the Court of Directors of the East India Company to the application from Mr. T. A. Curtis, on the subject of a comprehensive communication with this country by means of steam, under date—; and the Chamber cannot but deplore the unsatisfactory nature of this letter from the Hon'ble Court, evincing, as it does, so much indifference to the wants and wishes of all classes of the community of this presidency, regarding an efficient and regular communication with Great Britain by means of steam, at the same time the Chamber would express its entire confidence in the committee of the New Bengal steam fund, and gratitude for their and Mr. Currie's past exertions, to accomplish the desirable object, and trusts, that they will adopt such measures as may seem best to stimulate Mr. Curtis and the committee in London, to influence the public mind in England on the subject, and lead H. M.'s Government to come forward in support of a measure fraught with so much advantage to this country in every point of view. And the Chamber would further intimate to the committee of the New Bengal steam fund, its desire that, should that committee not be able, within a reasonable time, to hope that Mr. Currie's exertions to bring the matter before the Government at home will terminate successfully, the committee would convene the subscribers and come to a decision with regard to the funds subscribed by the community here, with a view to their employment in any other way, that may appear likely to accomplish the object, and

Mr. Cragg proposed, that the Chamber do postpone the consideration of the question before it until this day fortnight.

Both amendments having been lost, the original resolution was carried by a majority of votes, Messrs. Beattie, Cragg, Dearie, Adam and McLeod, protesting against the same.

The following resolutions were then carried without dissent. On the motion of Mr. Prinsep seconded by Mr. Martin.

2d.—That, amongst the causes which influence the Chamber of Commerce in their opinion, they recognize the late arrangement made between the British and French Governments, for the conveyance of the English mails through France, the great increase of steamers running in the Mediterranean, and the facilities now afforded passengers of reaching Europe by the French and Austrian steamers, as rendering that part of the Comprehensive scheme, which proposes the running of steamers between Alexandria and England, comparatively unimportant; and, in their opinion, no real obstacle can arise to the great object of the subscribers, (of having a constant, regular line of communication kept up between India and England,) by altogether abandoning, if it shall be found necessary, that part of the scheme, and confining their exertions to sustaining the steam communication as far as Suez, and improving the means of transit across the Isthmus.

On the motion of Mr. Martin, seconded by Mr. Newcomen.

3d.—That, in recommending the above course, the Chamber cannot omit to record its opinion, that the committee of management of the Comprehensive steam Company in Calcutta, with Mr. Greenlaw, as also with Mr. Currie and the other members of his committee, and Captain Birber, in London, have conducted the matters confided to their care, with energy, zeal and ability, and the Chamber takes this opportunity to offer its cordial thanks to these gentlemen for their exertions, and to record its unanimous wish that they continue to afford their valuable services to the cause of steam communication between Europe and India.—Hark., Jan. 13.

UNION BANK MEETING,

This meeting was numerously attended yesterday, R. Walker, Esq., being called to the Chair, the following report was read:

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

By the accounts now laid on the Table, namely, the trustees' accounts, balance sheet, and profit and loss account, it will be seen that the net profits of the past half year amount to rupees 3,17,134 6 7.

This sum admits of your declaring a dividend at the rate of seven per cent. per annum, leaving a small balance of rupees 2,219 5 10 to be added to the former reserved fund of rupees 12,531 11 5.

The actual profits of the half year, ending on 30th June last, amounted to rupees 2,91,682, 11 4, so that the profits of the last half year, have exceeded those of the former by rupees 24,452 11 4, though being divided amongst a greater number of shares, the rate of dividend is necessarily smaller.

That the profits have not been greater, is partly owing to the rapidity with which the New Stock was paid in; for though employment of some kind was never wanting for the whole funds of the Bank, a large amount was from this cause, necessarily engaged in business of a description more secure than profitable, namely, in discounting Government acceptances and lending on the security of deposits of Government Paper. The amount of paid up capital on 30th June last was Company's Rupees,..... 77,59,000
On 31st December,..... 94,77,000
Increase of Stock..... 17,18,000
Seventeen lakhs and eighteen thousand rupees, the number of shareholders on 31st December was 524.

The circulation of your paper and the amount of your floating deposits, have not increased in proportion to your growing capital, the former continuing to average about 5 lakhs and the latter 10 lakhs as before the increase of stock.

As the business of the Bank as well as its credit have been greatly increased by the extensive augmentations that have been made to its capital, the facts stated must be attributed to the circumstance that a much larger proportion than formerly, about three fifths indeed of all the receipts and disbursements of the numerous continents of the Bank, are made by simple transfers from the account of one party to that of another and not actual cash payments.

There is reason to hope, however, that a description of business now opening may be productive of improvement both in our circulation and deposits.

The accounts of the Mirzapore Agency not having arrived in time to be included in the present general statements, the profits from that establishment cannot now be exactly laid before you. But it appears from the previous monthly statement and correspondence of the Agent, that excessive competition and other unforeseen causes have combined to make that establishment less profitable than under other circumstances it might have proved, while its unquestionable usefulness to the commercial interests connected with Mirzapore, has induced the Directors to give the experiment a further trial which they now propose bringing to a close.

Amongst other measures that have been suggested to the directors, with a view to increase the profits as well as to extend the commercial and general usefulness of the Bank, is that for the consideration of which this meeting has been made special; namely, the purchase of secure bills on England for remittance to a London Banking Establishment of great capital and of unquestionable credit, with the view of placing funds against which this Bank may draw to a corresponding extent, deriving its profit in the course of such transactions, from the difference between the market value of good mercantile and Banking Bills of Exchange.

This is a branch of business not contemplated in your deed of partnership. It depends, therefore, on your decision whether it shall be pursued by this Bank as soon as the necessary preparatory arrangements can be completed.

The following resolutions were then proposed and unanimously carried:

1. Moved by W. Young, Esq., and seconded by T. Dickens, Esq., That the Secretary's Report just read is approved, and that it be published.

2. Moved by W. C. Hurry, Esq., and seconded by D. Tagore, Esq., That the accounts now submitted are approved and passed by this meeting, and that the books be closed accordingly.

3. Moved by H. M. Parker, Esq., and seconded by T. Dickens, that a half yearly dividend at the rate of 7 per cent. of Company's rupees 35 per share, be now declared.

4. Moved by W. Bruce, Esq., and seconded by H. M. Parker, Esq., that the question of buying and selling English Bills of Exchange, be referred to the Directors for consideration, with the request that they will print and circulate their minutes on the subject, for the information of the proprietors, to enable them to come to a fair decision upon the same.

5. Moved by L. Clarke, Esq., and seconded by D. Tagore, Esq., That it is the opinion of this meeting that the Directors should adopt measures for choosing the Mirzapore Agency as soon as possible.

6. Moved by D. Tagore, Esq., and seconded by T. Dickens, Esq., That the salary of the Secretary be increased from 1,600 rupees to 2,000 rupees per month, and the salary of the Deputy Secretary from 600 rupees to 700 rupees.

On the last resolution being proposed by Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore, it met with opposition from Messrs. Grant and Bagshaw, the Rev. Mr. Morton, and a few others, not only on the ground of granting an increase, but because no pledge had been entered into by the Secretary to continue his services for a certain time.

In consequence of this opposition, Mr. Gordon thought it necessary to explain, that when he resigned his situation to return to Calcutta, it was with no prospect of certain employment, and his reason for resigning his former situation was owing to some circumstance transpiring which was painful to him; and though he might have continued in the same employment, and was even solicited to do so, yet he would not do it at the sacrifice of his feelings. He had no intention of resigning the Secretaryship of the Union Bank, but he could not bind himself to serve them for any stated period, nor would he engage himself in any way that might tend to put it out of his power to resign in case circumstances might turn up to clash with his feelings or his respectability in life.

A great deal of discussion here followed on the subject, and several amendments were proposed, during which the following were the chief.

Amendment by Mr. W. P. Grant. That the question moved by Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore, is one proposed for the consideration of the Directors in the first instance.

Amendment by Mr. Bagshaw. That this question be referred to the Directors, with a request that they will report to the proprietors upon the expediency of Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore's proposition.

Amendment by Mr. Parker. That the salary of the Secretary be increased to 2,000 Rs. per mensem, provided the officer in question will engage to remain in the situation for 5 years, provided that he be not compelled to resign by sickness or not relieved by the vote of a general or special meeting at his own request.

That two former of the amendments were overruled, and the last withdrawn, after further discussion, and the original resolution of Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore was again put to the meeting, when it was carried by a majority of 31 against 11.

Thanks were then voted to the Chairman and the meeting separated.—Herk., Jan. 16.

Proceedings at a Special meeting of the Shareholders of the Union Bank, held on Saturday last to take into consideration the propriety of admitting proxies to all general or special meetings in all matters or things connected with the affairs of the Bank.

Also to take into consideration the propriety of modifying Rule 40 of the Deed of Copartnership.

P. O' HANLON, Esq., was called to the Chair.

It was then proposed by Mr. Bagshaw, seconded by Mr. Brae, that any shareholder entitled to vote at any general meeting, may give a proxy in writing, either General or Special, under his or her hand, or in hand of his or her Attorney, duly authorized to any other shareholder, and that such Proxy shall be produced at the time of voting, and that such Proxy shall entitle the person to whom it is given, to vote on such matter, as shall be authorized by the tenor of such Proxy.

Mr. Clarke, supported by Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore, moved as an amendment, the following Resolutions:

"That for the following reasons this Meeting are of opinion, that it is inexpedient to alter that part of the Deed by which voting by Proxy is prevented, or to repeal a rule which at the first institution of the Bank was adversely adopted, and has ever since been rigidly observed, to the great advantage of the institution.

"First.—That there are at present about 371 shareholders resident in Calcutta holding shares in the Bank of the value of about Co.'s Rs. 60,53,000, and who are entitled to give 1438 votes, and that these shareholders are composed of numerous gentlemen in the Civil and Military Services, the Professions of Law, Physic and Divinity, the mercantile and Trading Communities and also East Indians and Natives distinct from the above classes. That the number of non-resident shareholders amount to 152 holding shares in the Bank of the value of Co.'s Rs. 35,67,964, and who are entitled to give 619 votes.

"Second.—That the resident shareholders are too numerous and are engaged in pursuits too various ever to form a party or clique to carry any particular object, while their immense pecuniary stake in the Bank identifies its best interests, with their own.

"Third.—That the real state of credit and of the money market, and of trade in Calcutta, must be far better known to the residents in the city than to those who are at a distance in the Mofussil, and that absent members are particularly open to be misled by private and interested communications, or the frequent misstatements of the public press.

"Fourth.—That the opinions of those who attend a meeting composed of the Directors and resident shareholders, and whose judgment is guided by hearing the arguments on both sides, must be far preferable to the opinions of distant shareholders, who commit their votes to an individual who may have some mercantile or private object to carry without possessing any or perhaps but a very small interest in the Bank.

"Fifth.—That any resident in Calcutta whose stake in the Bank may be small, but who might be deeply interested in making its operations subservient to particular mercantile objects, might by active canvas and misrepresentation, obtain an immense support through proxies, and carry a measure detrimental to the institution, but beneficial to himself, through the votes of the absent and uninformed shareholders against the judgment of all who had any personal knowledge of the subject."

This amendment having been put from the Chair, was on a show of hands carried by a large majority.

With reference to the second requisition, it was proposed by Mr. Bagshaw and seconded by the Rev. Mr. Morton, that the 40th Clause of the Deed be amended by substituting for the words 'future General meeting,' the words 'Special meeting convened for the purpose' when the whole clause would run as follows:—"That the Secretary and Treasurer of the Company for the time being shall have, and be allowed and paid respectively out of the capital stock of the Company, and the profits, and proceeds thereof, the amount of their present salaries, or such other annual, monthly or other sum of money, for and in remuneration of their time, trouble and attendance, in and upon the concerns of the said Company, as shall be agreed upon by a majority of the shareholders of the said Company present at any Special meeting or meetings of the Members of the said Company convened for the purpose, and shall be signified by a majority of the votes of the shareholders then present."

Mr. Clarke proposed as an amendment that the following Clause be added to the Deed:—"That ten days notice shall be given in the public newspapers of every motion intended to be made at any Special or General meeting, for an increase of the salary of the officers, under the 40th Section of the Deed. And that the Secretary of the Bank shall insert such notice on the requisition of any Proprietor."

It was then moved by Mr. Dickens, supported by Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore, as an amendment on Mr. Clarke's amendment:—"That it is not expedient to modify the 40th Clause of the Copartnership."

This amendment having been put from the Chair, was on a show of hands carried by a considerable majority.

Thanks were then voted to the Chair, and the meeting dissolved.—Calcutta Courier, Jan. 28.

INDIGO PLANTERS' MEETING, &c.

A numerous meeting of Indigo Planters was held yesterday morning at the Town Hall. Captain Vint, being called to the chair, Mr. H. J. Bagshaw, who had been acting as secretary to the Provisional committee, read the following draft of the rules and regulations for the Indigo Planter's Association:—

RULES AND REGULATIONS OF THE INDIGO PLANTER'S ASSOCIATION ESTABLISHED IN CALCUTTA, 19TH DECEMBER 1839

1.—That this association is intended to protect and represent the interests as a separate and distinct body, of all persons engaged as Planters throughout India.

2.—That the association shall be styled the Indigo Planter's Association.

3.—That all persons engaged as above, on payment of the subscriptions hereafter mentioned, and signature of the rules and regulations, be admissible as members of the association.

4.—That the object of this association shall be to promote a friendly communication among planters, on all subjects involving their common interests, through a well organised system of correspondence with its members scattered throughout this immense empire, to draw unto one common focus their opinions and experience on all matters bearing upon their common weal, to disseminate the same for the information of the members; to communicate with other associations formed for the protection of their own immediate interests on matters in which their interests of this association may be found to clash, with a view to their adjustment, to become the medium of communication with the Government on all subjects involving the interests of this association, which, after mature investigation may be found to require its interposition, and generally to take such steps for the removal of existing grievances as may seem best calculated to protect the future prosperity of the members individually and collectively, and thus counteract the numerous disadvantages incidental to their present remote, scattered and unrepresented position which can only be done by such an association.

5.—To encourage and assist in the immediate formation of district committees in the most central situations, whose attention may be directed to matters of dispute touching the sowing of Indigo lands by ryots in other crops, in violation of their engagements, the improper and oppressive interference of the zemindars with the ryots, the differences which arise amongst the planters themselves as to boundaries of their respective cultivations, and to suggest such remedies as their experience may point out, with a view to the adoption of a set of Bye-law applicable to each district, by means of which, as far as practicable, a well defined code of usage and practice may be established and rigorously maintained; whereby the transaction of business between the Planters themselves, the ryots and the zemindars may be simplified and facilitated, disputes presented or adjusted amongst themselves, to obviate as far as is possible the necessity of having recourse to the local Courts and Magistrates, which are rarely found to be competent to afford the prompt redress for injury or aggression so requisite to give full protection to the weak against the strong, to secure to the Planter the fulfilment of engagements upon which his success wholly depends, and finally, whenever practicable, to arbitrate between the disputants disposed to refer and abide by the judgement of such committees.

6.—That the business of the association shall be conducted by a general committee of management in Calcutta, in communication with the district committees, to be hereafter formed, aided by a Secretary.

7.—The general committee shall consist of not less than 15 members, resident in Calcutta, to be increased if found expedient to 21, members of the District committees, when at the Presidency, to be ex-officio members of the General committee, and 5 members to form a quorum.

8.—The general committee shall be elected by ballot. At the expiration of the year one-third of its resident members shall go out by lot, and on the expiration of the second year, one third more of the original members (of one year's standing,) and on the expiration of the third, and of every succeeding year, at the Annual Meeting, hereafter mentioned, the third of the Committee men, who shall have served longest, shall go out by rotation—the vacancies thus occasioned, being filled by election as above. Those going out to be immediately re-eligible for election, and immediate vacancies to be filled up by the committee.

9.—That the general committee be authorised to sub-divide itself, if necessary, into a committee of Management, a committee of correspondence, and a committee of arbitration, under such rules and regulations as may be resolved upon by a special general meeting, to be convened for that purpose.

10.—That each district shall appoint their own committee, the number of members of each committee, to be regulated by the general committee, with reference to the number of subscribers in each district.

11.—The resident members of the general committee, and the district committees, shall take the chair in alphabetical rotation, and in any case where the votes are equal, the second or casting vote shall be with the chair.

12.—The general committee shall meet on the first Monday of each month for the dispatch of business, and oftener if required, upon the requisition of any two of the resident members.

13.—The general meeting of the association shall be held quarterly—viz—on the second Monday of the months of January—April—July—and October.

14.—Special general meetings may also be called on the requisition of any seven members of the association, giving one month's notice, and specifying the object of the proposed meeting.

15.—A chairman shall be elected at the Annual General Meeting held in the month of January each year, who shall preside at all general meetings during the current year, and who shall also sign all letters that may be addressed to Government, any of its officers, or any public body.

16.—Special proxies from absent members are admitted in the election of officers of the association, and upon all questions forming the defined object of a general meeting, if duly signed by the members giving them, and addressed to some member present, or the Secretary.

17.—That the general committee duly elected be empowered to appoint subordinate office-bearers by ballot the association at large to have the right of displacing the same at the next following general meeting, or at a special meeting as provided for by act.

18.—That candidates for admission proposed by one member, and seconded by another shall be balloted for at the monthly committee meeting, (as herein before provided) seven days notice being given by the entry in a ballot book, to be kept for the purpose, and a majority of votes shall decide the election, the member who proposes a candidate for admission shall be responsible for his entrance fee.

19.—That the association reserve to itself the power of expulsion in case of need, to be decided at a general meeting of the members by ballot.

20.—That to provide a suitable establishment, and to defray the necessary current expenses, a fund be raised in the following manner:

1. By an entrance fee payable by each member on admission of 15 rupees.

2. By an annual subscription 10 rupees, from each member payable in advance, subject hereafter to an increase not exceeding 5 rupees, should such increase be deemed necessary.

3. By such fines and fees on references, as may hereafter be determined upon.

4. By voluntary donations in aid of the general objects of the Association.

21. That the funds of the Association as required, it would be the right to consider the pretensions of all be deposited in the Union Bank, available to the call of the treasurer by cheques, countersigned by the chairman of the Association for the time being, and on the balance amounting to 500 rupees, the same shall be invested in Government securities in the names of the chairman of the association committee, for the time being.

22. That a Secretary be appointed on a monthly salary, who shall act under directions from the chairman of the respective committees, whose duty it shall be to keep a faithful record of all the proceedings of the association; receive all communications, and submit them to the several committees; reply to them as instructed; officiate as treasurer in the collection of subscription, fees, &c., and keep true and faithful accounts of all its pecuniary transactions; keep a register of the names and shares of every member of the association; receive and dispatch letters and parcels, if required, to their address; keep a register of the names and address of all persons seeking employment in the indigo line, their qualifications and character, provided such persons come recommended by the members to the satisfaction of the committee; and particularly to see that the monthly proceedings of the Association are regularly forwarded to each of the members.

23.—That on the second quarterly, or half early meeting, and on every succeeding half-early meeting, the accounts of the treasurer, countersigned by the committee of management, be submitted for inspection and approval, together with the proceedings of the committee itself.

24.—That at such quarterly meetings, one month's previous notice being given, rules may be framed, amended, or revoked, as the majority of the meeting (and which shall not be less in number than a moiety of the members then represented in Calcutta) shall determine.

25.—That the records of the association and the books of account be at all times open to the inspection of members under regulations and conditions, to be arranged by the general committee.

26.—That in the event of any question arising as to the construction or application of any of the foregoing rules, the general committee be empowered to decide the same, submitting the matter at the next quarterly general meeting for approval.

27.—That the foregoing rules when finally agreed to, be printed for general use and guidance, an authenticated copy being subscribed to by each member on admission, to be kept with the record of the Association.

Mr. W. G. Rees, seconded by Mr. J. A. Gregg, proposed the adoption of the rules and Regulations. Carried nem. con.

Mr. BAGSHAW then mentioned the names of all the candidates for the office of Secretary to the association, stating in some instances their pretensions and by whom they were generally supported. He concluded by stating, that the provincial committee had, from among those applicants, selected Mr. R. T. Morrell, on the ground that he had undertaken to perform the duties gratuitously until the association was in a condition to pay a Secretary; and he trusted that this nomination would be approved and confirmed.

Mr. J. P. McKILLIGAN, put in nomination Mr. Limond, as preferable to Mr. Morrell, on the ground of his capacity for business, his talents and general information.

Mr. BAGSHAW contended, that if the committee's recommendation of Mr. Morrell were not confirmed, then

Mr. McKILLIGAN repeated his recommendation of Mr. Limond, inasmuch as he was unconnected with business of any kind, his present occupations concerning but very little of his time. Mr. McKILLIGAN considered it of great importance that the Secretary should not be a man engaged in business.

Mr. BAGSHAW reminded the meeting, that Mr. Morrell had come forward with an offer of gratuitous services when there were, forty members, and was therefore, only entitled to prior consideration.

Mr. MORRELL here observed, that he had made the offer solely because he considered the Association incapable, while in its infancy, of paying a Secretary, and that having the highest respect for Mr. Limond, and a due sense of his qualifications for business, he would vote for that gentleman's appointment, provided he undertook the task gratuitously.

Mr. McKILLIGAN said, that Mr. Limond did propose, to act without remuneration for a whole twelve month.

Mr. BAGSHAW, to put an end to discussion on the subject, begged that his proposition might be put to the vote. Mr. W. Storm seconded the proposition.

Mr. REMFREY asked if Mr. Limond was prepared to give up the whole of his time to the duties.

Mr. McKILLIGAN answered in the negative. Mr. BAGSHAW again urged that as Mr. Morrell had agreed to hold the office until a paid Secretary could be elected, it would be advisable to confirm the nomination of the provisional committee because time would then be obtained for collecting the votes of all the Indigo Planters in the country.

Mr. REMFREY was for collecting votes by circular letters. Mr. BAGSHAW reminded him that he (Mr. R.), as a member of the provisional committee, had already proposed Mr. Morrell, and that in now suggesting any other arrangement, he would be stultifying his own act. That it was incumbent upon this meeting to elect a Secretary, but, that in fact the electing Mr. Morrell as Honorary Secretary for the time being, would most effectually realize the object, that both he and Mr. Remfrey were bent upon, which was to give to every subscriber, whether absent or present, a voice in the election of a Secretary, uninfluenced by any local partialities.

A discussion then followed, which ended in the formal submission of the following amendments to Mr. BAGSHAW's proposition.

Amendment proposed by Mr. Morrell, and seconded by Mr. R. J. K. Campbell, that Mr. Hollands be chosen Secretary to the Association, on the ground that his sole time could be devoted to the services of the Society, and that he was a practical Planter. Negatived.

Amendment proposed by Mr. McKILLIGAN, seconded by Mr. Kenneth Mackenzie, that Mr. Limond be appointed to the office. Carried by a large majority.

Mr. BAGSHAW's motion that the provisional committee's nomination be confirmed, was therefore lost.

Mr. DUNLOP now proposed, seconded by Mr. Brae, that the following gentlemen be appointed a committee for the management of the affairs of the Association:

Messrs. Colin Campbell, Charles Denis, K. McKENZIE, J. McKILLIGAN, Wm. Hickie Geo. Vint, R. J. BAGSHAW, Wm. Priasep, J. Allan, R. J. R. Campbell, J. St. Foulcais, J. Lowe, J. Scott, R. Watson, J. Storm, J. Richards, J. W. Cragg, W. F. Gibbon, T. R. Morrell, C. F. Remfrey, and H. Imisch.

Upon the motion of Mr. BAGSHAW, seconded by Mr. DUNLOP,—Mr. R. Watson was elected Chairman of the Association for the current year.

Moved by Mr. BAGSHAW, seconded by Mr. DZAKIN and carried per con.—That pending the formation of the proposed district committee, the following gentlemen (Indigo Planters) when in Calcutta, shall be Honorary Members of the General committee, with power to add to their numbers.

Members. H. Hill, T. Bracy, R. Mathews, R. Dunlop, A. Lambie, C. Omap, T. Savi, C. Deveriano, F. Harris, and M. J. LeMarchand.

Mr. BRACY proposed the thanks of the meeting to Mr. Bagshaw, for his great exertions in forming the Association and drawing up the rules. This was seconded by Mr. McKilligan and carried.

The meeting then broke up with a vote of thanks to the Chairman—Englishman, Jan 16.

presence of Europeans in the interior was invariably productive of a better system of management, at least in the department of Revenue and Police. They did not indeed at any time encourage the people to rise en masse, and punish the judges and collectors in their rage for their misdeeds or neglects, but they exercised an influence through the power which they were known to possess, of communicating with the Government or the Press. It was clear then that they had a political existence, and that its efforts were beneficial in the highest degree. If, therefore, in forming themselves into this Association, they purposed pursuing in a body the course they had long individually taken, they would be to all intents and purposes political, and it was impossible not to desire that they should prosper. The toast was drank with loud cheers.

Mr. BAGSHAW rose, and in a brief speech emphatically denied that the Society was in any degree political in its character. The planters had associated for the furtherance of their own interests, and no other, and he therefore begged Mr. Stocqueler would correct himself in that particular. (Cheers.)

Mr. STOCQUELER said he had nothing to correct. The Planters' Association might fancy they had no political existence, but it was all a mistake. They are political in spirit of themselves. (Laughter.)

Mr. HILL, the Chairman, then proposed the health of A. C. Bagshaw, to whom the planters were indebted for the formation of the society. This was drank with the loudest plaudits, upstanding, uncovered, and nine times.

The dinner of the INDIGO PLANTERS' ASSOCIATION on Wednesday evening, went off with great spirit and jollity, proving, we hope, a precursor of the harmony which is to characterize all its future proceedings. As there was no reporter present, though all the gentlemen of the press were honored with invitations, the following accounts, written from memory, will convey but an imperfect idea of all that was said and done upon this auspicious occasion.

The solids and the fluids provided by Spence, were, of course, first chop, and the Cameronian Band regaled the company during the repast, with a variety of excellent pieces of music, played with their accustomed taste.

On the removal of the cloth, Mr. Henry Hill ('blessings on his frosty pow') who was very appropriately selected as Chairman, gave,

"The Queen—and may she always find loyal subjects in the Indigo Planters!"

Vociferous cheers followed this toast, to which the band responded with God save the Queen. Then followed the toast to "Lord Auckland," which was equally well received, and afterwards "the Army and Navy," which the Chairman prefaced by saying that it was impossible to cultivate the arts of peace unless we were well protected from without—in the field by our armies—on the ocean by our Navy. The toast was well received.

Mr. STOCQUELER, at the request of the Stewards, proposed the fourth toast "Success and Prosperity to the Association." He said that he was totally unprepared for the task:—he finds a blank on the list of gentlemen who were to give the toasts, and he supposed he had been selected because he was a good representative of a cipher. As he had only that day seen the resolutions of the Society, he was not thoroughly acquainted with all the objects which they had in view; but presuming that their purpose was, by union and co-operation, to further the interests common to all; to enter into free and unreserved communication upon matters of agricultural import, and, as they got rich, to provide for decayed planters, their widows and families, he could not but think them deserving of success. He had, therefore, great pleasure in proposing the toast, and he felt certain that it would be warmly responded to, because, in point of fact, it immediately concerned themselves. There was another point to which Mr. Stocqueler could address himself—and that was the political character of the Association. He regarded it as altogether a mistake to suppose that they had no 'political' objects in view—such a mistake could only originate in a misconception of the term. The Indigo Planters had all been political characters since 1826, when Lord William Bentinck signalled his arrival in the country by inviting them to express their sentiments upon all matters (with which they were well acquainted) connected with the administration of affairs in the Mofussil. It was given in evidence before the House of Commons in 1833, and would be found recorded in a great number of minutes and other documents, that the

Mr. BAGSHAW, in returning thanks for the honor done him, disowned the "soft impeachment." He disclaimed all title to be regarded as the originator of the institution. He had merely followed up the suggestions and ideas of Mr. Clark and Mr. Robt. Watson, who had broached the matter to him some two or three months previously. That he had been accessory to giving form and substance to the association was a matter of very sincere gratification to him. He had been too long connected in business with the planters not to feel the most lively solicitude for their success, and although he was now returning to his native land, after a long residence in India, he should continue to direct his attention to this part of the world, and to take a warm interest in its prosperity. That British India would advance could not be doubted, and that such advancement would be owing, in a great measure, to the example and influence of the Indigo Planters, was equally undisputable. Mr. Bagshaw considered the planters as the best friends of British India—without them she could do little—and this consideration gave them the importance they enjoyed in general estimation. (Mr. Bagshaw said a great deal more to the same effect, proving himself, as Sir Anthony Absolute says, a most polite arguer, inasmuch as almost every word he uttered was in favor of the position Mr. Stocqueler had assumed, and which Mr. Bagshaw had most unaccountably and in a moment of forgetfulness, declared to be untenable.) The worthy gentleman sat down amidst loud cheers. (Tune—Home, Sweet Home.)

Mr. MATTHEWS, the Vice President, gave "Sir Edward Ryan and the Agricultural interests," which was warmly drank, thanks being returned by Mr. G. T. Speed, who took the office upon himself, merely because nobody else immediately assumed it.

Mr. J. A. GRIGG, in a very brief address, gave the Civil Service, which was received with various tokens of good feeling—the band playing Should could acquaintance be forgot, and Mr. Scott Thomson following up the tune with the fine old song in which he was joined (God save us) by the whole company. Mr. Thomson's health was then drank, and he returned thanks in a neat speech,

The Vice President then, proposed the Merchants of Calcutta, and afterwards the "Landholders' Society," which were honored with the customary hartas and trumping of tables—a little the more vehement inasmuch as the hour was waxing late, and the birds were beginning to arouse the sympathies of the company.

Mr. ROBERT WATSON, without preface, gave "The Gentlemen of the Indian Press," a toast which planters did the honor to drink with astounding and tumultuous delight.

Mr. SAMUEL SMITH, of the Harkara, rose to return thanks on behalf of himself and brethren, and in the course of his speech, took the opportunity of impressing upon the planters that little effectual aid could be given to them by the Press unless they made a point of authenticating all the communications which they might transmit for publication. He illustrated the mischief and absurdity of sending letters unsupported by proper dates, and a private intimation of the writer's name, by mentioning a circumstance of recent occurrence. A planter had brought to notice in the Harkara a case of oppression in one of the districts. Within two hours after its publication, Mr. Smith received a letter from a Secretary to Government, calling upon him to name the district, and the offending officer, promising that if the case was finally made out, immoderate redress should be afforded. But Mr. Smith was incapable of giving any more information than that which had appeared in his paper, and thus the true end and object of publication had been defeated. (Loud applause from which it is to be inferred the planters will behave better in future.)

Mr. STOCQUER, in concurring with Mr. Smith, begged to add that it was not only necessary that such matters as might be communicated to the press should be authenticated, but it was indispensable to the usefulness of the press, that information should be more copious. He knew that many planters were deterred from writing to the papers from a fear of detection by the civil authorities in their respective districts, and of being made to pay for their tenacity in any cases in which they might subsequently be engaged. He put it to the planters, whether it was not better that they should incur the odium of exposing abuses with the chance of getting them removed, than sit down quietly and permit them to continue.

Mr. FENWICK, of the Commercial Advertiser, afterwards addressed the meeting; but at the distance at which he sat, we could only gather, that he thought the press had not hitherto done its duty by the planters. [His speech was productive of a remarkable irritability of the larynx of the meeting, for there was an indiscriminate explosion in the shape of coughs and hems! from one end of the table to the other, which rendered the speaker inaudible.]

Mr. G. W. JOHNSON, of the Courier, returned thanks for himself; and with reference to the remarks upon the political character of the Association, which he thought had been introduced with very bad taste, begged to enjoin the planters rather to imitate the Agricultural Society, and the West India Planters' Association in England, than follow the advice which had been given them elsewhere.

Mr. A. C. DUNLOP then gave "the Ladies." Mr. C. OMAN proposed "Captain Vint, the first Chairman of the Association." Mr. ROSS gave "the Trade Association," for which body Mr. RENTREY returned thanks and proposed "Mr. CLARKE." Mr. BAGSHAW gave "Our Guests."—Mr. STOCQUER returned thanks and proposed "Our absent friends." Mr. S. SMITH, in an excellent speech, in which he described on annual look at Mr. H. HILL, as a capital substitute for a tour through to England, proposed the Chairman's health.—Mr. J. SMITH gave Mr. ROBERT WATSON.—Mr. TOMKINS proposed—but we cannot run through the whole batch. Suffice it to say, the entertainment passed off extremely well, and was rendered the more agreeable by some capital songs, capital sung by Messrs. R. C. BELL, NEAL, R. CAMPBELL, &c. &c.—Englishman; January 17.

GENERAL COMMITTEE, JANUARY 21, 1840.

PRESENT.—T. BRAS in the chair; R. J. BAGSHAW, R. J. R. CAMPBELL, A. C. DUNLOP, E. G. DUBUS, John Davidson, Henry Hill, A. Imlach, M. J. LeMarchant, K. R. MacKenzie, R. H. Mathews, T. P. Morrell, A. Lamb, W. Prinsep, C. Oman, G. F. Remfry, C. J. Richards, J. S. B. Scott, G. Vint, and R. Watson.

Laid before the meeting letters intimating the accession of 15 additional subscribers, two of whom, Messrs. J. B. Jones and J. MacKenzie, offer sundry suggestions, which will be reserved for future consideration.

Mr. Prinsep, seconded by Mr. Morrell, moved,—

1. That this committee recommend, by public advertisement, that all subscribers to this Association do endeavour, as soon as possible, to form standing committees, in their respective zillahs or districts, or as circumstances of locality may prescribe. And that, in addition to the publication of this recommendation, it be lithographed and circulated to each subscriber, with the request that the result of this recommendation be communicated to the central committee.

Mr. Bagshaw moved as an amendment,—

That the committee do at once recommend to the subscribers to this Association residing in each zillah, to take immediate steps for the formation of standing committees in their respective zillahs or districts, or as circumstances of locality may prescribe.

Which amendment having been lost, Mr. Prinsep's motion was carried by a majority of votes. And it is ordered, that a list of the subscribers be attached to the notification.

The following resolutions were then passed:

On the motion of Mr. Dunlop, seconded by Mr. Lamb,—

2. That subscribers may vote in person, or proxy, at the meetings for the election of committees, in any district where such resident subscribers are, or may have an interest in the cultivation of indigo or general planting.

On the motion of Mr. Prinsep, seconded by Mr. Lamb,—

3. That in the formation of these district committees, no separate interval shall be represented by more than one member, and that, in the large district of Unhoat and Satun, the number of seven having been found the most effective, it is recommended that the maximum in any district shall not exceed that number.

On the motion of Mr. Morrell, seconded by Mr. MacKenzie,—

4. That all the proceedings of this committee be forwarded to the daily newspapers for publication. Carried by a majority of votes.

On the motion of Mr. Morrell, seconded by Mr. Prinsep,—

5. That the honorary secretary be empowered to appoint his own establishment, subject to the approval of the committee.

On the motion of Mr. Bagshaw, seconded by Mr. Morrell,—

6. That Mr. J. P. MARCUS, be added to this committee as an honorary member.

The Secretary will open a subscription book for those who may desire to make donations for the general purposes of the Association.

GENERAL COMMITTEE, JANUARY 27TH, 1840.

PRESIDENT R. J. BAGSHAW, Esq., in the Chair.

MESRS. T. Brae, C. Dearnie, A. C. Dunlop, W. F. Gibbon, A. Imlach, A. Lumbe, K. R. Mackenzie, J. P.

McKiligan, J. P. Marcus, /R. H. Mathews, T. P. Morrell, C. Oman, C. J. Richards, J. Storm, R. Watson, G. Vint. VINTAGE. J. Dunlop, D. Henshaw, G. Rowe, R. Wight.

The Secretary intimates, that there has been an addition of nine subscribers since last meeting, viz. Wm. Cockburn, H. Doucet, A. Ducas D. Henshaw, H. Hope Kerry, J. L. Oatfar, W. Reid and G. Reid.

And he reports that he has received donations of 250 rupees from Mr. Bagshaw, and 150 rupees from Mr. R. H. Mathews, for the general objects of the Association. Read a letter from the Secretary of the Bonded Warehouse Association notifying that he was authorized by the Directors to offer this Society a room for an office at 40 rupees a month, which room had been inspected and approved by a number of the Planters.

The following resolutions were passed :

On the motion of Mr. Dearnie, seconded by Mr. Dunlop.

1. That in future no proposition be considered as carried in committee, until it has been confirmed by the succeeding committee meeting

On the motion of Mr. Dearnie, seconded by Mr. Brae.

2. That, with reference to the 4th resolution passed at the Meeting held on the 21st instant, respecting the publication of all the proceedings of this Society, the words be altered to "such proceedings as the Committee may deem it expedient to publish."

Mr. Morrell having moved as an amendment, which was previously put to the vote and lost,—That, as a resolution was passed at the last Meeting by a majority of votes to publish the proceedings of the Committee, it is not competent for the present Meeting to annul such resolution.

On the motion of Mr. Brae, seconded by Mr. R. H. Mathews.

3. That the Rules and Regulations of the Society adopted at the General Meeting of the 15th instant, together with the proceedings of the Meeting, be forthwith printed fool-cap size, and despatched to each subscribing Member, and that the monthly proceedings with a view to procure uniformity, be printed on paper of the same size.

On the motion of Mr. Watson, seconded by Mr. Gibbon.

4. That the offer of an office at the Bonded Warehouse be accepted, subject to the approval of next Meeting of the Committee; and that the room be suitably furnished.

(Signed) R. J. BAGSHAW, Chairman.

BENGAL MILITARY FUND.

A Meeting of Subscribers to the Bengal Military Fund was held this-day, at the office of the Secretary, and was very respectably attended.

It was proposed and carried—That the accounts and proceedings of the Directors for the past year, laid before the Meeting be inspected and approved by the Subscribers present who were not of the Direction.

Thanks were voted to the former Directors for their past services, and the following gentlemen were then elected as Directors for the present year:

Capt J. W. Ouseley, Major H. B. Henderson, Capt. W. R. Fitzgerald, Capt R. H. Buch, Capt R. G. MacGregor, Major W. Cubitt, Revd Dr J. Charles, Major W. Bulton, Major Bedford, Major Simmonds, Dr A. Garden, Major G. Young, Capt H. Doveton.

Major G. Young was then chosen by the Directors as their President.
The accounts showed a balance of Co.'s rupees 39,67,484-0-3 in favor of the Fund.

The Fund is, we are happy to say, in a more prosperous state at the present time than it has ever before been, the number of subscribers having increased very largely during the past year.—Colonial Courier, Jan. 24

MEETING OF THE DISTRICT CHARITABLE SOCIETY.

The Central Committee of the District Charitable Society assembled as usual this morning, being the last Tuesday in the month.

The Hon'ble the President in the chair;

The following was submitted before the meeting, and the President observed, that it is very gratifying that the funds have been on the increase.

Since the last quarterly statement, the number of subscribers have augmented. The number of annual subscribers is six, and the amount of their subscription is 425 rupees; one quarterly subscriber at 32 rupees,—and 843 rupees have been realized from donors.

The Catholic and Native Community seem to be favourable to the erection of an almshouse.

The report for the last year was read.

It was proposed by C. W. Smith, Esq., and seconded by J. Lewis, Esq.; and carried unanimously.

That the report just read for the year 1839, be approved and adopted, and that 600 copies of it be printed for circulation.

Proposed by the Reverend W. Palmer, and seconded by R. Molloy, Esq., and carried unanimously.

That the Hon'ble the President and the other office-bearers of the past year, whose services are available, be requested to continue in office.

The President read a letter from the Hon'ble T. C. Robertson, Vice President, reporting his intended departure for the Upper Provinces, and paying up his subscription of 600 rupees at 50 rupees per month for the current year.

Proposed by J. Lewis, Esq., and seconded by Dwarkanath Tagore, Esq., and carried unanimously.

That C. W. Smith, Esq., be appointed Vice President, in the room of the Hon'ble T. C. Robertson.

This gentleman had filled the office of Vice President previous to his going to the Cape.

The office-bearers for the current year are the same with the exception of the change consequent on the departure of the Hon'ble T. C. Robertson.

After the cases of several applicants for relief were disposed of, the meeting broke up.—Hark, Jan. 29.

THE BOMBAY BANK.

We have much pleasure in publishing a correspondence which has passed between the Members of the Provincial committee of the Bank of Bombay, and their Chairman, Mr. Greenhill.

In this country, where there exists not only an indifference, but a positive aversion to every undertaking or labour not immediately connected with one's own personal pursuits, it is gratifying to notice instances of public spirit evinced in the promotion of great and useful objects. Mr. Greenhill's name is intimately associated with the "strange, eventful history" of the Bank of Bombay, and the Members of the committee who must know best the extent of his services, have expressed, in their vote of thank, which we publish, the sense they entertain of their value.

D. GREENHILL, Esq.,

Chairman of the Provincial Committee of the Bank of Bombay.

MY DEAR SIR,—I have the pleasure of enclosing copy of a resolution which has been unanimously agreed to by the Members of the Provincial Committee of the Bank of Bombay over whose proceedings, since its formation in December 1836, you have presided. To me, who since then have had many opportunities of witnessing the efficient services so justly alluded to in the resolution, it is a source of the greatest satisfaction to be the medium of communicating to you, how grateful your colleagues feel for the able assistance you rendered to them in their endeavours to obtain a chartered Banking Institution for Bombay.

After three years' unceasing application, a charter has been granted. Had our claims been justly considered or a proper regard shown to the wishes of the community, the charter of our late respected Governor ought to have been confirmed two years ago; but this is not the fitting time to recite the extraordinary and unheard of opposition with which we met, it is a far more agreeable duty to unite with my colleagues in their expression of our thanks to you, and in mutual congratulations that every obstacle has at last been overcome, and that ere long Bombay will have a chartered Bank.

I am, my dear Sir, yours most sincerely,

H. G. GORDON,

Bombay, Dec 24, 1839.

Deputy chairman

The Members composing the Provincial committee of the Bank of Bombay, take the opportunity of the receipt of the Bank Charter, in the attainment of which Mr. Greenhill's exertions have been so instrumental to record the感激 they entertain of his invaluable and important services during the three years he has presided over their proceedings, it was therefore proposed and Resolved unanimously.

That the most cordial thanks of the committee be offered to their Chairman, Mr. Greenhill, for the ability and unwearied zeal he has evinced to preserve the integrity of their proceedings, as well as to protect the rights of those parties excluded from the share list, and whom the committee, notwithstanding the decision of Government, cannot cease to consider as being entitled to hold shares.

The committee beg most especially to thank Mr. Greenhill for the spirited and independent manner in which he conducted their correspondence with Government, for his numerous and able memorials and reports, for his uniform courtesy in his capacity of their Chairman, and for his watchful superintendence of every measure which was in any way likely to promote the great object for which they have been so long struggling, and which has been now happily secured.

This resolution to be communicated to Mr. Greenhill and to be recorded in the committee's minute book.

H. G. GORDON,

Bombay, Dec 24, 1839.

H. G. GORDON, Esq.,

Deputy chairman of the Bank committee,
Bombay.

MY DEAR SIR,—I have had the gratification of receiving your very obliging letter, with the resolution of the Committee, in which my colleagues have alluded, in too flattering terms, to the share I have had in obtaining the charter for the Bank of Bombay.

Already swelling Calcutta in its commerce, this Presidency is making rapid strides to surpass that great metropolis both in commercial and political importance, and we must all rejoice to see the formation of institutions, calculated to advance it in the race of improvement. The establishment of a Bank had long been felt here, and the many new avenues opening for the extension of the commerce, and the internal improvement of the productive countries connected with this Presidency, have of late made it an object of still greater moment and it afforded me sincere pleasure to have it in my power to aid its establishment in the smallest degree.

I certainly never anticipated the difficulties and the opposition it has met with, but having at last, it is to be hoped, overcome them all, although not so satisfactorily in some respects as we could have wished, and as the instructions of the Honorable Court of Directors entitled us to expect, I yet cannot but feel, with my colleagues, gratified at the result of our common labour, and I trust, that if interests both public and private, have suffered by the impediments thrown in the way of its establishment, the Bank will now prove a great public benefit.

As my official connection with the Bank will necessarily cease when the Directors shall have been appointed, I avail myself of this opportunity to express, how much I have always felt indebted to my colleagues for the support they have from the beginning afforded me, and that my intercourse with them has been to me, one of uninterrupted satisfaction. To yourself in particular I owe much, both for your valuable advice on all occasions, and for the obliging manner in which you have communicated the sentiments of my colleagues, to whom I would beg you to say, that I am very proud of their good opinion.

I remain, my dear Sir,

Yours very truly,

(Signed)

D. GREENHILL.

It was proposed by Digadier Valiant, Seconded by Docteur And, and

Resolved—That the report of the Provisional Committee now read, be approved and adopted, and that it be printed for the information of the Proprietors.

The Secretary further read copies of the correspondence between Government and the Committee since last Meeting.

Mr. Kinner then said he wished to state to the meeting, in reference to the names of the gentlemen mentioned by the committee in the report just read, as invited by them to become candidates for the office of Directors, that the committee had done him the honor to request they might be allowed to insert his name in that list, but which, with the promise of their support, and the aid of their recommendation, he had felt himself obliged to decline, for he could not, with the many other duties requiring his attention, have been able to do justice to the duties of the office, and the trust reposed in it, if elected a Director by the Proprietors. At Calcutta, Mr. S. observed, and indeed every where, the office of Directors in a Bank was an object coveted and keenly sought for by gentlemen of the highest eminence and respectability generally esteemed by and enjoying the confidence of the community, and such Mr. S. said, he hoped the Proprietors would endeavour should be the case with the Directors of the Bank of Bombay.

He should, he said, have certainly esteemed it a high honor to have been elected, and he regretted he compelled to decline being a candidate. The Proprietor knew how readily and zealously he had laboured in their behalf, and would, he was sure, acquit him of now declining, merely from the work which might devolve on him on the situation, and he must own, he should have felt a pride in being enrolled among the first Directors of an Institution, which he was the first to take any public steps to originate, in which he had all along taken a most lively interest, and in the prosperity of which he should ever feel much interested. Mr. Skinner said it had been suggested to him whether it would not be well for this meeting, before separating, to bring to the attention of the Honorable the Court of Directors, the losses and inconvenience occasioned to the Proprietors by the delay and difficulties which the Government of India had raised, in giving effect to the Honorable Court's orders, and at the same time to point out to them the discouraging effects which the course that had been pursued in the instance of the Bank of Bombay, was calculated to produce on the efforts and exertions of individuals in co-operating to form associations for any public enterprise, unless the Honorable Court should, in some way they might deem best, mark their disapprobation of the proceedings of the Government in this case, while at the same time the grateful thanks of the Proprietors should be transmitted to the Honorable Court, for the very prompt attention given to the appeal against the decision in this country, for the sale of the shares by auction, which the Honorable Court had immediately annulled, and with this view he would now read to the meeting a resolution for their adoption, if approved of, viz.

Resolved.—That a memorial be transmitted to the Honorable the Court of Directors, expressing the thanks of the Proprietors for the very prompt attention of the Honorable Court, in annulling the decision of the Government of India to sell the shares in the Bank of Bombay by public auction, and also representing to the Honorable Court the heavy losses and great inconvenience to which the Proprietors have been subjected, in consequence of the delays that have taken place in giving effect to their instructions, and at the same time to point out the discouraging effects on public enterprise generally, which the present instance of interference in the affairs of the Proprietors, is calculated to produce, if the course pursued by the Government of India, relating to the Bank of Bombay, be not disapproved of.

Mr. Richmond said he entirely concurred in the propriety of the step proposed, and had much pleasure in seconding the resolution just read, which the chairman then formally submitted to the meeting as proposed from the Chair, and seconded by Mr. Richmond, and on being agreed to, the resolution was unanimously approved of and adopted.

Mr. Grenhill then proposed, seconded by Dr. Bird, That Messrs. Gordon and Davidson, with the chairman of this meeting, Mr. Skinner, be appointed to prepare and transmit a Memorial, to be signed by the Chairman, according to the foregoing resolution.

Colonel Griffiths proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Skinner, for his conduct in the Chair, and for his exertions in support of the Bank.

Dr. Bird, in seconding this resolution, after a few words in commendation of Mr. Skinner's exertions, remarked that it was of the greatest consequence to the prosperity of the Bank, that the Direction should be composed of gentlemen of the highest respectability, well known to, and possessing the confidence of the community, and particularly so, for the first establishment of the Bank, and he trusted the list of the gentlemen recommended to the election of the Proprietors for the six Directors to be chosen by them, would have their support.

The chairman, after returning thanks for the approbation of his exertions which the meeting had now recorded, said he was not aware of any other business before them, and the meeting was dissolved.

At a General Meeting of the Shareholders of the Bank of Bombay, held at the office of Messrs. Ritchie, Stewart and Co., on Thursday the 26th December, 1839, at 3 o'clock P. M.

JOHN SKINNER, Esq., in the Chair.

The following Report of the Provincial committee, was read by their Secretary, W. W. Cargill, Esq.

REPORT.

Your Committee have to report that since the last meeting, held here on the 3d instant, they have received from the Government, of date the 19th instant, a communication from Calcutta, dated 6th November, wherein it is announced, that, concerning with the views of his Honor in Council, the Government of Bengal have determined, for reasons set forth, to adopt the amended list of the 17th January 1837, thus setting aside the Perfect List prepared after the 2nd October 1838, and excluding many parties whom your Committee thought were justly entitled to rank as Shareholders.

2nd. The Government have, in the Preamble of the Act, stated that 'the Body of Proprietors in existence, at the date of the Despatch' sanctioning the incorporation of the Bank, where the Parties whom the Honorable Court had "directed" to be incorporated. Your Committee, however, seek in vain either of the extracts of the Honorable Court's instructions, that have been made known to your Committee, for such particular directions, but on the contrary the Meeting will perceive by the purport of the letter of his Honor the Vice President in Council communicated to your Committee, that his Honor had concurred in the selection of the list proposed by this Government, and that, reserving to himself the power of altering it as he might deem proper. His Honor would adopt it as the one recommended by the Government of Bombay.

3rd. Your Committee make these explanations to exculpate themselves in having so strongly objected to the interference, on the part of the India Government with the Proprietary List, which they would not have felt justified in doing had they been informed, that the Honorable Court of Directors had so decided the question, your Committee having been led to believe that the claims of a few claimants only were in doubt, and that it was hoped that your Committee would arrange them by amicable adjustment.

4th. The correspondence of your committee with Government, which was read at the last Meeting, will convince you how strenuously your committee contended under the impressions alluded to in the preceding paragraph, for the rights of those parties. They would have persevered in their endeavours to get them restored, had any prospect of success appeared, but as further remonstrance would only have risked delay to the establishment of the Bank, the committee, in acknowledging the communication from Government, confined their reply to stating that they did not feel called upon to offer any opinion on it, but requested that their silence might not be construed into a concurrence with the views or grounds on which this decision was made.

5th. Your committee took the opportunity of impressing upon Government the inconvenience that will arise from making the shares Rs. 4,000, divisible into quarters, and suggested the shares being Rs. 1000. They hope their recommendation will be attended to.

6th. Although it is not strictly the duty of your committee to offer any suggestions on matters connected with the future management of the Bank, they hope it will be considered as another proof of their anxiety to promote the interests of an institution, for which, with yourselves, they have been so long contending, if they take this opportunity of publicly recommending to the support of the Proprietors the following gentlemen who have assented to be put in nomination for Directors.—viz.

H. G. Gordon, Esq.; W. R. Morris, Esq.; F. M. Davidson, Esq.; James Wright, Esq.; Dadabhoj

Poonjee, Esq.; Jaggannath Supremett, Esq.; Lieut. Col. G. Moore, Francis Cowasjee, Esq.

Your committee avail themselves of this occasion, to suggest that non-Resident Proprietors should send Proxies without delay for the election, which will probably take place about the beginning of February, and they have prepared the annexed forms for the use of shareholders.

7th. Your committee are not aware that there are any other points to be adverted to; in all probability this will be the last public occasion on which they will meet you, and they cannot permit the opportunity to pass without thanking you for the confidence you have reposed in them and for your approval of their Proceedings.

(Signed) D. GRANTHILL,

Chairman of the committee

Bank committee Room, 26th December, 1839.

TRIBUTE TO DR. J. R. MARTIN.

We are happy to understand, that the friends and patients of J. R. Martin, Esq., Presidency Surgeon, have determined to present to him on the occasion of his approaching departure from India, a testimonial, expressive of the sentiments of regard and esteem which they entertain for his character. A preliminary meeting was held about three weeks ago, at the Chambers of the Hon'ble Sir John Grant, when the subject was talked over, and it was resolved that a book shall be circulated to Dr. Martin's patients now resident in Calcutta, for the purpose of affording them the opportunity of subscribing to the proposed testimonial. Nearly one hundred gentlemen have entered their names, and a meeting was held yesterday afternoon at the Town Hall, in order to consider and decide in what manner the sum subscribed, which is very handsome, should be appropriated so as best to accomplish the object of the subscribers. Sir John Grant was called to the Chair, and in his usual succinct and appropriate style, explained the purpose of the meeting. The following resolutions were then proposed and unanimously sustained.

1. Moved by J. F. Leith, Esq., and seconded by Colonel Taylor, that the amount of the Subscriptions be remitted to Messrs. Rundle and Bridge, of London, subject to the order of Sir Charles D'Oyley, Bart., James Young, Esq. and J. A. Dorin, Esq., or any two of them, and that these gentlemen, or any two of them, be requested to put themselves in communication with Dr. Martin, and to order from the said Messrs. Rundle and Bridge, such a piece or service of plate as they or any two of them may determine upon in communication with Dr. M., to the value of the amount remitted.

2. Moved by J. Allan, Esq. and seconded by G. Henderson, Esq., that the money be forthwith collected on Mr. Leith's receipt as Honorary Secretary and that the amount be invested in the purchase of Treasury bills or bills payable to Messrs. Rundle and Bridge.

3. Moved by the Revd. W. H. Meiklejohn, and seconded by C. W. Smith, Esq., that a letter be presented to Dr. Martin, expressive of the regard and esteem of his patients, to be signed by the Hon'ble Sir John Pter Grant as Chairman of this Meeting, and to have the names of the subscribers to the testimonial appended to it; and that the Hon'ble Sir J. P. Grant be requested to write the letter.

These resolutions having been carried unanimously, it was agreed that a deputation wait on Dr. Martin, to present the letter, and that it be composed of the following gentlemen:

The Hon'ble Sir J. P. Grant.
Colonel Taylor.
The Revd. Dr. Charles.
C. W. Smith, Esq.
J. Allan, Esq., and
J. F. Leith, Esq.,

and that the Secretary do write to Dr. Martin to request him to fix an hour on Saturday next for receiving the deputation.

Thanks were then voted to Sir J. P. Grant for his kindness in presiding and for his conduct in the chair, and the meeting separated.

We beg to tender our cordial congratulations to Dr. Martin, on his receiving such a flattering testimony of regard for his personal character and esteem for his professional services. We should have been sorry, indeed, if a gentleman, who is so exemplary in all the relations of life, and who has long stood in the first rank of his profession, had been permitted to leave the scene of his labours, without having been furnished with some mark of the esteem in which he is held. It is not in India as elsewhere. From the perpetually shifting character of the European portion of the population, all that any man, however distinguished in his profession, can hope to enjoy, is contemporaneous reputation; for a more lasting fame falls to the lot of those alone—how few they are!—whose names are linked to some valuable improvement in the financial administration of the country, or who have covered themselves with glory in the battle field, and by their martial achievements, have added to the territorial possessions of the British Crown. Dr. Martin has, in his own walk, earned for himself a reputation, of which any one might be proud. His sterling integrity of character, his gentlemanlike propriety of conduct, his careful avoidance of professional bickerings, and his zealous devotion to the duties of his profession, have been fully appreciated by his fellows-citizens; and we rejoice that he is to carry with him such a substantial token of the sentiments with which he is regarded by them. We sincerely hope that his projected voyage to Europe will contribute to the restoration of his health, and he has our best wishes that, in the future scene of his professional exertions, he may meet with the success of which he is so eminently deserving. —Cal. ADDRESS TO JAMES YOUNG, ESQ.

To JAMES YOUNG, Esq., &c. &c. &c.

DEAR SIR.—Although it is with feelings of extreme regret, that we have heard of your intended departure from this country, after a long residence amongst us of nearly forty years, yet it affords us some satisfaction that we have the opportunity of expressing to you our thanks for the many good offices, which we, in common with our countrymen, have received at your hands, and of assuring you of our gratitude for the steady, persevering and important aid which you have given, during the greater part of that period, to every public measure for the amelioration of the condition of the natives of this country.

Some of us from long acquaintance, and others from having enjoyed your personal friendships, have had ample opportunity of appreciating your public and private character; but it is not our intention to panegyricize your public services, the value of which is well known to those who ought to be far better judges of them than we are.

When we bring to our recollection your career in this country, and the lively interest you have always taken (whether enjoying the smiles of fortune or suffering under her frowns) in the education of the natives, and in all measures for securing to them civil and political rights, such as their employment in offices of trust and responsibility, their service upon juries, and above all in that most important privilege, a free press, we cannot allow you to leave the banks of the Ganges without tendering to you, in the name of the natives of India, this public expression of our gratitude and respect for your long and disinterested support to the cause of our benighted country. In so doing we are sure, that we convey the unanimous sentiment of all those natives of India, who participate in our earnest desire for national improvement.

Though you are quitting us at a time of life at which most of your countrymen are anxious to enjoy the society of their own cherished home, yet we do not despair of seeing you once more amongst us, and in such a public station as may afford you an ample opportunity of carrying into effect your benevolent wishes for the improvement of India.

We conclude by requesting your acceptance of our united and hearty wishes for your safe arrival in your native land, and for your enjoyment of health and prosperity for the remainder of your life.

We have the honor to be, dear Sir, your faithful servants.

Calcutta, 10th January, 1840.

TO RAJAH RADAKAUNTH DEB and the other native friends, who have been pleased to address me on my departure for Europe.

MY DEAR RESPECTED FRIENDS,—I am indeed deeply touched by this parting token of good will from so many persons of rank or influence in the land in which I have passed near forty years of a long and chequered life, and I will not pay you in return by poor a compliment, as affecting to disclaim whatever merit in acts, opinions, or endeavors you liberally and with some partiality ascribe to me. For I know and feel it to be true, that I have unceasingly striven to press forward this, which I may well call our common country, in the march of improvement I have had my reward, even within my own time, by witnessing the gradual but distinctly marked progress around us, particularly in respect of education, the root of all advancement in human society. But that reward is indeed greatly enhanced by a testimonial such as your present address affords, that my feeble individual efforts to contribute to the common good, have not escaped observation, but are duly noted by yourselves.

If it should be my fortune to return to India, I hope it is impossible that I should relax in my continued endeavours to benefit the country and the people. Let the past be guarantee for the future. But whether in Europe or India, I am satisfied that neither I nor my children will ever forget the obligations we owe to this country of my adoption and of their birth.

I remain, my worthy and kind friends,

Your affectionate well wisher,

TESTIMONIAL TO MR. BRACKEN.

Calcutta, 20th January, 1840

THOMAS BRACKEN, Esq.

DEAR SIR,—At the Meeting of the Local Committee of the Agra Bank, held this morning, I submitted to them, your letter of the 15th instant, and in reply I have been directed to annex an extract of their communication of the present date, to the address of the Secretary of the Agra Bank.

Yours faithfully,

EXAMINATION OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY'S INSTITUTION.

The annual examination of the pupils attending the above Institution, was held in the Town Hall yesterday morning, in the presence of a respectable company of ladies and gentlemen, among whom were Messrs. D. Elliott, F. Macnaughten, and D. McFarlan, Drs. Girden and Grant, Major Irvine and a number of reverend gentlemen of all denominations. The chief examiners were the Rev. Dr. James Charles, supported by D. Grant and the Rev. Mr. Mickeljohn, and the Rev. Messrs. Ewart and Smith. The examination commenced at half past nine, when the third class was called up.

We have been present at several examinations during the present season, but never did we witness the pupils of any one school subjected to a more strict and scrutinizing trial of ability, than were the young men attached to this institution, and yet seldom have we seen Native students, and to be candid, European also, acquit themselves more creditably by returning prompt and accurate answers. It is likewise to be observed that the replies were generally given in correct and appropriate language.

The third class were questioned first on the History of England, chiefly relating to the reigns of William the Conqueror and Richard the third and by the replies given, it was apparent that the pupils are not only taught after the common-place fashion of teaching history, by which the student can only tell who Richard was, who his predecessor, and who his successor, a practice too much in vogue in Indian Schools, but they are taught to be able to speak of the character and wisdom of every monarch, the varying aspects in the administration of the country, and other particulars of a more exalted nature, which pertain to a proper study of history. This class answered a few questions in the ancient history of the Jews also, and solved two or three propositions in the first book of Euclid.

The second class was next called up, and the pupils belonging to it were more particularly questioned respecting the Old Testament history in this branch of their studies, together with the evolutions of Christianity, the young men evinced a proficiency which is seldom to be met with even among the generality of children of a large growth. Plane Trigonometry was the next branch, and one youth went through a sum in mensuration with a degree of precision and intelligence reflecting credit on the high character of this useful institution. This class was likewise questioned in Astronomy, and though their acquaintance with this sublime science did not extend to the full height of Mr. Middleton's lectures to the Mechanics' Institution on the subject, yet they did really appear to possess a deal of information on the primary subjects of Astronomy.

A prize Essay was then called up, for which a silver medal was bestowed by the Rev. Dr. Charles. The subject of the essay was "Hindooism and Christianity contrasted." And in consequence of its great length only a part was read. After its perusal, the Rev. Mr. Mickeljohn intimated, that the piece was brilliant the young man's production, not only by the pen of the tentier, and as such it reflected no great disgrace on the juvenile writer. It was certainly no bright sample of English composition, nor did it contain many original thoughts or views, but it was far all that, taking it all in all, a tolerably well written piece. There were redundancies, want of perfect consistency with the English idiom, and all those faults common to an unexperienced Native writer, but it was, a veritable production which spoke much in favor of the solid instruction imparted in the institution. The essayist's name is Mohindronath Bysack, who I believe also her silver medal for a second successful essay. This medal was awarded by the General Assembly.

The examination proceeded by the first class being called. This class is very far advanced in Mathematical studies, farther, we think, than any other institution of the kind in the country, being well versed (as was proved in the course of the examination) in Conic Sections, the Parabola, Theory of Logarithms, &c., &c. Astronomy was also included in the examination of this class, who explained the phenomenon of eclipses in an admirable style, not only by verbal expositions, but also by chalk illustrations on the slate. Bible history questions were not omitted in being propounded to the pupils of this class, and their answers were quite in keeping with their general improvement. They then read a poetical extract from McCulloch's course of reading, and here only we thought the students of this institution betray some slight deficiency. Their pronunciation and accent are not half so distinct and accurate, as might be expected. This however, is almost the only fault we have to find, and having this we never before witnessed a more successful and creditable examination. A young man belonging to this class, wore a gold medal, presented to the institution by D. McFarlan, Esq., the Chief Magistrate.

Besides the essays already mentioned, there was another English essay read on prophecy, and two essays in the Bengallee language, on the character of God.

At three o'clock nearly, the examination of the junior classes began, and having witnessed the best portion of the exhibition we at that time were constrained to leave the place, the greater portion of the company having retired long before. — Hurkara, January 4.

EXAMINATION OF THE PHILANTHROPIC ACADEMY.

The annual examination of the above Institution, was held yesterday morning in the school premises, in the presence of a large and respectable company of Armenian ladies and gentlemen. The examination commenced with the Armenian Department, which was conducted by three Venerable Armenian Clergymen. The senior classes of this department were examined in Armenian History, Grammar, Lives of the Greek Philosophers, and Beave's Logic ; and judging from the opinion of the examiners, the boys seemed to have made creditable progress during the year.

The English classes were then called up, and this department of the examination was carried on by the Rev. Messrs. Oliffe and Mascaranhas, of the Roman Catholic Church. The studies of the first class compose the histories of Rome and England, elements of Astronomy, Geography, Geometry, Latin and Bengally—in most of which the lads were tried and acquitted themselves very satisfactorily. Then acquaintance with the History of England and Rome, recited to be correct and general, and the several dates and circumstances appeared to be well noted in the minds of the pupils. A passage in the second book of the Paradise Lost was also read and analysed in a style which reflected great credit, both on the teachers and pupils. But in the whole course of the examination there was one feature which demands particular attention, and which speaks greatly in favor of the indefatigable head master of the school : this was the acquaintance of the boys with the Latin roots and derivations of words. In this point the system of instruction adopted in this school excels that of many similar institutions.

The tedium of the examination was relieved by an occasional recreation of poetry and dialogues. The boys were very bold and animated in their delivery ; but their pronunciation was greatly in fault, as well as their attitudes and gesticulations, some of which were in a particular degree awkward. We observed also, exhibited on the table, specimens of penmanship, both plain and ornamental, together with cyphering-books, translations, &c. Some of the Christmas pieces were very neatly and tastefully executed indeed.—Hurkarn, Jan. 11.

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta held at the Asiatic Society's apartments on the 4th of July, 1840.

D. N. Graham, Officiating Assistant Garrison Surgeon, East William, was proposed as a member by Dr. Spry, seconded by Dr. Stewart.

Letters from the following gentlemen were read from H. Henderson, Esq., stating his wish to withdraw from the Society as the failure of his agents rendered it inconvenient for him to pay the subscription.

From A. West, Esq., Bombay, also withdrawing from the Society, because he is going to Europe.

The Madras Journal of Medical Science, was presented on the part of the Editor.

A communication upon the external application of electric solution, was presented from J. L. Pearson, Esq., M. D., of Dairechur.

This paper was subsequently read and discussed.

A committee composed of Drs. Stewart and Spry, having been chosen by the President to examine the voting papers upon the election of office bearers.

The following gentlemen were found duly chosen.

Vice President, Dr. Wallich, Secretary, Dr. Wise, Assistant Secretary and Foreign Secretary, Dr. Spry, committee of papers and management, Drs. Jackson, Stewart, Legerton and Green.

In sending round the circular requesting the votes of the members, the Secretary had intimated that Doctors O'Shaughnessy and Goodeve and Mr. R. O. Shannhnessy, declined being re-elected to the offices which they had held during the past year. After some discussion connected with this subject, in which Dr. Stewart proposed and Dr. Spry seconded a request, that Dr. Goodeve should again take upon himself the duty of Secretary the latter gentleman stated, that he had declined serving again as an office-bearer, first because his time was too much occupied to permit him to do sufficient justice to the appointment ; and secondly, because he thought that the Society would prosper far better with another Secretary. He had reason to believe, that his exertions, though well intended, had been the cause of much dissension in the Society, and it would be better that some other gentleman, especially one unconnected with the College, should be chosen. If, however, no other person should be found willing to perform the duties, he would willingly conduct the current business for the present, rather than put the Society in any inconvenience.

The Secretary then presented his financial statement, for the past year, by which it appears, that the accounts of the Society are in a very flourishing condition.

Dr. Goodeve brought in the notice of the Society, that he had lately been treating cases of Chronic dysentery and even Acute dysentery, in the latter stages, and diarrhoea with injection of nitrate of silver in strong solution, as much even as ten grains of the salt to one ounce of water. Dr. Goodere stated, that he had been induced to employ this remedy from the well known good effects which it produces in inflammation of others, mucus membranes, and he said, that the most marked success had hitherto attended its use. He intended presenting a paper upon the subject to the Society when he should have obtained sufficient materials for the purpose. In the meantime, he was anxious that member, would give the medicine a trial, and report to him upon its effects.

RACES.

Second Day, December 31, 1839.

First Race—Sweepstakes of 50 G. M. each, H. F. R. C. 8st. 7lb. each.

Mr. Dale's g a h Alladdin. (Pink) (Ross) 1
Mr. Allan's g a h Glendower. (Crimson and White) 2
Mr. White's g a h Destourel (Blue and White.) 3
Mr. Allright's g a h Fair-start. (Green and White.) Stripes) (broke down)

Owing to the fog, the races did not commence till nearly eight o'clock.

In the first Sweep-stakes, Glendower and Destourel went away well together, rating it a good pace to the mile, Alladdin held about three lengths behind. At the three-quarter post, Ross crept up to the other, Destourel, who ran lame, was shock off at the hospital corner,—a good race hence between Alladdin and Glendower, the former winning by only half a length in 3m. 30s. Fair-start unfortunately broke down just after starting.

Second Race.—A Purse of 40 G. M., added to a Sweep-stakes of 20 G. M. each, H. F. for maiden C. B. Horses. Weight for age, R. C. To close 1st December, and name the day before the race by 2 p. m.

Mr. Cozey's ch e Evergreen, by Ali Ray out of Young Lancel Leaf, 7st. 4lb. (Pink and White) 1
Mr. Grey's ch e Obadiah, by Assander, out of Shew, by Vanguard 7st. 12lb. (Blue and Buff) 2
Evergreen preserved his laurels without the slightest difficulty leading all the way round, and winning in a common canter, Obadiah no worse. Time 3m. 49s.

Third Race—Sweepstakes of 100 G. M., H. F. for all Arabs, 8st. each 2½ miles, horses that have never won before October, 1839, allowed 7lbs. To close 1st May, 1840, and nominations to be sent to the Secretary by 2 p. m. the day before the race. Four subscribers, or no race. 4 Subscribers.

Mr. Bacon's g a h Fischt, 9st. (Mazanne Blue and Stripes) (Ross) 1
Mr. Allright's g a h The Fiste, 9st. Green and White) 2

A good watch was expected between these two fast rates, as Fischt was supposed by some not to run his best without another burst showed him the way at first. Two and three gone, however, was freely belted on him, and Ross seemed determined to prove the above supposition was altogether a mistake. He got a good start, led by some lengths all the way round, 1st out a little at the mile from home, increasing his distance from Fiste several rods, and winning in a canter in 5m. Each quarter mile was run almost exactly in the same time, 30s. The Fiste strikes us as very wanting in flesh and condition.

Fourth Race—Thirteen Renewal of the Calcutta Great Welter Stakes of 10 G. M. each, with fifty

G. M. from the funds for Maiden Arabs. R. C. and a distance. 1st 7lb. Gentlemen riders. Horses to be entered the day before the race by 2 p. m.

Mr. White's b a h Blackball, Mr. Rainey. (Blue and White) 1
Mr. Bacon's b a h Ducrow, Mr. G. P. Thompson (Mazanne Blue) 2

Mr. Curtis names g. a. h. St. Francis, Mr. D. W. Frazer (Purple and White.)

Mr. Howenston's br. a. h. Belshazzars, Owner. (Green and Black Cap.

Mr. Allright's g. a. h. Ilderum, Mr. W. Fifth (Green and White.)

Mr. Dale's g a h Alladin, Mr. Nuthall, (Pink and White)

Mr. Allan's ch a h The General, Mr. J. Savi. (Crimson and White).

Ditto's b a h Rushlight, Mr. H. Haloyd (ditto.)

Mr. Smollett names ch a h Barbarossa. Mr. Elliot, (Purple and White.)

Mr. Grey's g a h Vizier. (Mr. Thomas) Blue and Buff.)

Ten horses came out for the Welter, and a capital race it was. Ilderum and St. Francis had the call at the ordinary, but little Blackball had also his backers, and proved himself a right good'un. An excellent start, and all well together, Ducrow leaving past the stand; at the corner Barbarossa shot a head and lead at a good pace to the mile, when Ilderum, who had been running up with Blackball on his quarter, took the lead, but only in the three quarter post, Blackball who was especially ridden throughout, then shook him off, and made the race his own, winning hand held about two lengths from Ducrow, who was pushed in a good second. Time 3 m. 55s.

Many claimed the honor of being third. We thought Ilderum was, but many others said Vizier. Barbarossa last.

Fifth Race—Sweepstake of 50 G. M. each, H. F. for all Arabs, 8st. 10lb. Coldest mile. Horses that never won before October 1839, allowed 7lbs. To close 1st May, and nominations to be sent to the Secretary by 2 p. m. the day before the race. Four subscribers, or no race,—5 Subscribers.

Mr. Bacon's g a h Corremonie, 8st. 10lb. (Mazanne Blue and Stripes) (Ross) 1
Mr. Allright naming a h Gazelle, 8st. 10 (Green and White) 2
Mr. Smollett's g a h Belshazzars, 8st. 10lb. (Black) 3
Mr. Grey's b a h Kutkhan, 8st. 3lb. (Blue and Buff) 4

Even betting, Carry against the field. Corremonie and Gazelle were on their legs first, and led from the post at a snapping rate, neck and neck, to the turn home, Gazelle honestly trying all he could to win, but Cur was too much for him, and won easy to 1w. 57s.—Mark January 1, 1840.

Third Day, January 2, 1840.

First Race.—Sweepstakes of 100 G. M. each, H. F. for all Arabs, weight for age. Byculla standard; 11. C. and a distance. Horses that have never won before October, 1839, allowed 5lbs. To close 1st May, and nominations to be sent to the Secretary by 2 p. m. the day before the race. Four subscribers or no race.

Mr. Bacon's gr a h Corriemone, 6st. (Ross) 1
Mr. Allright's gr a h The Exile, 9st. 2

The Exile tried his chance this morning with Corriemone alone, and made a good race of it, laying alongside of him all round to the distance, when Ross set to work, and brought Corriemone in first by a length. Time 3. 45. The race came 3, 29.

Second Race.—Second year of the Humayoon Cup, for all C B horses that have never started for plate, purse, match, or sweepstakes, before 1st November, 3a3. Calcutta weight for age, R. C.; entrance 30 G. M., H. F. To close and name to the Secretary by 1st December, 1839. Cup to be run for annually at the Calcutta January meeting until won three times by the same person, when it will become his property.

Mr. Bacon's ch. c. Freedom, 7st. 4lbs. walked over.

Third Race.—Sweepstakes of 50 G. M. H. F. for all Arabs that have never won before October, 1839, 8st. 4 lbs each, 1½ mile, to close 1st May, and nominations to be sent to the Secretary by 2 p. m., the day before the race. Four subscribers, or no race.

Mr. Smollen's bl a h Blackhall, (Smith)..... 1
Mr. Bacon's br a h Balze..... 2
Mr. Allright names gr a h Aladdin 3
Mr. Grey's b a h Kulkhan 4

"The lucky stable" beaten at last, and some of the knowing ones, rather out in their calculations. Balze it was said, must have it hollow, but it was just not so. Kulkhan started away for the first mile at the rate of 1 min. 55, when the others closed, and slunk him off. Aladdin was hunted in the turn home, leaving the other two to rate it in. Ross called on Balze at the distance, but little Blackhall came out handsomely, and beat him a good length in 2 57.

Match—50 G. M. 8st, 5lbs each R. C.

Mr. White's b a h E. ave, (William)..... 1
Mr. Curtis's b a h Planter 2

A pair of 'em but no match. They kept company to the inner quarter post, when E. ave wished the Planter a good morning and ran in several lengths a head. Time 3, 37.—Mark Jan. 2.

Fourth Day, January 4, 1840.

First Race.—Purse of 40 G. M for maiden Arabs, weight for age, heats R. C. distance and name on the 1st Dec 1838. Entrance 15 Gold Mohurs, 5 furler.

Mr. Allan's gr a h Glendower, 8st. 5lbs. (Ga-h) 3 1 1
Mr. White's bl a h Blackhall, 8st. 12lbs 0 2 2
Mr. Bacon's gr a h Mishap, 8st. 5lbs. 0 3 3
Mr. Cozer's gr a h St. Francis, 9st. 4 4 4
Mr. Grey's gr a h Væner, 8st. 12lbs. dr.)

The purse for the Maidens afforded as usual the best sport (as yet,) during the meeting. Mishap and Blackball were backed freely at odds. Blackball, from his running on Thursday for choice at 3 to 2, and frequently even against the field. His known blood and bottom, it was said, must tell in heats. 4 to 1 offered at ordinary against Glendower, and no taker. For the best heats he and St. Francis lay bye, leaving the running to the other two. Mishap led off from the post, Blackball passing him at the corner, and making the running to the craven post, when Mishap went up and took the lead again, scoring past the mile at a clapping rate, and keeping a good length ahead to the goal, here Blackhall collared him again, and they rated it neck and neck home;—either's heat, now Blackball's, now Mishap's from the "turn in." Blackball seeming half a length a head, till within a few yards from home, when the whip told on Mishap, and Ross lifted him in gallantly in a dead heat in 3 29. Very in the stand brought Mishap's long neck was poked in first, but the judge decided there was not a hundredth part of an inch between them as they past the post.

For the second heat the backers of both were pretty confident,—any odds taken against either; but Glendower thought it was as well now to show what chance he had for the purse; and he soon proved to the gratification of the many spectators that he had a decided good one, and no mistake. He led off at a clapping rate, and kept it up well all round, Blackhall and Mishap who had been waiting on each other, tried to close with him at the Hospital, but he was not to be headed. Mishap was beaten at the "turn in." Blackhall tried all he could, and for a moment seemed to be winning, but Glendower shut forward at the distance, and came in a length a head in 3. 27. The mile and half in 2 54.

3d Heat—St. Francis, who had hitherto run only to save his distance, thought he might look up a bit now, and called for the third heat to be run in the exact half hour determined to show what his bottom would do, but the half hour made no difference in him. The pace was too much for him, as he was a beaten horse at the goal. Again Glendower took the lead, with Blackhall on his quarter to the mile, going as hard as they could, Glendower then went a head by a couple of lengths, to the turn home, when Blackhall tried to close making a pretty race of it, but he could only run in a good second, Glendower winning without difficulty in 3. 27: something like best time for a third heat.

Second Race—The Auckland Cup, presented by the Right Honorable the Governor-General, for all horses, weight for age as below, 2½ miles, added to a Sweepstake of 75 Gold Mohurs, 10 furler, & declared by one o'clock the day preceding the race. To close and name 1st December, 1839.

English horses to carry 3st. 7lbs. above the stipulated weights for Arabs.

Mr. Dale's gr a h Gazelle, 8st. 8lbs. 2

Gazelle was put in by his sporting owner, that it might not be said the Cup was walked over. There was no expectation of his beating the great "Fierch", who is usual had in all his own way from the post, running the distance easy in 5 m 4 s.

Third Race.—Sweepstakes of 25 G. M each, for all Arabs, C. B. weight and distance. Maidens allowed 7lbs. To close 1st December, and name the day preceding the Race by 2 p. m. Four subscribers on race.

Mr. Smollett's gr a h Bedouin, 9st. 5lbs. (Smith) .. 1
Mr. Allright name gr a h Aladdin 8st. 12lbs. 2
Mr. Bacon's br a h Comet, 9st. 7lbs. 3
Mr. Grey's h a h Kulikhan, 8st. 8lbs. 4
Mr. White names gr a h Gazelle, 9st. (dr)

The great stable was backed again freely against the others, but the knowing ones were really in the wrong box this time. Belouin was observed to come out handomer and fresher than ever; it was known he could do a trick or two, if he only chose, and whispers were circulated of his having taken a bottle of beer with the greatest relish, just to keep his spirits up. Bottles of beer have been known to do more than make a horse win a race; and we may suppose that the bilmy Bass had considerable influence in the result of this Sweepstake. Whatever it was—"Go-along" powder, mixed with the beer or not, Go along he did from beginning to end with the best heart and at least pace, beating Aladdin, a good second, easy in 2m 26s. Mr. Smollett was hailed a winner with very general satisfaction. A bottle of beer, and how would Bedouin run against the great horse, two miles 8st. 7lbs each?—Hark, Jan. 4.

Fifth Day January 7, 1840.

First Race.—The Drawing Room Stake.—A Cup, presented by the Ladies of Calcutta, added to a Sweepstake of 20 G. M. each, H. F. for all horses; three miles, 3 years 7st. 4 lbs; 4 years 8st. 4lbs; 5 years 8st. 12lbs, 6 and aged 9st. 2lbs English horses to carry 3st. extra (ape 1st, C. H. N. S. W. 7lbs. extra, Maidens allowed 5lbs; to close and name 1st December 1839.

Mr Bacon's gr. a. h. Fieschi 9st. 2lbs.

A bad morning's sport, beginning with Fieschi's walking over for the Drawing room Stakes.

Second Race—Hack Purse of 15 G. M., $\frac{1}{2}$ mile heats 10st. 7lbs. each, gentlemen riders. Entrance 3 G. M. The winner to be sold for C's Rs. 400, if demanded within a quarter of an hour after the last jockey is weighed.

Mr. Curtis' ch. a. h. Barbarossa (Mr. Savi) 2 1 1

For the first heat, Captain got on his legs first, and showed Barbarossa the way to win; which good example the said "chipper" duly followed in the second heat, and for the third, they both scored away, whip and spur from the distance; Mr. Savi cleverly pushing Barbarossa's head just past the post. The winner was claimed. Time 1st heat 1m. 2d heat 57s. and 3d heat 57s.

Third Race—Purse of 30 G. M., added to a Sweepstake of 20 G. M. each, H. F. for all Arabs, weight for inches, fourteen hands to carry 8st. 7lbs. Heats R. C. To close 1st December and name the day before the race by 2 p. m. Three subscribers or no race.

Mr. Grey's w a h Silvertail, 11 $\frac{1}{2}$ 8st. 7lbs. 14oz. 5

Silvertail was allowed to start that the spectators might have the satisfaction of seeing two horses enter instead of one.

Fourth Race—Old Maids Stakes of 30 G. M. each, H. F. for maiden Arabs that have been hand-pile trained for three seasons, the present included, 8st. 7lbs. each. R. C. To close and name 15th November 1839.

Fifth Race—Sweepstakes of 30 G. M. each. R. C., Handicap.

Mr. Smollett's b a h S-ljack, feather, (Mr. Curtis) .. 1

Mr. Grey's w a h Snowball, 8st. 2lbs. 2

Mr. Allen's b a h Rushlight, 7st. 4lbs. (declared 5lbs) 3

No touching "the feather," wholead and won by several lengths in 3m. 29s.

The following are the races for Thursday. The Club Cup ought to afford good sport.

Bengal Club Cup for Maiden Arabs 8st. 7lbs. each; heats two miles, added to a sweepstake of twenty five gold mohurs each, fifteen forfeit if declared by 2 p. m. the day before the race: to close and name 1st December, 1839.

Sweepstakes of twenty-five gold mohurs each, with twenty-five gold mohurs from the funds, T. I. Cape horses 9st. 7lbs., New South Wales and country bred 8st. 12lbs., Arabs 8st. 5lbs to close the day before the meeting, and name by 2 p. m. the day before the race.

The Calcutta Little Welter Stakes often gold mohurs each, with twenty-five gold mohurs from the fund, for all Arabs; round the course, 10st. 7lbs. each, gentlemen riders. Horses to be named and entered the day before the race by 2 p. m.—Harkara, January 7.

Sixth day, January 9, 1840.

First Race.—Bengal Club Cup for Maiden Arabs, 8st. 7lbs. each, heats two miles, added to a Sweepstake of 85 G. M. each, 15 forfeit if declared by 2 p. m. the day before the race. To close and name 1st December, 1839.

Mr. Allan's gr a h Glendower, (Gash) 1 2

Mr. Bacon's b a h Balsac 2 2

Mr. Dale's gr a h Aladdin 3 4

Mr. Grey's gr a h Vizier 4 3

Glendower was backed freely for the Cup against the field, and he fully justified the opinion of his backers. He made the running in both heats, and was never headed; Balsac lay alongside making a push from the turn in, but could not pass him. The first heat in 4m. 2s. R. C. 3 31 Vizier was pulled up at the distance.

The second heat was run in 4m. R. C. 3-29. Aladdin and Vizier kept well up to the goal, when the other two left them, Glendower coming away from Balsac at the distance.

The Cup in the shape of a bottle stand, is as elegant a piece of workmanship, (by Messrs. Hamilton and Co.) as we ever saw exhibited in the stand.

Second Race.—Sweepstakes of 25 G. M. each, with 25 G. M. from the Funds, T. I. Cape Horses 9st. 5lbs; N. S. W. and C. B. 8st. 12lbs; to close the day before the meeting, and name by 2 p. m. the day before the race.

Mr. Allright's gr a h The Exile, 8st. 5lbs. (Hall) .. 1

Mr. Allan names b ch m Paluphema, 8st. 9lbs. 2

Mr. White names gr a h Bedouin, 8st. 5lbs.

Mr. Grey's b a h Kulikhan, 8st. 5lbs.

It was thought that the mare could beat the Arabs for this distance, notwithstanding her having been lame and out of work. She led at a snapping pace from the post, but could not keep it up beyond the first mile. The Exile caught her at the turn home, and passed her athe distance post, winning by several lengths in 56, amid numerous cheers for Mr. Allright.

Third Race.—The Calcutta Little Welter Stakes of 10 G. M. each, with 25 G. M. from the fund, for all Arabs R. C., 10w. 7lbs each, gentlemen riders. Horses to be named and entered the day before the race by 2 P. M.

Mr. Bacon's gr a h Frolic, (Capt. Lory), 1
Mr. Smollett's br a h Bedouin, 2
Mr. Dale's gr a h Gazelle, 3

The knowing ones considerably out in their calculations about Frolic, who was thought too small for the weight and could never be a match for the great Gazelle. There were rumours too of his not starting. He proved himself, however, far more than a match for either of his companions, laying some lengths behind to the Gilbert mile, when he went in, ran with them under a strong pull to the "turn in," shook them off at the distance, winning easy in 3.35.

Fourth Race.—Handicap Sweepstakes of 30 G. M. each, R. C.

Mr. Smollett's b a h Selook, 8st. (Smith), 1
Mr. Allan's b a h Rushlight, 8st. 2lbs. 2
Mr. White's b a h Ecorté 8st 6lbs, 3

Selook ran with his 8st as easily as he did with "the feather," taking the lead, and keeping it (with the exception of a short distance, when Ecorté made a rush at the Gilbert mile) all round. Time 3.34½.—Hark Jan 9.

Seventh Day, January, 11, 1840.

First Race.—Third year of the Bengal Turf Cup, added to a Sweepstakes of 20 G. M., H. F. if declared by 1. P. M., the day before the running: for all horses, weight for age, viz 3 years. 7st 4lbs, 4 years, 8st 4lbs., 5 years, 8st. 12lbs., 6 and aged, 9st 2lbs, English imported horses to carry 2st. Cape Ist, and N. S. W. and C. B., 10lbs. extra. Maidens allowed 5lbs. Heats 3 miles. To close 1st December. Horses to be bona fide property of subscribers, and the cup, the property of any gentleman who may win two successive seasons.

Mr. Dale's gr a h Gazelle, 9st. 2lbs. 2

Gazelle was determined to make Fieschi's three mile heats tell, that he might have little left in him for the ½ mile sweepstakes, if his owner resolved on starting him; and was bethove no horse in India but Gazelle could have done it so successfully. He scored away from the post at a tremendous rate, leading by some lengths past the stand. The pace gradually increased to the mile corner; where Fieschi was something more than a length behind. Gazelle then shot forward, running the next ½ of a mile in 26 seconds, during which Fieschi actually run up to him, and at the three quarter post was half a length in front! They then rated in neck and neck to near the distance, when Fieschi came away and Gazelle gave up the race. The time for the whole was 6 in 1 sec. The last 2½ miles was run in 4m. 56 sec, and Fieschi must have run the quarter from the mile post in 25. sec. With such weights, even without them—the time is the best we believe that has been known, in any public running in India.

Gazelle was then drawn for the second heat, and Fieschi for the sweepstakes. Mr. Bacon having won the Cup last year also, it becomes his property.

Second Race—Sweepstakes of 50 G. M., P. P., with 50 G. M. from the Funds, for all Arabs that never won before 1st October 1839, Weight for age. Heats 1½ mile. To close 1st July, and name by 3 P. M. the day before the race. Four subscribers, or no race.

Mr. Bacon's gr a h Shishap, 8st. 5lbs. (Ross), 1
Mr. Allan's gr a h Glendower, 8st. 5lbs. 2
Mr. Smollett names gr a h Nonplus, 7st. 12lbs. 3
Mr. Grey's gr a h Vizier, 8st. 12lbs. 4 dr
Mr. Dale names gr a h Ilderim, 12w. dr.
Rohy, 8st. 12lbs. dr.
Mr. White's gr a h Lama, 8st. 5lbs. dr.

Glendower was backed again freely at even against the field, and after his late performances takers were shy. In the lottery he sold for 40, Shishap for 16. Glendower got a good start, and lead away, Nonplus running on his quarter, and making play against him. Shishap lay behind them about a length as far as the goal. Here Vizier, who ran so far well, was beaten off. Ross then began to creep up, getting the inside at the "turn home," where Nonplus dropped. At the distance Glendower was brought to the whip, but Shishap was too much for him, winning pretty easy in 2.58.

For the second heat Nonplus allowed the others to choke themselves if they could, keeping at a respectful distance behind, which he maintained to the last. A beautiful race between the other two, neck and neck from the ½ post, where Shishap had closed with Glendower—both hard at work from the "turn in." At the distance the whip told on Glendower, and it was thought he would win it; but one cut on Shishap about 10 yards from home, and he gallantly sprang forward, coming in half a neck ahead in first rate time of 2.54½.

Third Race—Sweepstakes of 50 G. M. each P. P. with 50 50 M. from the Funds, for all Arabs, 8st 7lbs each ¾ of a mile. To close 1st July, and name by 3 P. M. the day before the race. Four subscribers or no race.

Mr. Dale names gr a h The Exile, (Hall), 1
Mr. Smollett names b a h Kulikhan, 2
Mr. White names gr a h Bedouin, 3
Mr. Bacon's gr a h Fieschi, dr.

The Exile was backed freely against the field. Kulikhan led for the first half mile, the other two well up. Bedouin then gave way, and the Exile let out, chased Kulikhan like a shot, and won by several lengths in 1m. 2½.

Handicap 40 G. M. R. C.

Mr. Grey's gr a h Snowball, 8st. 10lbs 2
Mr. Smollett's b a h Selook, 4lb. 4
Mr. Allan's ch a h General, 7st. 8lb. 3
Mr. Cozey's gr a h St Francis, 8st. (Native), 1

St Francis took the lead from the post, and was soon too far ahead for the others ever to touch him. The boy might have won at last in a common quarter, but he was afraid to pull up till he was sure he had won, and no mistake. Time 3.26.—Hark Jan, 11.

Eighth Day, January 14, 1840.

First Race.—A Candelabra value Rs. 2,000, presented by Kowar Krishna Roy Bahadur, added to a Sweepstakes of 50 G. M. each, 10 for ten for Maiden Arabs, 8st 5lbs. each. Two miles—winners once during the meeting to carry 7lbs extra—twice 10 lbs extra—three times or oftener 1 stone extra. To close and name the day before the first meeting.

Mr. Cozey's gr a h St. Francis, 8st 5lbs (Native) 1
Mr. Bacon's gr a h Shishap, 8st 12lbs 2
Mr. Allan's gr a h Glendower, 9st 5lbs 3
Mr. Grey's gr a h Vizier, 8st 5lbs dr.
Mr. Bacon's ch a h Sam Slick, 8st 5lbs.
Mr. Dale's gr a h Alladdin, 8st 12lbs.

Mishap and St. Francis were backed freely against the field, Mishap having rather the call notwithstanding the 2lbs extra. St. Francis led off at a severe pace, Sam Slick making the running against him; Mishap and Glendower, who ran most honestly with his lump of weight, laying some lengths behind. The first mile run in 1.58. At the three quarter post Mishap left Glendower to take Sam Slick a place as soon as St. Francis beat him off, which he did at the turn home. Mishap then ran up to St. Francis, but the 7lbs told in the race in, and St. Francis maintained his lead gallantly, to the end—winning by two lengths in 3.57.

Second Race.—Forced Handicap Sweepstakes of 10 G. M. each for which all winners of races during the meeting must enter, Hack-takes and Matches excepted. Two miles. Horses to be handicapped by a committee appointed by the Stewards.

Mr. Allright's gr a h The Exile, 9st 6lbs (Hall) 1
Mr. Bacon's b a h Hazac 8st 8lbs 2
Mr. Bacon's b a h Frolic, 9st 5lbs 3
Mr. Dale's gr a h Gazelle, 9st 6lbs 4
Mr. Grey's w a h Snowball, 8st
Mr. Smollett's b a h Seijook 7st 8lbs
Mr. Cozey's ch c Evergreen, 7st 13lbs.

The Handicap afforded one of the prettiest races of the meeting. After one false start, Evergreen not pulling up till he had past the stand, they all got off well together, the country bred and Balzac making the running at a heavy pace, the others in a cluster some lengths behind, Gazelle holding last. All closed up with the leading horses before passing the mile post, from which the race was exceedingly interesting. A sheet would have covered them for the next $\frac{1}{2}$ mile. Seijook then gave way, and Gazelle showed in front of the C. H. by half a length, Balzac and Snowball on their quarter, Exile and Frolic waiting on each other. At the Hospital Exile began to run up and the colt was shaken off. Balzac rated it with Gazelle, to the turn home, when Exile let out, headed them without difficulty, and came in a winner, without a touch in 3.56.—Frolic third, and Gazelle fourth.

Third Race.—Free handicap Purse of 25 G. M., added to a Sweepstakes of 10 G. M. each, for the barren horses of the meeting. $\frac{1}{2}$ mile heats; horses not standing the handicap to pay 3 G. M.

Mr. Bacon's br a h Comet, 9st (Ross) 1
Mr. Curtis' gr a h Nonplus, 8st 2

Nonplus was no match for Comet, who had it just as he liked in both heats.

Fourth Race—Match for Co. Rs. 5,000—P. P. two miles.

Mr. Smollett's gr a h Bedouin, 8st 12lbs 2

Bedouin finding he could not lick Fearnought in the first half mile, took to the sulks, and would not budge an inch further, except at a common canter. Dint of whip and spur did nothing—go, he would not, and he was all but distanced.

Fifth Race.—Match for 50 G. M.—half mile.

Mr. Curtis' ch p Janwar, 8st 7lbs 2

The light weighted poney took the shine out of the other, and pocketed the 50 for his master in most bang-up style.—Hark., Jan. 14.

The first a waiting race to the mile from home, when the colt and mare went away, the latter winning by a length. The second heat—a rattling race out and home, the colt winning by a neck in the quickest time ever run over this course, in 2m. 31s. The third heat easy as best, in 2m. 41s.

Galloway Purse of 20 Gold Mohurs. Weight for inches Entrance 5 Gold Mohurs. Heats 1½ mile. 14 hands to carry 8st. 7lbs.

Capt. Arthur's g a Ganymede	7	7	1 1
Mr. Burgess's g a Alfred	7	13	2 2
His Excellency's g a Fieschi	8	4	3 3

The first heat won by a length. The second by half a length. A beautiful race throughout.

The first heat 3m 1¼. Second heat 2m. 58s.

The Galloway Race to-day was well contested, and when a heavy course and a hill to face are taken into the account, the performance of the little ones is very good. This too is the fastest one and a half mile run at Benares.

The Cup 3 miles will be run for the next day.

MADRAS SPRING MEETING, 1840.

The Races commenced yesterday morning very auspiciously, and put an effectual stop to all croaking and anticipations of bad sport. The attendance was very numerous, the morning cool and pleasant, the races well contested by horses of good blood and bottom, under steady and scientific riders, the timing very respectable, and the "glorious uncertainty" sufficiently exemplified—so that all were ready to exclaim Vive la Course!

FIRST DAY TUESDAY, 14TH JANUARY.

The Sport of this morning was excellent and satisfactorily proved what a few choice spirits of the right sort, zealous in the cause, and animated by one desire, can do, even in the absence of stars of greater magnitude, who for many years have shone so brilliantly on the Madras Course!

FIRST RACE.—For the first race 4 horses made their appearance and at the word "off" were taken away by the little Galloway, who nothing daunted, thus staked the credit of his Maiden Race against horses of greater size. This gallant little horse made the running throughout the greater part of the Race. Kaled and Ghuzni having at one time much way to make up. The Race from the distance post was well contested, and the two latter closing with the Galloway passed him, Ghuzni winning cleverly by half a length.

Second Race—The Skystakes was one of the best contested Races ever run on the Madras Course, and when the weight and the time are considered, it will be admitted, that none but good ones could live in the front rank. The first heat was won by almost an untrained Englishman recently imported, but the training of the Cape, and the determined riding of his Owner, gave the 2d and 3d heats to the latter horse. The 2d heat of this Race excited great interest, and so well did the three come in together, that it was even whispered that the Judge of the Land had some difficulty in determining their position! The mare running to admiration, well fenced in by the 1st and 2nd horses.

Third Race—The Madras Welter as usual produced three good nags, backed by the three crack gentlemen jacks on this side of India! Sharpset and Ulster were recognised as old acquaintances—and from the same sporting stable which produced the gallant silkworm came forth "The Moslem!" a remarkably well bred and likely nag, purchased only a few days ago from Zein ool-ab Deen, a well known dealer, who rejoiceth on the course in the sobriquet of Jalab-Deo!

Sharpset led at a good pace to the Monument, where Ulster having come up to him, both took a pull together to the two Mile Post, from which Sharpset again went along to the turn in at the corner, when Ulster made his push, rating home, and winning easily, Sharpset having been brought to the whip half way up the distance—and the weight proving too much for "The Moslem," from whom, nevertheless, much is yet expected at light weight.

SECOND DAY, THURSDAY, 16TH JANUARY.

As on the first day of running, there was no want of attendance on the part of the public, nor of beauty and fashion in the Stand!

First Race.—This was a beautiful and well contested Race, the owners of "Kaled" and "The Moslem" freely backing their respective horses, although both fought shy of taking the lead in the first heat, until they came to the two-mile post, where, springing away from the Grey, the font of Kaled gave him the beat by a length, after a severe struggle.

2d Heat.—This time the blood and stamina of "The faithful" enabled him to triumph over the speed of his "Royal Competitor," and he won a beautiful heat in good time.

In the third heat he was also successful, winning easily without shewing any symptoms of distress.

Second Race.—Much dissatisfaction was caused by the entries for the Nabob's purse, and it evidently behoves the Stewards to prevent the repetition of occurrences so destructive of sport, and detrimental to the best interests of the Turf.

Ghuzni was entered to win, and the others to lose at least so it appeared—and so it happened.

Third Race.—For the Little Welter three started—Rushden, who ran a bad fourth for the first muleen, leading from the post, and winning without being once headed. The pace was good throughout, considering the weight, and in endeavouring to choke the leading horses up the hills Ulster again burst a blood vessel as he did in his winning prize for the Great Welter, and thus his chance of the Stakes was lost.

We understand that it is in contemplation to get up a fête champêtre on the last day of the Races, or as near to that date as possible, and in the patronage the idea has already received, there is no doubt it will be carried into effect. The object is to afford some source of amusement for all classes, and an attempt will be made at an English fair, with all its amusements and an avoidance of the abuses. A substantial repast of old English fare—roast beef and plum pudding, and the ale flagon—will be provided for all the European soldiery, and arrangements sought to be made that will promote the general harmony and amusement. Private subscriptions of this object, as they are expected to prove very general, it is said, will be limited to one Gold Mohur.—Spectator, January 16.

SUDDER NIZAMUT ADAWLUT.

SATURDAY, JAN. 4.

(Before Thomas Wyatt, Esq.)

The petition of appeal of Moha Ramee Komole Comaree, against the order of the Magistrate, dated the 28th of November last, granting liberty to Moha Ramee Bussunt Comaree, to go wherever she pleased, was this day called on, and it appeared, that by an order passed by the Sessions Judge on the 21 of December last the Magistrate was directed to suspend his order until the further order of the Judge's Court. That an application had been duly made to the Judge by the mookias of Ramee Bussunt Comaree, for a copy of the Judge's proceeding of the 21st of December, but had been refused. That an application had subsequently been made by the same party for a copy of the Judge's order, refusing to grant copies, which was also refused. That the Judge had on the 19th of December, applied to the Sudder Nizamut for their orders, whether the Magistrate, in carrying into execution the orders of that Court, ought not to have required the return of Moha Ramee Bussunt Comaree to the Rajbary. The appeal was heard ex parte, and an order passed by the Judge that Moha Ramee Bussunt Comaree should remain under the custody and control of her co-wife, Moha Ramee Komol Comaree, until Rajah Mohanulchunder should attain his full age, and that if she wished to return to the Rajbary, she must obtain the permission of Moha Ramee Komole Comaree for that purpose.

Another petition of appeal by Ramee Komole Comaree against an order of the Magistrate, was then called on, and it appeared, that the Magistrate, in carrying into execution the order of the Sudder Nizamut of the 18th of November last setting aside an order of the Sessions Judge directing a guard to be placed over the Ramee Bussunt Comaree had, on the 11th of December last, passed an order, to the effect, that unless the guard was immediately removed by Ramee Komole Comaree, the darogah of the town should cause it to be removed.—Against this order Ramee Komole Comaree appealed to the Judge on the 15th of December, who, on the 18th of December, passed an order, directing the Magistrate to suspend the execution of his order till the appeal should be decided. On the 30th of December, the agent of Ramee Bussunt Comaree applied to the Judge for a copy of his proceeding of the 18th. This was, however, refused, on the ground, that no final order had been passed. After this an application was made by petition for a copy of the Judge's order, refusing the of, he was at liberty to have any copies he might require.

—Order accordingly.—Harkness, Jan. 17.

The Judge was then pleased to intimate to the agent "of the Rance," that as the cases had been finally disposed

* The result is that after all the proceedings in the Sudder Nazamut, where the orders of the Session Judge were declared illegally the Rance Bassant Comaree still continues subject to imprisonment in a place worse than a gaol, with a guard-lace d'over her by her nominal protector but real enemy, Rance Komole Comaree! Her imprisonment has lasted nine months, and is now likely to be perpetual!!—Rgr.

3 They divide themselves into eight castes, Chowhan, Rathore, Power, Charan, Solunkee, Bhattie, Dhoniul, Gukhote and they go by different parts of the country, where they happen to be located; in the Eastern part of the Oude Turrae, they are called Seear Khownas; in the western part of that Turrae, Marwanee; in our territories all of the colonies who practice dacoity with open violence, are called Budhka as they were, then protected formerly by the Chiefs of Cumona Sasnee, Morsani and Kurras colonies of the same great family, that do not commit dacoity, are numerous in the upper Doab and called Bowries. In Gwalior, Jeypoor, Alwar, Bhinipore, and Kerowlee, they are called Bagorras; and in Malwa and some parts of Rajpootana, Bagries. But they call each other Hawries, and consider the local names as mere nick names though the only one considered absolutely odious is the Sear Khowwas. In speaking of each other, they will mention these nicknames, but in speaking to each other it would be considered rude. If a Marwaree from the Oude Turan enters a colony on the Shumbul, he becomes instantly a Bagorras, and vice versa; but he is always and every where a Bowree, if he is of genuine breed.

4. They now having localities any where, in order that they may move from one part of the country to another, without regret or delay, when required for security. They get into service the better to assist their friends; but they never entirely break off connexion with their old associates in crime, or cease to share in its fruits.

5. I shall feel much obliged to you, if you will have the goodness to compare what I have stated with what you may learn from the men of those colonies with whom you are in communication, and let me know how far the conclusions to which I have come, on the several points above stated, seem to you to be borne out.

6. I find the language of the Bagorra colonies from the Chumbul, to correspond with that of the Marwarees, and Sear Khowwas of the Oude Turan, and the Budhka of our districts; and I conclude it is common to all, and that of the great parent stock from which they are all sprung. They change the S into Kh, and for Munsa, man, commonly say Munkha; for Tursee, thirsty, they commonly say Tukheh.

SUPREME COURT.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 7.

FIRST TERM OF 1840.

(Before Sir E. Ryan, Sir J. P. Grant, and Sir H. W. Seton.)

This was the first day of Term. The learned Judge entered Court about half past eleven o'clock.

The business of the Term was commenced by the reading and promulgation of certain Additional New Rules on the Equity Ecclesiastical and Plea sides.

THE ADVOCATE GENERALSHIP

Sir E. RYAN, G. J., addressing Mr. Turton said: The Court have received official intimation, Mr. Turton, that you have been appointed acting Advocate General; and we are given to understand that you claim the right of leading the Bar, virtus officii. Is it so?

Mr. Turton owned the soft impeachment.

Ryan C. J. We think that if the question is to be formally debated, the argument had better take place before us in Chambers. At present we are disposed to adopt the opinion expressed on a former occasion by the then Judges of this Court, and precedence to the senior. We believe that although an opinion upon the point was expressed, no formal decision has ever been pronounced.

Mr. Prinsep mentioned the case of Mr. Norton at Madras, where the Judges had expressly held that the Advocate-General had not the right to lead, without a patent of precedence.

Ryan C. J. I mean that there has been no decision in this Court. We would suggest that it would be better to postpone the argument and decision of the matter until the question is raised by the permanent appointment as Advocate-General of a barrister not holding a patent of precedence. At present Mr. Turton is only acting.

Mr. Turton. After this intimation from the Bench, I willingly waive the claim for the present. If I should be confirmed in the appointment, I should wish to be heard shortly in support of the claim, and I should ask your Lordships to pronounce a decision in such a way that (if necessary) the opinion of the superior tribunal at home may be referred to for the final decision of the question.

[Mr. Prinsep being senior Advocate present, was accordingly called upon first to move.]

The Chief Justice, in allusion to the retirement of Mr. Pearson, spoke as follows:—

"I cannot forbear taking this opportunity of expressing the feelings of my brethren and myself, on the occasion of the retirement of the late Advocate-General, and of his resignation of the high office which he has held for a period of fifteen years. He has united in an eminent degree, qualities rarely combined; he has in all cases supported with zeal and firmness, the interests of his client, while he has never forgotten the respect and courtesy due to the Bench. It is with deep regret that we learn his approaching departure; our best wishes accompany him to the home to which he is returning."

GOVERNMENT V. THE EAST INDIA COMPANY & OTHERS.

Mr. Leith (who is now the leading counsel for the complainant) requested permission to mention this case. His learned friends the Advocate-General (Turton) and Mr. Clarke were now Government counsel, and his client had thus been deprived of their services. The re-argument which had been directed for the second day of this term thus became unnecessary, and the parties must await the decree of their Lordships. If the Court were not ready to pronounce their judgment now, he (the learned Counsel) had to request that they would let the case stand over until the return to Calcutta of the complainant's solicitor.

Ryan C. J., agreed that the re-argument would now be unnecessary, as the only object was to give Mr. Turton an opportunity of being heard. The Court had already intimated that they considered the complainant entitled to relief in some shape or other, either at law or in equity; but it was not a case in which judgment could be pronounced in a hurry. The cause had better stand over generally.

Stands over.

LUCKEESAH BRYAN V. PANCHOWRIE COSSAYE AND OTHERS

Mr. Turton moved for a rule to show cause why the ca. sa. issued against the plaintiff for costs should not be set aside, and all further proceedings stayed in respect of the allocatur for costs obtained by the defendant. He moved upon affidavits from which it appeared that a portion of the costs had been paid to the head-writer of the defendant's attorney upon his undertaking that upon such payment the matter should be adjusted, and no further claim made. The motion was that the defendant's attorney should show cause, not the defendant himself.

Ryan, C. J. If you endeavour to identify the act of the attorney's head clerk with the acts of the attorney himself, why not move that the defendant himself should shew cause?

Mr. Turton. It may be questionable whether the unauthorized acts of the attorney's clerk would in any case bind the party because it is only the act of an agent, and the rule is that delegatus potest non ipso's delegari. Now, it is not pretended that this proceedings on the part of the writer was in any way authorized by the attorney himself, and the question will rather be (supposing the affidavits to be uncontradicted) whether the Court would not hold the attorney responsible for the act of his clerk, and compel him to satisfy the claim of his own client and indemnify the other party against all further claim.

Ryan, C. J. You may take a rule calling upon the attorney to shew cause.

Rule nisi—Hurkaru, Jan. 8.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 8.

SIR R. WALLACE.

This case stood on the Common-law board for this morning. It had been entered by the Prothonotary as a remand from the sittings after last term, and no fresh notice of trial had been given, notice of trial being unnecessary where the case is a remand. It appeared, however, that the cause was not a remand, but that the trial had merely been postponed by rule of Court, and according to Jagges v. Mayor, 8 Term Reports, notice of trial in such case is necessary.

Mr. Turton for the plaintiff, accordingly mentioned, that the cause could not come on, and that it must be struck out by the Prothonotary, in order to be re-entered on the board, and notice of trial duly given.

Struck out.

IN THE GOODS OF SEAGER.

Mr. Leith moved that probate might be granted of the Will of Mr. Seager, deceased. The whole Will was in the hand writing of the testator, and contained in one part the following emphatic passage: "My wish is that my Will may be constructed according to its plain sense, and that its meaning may not be wrenched and perverted by the quibbling of evil-minded lawyers, whom I abhor!!"

SIR R. RYAN C. J.—Where are the attesting witnesses? He is to only the affidavit of the executor.

Mr. Leith.—It appears, My Lord, from the affidavit of the executor, that the Will was executed in Bombay, and that the subscribing witnesses are at Bombay. The property is entirely personal property, and the executor swears to the hand-writing and signature of the testator.

Ryan C. J.—That won't do. How does it appear that the Will was executed and attested according to the provisions of the recent enactment Act No. XXV of 1838, S. 7? According to this Act. Will, whether of real or personal property, must be signed by the testator, and subscribed by two or more witnesses in his presence.

Probate refused.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 9.

J. W. ALEXANDER v. BRUCE AND OTHERS.

This was a motion for an injunction against the Directors of the Calcutta Liable Society, to restrain them from applying the surplus funds otherwise than according to the provisions of the original Rules.

The motion stood for this morning, but as the Counsel for the complainant had not yet had an opportunity of seeing the affidavits filed by the defendants, the motion was allowed to stand over until Monday.

Stand over.

ROOP-CHUND DAX v. RIT CHIA.

This was a demurrer to a Special plea. It was argued last term before Justices GRANT and SETON, by the late Advocate General (Pearson) and Mr. Leith for the plaintiff, and by Mr. Turton and Mr. Morton for the defendant.

A re-argument by the Junior Counsel on each side was directed by the Court, and the demurrer was accordingly re-argued this morning by Mr. Leith for the plaintiff, and Mr. Morton for the defence.

The action was for 5,000 rupees, claimed as money had and received by the defendant to the use of the plaintiff. The plea was, that the money in question had been received by the defendant to be applied according to his judgment and discretion, to procure the acquittal and discharge of the plaintiff from certain criminal proceedings instituted against him in the courts of Chandernagore and Pondicherry, with the proviso that the defendant was not to be accountable for the mode in which the money was to be employed. To this plea there was a special demurrer, on the ground that it amounted to the general issue of non assumpsit.

Sir E. Ryan, C. J., at the close of the argument said: We are of opinion that this plea amounts to the general issue. There is no admission of circumstances from which the promise to pay this money to the plaintiff can be presumed to have existed for an instant of time. The plea, therefore, does not give colour express or implied. It does not appear with distinctness on the face of the plea, that there was illegality in the transaction; nor in this material, because, although "illegality" without doubt must be specially pleaded, the plea is still bad, if in another part it denies the contract alleged in the plaint. It is unnecessary to give leave to amend, because according to our decision, the facts here specially pleaded, may be given in evidence under the general issue, and there is no plea of the general issue already on the record. The judgment must be with costs of the former argument, but the costs of this re-argument must abide the event.

DISABHAR DONNERJEE v. RAMRUTON ROY, AND OTHERS.

This was a demurrer in equity by the defendant, Ramrutton Roy on the ground that no sufficient jurisdiction had been shewn in respect of him. This demurrer was argued last term, and a full report appeared in the Harkur; it was directed to be re-argued before a full Bench. The Advocate General (Turton) was accordingly heard this morning in support of the bill, Mr. Prinsep contra was not called upon.

Two grounds of jurisdiction were laid in the Bill:—First, that the defendant was specially subject to the jurisdiction, in respect of a certain judgment of the Supreme Court (which was the subject matter of the bill) by reason of his having made use of the said judgment and sued out process thereon upon the plea side of the Court. And secondly, that the defendant, Ramrutton, was also specially subject to the said jurisdiction, in respect of the matters to which the bill related, by reason of a certain clause or covenant of submission entered into with two of the co-defendants.

Ryan, C. J. intimated, that he entertained a strong opinion upon the question, and did not think it necessary to hear the counsel for the defendant.

Seton, J. intimated the same, and observed that he had no doubt whatever in his mind, that the making use (or rather abuse) of the judgment of this Court on the plea side, was sufficient to give jurisdiction to the Court quoad such judgment, on the equity side. But then this must be taken with reference to the allegations in the bill, and if it did not distinctly appear from those allegations, that such improper use was in fact made of the judgment and process of the Court, a party not otherwise subject to the jurisdiction, would not thereby become subject.

Grant, J. wished to look over the pleadings again, before he pronounced his opinion.

The decision of the Court will be pronounced on Monday.

[Note. There was another ground of demurrer, but as the argument was directed by the Court to be confined to the question, whether Ramrutton Roy was sufficiently shewn to be subject to the jurisdiction, it is to be presumed that their Lordships did not consider the second ground of demurrer tenable. It was that certain parties appeared upon the face of the bill to be necessary parties and were stated to be out of the jurisdiction of the Court, but the process of the Court was not prayed against them when and so soon as they should become subject. This is a question of importance in this Court, because in nine bills out of ten, where the parties are numerous, one or more happen to be beyond the jurisdiction. The general practice has been not to pray process in futuro against parties out of the jurisdiction. It is hoped the Court will give a decision upon the point.]

One Judge only will sit to-morrow, and on Saturday. There is an ex parte case standing on the Common-law board for to-morrow.—Hark. Jan. 10.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 11.

Sir H. Seton sat alone this morning.

ANUNDNARAIN GHOSH, AND ANOTHER, EXECUTORS, &c. v. SHEEMUTTY SOOJEMONEY DOSSEE.

This was an action upon a promissory note, and came on ex parte.

Mr. Leith and Mr. Morton for the plaintiffs.

This being ex parte for want of appearance, it became necessary for the plaintiff to prove their whole case. There was an attesting witness to the note, but it was proved that he had been subpoenaed to attend, and that diligent search and enquiry had been made for him without success. This was held sufficient, to let in proof of his handwriting, and of the execution of the note. The probate of the will under which the plaintiff claimed as executors not being forth coming, the original will was produced from the Record Office, and proved by the examination of the attesting witness.

Mr. Leith submitted that this was sufficient, and that the production of the probate was not indispensable. The parties were Hindoos, and it was not necessary at all to take out probate of a Hindoo will to enable the executors to bring an action in this Court in their capacity of executors. The plaint indeed made proof of the letters testamentary, but this might be rejected as surplusage.

Seton, J., had doubts whether it was sufficient to produce the original will, without shewing Probate. He would mention the matter to the other Judges, and pronounce his opinion on Monday.

Verdict subject to question reserved.—Hark. Jan. 13.

MONDAY JANUARY 13.

Before Sir E. Ryan, Sir J. P. Grant and Sir H. W. Seton.
DOES ON THE DEMISE OF CULLEN AND OTHERS V. ELINOR CLARK AND OTHERS.

Mr. Morton moved for a rule nisi to set aside the verdict entered for the lessors of the plaintiff (the Directors of the Bengal Provident Society) and to enter a nonsuit. The ejectment was for a house and premises in Park Street, and the title of the lessors of the plaintiff was founded upon a mortgage in 1827 from three of the defendants, who were executors under the will of William Clark, deceased. The remaining defendants were devisees under the will, and disputed the right of the executors to execute the mortgage. The first question arose upon the will, which gave the executors a conditional power to sell or mortgage. In the first place however (assuming the power to have been legally reserved) it did not appear that the condition had been complied with, and no rule was more strict than that conditions annexed to powers were to be rigidly observed. But further, one of the executors had not joined in the conveyance, and his absence had not been accounted for: Deane v. Judge, 11 East. Secondly, with respect to Ferguson's Act, that enactment extended only to cases of sale for the payment of debts, and it did not appear in the present case that the testator was indebted at all and still less that (if indebted) the money borrowed had been applied to liquidate debts.

The Court granted a rule.

Rule nisi granted.

WOMACHURN DOES V. ROSSOMONY DOES, AND OTHERS.

The Advocate General (Tutton) moved for an order that the Examiner be at liberty to deliver over to the sworn Interpreter of this Court for the purpose of being translated certain documents produced before the Examiner on the part of the defendants. This motion became necessary because it might happen that the documents could not be procured before the witness was brought into the Examiner's Office (Publication had passed in the cause.)

The Court said that in such cases the proper course would be to move that the interpreter do attend at the Examiner's Office.

Refused.

COBINNAUTH BOSE V. HOLLODNER GHOSE AND ANOTHER.

Mr. Tutton moved for a rule to shew cause why the verdict for the plaintiff should not be set aside, and a nonsuit entered instead. The question was whether the words "the debt is justly due, and we will pay it, when we get certain outstanding funds," was a sufficient promise after an infant (the member of a joint Hindoo family) came of age, to support a replication that the contract had been ratified, the action being upon a promissory note, made during infancy. The learned counsel contended, that there was no proof of express and positive promise, and that a mere acknowledgment was insufficient. Besides if there was here a promise at all, it was only conditional, and there was no proof of the condition having been satisfied. The distinction attempted to be taken between the infant member of a joint Hindoo family, and the ordinary case of an infant according to the rules of English law, was altogether arbitrary. It was impossible to say that a greater moral or legal liability resulted to an individual from his acts jointly with others, than from his own individual acts.

The Court granted a rule nisi.

Rule nisi granted.

HILLS V. BURY.

The Advocate General moved to amend the plaint and replication in this case, after demurrer allowed. This was an action for not accepting a horse, to which the defendant pleaded the statute of frauds, and the plaintiff replied that the defendant "did accept within the meaning of the statute." It certainly was not usual to grant an amendment after argument; but there were special circumstances in the present case, and if the plaintiff were to discontinue and commence de novo, he would be defeated by the plea of the statute of limitations, as more than six years had elapsed since the contract was entered into. The learned Judges had declined to allow an amendment on the occasion of the trial because they had doubts whether the replication was amendable; but if a trifling alteration were made in the plaint the replication might stand as it was.

The Court under the circumstances granted a rule to shew cause.

Rule nisi granted.

JOHN WALLIS ALEXANDER V. WILLIAM BRUCE AND OTHERS.

This was a motion for an injunction against the Directors of the Laudable Society, to restrain them from applying the surplus funds, contrary to the provisions of the original rules.

Mr. Leith and Mr. Morton were heard this morning in support of the injunction.

IN THE MATTER OF SREENAATH ROY.

The Advocate General moved for a writ of habeas corpus, to be directed to Rajah Rajnarath Roy, to bring up the body of Sreenaath Roy, the Editor of the Bhaskur newspaper. It appears that some observation or other in the Bhaskur, offended Rajah Rajnarath Roy, and that personage forthwith got possession of the person of the editor, and after inflicting personal chastisements upon him had carried him off to a country house, where he still remains in duress. The learned counsel observed, that newspaper Editors were liable to make errors and misstatements in the hurry of editorial business, but a party who conceived himself aggrieved thereby, was not therefore justified in summarily taking the law into his own hands, and subjecting the supposed offender to blows and imprisonment!

A question arose whether the application ought to be entitled, "In the matter of, &c." or not.

The Court thought that it was unnecessary to entitle it at all. After the writ had issued, the case would of course be entitled. "The Queen v. so and so."

The affidavits were accordingly re-sworn, the title being erased.

Writ granted.

IN RE. GEORGE COLLIER, DEBT.

The Advocate-General moved, that leave of absence be granted to Mr. Collier, one of the attorneys of the Court, for the period of three years.

Granted.

One Judge only will sit to-morrow.

The case of Sims v. Wallace standing for to-morrow, will not be taken till Wednesday.—Herk. Jan 14.

Monday, Jan. 13, 1840.

JOHN WALLIS ALEXANDER, ASSIGNEE, &c. v. W. BRUCE AND OTHERS.

[As the questions involved in this case are of importance and excite considerable interest, we give a detailed report of the argument.]

The bill was filed last December, by Mr. Alexander, against the Directors of the Calcutta Laidable Society for an account, and to restrain them from applying the surplus funds otherwise than according to the provisions of the original rules. Mr. Alexander, as assignee of the several insolvent firms of Colvin and Co., Ferguson and Co., John Palmer and Crutenden, Mackillop and Co., is the largest shareholder in the Society. The surplus funds are estimated at about eight lakhs, and of this sum Mr. Alexander would be entitled to about 2,60,000, or nearly one-third.

By the original Rule of the "First New Calcutta Laidable Society," commencing on the 1st of January 1835, the Society was to close its first term of five years on the 31st December 1839, at midnight, and (by the 27th and 28th Rules,) the accounts were to be made up and the surplus funds rateably divided among the shareholders, within the period of six weeks from that date.

By the 34th Rule, "a majority of votes at any meeting at which two thirds of the Society shall be represented is to be conclusive upon all subjects, even to the removal of any of the Directors, Secretary and Treasurer."

By the 38th Rule, "fundamental regulations of the Society can only be altered by a majority of the members at a general meeting convened for that specific purpose."

In January 1839 certain "Propositions," were brought forward at a special meeting of the Society, at which two thirds of the Society were represented, and carried by a majority of 138 votes to 114 (the whole number of votes in the Society being 352); so that the votes in favour of the "Propositions" constituted a majority of two thirds, but did not amount to nearly a majority of the whole Society. Upon these "Propositions" a new set of Rules was passed, which rules were to take effect from the 1st of January 1840, the period of the expiration of the first quinquennial term. The chief alterations introduced by these rules were the following. By the 1st Rule the name of the Society was to be henceforth the "Indian Laidable and Mutual Assurance Society." The 2d, 3d, 4th and 6th Rules entirely abrogated the former 27th and 28th Rules, and made a different disposition of the surplus funds. By the 6th Rule in particular, "the amount surplus belonging to surviving policy-holders on the 31st December 1839, whose policies may not be renewed on the 1st January 1840, shall be paid to them subject to a reduction of 25 per cent., to be carried to the Premium Fund," [i. e. of the New Society.]

The case came on upon a motion for an Injunction before answer.

Mr E Ryan, C. J., said: Before entering upon the merits, the court wish to know whether there is special ground disclosed for granting an injunction at this stage of the cause. The court will not general-interfere to grant an injunction before answer, and then anticipate the hearing, unless it appears that the funds in question are in danger of being lost, or some irreparable injury being caused. This is not the proper stage to try the merits of the case.

Mr. Leth and Mr. Morton for the injunction. It is submitted that there is no objection to deciding the whole question on the merits upon the motion for an injunction, prima facie grounds are shown for the interference of the court to grant relief in this shape. The affidavits certainly do not disclose any grounds for arguing that the funds are in immediate or imminent danger; but it is clear that a loss may possibly happen. Suppose this was the case of a private co-partnership, consisting of two or three individuals, instead of a large joint-stock company, and it was sworn that a majority of the partners were about to apply the partnership property to unauthorized purposes;—if the complainant showed a good title upon the merits, surely the court would grant an injunction without any suggestion that the partners were in violent circumstances! Injunctions are granted every day against receiving the rents and profits of lands, it appears that the party receiving them has no equitable right, although it may not be shown that it would be impossible to recover them back at a future period. Besides, in the present case, many difficulties may arise if the court should refuse all interference until the hearing. If the complainant pays up his premium to the new Society, he may be considered to have acquiesced in the Rules, and if he declines to do so, and the ultimate decision of this court should be against him, he may be held to have forfeited his rights as a policy-holder. By the original rules of the Society, the surplus funds were to become in effect private property at a certain date (now elapsed); and the question is whether the Court will not interfere to prevent property from being misappropriated by a public partnership, or whether they will not at least enter into the merits of the case, and determine whether the complainant is entitled to the relief which he seeks. There are no disputed questions of fact to be tried, but a mere question for argument, which can be as fully discussed now as at the hearing.

The Court inquired whether the defendants would consent to bring the money into Court, reserving all questions.

The Advocate-General could not undertake to consent.

The Court then said that the motion for an injunction must proceed.

Mr. Leth and Mr. Morton. Two questions seem to arise. First upon the construction of the Rules themselves; whether they authorize the passing of such Resolutions as these by any majority other than a majority of the whole Society. The 34th Rule defines the utmost extent of the power which shall be possessed by a majority of two-thirds. They are to have power to bind the Society upon all subjects even to the removal of Directors, Secretaries and Treasurers. In other words, the vote of such a majority is to be conclusive in all matters connected with the ordinary and current business of the Society, even to the removal of Office holders; but this does not extend to the passing of Rules appropriating altogether to the purposes of a new Society 8 lakhs of surplus funds, which, according to the original constitution of the Society, was to have become private property. The 38th is the only Rule, which relates to alterations in the original constitution of the Society; and according to that rule, such alterations cannot be effected except by a "majority of the members at a general meeting." This must mean a majority of the members of the whole Society, because no fraction of the Society is specified; and if it be construed to mean the majority of the meeting merely, the consequence might be that the smallest fragment of the Society who happened to constitute a majority at a particular meeting, might alter the fundamental rules of the Society, while it is specially provided that a majority of two-thirds of the entire body are necessary to sanction the removal of an officer-holding. But, secondly, the question arises whether a Court of Equity will carry into effect such Rules as the present, even if they had been passed by a majority of the whole society. It is submitted that whatever powers may have been given to the majority upon the dissent of a single member, such rules could not have been enforced against that dissenter-member. These rules alter the whole frame and constitution of the Society, as it was originally projected. According to the original rules, the Society was to cease upon the termination of the period of five years, when the accounts were to be wound up, and the surplus funds divided. It is true, that the old rules contain certain provisions for a new or continuing society, which the framers evidently contemplated at the time; but it is equally clear that the continuing society was in effect altogether a new and distinct one. The old rules could not extend beyond the 31st December 1839, and would in no wise be binding upon the new society, unless indeed they chose voluntarily to adopt them. There is nothing in the shape of an obligation throughout the rules upon any member of the original society becoming a member of the continuing one, and as the successive societies might therefore consist of entirely different sets of persons bound by entirely different rules, the question whether the societies are to be considered identical or distinct, is rather a metaphysical subtlety than a question of the smallest practical importance. The question is much the same as the inquiry whether Sir John Cutler's silk stockings, stained with worsted until now a vestige of silk remained, did thereby lose their identity! It is clear that the society is, in effect, a new one, and the question is whether a portion of a society can compel the rest to become members of a new co-partnership for their benefit. However unlimited the powers given to the majority may be, a Court of Equity will assign some limit to the exercise of those powers, and the only difficulty is to define the boundary. In Chapple v. Cadell, 1 Jac. Rep. the Lord Chancellor held that a majority of 29 out of 31 had no power to sell the shares of the two members who formed the majority; and in Davis v. Fish, cited in Farran on Life Insurance, it was laid down that societies could not alter and remodel their constitutions, at pleasure, according to the will of the majority. If the majority of an entire society were present at a meeting, and were to pass a resolution, without a single dissenting voice, that the whole funds should be divided instantly among the members present, it is apprehended that a Court of Equity would scarcely permit such a Resolution to be carried into effect, however extensive might be the powers vested in such majority! The principle of the present resolutions, is precisely similar. They are calculated to benefit a particular class or section of the Society, at the cost of the rest. They operate most beneficially for those whose interest it is to continue members of an institution of a nature of the "Laudable Society," and most prejudicially for the interest of those who have no reason to remain members any longer. It is sought to make the latter continue their subscriptions for the benefit of the former, or else to forfeit 25 per cent. of surplus funds to which they were absolutely entitled, as a penalty for withdrawal.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Clarke will be heard on Thursday.

ANUNDHARAIN GHOSH AND OTHERS V. RAJCHUNDER HOIDAR

This was a bill for a foreclosure. The cause came on for judgment for want of answer.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Morton for the complainants.
Dewan of foreclosures.—Hurdar, January 16.

WEDNESDAY, JAN 16, 1840.

ANUNDHUTTY KHATTOMOHY DOSSER V. RUSTIKCHUNDER SEAL.

Mr. Morton moved for a rule, calling upon Mr. A. O. Silva, the Collector of Nuddea, to show cause why certain indigo seized by him should not be released from seizure and redelivered to the Sheriff of Calcutta. The grounds of the motion were, a certificate of the Sheriff that he had seized the property in question, and an affidavit of the Sheriff's peon, that he had taken possession of the property under the orders of the Sheriff, and continued in possession until the property was seized by the orders of the Collector of Nuddea.

Sir B. Ryan, Chief Justice. What precedent is there for a motion in this shape?

Mr. Morton. If the party had been a private individual, the proper course would have been by motion for an attachment; but it appears that he acted in a judicial capacity, and the affidavit states that he issued a percequere as Collector. The more convenient and proper (and certainly the more courteous) mode of proceeding seems to be in such case to move first for a rule calling upon the party to show cause. There may be good grounds disclosed in showing cause;—if not, and the rule should be made absolute, an attachment might be moved for in the event of disobedience.

Sir B. Ryan. There is nothing before the Court to show that the party is other than a private individual. We cannot grant the motion, at all events in this shape.
Refused.

SIR R. WALLACE.

Mr. Morton opened the pleadings.

The Advocate-General stated the case. This is an action of covenant brought to recover the sum of Rs. 5,500, being the last instalment of the price of the ship "Lady Wallace," agreed to be built by the plaintiff for the sum of Rs. 15,500. By the articles of agreement entered into between the parties, the vessel was to be of 300 tons burden, and was to be completed and launched on or before the 1st of May 1839. The defendant, Captain Wallace, was to supply the necessary materials as they might be required, and to pay the purchase money by three different instalments, the last to be paid upon the vessel being completed. The vessel was launched on the 29th of May, and Captain Wallace refused to pay the last instalment due, alleging that he had suffered more than an equivalent amount of loss by the delay. It is averred in the plaint, that the delay was caused by the defendant himself, in neglecting to furnish the materials within such time as was necessary to enable the plaintiff to launch the vessel by the 1st of May; and upon this issue has been taken. It is doubtful, however, whether this is not an immaterial issue, because the launching of the vessel within the time specified does not seem to be a condition precedent to the payment of the purchase money; and if it be not a condition precedent, the plaintiff is entitled to recover whether he succeeds or fails in disproving the plea. The defendant has also pleaded, non est factum; but this plea will soon be disposed of.

Mr. P. A. Foster was then called, as a witness, and proved the Articles of Agreement. He also proved that several of the iron knees of the vessel were not delivered by Captain Wallace until nearly the end of April, and that the spindle of the windlass was not furnished until the 26th of that month. He said that it would take several days after the knees and the spindle of the windlass were delivered, before the ship could possibly be got ready for launching.

Mr. Leith (with whom was Mr. Sander) addressed the Court for the defence. He contended that the plaintiff had not proved his case. The issue was whether such materials as had been required and called for by the plaintiff had been supplied by the defendant in time to enable the ship to be launched by the 1st of May. It was not enough to show that the materials had only been furnished by the defendant at a late hour. The plaintiff ought also to have shown that he made application for them within a reasonable time.

Three witnesses were called for the defence; but their evidence tended rather to establish the case for the plaintiff.

The Court were satisfied without hearing the plaintiff's counsel in reply, that there must be a verdict for the plaintiff on both issues.

The advocate-General hoped the Court would allow interest.

Sir E. Ryan said that he did not think this was a case in which the Court had power to allow interest. The plaintiff might have judgment forthwith. Indeed, as the trial was in Term time, he was entitled to judgment after the four days had expired;—and if it had been in the Sittings, the Court would have granted immediate execution.

Verdict for the plaintiff, Damages, Co.'s Rs. 5,500.
IN RE-BREENAITH ROY.

The Advocate General mentioned this case, in which he had obtained a writ of habeas corpus on Monday last. The party was still in "dureza," and as the residence of Rajah Rajnarain Roy was only 8 miles distant from Calcutta (at Andool) he hoped the Court would allow it to be intimated to the other side, that the return would be required to-morrow. The writ indeed was returnable immediately, but "immediately" had been construed to mean "four days."

Mr. Leith (who had been retained with Mr. Prinsep on behalf of Rajnarain Roy) rose and stated, that he understood the return could not be prepared so early as to-morrow.

Ryan, C. J.—The Court are not disposed to listen to any excuse for delay in such a case. We shall certainly require the return to be made to-morrow. If the facts disclosed upon the affidavits are true, there is no ground whatever for the dureza; and if there exists any right to imprisonment, it can require but a very short time to state the special grounds upon which such right is assumed to exist.

J. W. ALEXANDER V. BRUCE AND OTHERS.

The arguments in this case will be resumed to-morrow (Thursday).

Sir E. Ryan, adverting to this case said; the Court wish to intimate their opinion upon the practice as it prevails in moving for injunction. The injunction is moved for upon the bill of complaint and also upon petition verified by affidavit; and it occasionally happens that the bill, petition and affidavit severally state different facts! The Court consider that the "petition" is altogether unnecessary, and may be dispensed with. Let this be understood to be the practice in future.—Hurk. Jm. 16.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 16.

KNUTTERMONEY DOSSER V. RUDICKHUND SEAL.

Mr. Morton moved for a rule nisi, calling upon Mr. A. Ogilvie, to show cause why a writ of attachment should not issue against him, upon the grounds of a certificate of the Sheriff of Calcutta that certain property had been seized under a writ of fiat facias, in the above cause, and an affidavit of the Sheriff's agents that they had taken possession under the orders of the Sheriff, and had been dispossessed by the orders of Mr. Ogilvie. It was very possible that good grounds might be disclosed upon showing cause; but prima facie, beyond all question, the dispossession of the Sheriff's officers was a contempt of Court, for which they would grant a rule for an attachment.

The Court, after some deliberation, said, that the case did not seem to them to be one in which the Court were called upon to interfere by attachment. The party might have recourse to his ordinary remedy by action or otherwise.

Refused.

IN THE MATTER OF BREENAITH ROY.

The return to the writ of Habeas Corpus was read in Court by the Clerk of the Crown. It set forth that Rajah Rajnarain Roy was a Hindoo inhabitant of Andool, and not an inhabitant of Calcutta, and that he was not at the time of the issuing of the writ of habeas corpus, in any wise subject to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court.

The Advocate General (with whom was Mr. Clarke) took an objection at once to the return as insufficient. What was it to say that the party was not resident in Calcutta, and was not generally subject to the jurisdiction? The affidavits upon which the rule was granted, shewed that Rajah Rajnarain Roy had carried off the party from a place in the town of Calcutta, and within the Court's jurisdiction. For this offence he would be amenable to the Court's jurisdiction upon an indictment for assault and false imprisonment; and could it be said that in the same case the Court had not power to issue a writ of habeas corpus?

The Court stopped the learned counsel, and called upon the other side to support the return.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Leith for Rajah Rajnarain Roy. This return is founded on the authority of a case reported in Mr. Clarke's Rules and Orders, where PULLER C. J. and the other judges, pronounced their opinion, that the statements in the return were to be considered final, although unsupported by affidavit, and that if the jurisdiction was absolutely denied in the return, the Court had no power to proceed farther. The opinion of the Privy Council, expressed in the case of "the justices of the Supreme Court of Bombay," is an authority in favour of this return, the Privy Council having there held that the Supreme Court had no jurisdiction to issue writs of habeas corpus, except to parties resident within the limits of the local jurisdiction, or (if resident beyond the limits) personally subject to the jurisdiction. Now it appears, from the return (and it must be assumed to be the fact) that Rajah Rajnarain Roy is not personally subject to the jurisdiction. It is nothing to say that the offence of abduction was committed in the town of Calcutta, and that the party is, therefore, subject to the jurisdiction quoad such offence. This would be a ground of constructive jurisdiction, no doubt, but it would not render the party personally subject. Besides the offence committed in Calcutta (if any) was the abduction; but this is not the offence in respect of which this writ is granted. The subject matter of the writ of habeas corpus is the detention in custody, and the detention is not in Calcutta, but at Andool. It is submitted, moreover, that it does not appear with sufficient distinctness upon the face of the affidavits, that any offence at all was committed in Calcutta by Rajah Rajnarain Roy, to whom the writ is directed. It only appears that certain persons professing to be acting under his orders, carried off the body of Sreenauth Roy. The grounds of jurisdiction ought to appear with the same certainty as in an indictment.

The Advocate-General in reply was stopped by the Court.

RYAN, C. J. This case has been argued by the learned counsel in support of the return, as if it were necessary that all the facts should be positively sworn to in the affidavits upon which the writ is moved for; but this is a mistaken notion. It is sufficient if there is a prima facie case made out, and if the facts are stated with such a reasonable presumption as to warrant the Court in calling for answer. The only answer which the party has here thought fit to make, is to deny that he is subject to the jurisdiction. But the jurisdiction has not been sufficiently denied. The affidavits for the motion, set forth that Rajah Rajnarain Roy has a family dwelling-house in Calcutta, and this is not specifically denied. The "jurisdiction" is denied generally, but this is a question of law, and the party must speak to specific questions of fact, not to general legal conclusions. But we are further of opinion, that it appears with sufficient clearness, that Sreenauth Roy was taken in Calcutta, that the seizure was by the orders of Rajah Rajnarain Roy; that he was carried out of Calcutta and detained at Andool by those orders, and that for all that we know to the contrary, he still is there detained in the custody of the Rajah. The case cited from Mr. Clarke's rules (Rex v. Gueulnauth Mullick) does not and cannot govern the present, because the circumstances were wholly different. The abduction there was not in Calcutta, and PULLER, C. J., expressly says, that there were no circumstances, but the alleged residency (which allegation was denied) upon which jurisdiction could be founded at all. With regard to the case in the Privy Council, cited from 1 Knapp's Reports, whether this is to be "considered a decision" on an "opinion," it is certainly entitled to our highest consideration, as containing rules laid down by competent authorities. But we consider that nothing contained in that case militates against our judgment that this party is subject to the jurisdiction of the Court in this matter. If an assault, with intent to murder, were committed in Calcutta, and the injured party were carried into the Mofussil, would it not be absurd to hold that we should have jurisdiction to try the offender for the capital offence, and yet have no power to grant this writ? As an inhabitant of the town of Calcutta at the time, Sreenauth Roy is entitled to the protection of this Court, and as an offender is within the limits of the town of Calcutta, Rajah Rajnarain Roy is subject to this Court's jurisdiction. We entertain no doubt upon the subject, and we therefore hold this to be a bad return.

The Advocate-General then moved for a writ of attachment, absolute in the first instance. He put in a further affidavit that Sreenauth Roy had been seen this morning in the verandah of the Rajah's house.

Attachment granted.

HARRIS V. BENTLEY.

The Advocate-General moved for a new trial in this case, in which a verdict was given last sittings for Co.'s Rs 2,000, upon a written agreement for the building of a brig called "the Snipe." He moved on the ground, first, that the damages were excessive, and secondly, that the verdict was against evidence, the agreement containing interpolations which were unexplained at the trial. Rule nisi granted.

J. W. ALEXANDER V. BRUCE AND OTHERS.

The argument on the motion for an injunction against the Laudable Society, continued this morning.

The Advocate-General was heard on behalf of the Society. The elaborate address of the learned counsel occupied more than two hours. A report will appear hereafter.

The Court at the close of his argument, suggested that an apparent difficulty arose for want of parties. The defendants were the "Directors" of the Society; but all the "Shareholders" were interested in the question regarding the appropriation of the surplus, and it was doubtful whether the Court could entertain the question in their absence.

This difficulty is obvious enough and occurred to the complainants in drawing the bill. Some correspondence took place between Messrs. Waddington and Sandes, the complainant's Solicitors, and the Secretary of the Society, relative to the subject, and the Secretary in answer to a letter written by the former, requiring the names of the Shareholders, wrote in reply, giving the names of the Directors, and stating that it appeared most unnecessary to incur the enormous expence of making the Shareholders parties.

Sir E. Ryan said, that although the Counsel for the defendants had waived the question of parties, it appeared necessary to the Court to suggest it, and they thought that before the argument proceeded further, the Counsel for the complainants had better endeavour to meet this preliminary point. The case might be mentioned again to-morrow morning, and if the complainant's Counsel could satisfy the Court that the objection was not valid on this motion, the arguments would then proceed; otherwise it would be unnecessary to hear the matter further in its present stage.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 17.

J. W. ALEXANDER V. BRUCE AND OTHERS.

The Court this morning intimated the strong inclination of their opinion against the motion for an injunction being maintainable, while the shareholders were not parties to the suit.

Mr. Leigh and Mr. Morton were then called upon to address the Court upon this point. They contended that although it was admitted beyond all question that the Shareholders must be joined as parties, before any account could be taken, the question was very different whether there were sufficient parties before the Court for the purpose of this interlocutory motion. The complainant would be satisfied with an order for an injunction until the answer should come in. He would then be able to amend his bill by making the Shareholders parties, according to the information which the answer would supply, and which at present it was not in his power to obtain. The decision of the Court would not bind the rights of absent parties; it would be merely provisional, as to the temporary disposition of large funds which the complainant charged the defendants with an intention to misappropriate. Nor would the decision in any way compromise the Court in respect of the ultimate decision to be given at the hearing of the cause. The question raised upon the motion for an injunction, might indeed be the same substantially as the question to Which ever way the question is now decided, it is clear the "shareholders" must be ultimately made parties, if the suit continues, as part of the prayer is for an "account." This will involve very great expence, and may be the destruction of the Society, as there are powerful parties arrayed on both sides. It is hoped, however, that upon an intimation being given of the opinion of the Court upon the question of right, an amicable adjustment may be effected.

be ultimately determined; but the Court might grant the injunction upon the facts now before them, and yet dismiss the bill on the merits at the hearing. The learned Counsel cited several authorities, to show that the question of parties upon a mere motion for an injunction, or other interlocutory motion was to be tested by totally different rules from the question of parties upon the general prayer for an account or other relief, in respect of which the permanent rights of the parties were involved.

Sir E. Ryan, C. J. If we thought that we could entertain the question whether the injunction should be granted, without bringing the Shareholders before the Court, we would go into the question now; but we think it impossible to do so. We do not decide upon the ground that our opinion now would be conclusive upon the whole case; but because it appears to us that the interference of the Court in granting an injunction, would be a direct interference with the rights of absent parties. The injunction may cause the entire dissolution of the Society, by withdrawing all the funds by which their operations as a Society could be carried on, and this might happen even if the injunction were only granted until the coming in of the answer. With respect to costs, we think each party must pay his own; because the experiment seems to have been made by one party as much as by the other, for their mutual benefit, in order to save the great expence of joining so many defendants. Order for injunction refused but without costs.

KISTNOCHUNDE AICAR V. RAMNARAIN NUNDY AND OTHERS.

This was an action of assumption on a judgment of the Zillah Court of Burdwan. The defendants pleaded non assumption; and gave notice of intention to contest the jurisdiction.

The trial of the question whether the defendants were subject to the jurisdiction, occupied nearly the whole of the day.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Sanders for the plaintiff.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Morton for the defence.

The defendants succeeded on the question of jurisdiction. It also appeared that one of the defendants had died before the plaint was filed. His death was suggested on the record, and alleged to have been subsequent to the filing of the plaint. This misjoinder alone would have been a ground of nonsuit.

Plaintiff nonsuited.—Hurk., Jan 18.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 18.

Sir H. Seton sat alone this morning.

T. SAMUEL V. RAWSON AND NORTON.

This is a cause pending in the Court of Queen's Bench in England, in which depositions have been taken in India on behalf of the defendants, under a mandamus directed to the Judges of the Supreme Court.

Some errors having occurred in taking down the depositions, they were amended, and the witnesses were severally examined as to the amendments, in their respective depositions, being correct.

Mr. Clarke appeared for the defendants. The plaintiff did not join in the mandamus.

The depositions having been corrected, were closed.—Hurk., January 30.

DUNNOMONEY PARK V. MEDHOOBODEN SANNYALL.

There was a motion and cross motion in this case. The former was to make absolute a rule nisi for an attachment for non payment of costs on the part of the plaintiff; the latter was that (under the circumstances) the plainiff should have liberty to set the cause down for trial without payment of the costs of the day, the cause having been struck out by the plaintiff's attorney on a former day.

The Advocate-General rose to show cause against the former motion.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Morton submitted that this was irregular. Cause could not be shewn before the matter was moved.

The Court said it was regular in the case of a rule nisi on the plea side. It was otherwise in the case of a motion upon notice on the Equity side. These two motions, however, were in pari materia, and must come on together.

The Counsel on both sides were then heard. The affidavits for the plaintiff stated that the trial had been postponed in consequence of the absence of a material witness, who had been seceded by the defendant himself. The witness himself swore to the fact; but the affidavits on the other side were in direct denial.

The Court, upon this conflicting testimony, could only take the last affidavits as true, and they therefore made absolute the rule for an attachment, and discharged the plaintiff's rule, but the costs of the day to be costs in the cause.

Order accordingly.

MOONSTER MAHOMED ATABEN V. WAREE HANITA.

Mr. Clarke moved in this case. A seizure had been made under a writ of fieri facias, of money due to the defendant, which was alleged to be in the hands of Aga Kurboolie Mahomed, "or of such sum as might be due and payable by him to the defendant, as the balance of a certain sum of money to be received by him from Badashah Begum on account of defendant." The learned counsel now moved for a rule nisi that Aga Kurboolie Mahomed should pay the money over to the sheriff. The same motion was made in 1835, but was discharged upon the affidavit of Aga Kurboolie Mahomed that he had not received the amount which, by an agreement, was to have been paid to him by instalments. An affidavit was now put in by the plaintiff, that the whole of the money had been received.

The Court refused to grant the rule, on the ground that the seizure had been made when the money was not in the hands of Aga Kurboolie Mahomed, and that as there could be no prospective seizure, a new seizure must be made, now that he had received the money.

Refused.

RANVEE HURGOONDERY DOWKE AND ANOTHER V. COOK KI-BENAUTH ROY AND ANOTHER.

In this cause, in which proceedings have been stayed for some time past, in consequence of a negotiation pending for an amicable compromise, the parties are again at issue.

The motion was on behalf of the defendants for further time to put in their answer, and to set aside the attachment for want of answer, issued against them on the 14th of this month. A question arose as to which of the parties

(there being cause and cross-cause) was entitled to priority of suit, and whether the time was to run from the filing of the bill or from the service of the subpoena.

The Court were of opinion that the time ran from the service of the subpoena. This appeared to be the practice at home, and there were stronger reasons why the service of the subpoena should be considered the "commencement of the suit" in this Court.

The affidavits on both sides were very voluminous; and the motion occupied the greater part of the day. The discussion related chiefly to points of practice.

Messrs Prinsep, Clarke and Leith for the complainants.

The Advocate General and Mr. Morton for the defendants.

The Court ultimately granted an order setting aside the attachment, and allowing the defendants six weeks further time to put in their answer, upon payment of all costs of the attachment and of this application.

Order accordingly.

MORNER V. Voss.

The Advocate-General for the plaintiff, shewed cause against a rule for an attachment for non-payment of costs. He relied mainly upon an affidavit of the plaintiff and his Attorney, contending that it appeared from the statements therein, that the costs had been improperly taxed; and moreover, that as the plaintiff had been admitted to sue in forma pauperis, he was not liable to costs although incurred before. The learned Counsel contended, that the proper mode of proceeding would have been for the defendant to have demanded the costs previously due, upon the occasion of the change of Attorney from the original Attorney to the cause to the Attorney for paupers.

Mr. Morton, in support of the rule, urged that the regular mode of objecting to the allocation for costs, was by an application to the Court to review the Taxing Officer's taxation, and that objections to particular items could not be entertained upon mere shewing cause against the rule for an attachment. With respect to the plaintiff being admitted on the pauper establishment, this could not effect prior costs. The case of Jones v. Peers, 1 McClell and Youngs Rep. shewed that the order to sue in forma pauperis could not have a retrospective operation except under very special circumstances.

The Court agreed that they could not now entertain the question whether the costs were properly or improperly taxed, and that the rule must be made absolute for an attachment.

Rule absolute.—HURKARU January 21, 1840,

THURSDAY, JANUARY 21.

WILLIAM SKINNER V. JAMES YOUNG.

Mr. Sandes opened the pleadings.

The Advocate General stated the cause. This was an action against the Sheriff for a false return in nulla bona to a writ of fiat facias issued at the suit of the plaintiff against Gural and Gilbert. The defendant had pleaded that there were no goods within his jurisdiction belonging to the parties against whom the writ issued.

The original record in the action Skinner v. Gural was put in and the writ of fiat facias at the suit of the plaintiff ordered to levy the sum of Co. Rs. 3 400 odd.

Under this writ a seizure was made in June 1839. In August 1839, the goods were seized under a writ issued against Gural and Co., at the suit of Muttlyloil Seal, and under this writ the Sheriff sold the property and executed a bill of sale to Muttlyloil Seal upon an indemnity from him. It further appeared, that in December 1838, assignment of the stock in trade of Gilbert and Gural had been executed by them to Muttlyloil Seal, and possession of the property taken by the latter, as a security for previous advances made by him. The plaintiff himself was a subscribing witness to this assignment.

Mr. Clarke (with whom was Mr. Leith) for the defence, contended that the property in the goods had been clearly shewn to have been legally transferred to Muttlyloil Seal under the assignment. The main question was, whether this assignment bound the property or not. The seizure on behalf of Skinner was certainly prior to the seizure on behalf of Muttlyloil, but if the assignment to the latter was valid, the seizure by Skinner was of course a nullity, and the Sheriff was justified in returning nulla bona. According to the rule laid down in Tuning's case, Coke's Reports, the assignment was perfectly valid, and bound the property. Possession had been delivered under it, and the transfer had been sufficiently open and notorious. But further, even if the assignment was not good against the rest of the writ, it was at all events conclusive as against the plaintiff Skinner. He had had full notice of the assignment, and was himself a subscribing witness.

Sir F. Ryan, C. J. observed, that there was also a question whether any other goods were or might have been seized under the writ sued out by Skinner, than those which had been assigned to Muttlyloil Seal.

Evidence was then given upon this point. It appeared that there were goods belonging to the firm of Gural and Co., at Mesrut, but the persons interested in the firm there, were Gilbert and Peterson, not Gilbert and Gural. There was no inventory of goods annexed to the assignment; and it was stated by a witness, that the only property of which possession had been given under the assignment, was the stock and property in the shop, while it appeared from the account sales that there was household furniture to the value of between 400 and 500 rupees. The assignment was executed by one of the partners of the firm of Gural and Co., in the name of the firm. The Advocate General in reply contended, that the plaintiff was at all events entitled to a verdict for the amount of the proceeds of the household furniture, even if the assignment were held to be a good bar; but he further contended, that the assignment was insufficient. It was executed by one partner alone, and this could not bind the rest, except as to his own share. The assignment too, did not specify, with sufficient distinctness what property was intended to be included, and there was no inventory to shew this. It was evident that Muttlyloil did not consider the assignment good, because he subsequently seized the property himself under his writ.

Sir F. Ryan said, that the Court were of opinion there must be a verdict for the plaintiff for the value of the household furniture, because that was not included in the assignment. But they were of opinion that the assignment was valid, at all events against the plaintiff, because he was fully cognizant of the whole transaction, though it might not have been good against creditors without notice as it had only been executed by one partner.

A question arose whether "cheval glasses" were to be considered part of the fittings-up of the house or of the shop.

The Court, upon due deliberation, were of opinion that cheval glasses were appropriate fittings-up of a tailor's shop. There was a verdict for about the sum of Rs. 400, appearing to be the value of the whole furniture, according to the account sales,

• WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 22.

CAMPBELL AND OMAN V. T. H. GARDINER.

Mr. Leith opened the pleadings.

Mr. Prinsep stated the case for the plaintiffs. The action was brought to recover the sum of Co.'s Rs. 1,766 being commission charged on certain sums, the title to which commission was disputed by the plaintiffs. It would appear that the defendant had acted as the general agent of the plaintiffs, (who were indigo planters) since the beginning of the year 1838. It was not disputed that the defendant had a right to charge the usual commission as such agent, but a question arose as to the admissibility of the charge with respect to certain items in the account. First the main item in dispute was the sum of Rs. 1,250, charged as commission of 2½ per cent. on the guarantee of a payment of Rs. 50,000. The learned counsel admitted that where an agent became guarantee for his constituents, without holding funds to meet the risk, he was entitled to make this charge; but he said that he should call witnesses to prove that the defendant when he entered into this guarantee, had full security against the liability which he incurred. The custom of merchants in Calcutta and the rules of the Chamber of Commerce, admitted of a guarantee-commission being charged only where the party did not hold sufficient funds to cover the risk. Secondly, there were four items, amounting altogether to the sum of Rs. 347, which were made up of one per cent. commission, charged upon the renewal of loans. This would be shewn to be contrary to the custom of merchants. The one per cent. commission was chargeable only once upon the same actual sum; and if the loan was renewed any number of times, commission was not demandable upon each of the renewals. A third disputed item was the sum of about Rs. 170, being one per cent. commission charged upon the receipt of money on a mortgage.

Upon the first and chief item, the plaintiff's own evidence disproved their case. Mr. Charles Oman, in his examination in chief, stated that Mr. Gardiner, when he became guarantee for the payment of the Rs. 50,000 in August 1838, held Company's paper to the amount of Rs. 25,000, and the title-deeds of one-sixth share of the Ramnaghur Indigo Factory, which share was worth about Rs. 36,000 more. But in cross examination it appeared, that at the same time Gardiner was under liabilities for Campbell and Oman to the whole amount of the Company's paper, and that with respect to the title deeds, there was no power of sale, and it was questionable whether they afforded any security whatever. The one-sixth share of the Ramnaghur Factory was the joint property of John and David Oman, and Mr. Campbell, and it appeared that the latter had even denied the right of Oman (who alone deposited the title-deeds) to pledge them at all! Two of the shares of the one-sixth share of the Factory were afterwards sold just before the acceptance for the Rs. 50,000 fell due, and realized Rs. 24,000; and the rest of the amount was made up in different ways, and the whole sum paid when due.

There was also a letter of Mr. Gardiner's put in, to shew that at the time of becoming guarantee, he himself made a calculation of the funds which he expected to become available to meet the acceptance, and that, according to his own calculation those funds were sufficient.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the plaintiffs had no case according to their own shewing, in regard to this item; and the last letter which they themselves put in, placed the matter beyond all doubt! Assuming that the guarantee-commission was chargeable only where the agent guaranteeing had not sufficient funds of his constituents to cover the risk, it was quite clear in the present case, that he had not sufficient. It was nothing to shew that the agent at the time of entering into the guarantee himself expected that sufficient funds would be forthcoming. Every man who entered into a guarantee, it was to be presumed, had such expectation. The question was, whether a liability was incurred, without the actual possession at the time of available funds to meet it.

This item was accordingly given up. And subsequently the item of Rs. 170 was also given up, on the intimation of the opinion of the Court in favour of the charge.

The remaining question related to the four items amounting altogether to Rs. 347, which consisted of charges of commission upon the renewal of loans from the Bank of Bengal on the deposit of Company's paper.

Upon this point the evidence of mercantile gentlemen was called, relative to the custom of Merchants in Calcutta.

Mr. Fergusson, of Fergusson, Brothers and Co., and Mr. Deane, of Eglinton, McLeod and Co., deposed, that in their opinion the charge was not allowable, and that the agent had no right to claim it.

Mr. McKilligan, of Colvin and Co., and Mr. McKenzie, of Gilmore and Co., agreed that it was not usual to charge it, and that they themselves would not make it, but they thought that in strictness the Agent had a right to make it if he pleased.

The Court thought that the plaintiffs were entitled to a verdict for these items.

The Advocate-General (with whom was Mr. Morton) for the defence, urged, that as the sum claimed was Rs. 1,766, and the main item had been disallowed on the plaintiff's own shewing, and a verdict given for so small a proportion (within the limit of the jurisdiction of the Court of Requests) costs ought not to be allowed.

The Court thought that there was no ground for disallowing costs. The questions were of sufficient importance to take the opinion of the Court upon.

Verdict for Co.'s Rs. 347—Hurkarn, Jan 23.

THURSDAY JANUARY 23

CHEN NAUTH DOSS V. GOOROOPEESAU CHOW & ANOTHER.

This was a rule nisi for a non-suit obtained by the defendants (Vide former report in the Hurkarn.)

Mr. Princep shewed cause. The learned counsel commenced by observing that there was a difference between the case of an infant member of a joint Hindu family, and the ordinary case of an infant according to English law. A mere acknowledgment or a conditional promise after coming of age, would be sufficient in the former case, though, according to the authorities, it certainly was not sufficient in the latter case.

Sir E. Ryan said, that it was unnecessary to consider this point, because the judges upon referring to their notes found that there was proof of an unconditional promise before action brought, and this must be taken as conclusive upon the fact.

Mr. Princep then confined his argument to the other points raised. It was objected that no date was assigned for the promise proved, and that it did not appear therefore that it was after attaining full age. But according to Burthwick v. Carruthers, 1 Term Reports, the onus of proof was upon the defendant, because the fact lay within his own knowledge. The question was one of fact which the Court had found for the plaintiff and in the absence of all evidence on the part of the defendant, the verdict would not set aside.

Mr. Martin in support of the rule said, that he was precluded from urging the main part of his intended argument, as their Lordships found that there had been proof of an unconditional promise before action brought. He had thought that the evidence was that there was an unconditional promise after action brought, but only an acknowledgment and a conditional promise before action brought. But upon this point the finding of the Court was of course conclusive. The only points then were whether the plaintiff had proved the ratification to be after attaining full age, and whether it could be declared upon as a promise to "pay according to the tenor and effect of the note," when the note had been already due long before the promise was made. Now the case of Burthwick v. Carruthers only established that the onus of proof of the time when the defendant came of age was upon himself, but then the plaintiff must assign a special case to the alleged promise upon which he relies, and it is impossible for the defendant to show that he was not then of age. Again in Mussey v. Hunt, 5 B. and Adol. though it was held that where the ratification was before the bill or note became due, the original promise might be declared upon, yet it was there intimated by Littledale, J., that it might be otherwise if the bill had become due before the promise, because then it could not be called a promise to pay "according to the tenor and effect."

The Court were of opinion that there was nothing in the latter point, but on the former, they thought there must be a new trial on payment of costs.

It being intimated that the defendant was a pauper, and had defended in forma pauperis, the new trial was granted without payment of costs.

Rule absolute for a new trial.

DOE ON THE DEMISE OF CULLEN AND OTHERS v. CLARK AND OTHERS

This was a rule obtained by the defendants for setting aside the verdict given for the lessors of the plaintiff and entering a verdict for the defendants for the whole or for four fifths of the premises.

The argument occupied the greater part of the day. A report will appear hereafter, as the questions raised, and the opinion intimated by the Court upon the construction of Ferguson's Act, are highly important.

The Advocate General and Mr. Leith shewed cause.

Mr. Norton supported the rule.

The Court took time to consider upon one of the points raised.

Cur. adv. vult.

THE QUEEN v. RAJAH RAJANARAY ROY.

Mr. Leith requested permission to mention to the Court (or it was intended that only one Judge would sit to-morrow) that it was the intention of Rajah Rajanaray Roy to surrender himself upon the attachment for contempt, for want of a return to the writ of habeas corpus.

The Advocate-General had no objection to the defendant surrendering himself whenever he pleased!

Sir E. Ryan said that their Lordships would all be present in Court to-morrow for the purpose of taking the surrender of the defendant, and passing such order in the case as they might deem necessary.—Hurkaru, January 24.

TUESDAY, JAN. 23.

DOE DEM. CULLEN AND OTHERS v. CLARK AND OTHERS.

This was an action of Ejectment tried last Session, when a verdict was found for the lessors of the plaintiff with liberty to the defendants to move to enter a verdict for the whole or for a part. The defendants in the beginning of this term obtained a rule nisi accordingly.

The lessors of the plaintiff (the directors of the Bengal Provident Society) claimed title to the premises, consisting of a house and ground in Park street, under mortgage executed in September 1827, by three of the defendants, as executors of the Will of Mr. William Clark, deceased. The other four defendants were devisees under the Will, and disputed the right of the executors to mortgage. The Will contained a power in these words: "I trust that my executors may either sell or mortgage such part of the landed property as they may think most advantageous for my family." It appeared that there was a fourth executor, Mr. James Thompson, named in the Will, but he had not joined in the conveyance, nor was his absence in any way accounted for. The plaintiffs also put in as part of their case, a mortgage by the testator himself, in his life time, to Colvin and Co., and a reconveyance by Colvin and Co. to the executors after his death. This evidence was intended to connect the premises for which the ejectment was brought, with the estate of the testator, but upon examination these instruments were found to relate to totally different premises. There was no distinct proof whatever that the testator was indebted at the time of his death, or that the money was raised by the executors for the payment of debts, except that it was so recited in the mortgage deeds themselves. It appeared in evidence, that the testator resided in the house at the time of his death, but there was no evidence whatever of the nature or quantum of his title.

There arose, therefore, three questions: First, whether the executors had duly executed the power in the Will. Secondly, whether the mortgage was good under Ferguson's Act. Thirdly, whether the plaintiffs had carried the title far enough back.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Leith shewed cause. First, with respect to the question arising upon the Will, it was submitted that the power was well executed, although three of the executors only joined in the conveyance. It does not appear that Mr. Thompson took out probate or acted in any way as executor; and if he refused to join in the conveyance, the defect is cured by the Statute of 91 Hen. VIII. Poynter v. Greenfield, Crook's Eliz. Rep. 89. At all events the conveyance is good for three fourths of the premises, because the three could convey the estate which was in themselves, even if they could not convey the whole. Besides, the defendants are estopped from disputing their own conveyance. As against the mortgage, it is sufficient for the mortgagee to rest his case upon the mortgage alone, and the defendants in ejectment can never deny their own title to convey.

The Court then called upon the Counsel for the defendants, on the first point.

Mr. Morton in support of the rule. I admit that mortgagors cannot dispute their own title, and that as against them the mortgagee is required to prove nothing more than the due execution of the mortgage. But four of the defendants are devisees under the Will, and as devisees (some of them infants moreover) they cannot be estopped from disputing the acts of the executors. No matter how many defendants there may be to whom the argument of estoppel extends;—if there be one stranger, he may deny the right, and put the plaintiffs upon proof of their whole title. Now it is doubtful whether the clause in the Will amounts to a dis-reservation of a power, and at all events it appears to be only conditional. The plaintiffs ought to have given some prima facie proof at all events that the mortgage, Donne v. Judge, 11 East 288 was conclusive. And if the conveyance was not good for the whole, it was not good for part; because the executors were not devisees, in trust, but had a bare power to sell or mortgage.

The Court were of opinion upon the first point, that the power was not duly executed, because all of the executors had not concurred, and it did not appear that the absent executors had refused. They therefore called upon the plaintiff's counsel to argue the second point.

The Advocate General and Mr. Leith. The mortgage is at all events good under Feignson's Act. Under that Act, real property is to be assets in the hands of executors, and it is no more necessary for all the executors and administrators to join in the conveyance, than it would be necessary for them to join in disposing of a chattel. Each may act separately, and the acts of one bind the rest. It is immaterial quoad the purchaser, whether in fact the money is really raised for the payment of debts. He cannot be required by law or equity to look to the application of the purchase money.

The Court stopped the learned Counsel, and intimated that they entertained no doubt at present upon this point.

Mr. Morton had raised the question, whether the mortgage was good under Feignson's Act, because it appeared to him at least doubtful whether there ought not to be some prima facie proof of the existence of debts, if not of the mode in which the money was applied, and also whether the Act had a retrospective operation, because this mortgage was prior to the date of the passing of the Act. But upon this strong intimation of their Lordships' opinion, he waived the question upon this Statute and relied upon the third point.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the Court entertained no doubt that a conveyance by executors under the Statute 9 Geo. IX. c. 33, commonly known as Feignson's Act, was good, without proof of the money having been applied to the payment of debts, in proof that there were any debts of the testator. Unless the purchaser colluded with the executor, he could not be liable for the wrongful acts of the latter, and the remedy of the heir or devisee would be against the executor only. It would be a most incongruous doctrine to hold that a bona fide purchaser might be affected by the malæ fidei of the executor, in that the purchaser was bound to look to the application of the purchase money. The purchaser of a property under Feignson's Act, was in the same position as the purchaser of a term of years or other chattel interest, at common law in England. His Lordship added, that in his opinion, it was not necessary for all of the executors to join in the conveyance and that those only could convey who had taken out probate and acted as executors.

The Advocate General and Mr. Leith then argued the third point, and contended that they had shown a sufficient prima facie title as against all of the defendants. There was no distinct proof indeed what title the testator had in the premises, but it appeared, that he was in possession at the time of his death, and that his children, the four devise defendants, had continued in possession, ever since. It was admitted, that the wrong set of deeds had been put in.

Mr. Mutton contra, contended that the plaintiffs had not carried back their title far enough to recover against the four defendants who were not parties to the mortgage. They might put the plaintiffs upon proof of their whole title, and a twelve years title was not in itself sufficient to maintain ejectment. As the case stood upon the evidence before the Court, these defendants had the best possessory title of the two or at all events as good, for a dated equally far back. It was nothing to say they were devisees under the Will. For the purpose of this argument, they might call themselves strangers and as strangers put the plaintiffs upon proof of their own title in the first instance. The Will in itself established no priority between the four defendants and the testator, in respect of the premises, until the premises were proved to be part of his estate. Until this was done, the Will was no better than a bit of waste paper. It might be that the testator was a mere monthly tenant, for the evidence that a man had lived for a month in a house, or even that he happened to die there, was but equivocal proof of a title to the house sufficient to support ejectment. Suppose the real fact were that the four defendants had purchased the house from J. S. in fee, since the testator's death, and that J. S. had been previously the landlord of the premises at a monthly rent? This was perfectly compatible with the case made out by the plaintiffs, and at once showed that they had established no sufficient title. It was nothing to say that there was no proof of this; because the defendant in ejectment was not required to establish his title at all until a good possessory title was first shown by the plaintiff. It was an elementary rule in ejectment that the lessor of the plaintiff must depend upon the strength of his own title, and not upon the weakness of the defendant's.

MONDAY, JAN. 27.

DOE ON THE DEMISE OF LUTTEN AND OTHERS V. ELEANOR CLARK AND OTHERS.

In this ejectment in which the motion for a nonsuit was argued last week, the Court pronounced judgment this morning.

Sir E. Ryan, C. J. The Court disposed of two of the questions raised at the time of the argument, and reserved the third for further consideration. We are of opinion now that the rule must be made absolute. With respect to the defendants who were not parties to the mortgage the lessors of plaintiff have failed to make out any case. As it seems probable from what has been stated, that the defect arose from mistake. We come to this conclusion with some reluctance, and under the circumstances each party must pay their own costs.

The Advocate General hinted that the Court would allow a new trial instead of a nonsuit.

Mr. Morton objected to this, and observed that new trials were rarely granted in actions of ejectment: it might be deemed advisable to take defence in the names of different parties.

The Court said, that the rule must be for a nonsuit not for a new trial.

Rule absolute for a nonsuit.

THE QUEEN V. RAJAH RAJNARAIN ROY.

The defendant surrendered himself to the attachment this morning.

Sir E. Ryan, C. J., asked whether the defendant was in custody.

The Deputy-Sheriff, Mr. Bathie, answered in the affirmative.

Mr. Prinsep moved, that bail might be taken for the defendant to appear and answer interrogatories. He had affidavits ready sworn by the defendant and other parties.

The Advocate-General said, that he had affidavits to shew that Sreenauth Roy was seen in the custody of the Rajah's servants this morning.

Mr. Prinsep said, he was certainly taken by surprise, by the denial of his learned friend that the party was at liberty.

Ryan, C. J. said, that it would be necessary to refer to the affidavits as to the fact whether the imprisonment still continued or not.

The affidavits were then read by the Clerk of the Crown. The affidavits of the defendant stated, that Sreenauth Roy had been liberated on the 18th, and that he had not been in his custody since. The affidavits on the other side stated, that Sreenauth Roy had been seen this morning at Andool surrounded by the Rajah's peons.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Leith commented upon the improbability of the story that the Rajah had come to Court to surrender himself upon the attachment, which he had been illegally detaining the party in his custody that very morning. But, moreover, upon this point, the affidavits of the defendant must be taken as conclusive, and if false, he may be indicted for perjury.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Clarke argued in the first place, that the contempt was clearly admitted by the defendant upon the face of his own affidavits, and that he ought therefore to be committed at once. The case of a contempt admitted by the party was quite as strong as the case of a contempt committed in the face of a Court. But, secondly, the affidavits last sworn must be taken as true, and it might be assumed, therefore, that the fact was that Sreenauth Roy was still in the custody of the Rajah.

Ryan, C. J. We are not going to decide what is the fact upon these contradictory affidavits. At present we give no opinion upon them, and we take the statements in the affidavits of the defendant to be true for the purpose of the question now before the Court. It appears upon the face of the defendant's own affidavits, that he has been guilty of a contempt. Now it is laid down in Blackstone and other authorities, that if the offence is heinous, and there is no doubt of the fact, the Court will generally commit the party immediately; otherwise they will receive his recognizances to appear and answer interrogatories. In the case before the Court, it is clear that the original act towards Sreenauth Roy was most illegal and unjustifiable. No justification is even attempted, and it is distinctly admitted, that the defendant had no sort of legal right to seize or detain the party.

The only return made to the writ was a denial of the jurisdiction, which was declared by this Court to be under the circumstances a bad return. The defendant then had full knowledge that the whole of his proceedings were illegal, and that he had not even the equivocal excuse that he was not subject to our jurisdiction. He did not even then release the party immediately, or before the Court; but by his own shewing he detaining the him two days longer. The case of Goculna h Mullick in Clark's Rules, is nothing like the present. In that case the return to the writ contained a justification on the alleged ground that the person carried off was the wife of the defendant. Here no justification is attempted, and a gross outrage, and contempt of Court, appear upon the face of the defendant's own affidavit. The order of the Court, therefore is, that the defendant be committed to the custody of the Sheriff, to answer interrogatories. The interrogatories to be filed in four days.

Order of commitment.

BARRETT V. DENTIFY.

This was a motion for a new trial, on the ground 1st, that the verdict was against evidence, and 2dly, that evidence had been improperly received of special damages for the breach of an agreement on which the action was brought.

Mr. Morton shewed cause. With respect to the first point, new trial would scarcely ever be granted in this Court upon such a ground. At home new trials were rarely ever granted upon the ground of the verdict being against evidence, unless it was certified by the presiding Judge, that the verdict was against his direction to the Jury. This never could be the case in this Court, where Judge and Jury were the same. With respect to the second point, the evidence of damage was very properly received. The agreement itself received 2000 rupees, as damages, for the non-performance of the contract. If this amount was to be considered stipulated damages, plaintiff was then entitled to the verdict upon mere proof of the breach. If, upon the other hand, this was to be considered a penalty, the plaintiff was not only entitled, but bound, to shew the amount of damage actually incurred.

The Advocate-General (with whom was Mr. Stanes) argued at great length, in support of the rule. He contended that the verdict was not merely against the weight of evidence, but that the evidence was all on one side. Certain interpolations appeared in the agreement, and nothing was shewn by the plaintiff to account for them in any way. He cited several authorities, to shew that the onus of proof lay upon the plaintiff, and that where erasures in inter-luminations appear in any instrument, he was bound to account for them in the first instance. With respect to the alleged immateriality of evidence improperly received or improperly rejected, it was no ground for refusing a new trial.

This argument occupied the Court until a very late hour. The rule was ultimately discharged with costs.

Rule discharged.—Hurkuru, January 28.

THURSDAY, JAN. 28.

DISSENTOR HONORABLE V. RAMBUTTON ROY, AND OTHERS.

The Court this morning delivered judgment upon the remission to the bill of complaint in the above cause. A full report of the argument appeared in a former number of the Hurkuru. It will be recollected that the case involved important questions of jurisdiction.

As there was a difference of opinion upon the Bench, their Lordships delivered their judgments seriatim.

Sir H. W. Selon. This was a demurrer to a bill in equity. There were several grounds of demurrer, the greater part of which were disposed of on the occasion of the argument, there remains to be considered the question whether Ramrutton Roy sufficiently appears subject to the jurisdiction. It is stated in the bill that he is not an inhabitant of Calcutta, and not generally subject to the jurisdiction; but he is charged to be especially subject on the grounds, 1st. That he is making use of a certain judgment and process of this Court on the plea side, such judgment being the subject matter of the bill of complaint; and 2dly. That he entered into an agreement (not with the complainant) to subject himself to the jurisdiction in respect of the matters to which the bill relates. With respect to the first point, it rested upon the mere allegation that the defendant was making an improper use of the judgment and process of this Court, there would be a sufficient prima facie ground of jurisdiction. Independently of the charter and of the statutes, there must be an inherent power in this Court to control its own process. But the general allegation must be taken with reference to the prior statements and charges in the bill. From those statements, it appears, that the defendant was not a party to the action in which the judgment was obtained, and that there was no assignment to him of the judgment, but that he was allowed by other parties to make use of the judgment in their name. Now the parties to the record are the only parties judicially recognized as "using the process" of the Court; and if it were otherwise, it is difficult to see what definite bounds could be set to the Court's jurisdiction. Any suggestion of fraud or collusion, or even a general charge of combination with the parties to a judgment, in allowing that judgment, would be held sufficient to limit jurisdiction. In the case of Goolahand v. Obyraah, Chambers' Notes, it was decided generally that in some special jurisdiction in respect of prior proceedings in this Court, they must be between the same parties as well as relate to the same subject matter. It may be doubtful whether this doctrine would now be recognised to its full extent, but the case is a strong authority upon the point. There was also a case lately before the Chief Justice in Chambers, where his Lordship refused to grant a subpoena to appear and answer to a bill in equity, upon an affidavit that the defendant in equity was (the father of the nominal plaintiff and) himself the real plaintiff in an action at law which the bill was filed to restrain. It has been strangely argued, that to hold that in this case the Court have no jurisdiction, would amount to a failure of justice, even if this were so, it would not be sufficient to warrant the Court in assuming a jurisdiction which it did not possess. But it does not appear that there will be any failure of justice whatever. The parties themselves, who allow their names to be used, are themselves thereby subject to the jurisdiction of the Court, and if they alone are brought before the Court, there is no reason to suppose that the Court would not have full power to prevent the continued abuse of its process. With respect to the second point, it is sufficient to say that an agreement to be subject to the jurisdiction can only operate there that partes to that agreement. I am of opinion, therefore, that this demurrer must be allowed, but upon the novelty of the question, and the absence of express authorities upon the point, I think it should be without costs.

Sir J. P. Grant.—This is a question of much importance, and I regret that a difference of opinion should exist upon the Bench. I have given the matter much consideration, and I have come to the conclusion that a sufficient jurisdiction is shown by the bill, and that the demurrer ought to be overruled. The rights of parties in a cause pending before this Court are under its special protection. Now the statements in the bill of complaint must be assumed as true arguendū gratū. From those statements it appears, that Ramrutton Roy is the real party who is abusing the judgment and process of this Court,—that he caused the writ of execution to issue, and gave the instructions to the Sheriff. It is Ramrutton Roy, therefore, who has by his own acts put the machinery of this Court into motion for his own purposes, and I hold that he has made himself thereby subject to the jurisdiction of this Court, in all matters relating to such acts. It is immaterial that this has been done in the names of other parties; we must inquire who is the real mover, and I do not understand upon what principle it could be held, that a person abusing the process of the Court upon the plea side, does not render himself liable to the control of the Court in its equity jurisdiction. Upon the second point I am of opinion that the agreement not being with the complainant, would not give jurisdiction.

Sir E. Ryan.—I was not present at the first argument in this case; but upon the occasion of the second argument, without hearing the counsel for the defendants, I formed a strong opinion that there was no sufficient ground of jurisdiction established. This opinion has been since confirmed upon consultation with my learned brethren. I think it sufficient to say that I entirely concur in the opinions expressed by Mr. Justice Selon, and that I adopt his judgment as my own. This demurrer, therefore, must be allowed, but without costs.

Demurrer allowed.

THE QUEEN V. PEERALLY.

The Advocate General moved that the bail tendered by the defendant might be received, and that he might be at liberty to traverse the indictment (for perjury) over to the next Sessions.

Mr. Leith contra, said that the Clerk of the Crown had rejected the bail tendered, and that the defendant could not afterwards move to justify in Court. If the Clerk of the Crown did not approve of the bail, it was final, and no motion upon the subject could be entertained by the Court.

Sir E. Ryan said that this was an extraordinary motion, and must be refused with costs.

The Advocate General urged, that costs were not given upon a motion being refused on the Crown side. He questioned whether the Court had any power. In moving for postponements of trials, and the like, the Court might grant the application conditionally on the payment of costs, but they never awarded costs, if the motion was refused.

The Court considered that they had power to allow costs.*

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 29.

IN THE COURT OF PROBATE.

Mr. Leith yesterday moved again for probate of the Will of Sanger, deceased. This was the gentleman whose last Will and Testament contained so emphatic a denunciation of the "quibbling of evil-minded lawyers." The learned counsel now called the attention of the Court to affidavits, from which it appeared that the testator was a seaman, and had made his Will at sea. By the recent Act the wills of mariners and seamen were placed upon the same footing as before the Act and therefore even a nuncupative Will would be sufficient. By clause XXX of Act No 25 of 1838, it is enacted that "notwithstanding anything therein contained, any soldier being in actual military service, or any mariner or seaman being at sea, may dispose of his personal estate as he might have done before the making of the Act."

The Court this morning intimated that under the circumstances disclosed in these affidavits, the Will was sufficiently proved.

Probate granted.

THE QUEEN V. PERK ALLY.

The Court upon further consideration thought they had no power to award costs. The allowance of costs against a defendant on the Crown side, could only be conditional upon the granting of the application.

The Advocate General said he should be very happy to pay the costs, if the Court accepted the bail!

INDRACHUNY DADUR V. ARCHIBALD KEAN.

This action, which was commenced yesterday, was resumed this morning, and occupied nearly the whole day.

The action was brought upon a Bank Post Bill or Note for Co's Rs. one thousand, drawn by one E. Buthurst, the Secretary and Treasurer of the Bank of Mirzapore, at 30 days' sight, upon the Bank, in favour of the defendant, and indorsed by him to the plaintiff. This bill was dishonoured when due, the Mirzapore Bank having become insolvent.

The defendant pleaded want of due notice of dishonour. The Advocate General and Mr. Leith were for the plaintiff.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Sandes for the defence.

It was found by the Court upon the evidence adduced, that the notice of dishonour was not given (as far as the direct evidence went) with the time when it regularly ought to have been given; but the plaintiff gave evidence of a subsequent acknowledgment, which it was contended amounted to a promise to pay and was not a mere waiver of notice, but rather presumptive evidence of actual notice. This evidence was that the defendant had said that the balance was his, and that the plaintiff need not be afraid, as the money was all safe and would be paid. For the defendant, it was contended on the authority of Hicks v. The Duke of Beaufort, 4 Bingh N. S. that this was a mere acknowledgment, and no evidence of notice whatever. A question was also raised upon the pleadings, whether this ought not to have been specially replied to.

Some evidence was also given of the defendant being interested in or connected with the Mirzapore Bank, and it was contended that this was constructive notice.

* If the new promise were treated as a waiver of notice, perhaps it ought to be specially replied to rather as a revocable declaration upon, but considering it merely as presumptive evidence of actual notice, the question on the pleadings does not seem to arise.

The Court, after some deliberation, found a verdict for the plaintiff, with liberty to the defendant to move for a postponement of a new trial.

Sir E. Ryan made the following observations. Upon the question of fact, we find that the plaintiff has proved the subsequent acknowledgment made by the defendant, and we infer as a Jury that due notice was given. The case of Hicks v. The Duke of Beaufort only establishes that such words as "the bill shall be paid," do not amount to conclusive evidence of notice; but still it is a question for the Jury. Upon this point, the Counsel for the defendants may move hereafter if they think fit. With respect to the general question of "due notice," according to my experience in this Court, the same rules have been adapted here as in England. I believe the natives of this country are equally strict and systematic in their mercantile dealings, and that according to native custom, notice is no less strictly required. I do not agree with the observations of the learned Counsel for the plaintiff that a plea of want of notice is necessarily a "dishonest defence." It is a well-known rule, and essential to security and regularity in mercantile dealings, that due notice of dishonour should be strictly required in general, and it may be most consistent with justice and fairness, as well as law, in many cases to insist upon their want of it as a legal defence.

Verdict for plaintiff with liberty to move.—Hark. Jan.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 30.

RAJAH HURRYNATH RAY DOWRY AND OTHERS V. GOVIND KISHENNAUTH RAY, RAHADOUR, AND J. C. C. BITHURIAH.

This was a motion upon notice, on the Equity side that the Company's paper, securities, jewels, &c. deposited with the Master, be paid over to the complainants, or that there be a reference to the Master to inquire and report what sum of money is necessary and proper for the maintenance and support of the complainants, and for the household expenses and religious ceremonies, and what sum is due and owing for arrears of such expenses.

There were (as usual in this cause) voluminous affidavits on both sides. The affidavits on the part of the defendants charged gross mismanagement of the funds, and of delinquency in the accounts against the complainants, the Ranees, as Executrices of the Will of Rajah Hurrynath.

The Court intimated at the outset of the argument, the difficulty that the complainants were under, in seeking to obtain a transfer to themselves of the property in question, while there were delinquencies in the accounts charged by the other side. The Court were called upon to decide the whole question in the suit upon an interlocutory motion, — a question too dependant upon the final adjustment of the whole accounts.

Mr. Prinsep, Mr. Clarke, and Mr. Leith for the complainants, waived the first part of the application, but they contended that they were entitled to the reference to the Master. The whole of the property in question had been for forcibly and illegally carried away out of the custody of the complainants, who had lawfully possession of it at the time as executrices of Rajah Hurrynath's Will. Even if the construction of the Will, contended for by the defendants, was correct, and the young Rajah became entitled to the property upon attaining his 16th year, the mode in which the Ranees were disposed of the property, was wholly unjustifiable. The Will had been acted upon until a few months ago, as if the young Rajah was by the Will still a minor, and the complainants had incurred heavy expenses in keeping up the necessary establishment and the pojgahs and religious ceremonies to be performed. The learned Counsel argued at considerable length, upon the construction of the Will, that the young Rajah was intended by his father to remain a minor until he attained the age of eighteen years; and they contended that as the question was a question of law, arising upon the face of the Will and fully before the Court, it was competent for the Court to decide it upon a mere interlocutory motion.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Morton for the defendants, did not object to the reference to the Master to inquire and report what monthly sum was necessary and proper for the maintenance and support of the Rannees, but they objected to the rest of the reference, because they denied the right of the Rannees to control the household establishment and to perform the religious ceremonies. In the first place, the same objection applied to this part of the application, as to the former part which had been waived, namely, that it was deciding the whole merits of the suit upon interlocutory motion, and if it should ultimately appear that there were defalcations in the accounts, the Rannees might have to refund a still larger sum. But again it appeared from the affidavits, that a similar application had been made to the Court of Wards, and if this was granted, there would be two different orders by two different Courts upon the same matter, and perhaps funds provided twice over for the same purpose. And lastly, they contended at length upon the construction of the Will that the Rajah became of age at sixteen, and was legally entitled to the possession and control of the entire property.

The Court, after some deliberation, said that they were disposed to grant the reference; but as a difficulty might arise upon any ulterior motion made for the payment over of such sum of money as the Master might find due (the accounts being unsettled and defalcations being charged), it was for the Counsel for the complainants to consider whether they would take the whole reference, or only the reference accorded to by the defendants, relative to the support and maintenance of the Rannees.

Mr. Princep said, he entertained no apprehensions about the alleged defalcations in the accounts; and he would therefore elect to accept the reference.

The Court upon the construction of the Will, found that the Rajah was not of age thereunder until eighteen. The Master was to report and inquire in the terms of the notice, regard being had to the Will, and to proceed in the Court of Wards.

Order accordingly.

ANUNDCHUNDER GROPE V. SOOTJEMONEY DOWRY.

Mr Leath moved to set aside the non-suit in the above. The question was whether a Hindoo plaintiff suing as executor, and making protest of the letter testamentary, was bound to produce probate. The original Will was produced and proved at the trial (which was ex parte), and there was a certificate of the Registrar intimated that probate had been granted. In Quinton v. Dymn, 1 Brod. and Bingham, it was doubted whether this would not have been sufficient evidence even in England. But in this country, probate of a Hindoo Will was not necessary to the title of an executor; so that even if the probate itself was best proof of probate being granted, it was not necessarily best proof of the Will. It might be said that there was a possibility of probate having been granted of another and different Will, which would then certainly be the only Will which the Court would recognize, but then the very same possibility existed in other cases, where it did not appear before the Court that probate had been granted at all. Besides, how and it appear here that probate had been granted, even if the fact were material? The mere protest in the plaint might be rejected as surrogage; and as secondary evidence of the fact was not receivable for the plaintiff, it ought not to be received against him. If so, the Court could not assume in this case that probate had been granted at all; and the case would come within the ordinary Hindoo rule, that the title of a Hindoo executor is good under the Will without probate.

—yan C. J.—This rule must be refused. As the plaintiff has made protest, we can receive no other evidence than the probate itself, or the entry in the Registrar's Book. In Behes Muttra's case, this Court decided that they had jurisdiction to grant probate of Hindoo Wills. The consequence is, that although probate is not necessary yet, when granted, the Will of which probate is given, is the only Will which the Court will recognize.

Rule refused.

In Cossinanth Bose versus Soohchunder Chowdry, which was ex parte and tried yesterday, there was a verdict for the plaintiff. The Advocate General and Mr. Birwell for the plaintiff.

There are only two causes remaining on the plea side.

INSOLVENT COURT.

JANUARY 4, 1840,

IN THE MATTER OF JAMES JACOBS.

This Insolvent was called up, and his discharge again opposed by Mr. Clarke, in consequence of the last amended schedule being still unsatisfactory. He was then examined by Mr. Clarke, touching some property, and the following is the substance of his deposition.

James Jacobs. Before going to prison, I resided in the Dhurumollah house where my wife and family are at present living. I made out a list of the furniture, and gave it to the Assignee, by whom they were all sent to the auction, excepting a small portion which I asked to keep. I had the same carriages as I have stated already on a former occasion. There was a browberry lying in the compound, which was broken, and which no body would buy. I am told that it has since been done up at the expence of my son, to whom the repairs cost 60 rupees. I am not aware if my family are using it, as I am in jail and cannot be expected to know such points. I never made any enquiry of them on the subject, and cannot say if they came to me in the jail in the brown-berry. I know that they do not walk, that they must come in a conveyance; but whether they came in the brown-berry or not, I cannot say. The jailer may be able to say if they do or not. I cannot state my belief even if they do or not, as I cannot believe what I do not see.

Here the Insolvent broke off in his answers, and burst forth in detailing a catalogue of the hardships, grievances and, as he termed them the tyrannical persecutions he has been subjected to during the whole time of his incarceration especially of late. He said that he had been enough ground down and was rendered entirely unable to help himself either by the assistance of counsel or attorney. His wife and family were besides insulted, and disgraced, as he said, by Court officers and having been reduced to those wretched extremities, he refused to answer Mr. Clarke, lest he should farther commit himself in more trouble, and be entirely crushed. Having thus far gone on in a very excited tone, he at once burst out crying.

The Court advised him as his best course, to state his belief when asked to do so, and to render direct replies. After some time he resumed his deposition.

My family use a conveyance which may soon has purchased, though I do not know from whom or for how much. Previous to my going to prison, there was a palanquin carriage in the house, built by Dykes, which belonged to my children, by whom it had been jointly purchased with their pocket money. The colour of this carriage was not maroon nor claret. It was some dark colour. I am not aware, if it was sent to one Chunder Mistry, to be repaired. I do not know Chunder Mistry. Four or five months previous to my going to jail, Mr. Bartlett took the contract for the repairs of the palanquin carriage. I cannot say to whom the furniture at present in the house belong, no more than the beams. The palanquin carriage delivered to the Assignee, was not the one purchased by the children.

My son is in his twenty-second year, and will enter his twenty-third on the 9th February. None of the other children are of age. I recollect that there was some plate, and not the whole, kept with Mr. Masters for 300 rupees, which money has since been paid, never placed any piano with Desponarain Mistry, who has no piano belonging to me nor ever had any. Nor can I recollect that there is a square piano of mine with Mr. Ballin. I gave him one in pledge of some bills, which not being paid he kept the piano. I cannot think of the amount that was due to Mr. Ballin. The piano might have been given to him about a year or two before going to jail. I cannot also recollect of what amount the bills were. What I cannot bring to mind properly I shall not try to guess. Mr. Ballin's name is omitted in the schedule, as it did not occur to me. I never sent a piano across the water to Mr. William Foster, nor to any of the Fosters, not even to any body over the water.

Charles Bisset M^r de la Roche, sworn. There was a palanquin carriage in the house before my father went to jail, but it was given over to the Assignee. I do not know by whom it was built. It was painted green and the only one he had. There was a phaeton also. My father had no carriage built by Dykes. There was one which belonged to us, that is to myself and sisters. It was of a maroon colour and purchased by my father for us at the Auction in 1836, with money that had been put by for us in the Savings' Bank. This carriage was painted green long before he went to jail—about four months previous. I do not know by whom it was painted green. It is in the house now. There are likewise a brown berry and a white horse which belonged to my father. The horse had broke the brownberry, and I paid for it and got it repaired about six months ago. The family are still using this conveyance. Neither the palanquin carriage nor brownberry were entered in the schedule or made over to the Assignee. The phaeton was sent to auction by order of the Assignee. It was given up to the Assignee besides the palanquin carriage. Part of the furniture at present of the house is mine. There are some bangles of mine in the house from a month, which were before in the shop. I removed them as I was thinking of going up the river, and expected to sell them in Military stations. There are some harp strings packed up in bottles, which also belong to me. They were given to me and I possessed them long before my father went to jail. Some music books are likewise in the house, part of which belongs to me, a part to Mr. Cules, of the Governor-General's band, and a part to my sisters. Those belonging to Mr. Cules are in M. S. They were sent by him to England to be printed but were returned in the same state as they went. Those belonging to my sisters and myself were received from my father about three years ago, at which time I had no shop and was engaged in no business; but received the books as I had then commenced taking instructions on the violin. There are but two or three bound music books and not thirty or forty handsomely bound. Previous to my father's going to jail, I do not know what he possessed nor how many musical boxes belonged to him. Never dealt in perfumery before setting up in business, since which time I have generally purchased my supplies from Messrs. Moore, Hickey and Co. The guitar in the house belongs to M. Dupuis, who has no piano belonging to my father. My father sent him one, but I do not know what became of it. I know Desponarain Mistry—he was in my employ and has left me. The last time I saw him was in Court, when I did not tell him to be off, lest he should be subpoenaed again. I never told him so I swear. I only desired him to go to the shop as there was business for him, and as Mr. Burkingyoung's circular was pulling him away to Mr. B's shop. I know he came to this Court in consequence of a subpoena. I never told him to the effect to be off lest he be subpoenaed again. I think I have not seen him since. He was my father's head mistry about five or six years ago. There are a few clarionet reeds, not a great quantity, in the house, which are valued from 10 to 12 Rs. There is likewise a piano case full of books chiefly belonging to my sisters, which I believe were given by my father. There is no plate in the house save some silver spoons, which are of the excepted articles. I recollect of no plate coming from Mr. Master's house.

Mrs. Jacobs sworn.—I have already stated that all the plate has been sold. I speak of what was sent to Mr. Masters as well as what I had. I did not send all I had to Mr. Masters. Such as was not necessary I disposed of, and such as was indispensable I sent to Mr. Masters. I do not remember when the plate was returned by Mr. Masters, but I believe it was before my husband went to jail. Whether the plate was sent Mr. Masters after the Organ had been received from Messrs. Philpot and Johnstone, is more than I can tell. Besides the plate I sent a few trinkets also to Mr. Masters, which belonged to my daughter Mr. Fowler was brought up as one of my own children. In 1836 he put up at our house and remained there up to the time of his marriage. The letter marked Z, written by Mr. Fowler, is not correct. It speaks of a great quantity of jewellery. I never had a great quantity,—a few trinkets were all I had. A pearl necklace which I never possessed is also mentioned in the letter. Diamond rings are likewise spoken of, which I never had. All I had were a few paste rings. Nor had I a silver bread-basket. I had a plated one which I gave away to a friend, having bought it at her father's sale. The children have two silver plates which, together with the clock, were taken to Mr. Masters for sale, as we were about to remove to the gardens. This was about the month Mr. Jacobs went on the river. I sold the plate to a native. I do not mean what was sent to Mr. Masters, but what I had with me. The whole was sold to one man who, I believe, was a jeweller, though I cannot say where he carries on business or where he lives. He used to come to the house and do little jobs for us. I never saw the man since I sold the plate to him. I don't know if my servants know where he lives. On the occasion that the plate was sold to him, he was not sent for but came himself. Being a long time I cannot enumerate the articles sold, nor state the amount for which they were sold. Besides these articles, those that were with Mr. Masters have also been sold to a man in the bazar by a friend.

The name of this friend the witness would not at first give up. She said that he was a young man who had assisted her in her distress, and she was afraid that divulging his name might tend to involve him in trouble. All her friends she said had deserted them on account of the present case; she had been deprived of the protection of her husband, her children, the guardianship of their father, and herself and family had been reduced to a state that the very dogs in the streets would kick at them. She was certainly powerless and persecuted, but she would not involve a young man in trouble who had assisted her in her distress.

The witness here burst into tears, and appealed to the Counsel as a man, a husband, and a father, and entreated he would pity her and not press the question. But the Counsel told her that Mr. Clarke was only discharging his duty, and recommended her to give up the name. After a short pause she said that Mr. Masters was the person by whom the plate was disposed of in the bazar. As for the clock, it was returned by Mr. Masters, though he was enticed to detain it, in consequence of some money being due to him, and though Mr. Jacobs told him to keep it. Part of that money has been paid though the time she did not recollect. Nor could she say when the clock was returned, so many circumstances having transpired since. Mr. Masters first returned the plate and then sold it. Mr. Jacobs is still indebted to Mr. Masters.

Two native witnesses were then called up and examined, who deposed to nothing material to further discovery.

A petition was presented by the Insolvent, complaining of certain alleged hardships and grievances he is enduring and praying for subsistence and access to his books at the jail. The last prayer was granted by the Court, who ordered the Examiner to place the books in charge of Mr. King, the jailer, under whose surveillance they may be examined by the Insolvent. The two vent was then remanded for farther amendments to his schedule.

THE MATTER OF BRIJMOHUN COONDOO.

The Insolvent has drawn up a third schedule which was also found fault with by Mr. Tutton, who opposed his discharge and by whom he, together with several witnesses, was examined at considerable length, which examination took up the remainder of the day.

The chief points of objection were first, a sum of 16,899 Rs. which was entered in a former schedule as admitted, and stated in the present one as disputed. The Counsel required a sufficient explanation of the apparent contradiction. The next point was 9,846 Rs. said to be due to the Insolvent's father by Brijmohun Coondoo and Company, of which firm the Insolvent was a partner. This debt has been entered in the present schedule as a personal liability of the Insolvent, while the corresponding debt due from his partners is not mentioned, which the Counsel thought an imperfect one that called for an amendment. Besides, this same amount appeared, from the examination, to have been expended, a great part on account of Roussac, Brothers and Co., and no such account appeared prima facie in the schedule.

A great deal of desultory debate took place between Mr. Tutton and Mr. Leith, who was for the Insolvent, in regard to those points, and at length it was finally agreed to let the matter stand over for farther hearing to Saturday next.

THE MATTER OF MAHARAJA MALCOLM MANU.

The matter of this Insolvent stands over to the 1st February, with orders to notify publicly in regard to his affairs.—Hurkaru, Jan. 6.

JANUARY 11, 1840.

(Before Sir H. Selou.)

On the opening of the Court, which was delayed to noon in consequence of an ex parte case before Sir Henry Selou in the Supreme Court, Mr. Tutton made an application on behalf of Mr. Patrick Byes, under the following circumstances. There is in the hands of the Accountant General the sum of 20,000 Rs. which belonged to his wife as a marriage settlement. Mrs. Byes, as well as her children, being now deceased he is entitled to a life interest in the money, and being extensively indebted to the late firm of Palmer and Co., he is desirous of transferring his interest in his late wife's marriage portion, to the Assignees of Palmer and Co., for the purpose of appropriating it for dividends and thus getting a release.

The matter stands over for the consideration of the Court.

THE MATTER OF BRIJMOHUN COONDOO.

The Insolvent was called and his examination resumed by Messrs. Tutton and Leith, of which the following is the substance.

By Mr. Tutton.—The Insolvent said that he was indebted to the estate of the late Mr. DaCosta the sum of 3,000 Rs., for which he is detained in jail. In reference to this debt, he defended an action through Messrs. Marnell and Allen, the costs consequent on which amounted to 375 Rs., a sum that has been entered in the schedule. He has borrowed money from the bazar, though people know him to be worth nothing; but he has been trusted because he is known to be the son of a wealthy man.

By Mr. Leith. When I borrowed the money it was on 'gr the impression that my employers, Roussac, Brothers and Co., were at the time in prosperous circumstances.

Mr. Leith then called and examined Rugubram Paul, who said that the sum of 9,847 Rs. is due to Ragonath Coondoo, Insolvent's father, from the late Brijmohun Coondoo and Company, of which firm the witness, the insolvent and one Govindchurn Soor were the partners. From the same firm the sum of 16,899 Rs. is due by balance of account to Mohunarah Doss of Burabazar, which account has not yet been settled, nor was the witness aware that so much had been really due. A cognovit had been signed by us, under the understanding that he would give us situations and set us up in business and even advance us 800 Rs. immediately after our signing the document. This witness further stated, that he knew Mr. Dolby, against whom an item appeared in their books to the amount of 1,300 Rs. The witness went on to depose, that the business of the firm was transacted by Ragonath Coondoo, through brokers. He made purchases also from the bazar on account of Roussac, Brothers and Co., and on all such occasions he was remunerated at the rate of 3 pice on every rupee, and this commission would be equally divided among us, each getting one pice on the rupee.

Mr. Tutton then represented, that it was evident that Ragonath was a partner, and his name as a creditor should be struck out. That he had borrowed sums of money without the prospect of restoring the same back, thus subjecting his creditors to a vexatious defence, and that therefore, by a certain clause in the Act, he should be remanded.

Mr. Leith, on the contrary, contended, that Ragonath Coondoo was not a partner. That at the time he borrowed, his employers were in circumstances which admitted of every chance of his being able to refund the money. He, therefore, could not have had any intention of demanding his creditors. And in regard to the clause cited by his learned friend, it did not bear on, and could not be applied to, the point at issue. On these grounds the Insolvent was entitled to a discharge.

The Court sided with Mr. Leith and the Insolvent was discharged accordingly.—Hurkaru, Jan. 13.

MISCELLANEA.

Calcutta.

TRIAL OF THE MADAGASCAR STEAMER.—The Steamer Madagascar left Cooley Bazar, on the 5th instant at 9 30 A. M., to try her powers under steam of Buntwan coals. The steamer met the flood at Budge Budge, and reached Fultich at 1-20 P. M., returning to Cooley Bazar at 4-35 P. M., a distance of 42 miles each way in 7 hours, making 84 miles or 12 miles per hour. The state of the vessel and engine reflects the greatest credit upon Capt. McDougall and the Engineers. Captain Johnson is perfectly satisfied with the Steamer's excellent performance. The consumption of Buntwan coals was half a ton per hour or 12 tons per diem, and this coal being only 50 per cent inferior to English coal, the consumption of the latter would be 8 tons per diem, at full speed.

THE GANGS AND THE MADAGASCAR.—The following changes, have taken, or are about shortly to take place. Captain Dyce, of the Ganges, to the Madagascar and Captain Russell, formerly of the Lord William Bentinck steamer, to the Ganges.

THE MADAGASCAR AND ENTERPRISE. It is rumored that the Madagascar and Enterprise, steamers, will be armed, provisioned and sent to China.

COMPANY'S ADVANCE.—The sum now remaining in the Company's advance, through the Export Warehouse, for the Commercial year 1839-40, is Rs. 6,66,600 lakhs, eleven thousand eight hundred and forty-four.

ROBBERIES.—About a hundred cases of robberies which have occurred in different parts of the country, have been reported during the month, and in several of the instances recorded, the robbers have been apprehended and brought to justice. In one instance, in Bickriganj, a large gang having entered the house of a native, ravaged several persons and carried off property to the amount of about four or five hundred rupees. Information was given to the darogah, by whom an enquiry was instituted, but without being able to trace the miscreants. However, through the assistance of a native, the darogah obtained information that in a village, about a day's journey, some of the gang were located. Accordingly, he communicated with the darogah of that village, and through their combined efforts, they captured not less than fifty dacoits from that and several neighbouring villages, who were duly forwarded to the Sudder station. They also discovered that the treasure of these robbers is one Bhoomi Podar, in whose house jewellery of different kinds was found, but no money in cash. The oracle of this gang is a female, and it is religious observance with them, before going in search of adventures, to assemble before an image of the goddess Kali. On these occasions, the gang form themselves into a circle, and in the centre this female prostrates herself and engages in the worship of the idol. In this attitude she continues generally for an hour or two, after which she suddenly rises and delivers the oracle favorable, or otherwise, as it may happen, by which the gang strictly abide. This gang has existed from a considerable time, plundering and ravaging the property of the surrounding villages. They have in this instance all been taken, together with their oracle.

Another band, consisting of about forty men, stormed the house of the late Netye Doss, of Ballal-ungu notoriety, at Chandernagore. They at first cruelly maltreated the widow of Netye Doss, to induce her to point out where she kept her valuables, but failing by ordinary means to produce the desired effect, they threatened to burn her to death, and were just about to put the threat into execution, by applying a high ed bundle of straw to one person, when she, no longer able to keep to her resolution, disclosed the secret. The freebooters then made themselves masters of all the property, to the amount of about 7,000 rupees, and escaped. Nothing has since been heard of them.

THE HUME CASE.—Another investigation of the case of rescue, or rather breach of prison, after two adjournments, took place on the 6th instant in the Great Hall, the result of which was that Messrs Hume and Gylla were held to bail, to appear before the Magistrate again, in one week.

This case was finally settled on the 11th instant. Lieutenant Gylla and Mr. Hume, after a very long conference with Mr. King, the jailer, appeared before the Magistrate, accompanied by the Deputy Sheriff Mr. Bathie, who handed the following amendé to the Magistrate, intimating that it had been received by the High Sheriff, whose wish it was the latter should not proceed further, if the Magistrate considered it to be a mere fable, and the ends of justice were served by the amendé. After a perusal of the interesting documents the Magistrate expressed his approval of the happy termination of the affair, which amounted by law to a non-prosecution, and would have subjected the defendants to a committal. He also said that he believed it was a fable on their part, but it was a very serious case, and a person might as well humble him, the worthy High Magistrate, out of his chair, and say it was only a joke. He, however, was glad the defendants were not subjected to greater punishment. The following is a true copy of the amendé—

TO THE HIGH SHERIFF OF CALCUTTA.

SIR,—The matter of an attempt on our part to release a prisoner from the Great Jail, having been brought to the notice of the Public Authorities, we beg most respectfully to state, that the prisoner's escape through the Jailer's, was never intended by us. What occurred was entirely from thoughtless misdirection on our part, for which we trust this public expression of our deep regret will be kindly deemed sufficient. We further take the liberty of placing at your disposal for the benefit of the poor debtors at present confined in the Great Jail, the sum of Company's rupees four hundred (Rs. 400) in order to mark our sense of the impropriety of which we have been guilty.

We have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servants,

(Sd) J. W. CHURCH.

„ E. KERR HUME.

January 11, 1840.

MISSRS JAMES YOUNG AND PRABSON.—Mr. James Young, and Mr. Prabson, the Assisted General, are on the point of going to England. The daily papers have justly lauded them as being useful and worthy members of Society, whose loss will long be felt by the community from which they are about to depart. Mr. Young will be long remembered with gratitude, by the very many individuals, who have been benefited by his generous assistance.

CHURCH MISSIONARY PRINTING ESTABLISHMENT.—The Members of the Church Missionary Society, finding their large printing establishment in Mission Row to be a losing concern, have determined to reduce and merely confine operations for the future, to the printing of their own reports and tracts. The surplus stock will be disposed of by public auction, and the press is to be removed to its original site—the Mirzapore Mission premises.

WIDOW'S COLLEGE.—Professor Malan, of the Bishop's College, is compelled by ill-health and continued indisposition, to proceed to England, his late voyage to the Cape not having produced the desired benefit. The duties of the College will now entirely devolve on Professor Withers and his new colleague—Professor Street. The number of students have of late been reduced, for out of twelve, three have withdrawn themselves, one has become a catechist in the Burdwan Mission Chapel, and another in Christ's Church, so that there are at present only seven students who live in the College.

MR. COCHRANE.—About forty Solicitors of the Supreme Court, wrote the following letter to Mr. Cochrane, on his resigning his situation of Company's Standing Counsel.

"DEAR SIR,—We learn with regret that you have resigned the appointment of Company's Standing Counsel, and that you have taken your departure from our shores.

Permit us, in saying farewell to one who has long rejoined amongst us, to offer a tribute of respect which we sincerely feel to be your due. We trust, that it may be some satisfaction to you to know, that in quitting this Presidency, you carry with you our cordial esteem, and our best and most earnest wishes for your future happiness and welfare. We are sure that we echo the sentiments of the whole profession, when we say that we consider that the Bar of Calcutta has sustained a loss in your departure, and that it has never numbered among its members a more zealous, independent and uncompromising advocate."

MR. VAUGHAN.—Mr. Richard Vaughan, who has lately returned from the Cape, on the 7th instant resumed charge of the offices of Record Keeper, Taxing Officer, Receiver of the Supreme Court, and Chief Clerk of the Insolvent Court.

MAJOR OURELY AND MR. DI COSTA.—Major Ourely and Mr. Di Costa, have been appointed respectively Persian Translator and Assistant Translator, to the Government of India in the Legislative Department. It is also said, that Government intend to appoint Bengallee translators, and further that the publication of a Government Gazette in the Bengallee language has been resolved upon.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION FOR CALCUTTA.—It is said that the Chief Magistrate has laid before Government a new plan of a municipal corporation for the city of Calcutta and Suburbs, and that it is likely to be better received than any previous plan of the kind which have been recommended.

THE MISSION SCHOOL AT BARASAT.—It was some time ago noticed, that the Mission School at Baraset, was suddenly deserted by almost all the boys, in consequence of the open and undisguised abjuration of Hindoos by one of the teachers attached to the Bengally department of the school. Most of the pupils having since returned, and are now receiving instruction under the superintendence of Baboo Callyconmor Ghose, an educated Hindoo convert. Another school has lately been established in the same district, with the evident, if not the avowed, object of supplanting the Christian Institution. It is supported by the wealthy inhabitants of the place, who uphold the notion that religious instruction is rather inimical than conducive to the happiness, both spiritual and temporal, of the pure Hindoos.

UNCONVANTED SERVICE PENSION FUND.—The total amount that has accrued to the credit of the Unconvanted Service Fanny Pension Fund, up to the 31st October 1839, is rupees 56,364 0 2 and the disbursements on account of establishment, pensions and contingencies from May 1837 to October 1839, amount to 8,595 10-9, leaving a surplus capital of 47,768-5-5. The monthly income of the institution is Rs 2,479 2 10, and the incumbents at this time only receive 497-10-8.

ACT PROHIBITING THE ERECTION OF THATCHED HOUSES.—It is stated, that the Court of Directors have expressed their disapprobation of the Act passed some time since, prohibiting the erection of mat and thatch houses in this city.

MR. CROW.—The Revenue Board have at last recommended that indeligaible gentleman, Mr. W. Crow, to be an additional Deputy Collector of Calcutta.

A CANNIBAL.—A cannibal lately appeared near Baloonkhal, who ate the flesh of a dead child, which was buried on the shore of the canal.

MR. THOMAS BRACKEN.—Mr. Thomas Bracken was, on the 15th instant, elected Secretary to the Bank of Bengal. A more qualified gentleman could not have been appointed to the situation.

THE WRECK OF THE EQUITABLE.—Another attempt was made on the 14th instant, to blow up the remainder of the wreck of the Equitable, but signally failed, though the voltaic battery was twice arranged for the purpose. Mr O'Shaughnessy had not the management on either occasion.

THE TAKER BAHOO.—This worthy gentleman, who is zemindar of Lakee, has constructed a high road for the transport of merchandise, forming the trunk communication between Tikee and Biraee, a distance of nearly thirty-five miles, at a personal expense of upwards of a lack of rupees. He has established a school, under European superintendence, for the gratuitous instruction of all classes, at an expense of nearly one-third the above mentioned sum; and intends to institute a Dispensary for the gratuitous distribution of medicines to the poor of the district, under the management of a qualified European. This will, no doubt, prove an invaluable blessing to the mass of tenantry for many miles round, and it is devoutly to be hoped, that the Government, which has not yet condescended to acknowledge the meritorious exertions of the Bahoo, will not hesitate to grant to him every facility in his laudable undertaking.

CRICKET.—The first match was played between the Dum Dum and Barrackpore Clubs on the 4th instant, and was won by the Barrackporeans, with four wickets to go down.

The Return-match between the Cameronians and the Alipore Club, was played on the 9th instant on the Calcutta ground, when the Alipore Club were again victorious. The Cameronians were in first and made 58 in their first innings and 120 in the second. Alipore scored only 67 in the first innings, and when they went in for the second, the odds were considerably against them, as they had to make 139 runs to win. Captain Hollings, however, made more than a third of the required number himself, and the Aliporeans ultimately won the match with two wickets to go down.

MRS. SINAE'S CONCERT.—The concert given by Mrs. Sinæe at the Trades' Hall, on the 14th instant, was very successful.

THE EDITOR OF THE BHASKUR.—The writ of habeas corpus, in the case of the Editor of the Bhaskur, was served on Raja Rajnarain Roy on the 14th instant, at Mr. Higgins's office. In the meanwhile, the unfortunate Editor has, it is said, been removed from Andool to a place three miles distant therefrom.

UNCOVENANTED APPOINTMENTS.—The appointments of Principal Assistant to the Commissioner and Agent to the Governor General, in the Nerbudda Territories, are to be thrown open to Uncovenanted Servants, or to the European public. The salary of these employees is to be 600 rupees per mensem, including 100 rupees for establishment.

WAR WITH CHINA.—Lord Auckland is coming down to Calcutta immediately, and may be expected within a few days. Mr. Robertson has proceeded to take the superintendence of the N. W. Provinces, and Mr. H. F. Prinsep, in consequence, has come into Council. These arrangements result from the intention on the part of the Local Government, under instructions from home, to strike an immediate and decisive blow in China, for which purpose seven regiments are to be forthwith despatched to China, which force is to be co-operated with by seven ships of war, which were to be forwarded from England to the same destination.

JAMES YOUNG, Esq.—Several of the most respectable members of the native community, have addressed a highly flattering letter to Jas. Young, Esq., on the even of his retiring from this country.

MR. HAMPTON.—The appointment of Calcutta Agent to the Agra Bank has been conferred on Mr. Hampton who was lately a candidate for the Deputy-Secretaryship of the Bank of Bengal.

THE PATSHALA.—The new Hindu Patshala attached to the Hindu College, and established wholly by subscription amongst the managers of the College and other native gentlemen, was opened on the 18th instant, in the presence of Sir Edward Ryan and a number of other distinguished personages, Native and European. The ceremony commenced at precisely 11 A. M., and, as was expected, the attendance of the public was very numerous. This new institution is established exclusively for the education of Hindu boys in the vernacular tongue. The professors attached to it, delivered addresses in the Bengally language, which was quite a novelty, as nothing of the sort had ever before been publicly attempted here.

MR. D. C. SMYTH.—Mr. David Carmichael Smyth, has been appointed a Provisional Member of Council, but, for the present, he will perform the duty of a Judge at the Sadler Dwanees Adawlut, in the room of Mr. Braden, who has retired from the service.

CONSTRUCTION OF A CANAL FROM BARDWAN TO CULNA.—The indefatigable Collector of Bardwan, now proposes to construct a canal, which will extend from Bardwan to Culna, a distance of nearly thirty-six Bengally kos.

LADIES' SOCIETY'S SCHOOLS.—The annual Examination of the Ladies' Society's Schools for Native Female Education, took place on the 16th instant, at the Central School, Cornwallis Square. There were about five hundred pupils present, and the improvement developed by these poor native girls, was truly gratifying.

THE DEMAND FOR FREIGHT PER JELLINGHER.—The demand for freight per Jellingher, in tow of the Lord William Bentinck iron steamer, to start for Allahabad on the 20th, was ten times the amount of tonnage available; but, in consequence of an arrangement among the merchants, no sale by auction took place.

CIVIL SERVICE ANNUITY FUND.—At a meeting of the Committee of management of the Annuity Fund, held on the 18th instant, at the Town Hall, Mr. H. V. Bayly was elected Secretary, on the resignation of Mr. J. P. Grant.

VOLUNTEER REGIMENT.—It is said that the 4th native infantry volunteered to a man for the China expedition. When the requisition for the required number was explained to them, and the order given for all who acceded to it to recover arms and come to the front, the whole corps stepped forward.

LOSS OF THE LADY WALLACE.—The following paragraph from the Ceylon Herald, mentions the loss of the Lady Wallace, of this port:—

"A private letter received from Tutucoreen yesterday, by a respectable mercantile house here, brought intelligence of the loss of the Lady Wallace, on a reef of rocks, off Vinnapulle, a small village 50 miles to the S. W. of Tutucoreen. She was bound to Bombay, on her first voyage. This vessel was built, we believe, at Calcutta, under the superintendence of her intrepid Commander, Capt. Wallace, and was allowed by all competent judges, to be a beautiful model of a ship."

NEW SCHOOL AT BARDWAN.—An application to the Committee of Public Instruction, to aid the funds of the school established at Bardwan, having proved ineffectual, the inhabitants, by whom the school had been established, have determined to support it themselves. They have opened a subscription for building a house for the school, as also for defraying the expenses for conducting the same. Baboo Pawanbunder had put himself down for 500 rupees, and his three sons 140 rupees each. The Judge of Bardwan, Mr. Goldsbury, the Principal Sadler Ameen, Baboo Doorgannul Ray and Moulvies Abdul Majid, and the Sadler Ameen, Joygopal Baboo, have all promised to aid this useful institution.

SURVEY OF THE TEESTA.—Captain Ross, of the H. C. S. Experiment, has started dak for Titlaya, with orders to survey a branch of the Teesta, and to run from Julpighorree into the Jannae at Chitinary, and to have there, 3 feet water at all seasons. If this is the case, a steamer may be run to within a few miles of the hills.

IMPORTATION OF BRITISH MANUFACTURES TO AFGHANISTAN.—The commercial effects of our successes in Afghanistan are already beginning to be felt in Calcutta. An Afghan merchant, with a tolerable retinue of Cambooles, has just arrived in Calcutta, bearing a passport from Shah Soojah, and cash or credit to a considerable extent, for investment in articles of British manufacture. The merchant left his camels at Benares, finding it easier to transport his purchases thither by steam or boat than by caravan. It is understood that Russia, with her vile hand ware, trumpery crockery and glass, coarse cloth, and inferior stationery, has hitherto had exclusive possession of the Calcut market and it was not until the arrival of our troops that the Afghans knew that any better wares were procurable.

VESSELS FOR CHINA.—It is said, that Government have engaged seven vessels for the Chinese war, at the rate of ten pounds per ton.

MILITARY ITEMS.—Lieutenant Haslewood, of the European Regiment, who was severely wounded at Ghuznee, has been appointed Aide de Camp to the Governor-General.

MR. PALIOLOGUS'S CASE.—Mr. Ma hew Johnstone, Deputy Collector of Calcutta, had been instructed by Mr. Commissioner Dampier, to take the case of Mr. N. Paliologus, an Attorney of the Supreme Court, before the Chief Magistrate, for taking and detaining some bills for ground-rent, which are due against him. That officer called on the Chief Magistrate yesterday, and after representing the circumstance of the case, begged his interference. Mr. Johnstone added, that Mr. Paliologus promised to attend at the Police and explain himself, but has not done so. The Chief Magistrate said, that he was sorry that it was not in his province to interfere in a case of that description, as he did not think it was cognizable at the Police, not being a criminal offence. Mr. Johnstone said, that this precedent put the Revenue Officers to a great deal of inconvenience and annoyance, and that Mr. Sandes, an Attorney, had likewise taken advantage of it, and acted in like manner. The Chief Magistrate confessed, that Mr. Paliologus acted very improperly, but repeated, that he could not assist Mr. Johnstone, for if he did issue sommons for his appearance and fine Mr. Palilogus. He would subject himself to be fined by the Supreme Court, he therefore recommended Mr. Johnstone to institute summary proceedings against Mr. Palilogus in the Civil Court at the 24th instant. This very case was tried before Mr. Patton, and it was dismissed, in consequence of Mr. Palilogus disputing jurisdiction.

BABOO RAMMOHUN MULLICK.—Mr. Johnstone represented also the illegal conduct of Baboo Rammoahun Mullick, who had hired several ruffians to drag people from the Government Bazaar at Simlah, under his (Mr. Johnstone's) charge, to his own bazar, which is contiguous to it. He furthermore advised that those men had yesterday attacked Baboo Saichundee Choudhri, his assistant, who is superintendent of the bazaar, and were very nearly maltreating him, and would have done so if he had not retreated in time to a neighbouring house, for protection. These men, he said, had even pursued him as far as the door of the house. The defendants were captured by the Police, and are in custody now. He begged the magistrate would send a couple of Police people to prevent further breaches of the peace being committed. The Chief Magistrate declined doing so, and recommended the complainant to be laid before the magistrate of the division.

MEDICAL COLLEGE.—Baboo Ram Gopal Ghose, an ex-student of the Hindoo College, has presented a list of surgical instruments, worth about five hundred rupees, to the Medical College, to be given to the most deserving of the passed students. An examination will, in consequence, shortly take place, which will decide the merits to all the candidates for the prize. Dr. Egerton has also presented the College with fifty rupees, to be awarded to the student who will produce the best essay on the dislocation of the hip-joint.

FIRE.—Several fires have occurred during the month, but the damage done by them is very trifling. Previous to the enforcement of the salutary non-match permitting regulation, which the Council of Directors have disapproved, the losses sustained by fires at this season of the year, were to a very extensive amount. The wisdom of not permitting the erection, in a densely populated town, of houses constructed of match as inflammable as tinder is self-evident, and we hope, therefore, that the enactment impugned by the Directors, will not be abrogated.

THE BALLYAGHAT CANAL.—The canal authorities are now engaged in sinking the whole of the Ballyaghat Canal banks, to prevent their tumbling in.

EMBARCATION OF INVALIDS.—The allotment and embarkation of invalids, have been proceeding with great vigor and activity under the superintendence of Major Halliday. On the 16th instant, one hundred and one were embarked in the Lord Louther, under the command of Captain Gibbons, R. M.'s 49th and Lieutenant Handfield, of H. M.'s 3d Buils. On the 17th fifty men, women and children of the Cameromans were put on board the Madagascar, under charge of Captain Hammet, of H. M.'s 9th Foot. On the 20th the Lord of Hardwicke, sailed with fifty invalids under Lieutenant Wallace, of H. M.'s 16th Foot. On the 22d, seventy-one discharged men embarked in the Lord Hungerford under charge of Captain McGhee and Lieutenant Du Bourdieu, of H. M.'s 31st Foot. The Scotia takes invalids under the command of Lieutenant Codd, of H. M.'s 3d Dragoons.

ANGLO-SAXON CONTROVERSY.—During the month a controversy has been carried on between a writer in the Englishman under the nom Je gueris de Cedric, and the Hikaru, and one of its correspondents, under the name of Gurth. Not being Saxon scholars, we cannot pretend to decide which party has the best of the controversy, but if the development of anger, and vituperation on the part of any one, be a sign of discomfiture, Cedric, has been most completely beaten.

MURDER.—Jutta Shuk, has been committed to take his trial, for having, in the twenty-four Purgunnahs, cruelly butchered his mistress, who was in a state of pregnancy at the time. The wretch, who had seduced the woman from her husband, after killing her, cut her corpse to pieces, and then tried to kill the mother of the deceased, but failed in doing so.

THE NAGDAH INDIGO CONCERN.—The Nagdah indigo concern was put up for sale by auction on the 20th instant, and fetched twenty five thousand five hundred rupees.

MAJOR GENERAL RAMSAY.—On the morning of the 20th instant, Major General Ramsay and family embarked on board the Maldstone, under the usual salute from the fort, and with the good wishes of all the General's friends in this land. Immediately upon the party arriving on board, the Maldstone was taken in tow and proceeded down the river.

HALF-DENIAL A STATEMENT.—Government have resolved, to give retrospective effect to the order for the half-cental assessment of resumed Lacknao Lands, the holders of which have consented and paid up the prescribed assessment, but this measure is to have retrospective effect only up to the date of the enactment of Reg. III. of 182d.

SHIP BRASAAD.—The ship Brasaad, of nearly 500 tons burthen, was put up to sale by public auction at the Exchange Sale Rooms on the 21st instant, and was bought in for fifty five thousand and five hundred rupees.

THE NEW STRAND ROAD.—Coolies are again at work on the site of the to be new Strand Road, hundreds of them are busily employed to a right in the morning till five in the evening every day. Two years more will complete the work, for which Government have sanctioned a grant of 20,000 rupees.

ROAD FROM BARASAT TO TAKEE.—Baboons Collynauth and Boykontonauth Roy, Chowdhie, have resolved to repair the road, which they had some time ago caused to be constructed from Baraset to Takee, at their own expense.

CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY'S SCHOOLS.—The Committee of the Church Missionary Society have come to the determination of abolishing the Bengally Schools, which they have, from time to time, established in the large and populous district of Burdwan, because the object for which they had been set on foot, has been fulfilled.

VAGRANCY.—Mr. Lawrence Witham, formerly an Attorney in the Supreme Court, was, on the 21st instant, taken up and charged with vagrancy and insanity by Mr. McCann, the Deputy Superintendent of Police. Mr. McCann stated, that for the last two months he has seen the defendant wandering about the streets of Calcutta, and from enquiries made by the Police, it appears he has no fixed place of abode. He has been three times confined in the Town Gaol, twice for assault, and the third time on the supposition that he was insane, he has latterly been seen early and late in the streets sometimes in almost a state of nudity, and at others dressed in the trappings of a Merry Andrew. The haggard looks and threadbare jacket and trousers of the delinquent, the only clothes he had on, confirmed the first charge, and his wild, vacant stare developed the second. When interrogated by the Magistrate, as to what he had to say for himself, he replied with the greatest sang froid, that he was on a voyage round the world. The Chief Magistrate ordered the delinquent to be taken to the Police Hospital.

THE WOUNDING CASE.—The darogah of Calceghat reported to the Magistrate of the Twenty-four Purgunnahs, that he proceeded to investigate the case of wounding at Russa, when Prince Warrwooden, the defendant, directed his servants to maltreat him. The darogah having deposed to the facts, a summons was issued, requiring Prince Warrisoodeen's personal attendance at the Court, to answer to the charge of contempt of the Police authorities, and a Perwannah sent to Mr. Overseer Floyd, and the darogah, to proceed in the investigation above alluded to.

DAILY TRANSLATOR.—Mr. John Marshman, of Serampore, has been appointed, to translate it to Bengally the Acts passed by Government for the province of Bengal. It is the general opinion that Government could not have made a better selection.

THE COLOMBIAN CANAL.—Somelivice gates are to be made in the Oudah Bariah Canal, which will, no doubt, be very acceptable to the people of that part of the country.

THE GOVERNOR GENERAL.—A letter received from Gwalior, dated 21st December, states, that the contingent was in progress to Dilepore on the Chumbul, with the Maharajah's troops, to meet Lord Auckland. The Maharaj has about 40,000 men, and 100 guns to accompany him, exclusive of the contingent. It was expected that the contingent would have to escort his Lordship back to Calpee, which would keep it out a month or two longer. Lord Auckland was expected at Allahabad on the 3d proximo, and may be in Calcutta about the 10th.

THE PATSHALA.—The boys already admitted to this new institution, exceed four hundred and fifty, and there are applications for the admittance of about 300 more.

It is stated that the Patshala is crammed, and that there is hardly any room for more boys, so that it will soon become indispensably necessary to erect additional buildings.

SECURE FORCE.—The arrangements making on the other side of India for the establishing a force permanently in Sindh, are likely to create some embarrassment should troops be required in any other quarter of the Bombay presidency for occasional dispatch to Persia or Aken. One European regiment, four Native regiments, one troop of Horse Artillery, one Company of Foot Artillery and a militia of horse, are to be permanently stationed at or near Hyderabad, to keep the Ameers in order, secure the navigation of the Indus, and be ready for any movement into Afghanistan.

POST OFFICE.—From the 1st instant commenced the despatch of two mails daily from the Calcutta Post Office, the one to start at noon day and the other at five o'clock in the evening. The despatches by the first mail, will reach their destination nine hours earlier than they did by the former Post Office arrangements.

CIVIL SERVANTS' ABSENCE ALLOWANCE.—The Court of Directors have ordered, that the Service here, in like manner as that of Madras, shall have the benefit of the arrears of annual monthly absence from their offices or stations without deduction of salaries.

CAPT. OSBORNE.—On dit, Captain Osborne, Military Secretary to the Governor-General, with a military and our highly creditable to him, will join her Majesty's 26th Regiment when it embarks for China.

FIRES.—There have been several fires this month also in the suburbs of Calcutta, where the salutary nonchance but erecting enactment is not in force; and although all the engines were quickly concentrated in the locality of, and set to work on, the conflagrations, the damage done by them has not been trifling. In the densely populated portions of the town—Jain bazaar, Totollah, &c., which have hitherto been notorious for fires of a most devastating magnitude, the substitution of tiled houses for thatched ones, has prevented the occurrence of fires this season. The law directing the erection of none but tiled huts, we think, should, therefore, be vigorously enforced instead of being abrogated or suffered to become a dead letter. If, however, the law is annulled, restitution should be made to those, who were led by it, to subscribe to the fund intended to assist the poorer classes in erecting tiled instead of thatched huts.

A most serious accident happened to the ship Medice on the 26th ultimo, which might have terminated in the entire destruction of the vessel. The Medice was lying off Backshall, laden chock-block, even in the between decks, with a cargo, consisting chiefly of rice which was destined for the Mauritius. On the morning of the 26th at 4 o'clock, it was discovered, that the vessel was on fire, the flames at the time rising so high from the fore-hatchway as to be seen by Mr. Perry of the river police, at some distance in the stream. The alarm was instantly given to the officers, who, on proceeding to examine into the cause and extent of the fire, found that it had been occasioned by the lead at the bottom of the cabins having melted away during the night, leaving the boards bare, which communicating with the live coals, soon ignited, and a portion of the decks being already burnt through, the flames had passed on to the bags of rice and the sails, which were stowed away in that part of the between decks. Several expellents having been tried without success, to arrest the progress of the devouring element, a very effectual plan was at length resorted to. The main and fore hatches were first of all closed down to condense the air below, and prevent the flames from spreading. The crew were then set to break up the fore-part of the main deck, which being done, the burning goods were laid open and no time was lost in inundating the place with buckets of water, which in a short time effectually extinguished every spark of fire. The whole occupied nearly two hours, and at six o'clock all anxiety for the safety of the vessel subsided. The Medice was all ready for sea, but this unfortunate accident will detain her here for a few days, not only to allow time for the repairs now necessary, but to reload also, as a great part of the cargo has been wet and damaged by the pouring in of the water.

NARRATIVE OF THE OPERATIONS IN AFGHANISTAN, &c.—Major Hough is about to publish a "Narrative of the March and Operations of the Army of the Indus," from the time it left India until it reached Cabul.

MR. LINTON'S CONCERTS.—Mr. Linton purposes to give two concerts of sacred music during Lent, under the patronage of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief and Lady Nicolls. Nothing is wanting to secure the favorite veteran success, except such another injudicious opposition as he met with on the occasion of his last oratorio.

CAPTAIN SIR H. GORDON BREMER.—Captain Sir H. Gordon Bremer, Knt., C.B.K.C.H., of H.M. ship Alligator, arrived at Madras, from Penang, on the 17th instant, and assumed the command, as Commodore and Commander-in-Chief of the Eastern India Station.

THE HOOGLY COLLEGE.—The committee of Public Instruction has purchased the house which formerly belonged to General Peron at Chinsurah and subsequently to Baboo Prawu Kissen Hiddar, for the use of the Hoogly College, which removed to it about a month ago. The sum paid for the house is said to be 22,000 rupees, which, considering the extent of the edifice and the expense incurred in the building thereof, is allowed by all parties to be a remarkably cheap bargain.

NOTES TO MAGISTRATES' PEPYS.—In compliance with the prayer made to the Government by the Landholders' Society, the talabandhs or fees to the peons of Muzaffar Magistrate, on purwanahs issued on behalf of the Government, is now abolished by the circular letter from the Sudder Nazamut Alawlut. In pursuance whereof, Mr. J. H. Patton, the Magistrate of the 24 Perganahs, has circulated a general notice to Rajah Kalikrishna Bahadur, and other Zemindars of his district, to acquaint them with that order.

MR. DRUMMOND'S PAPER.—The Examiner and Literary Register, edited by Mr. David Drummond, who is proprietor of the Durrumollah Academy, the largest and best seminary of its day, is to make its appearance shortly. It promises well and is reported to have five hundred subscribers already.

BLOWING UP OF THE EQUITABLE.—Captain Fitzgerald and his Assistant Engineers, were quite successful in blowing up the remaining portion of the wreck of the Equitable on the 28th ultimo. As soon as the flat, with Col McLeod, and the party he had invited, arrived on the spot, the preparations commenced. On the first signal gun being fired from the Despatch, the conducting wires were duly arranged, and attached to the barrel of powder. A second gun announced that the barrel was lowered from the bows of the Vulcan, A. V., and placed underneath the fore-part of the wreck. The devoted dinghy, in which was the battery, was then brought up to within fifty yards of the wreck, the wires were affixed to the battery, the port fires lighted—away went the Vulcan, hauleahs, and row boats saure quepen—four and a half minutes elapsed—and a loud, stunning report was instantly followed by the rise of a magnificent column of water, or rather as it seemed of a gigantic fountain of frosted silver, to the height of about one hundred and fifty feet. Descending, as the water caught the sun rays, its varying hues were most lovely. This was instantly succeeded by the eruption of the wreck and the dirty water near it,—the waves heaved and heaved, but the dinghy rode triumphant after all. Fragments of deck and spars, cakes of tallow, beef and pork, candles, and dead porpoises, were then seen to float in most admired confusion on the sub-sided waters, to which rushed dingies and row-boats, and fishing boats, picking up what they could. Capt. Fitzgerald was received by the party on the flat with three most hearty and congratulating cheers.

GYANANANYANA—A book under the above title, lately been written and published in the Bengally language, by Bahadur Gauri Kant Bhattacharjee, a native gentleman of Allah Jessor, who is at present employed as Sheristadar under the sah Ayem at Lumlook. The author is a man deeply learnt in Oriental Literature and philosophy, which is amply testified by the work in question; he is also a man of extensive observation.

MEDICAL COLLEGE.—One of the sons of Mr. M. Z. Shroff, is admitted as a student in the Medical College. We mention this, as it is the first instance of any member of the Armenian community embracing the advantages of this useful institution.

SANKOONTOLA. An edition in the Bengally character of that famous Sanscrit Drama, Sankoontola, from the pen of the celebrated Collis Dutt, has lately been printed and published under the superintendence of Purno-chand Nyaobagin, one of the professors of the Sanscrit College.

THE TEN THOUSAND.—Mr. J. Rozario, Interpreter of the Court of Requests, got the prize in the Lottery, of ten thousand rupees.

DOCKYARD.—On dit that Government have it in contemplation to establish a dock yard at Calcutta, for the purpose of building and repairing their own ships. Mr Simpson, the Marine surveyor, has already reported upon the subject.

THE GREAT GUN OF BHURTHOPE.—The great gun, which was captured at Bhurthope, was on the 29th ult., conveyed from Fort William to Dum Dum, and was on the 30th set up on a platform of masonry erected for the purpose at that station, where it is now in readiness to fulminate its thunders whenever needed.

IRON STEAMERS FOR THE NILE.—Mr. Waghorn's prospectus for two iron steam tugs for the Nile, has been published during the month. To carry the scheme into execution, Mr. Waghorn asks to be supplied with a thousand pounds from each Presidency Committee, and engages to procure the rest himself. Mr. Waghorn's is a most desirable plan, and we hope it may be rapidly carried into effect.

BENGAL CIVIL FUND.—At the half yearly Meeting of the Bengal Civil Fund, held on the 31st ultimo, after the proceedings with respect to the surplus of 25,000 rupees were read, the following resolutions were proposed and carried unanimously.

1st.—That the proceedings are highly satisfactory and that they be approved.

2nd.—That it will be for the benefit of the Fund to rescind Rule — in — and to levy the surplus of 25,000 rupees from married and widower subscribers, having an interest in the fund.

3rd.—That the managers give due notice under article XII that the rule will be considered at the next July meeting. Nine families were admitted to the benefit of the Fund.

4th.—The proceedings connected with bringing up the books were read and highly approved.

5th.—The half yearly statement of the Fund was laid before the Meeting, and gave general satisfaction. It was proposed and carried unanimously.

6th.—That the meeting accept with thanks the offer made by the Annany Fund at their last meeting of a secretary.

7th.—That the thanks of the meeting be voted to the old managers, who are requested to continue their services.

8th.—That the thanks of the Meeting be given to the secretary for his valuable services.

Mosussil,

It is reported that Government have it in contemplation to establish an Assay Office for the North-Western Provinces, at Agra, where every description of worn coin and bullion, will be received in exchange for new Government coin. Great relief will be afforded to the Mercantile and Banking community by the proposed measure, then transactions being now greatly impeded by constant disagreements arising from the circulation of "mullet" or light-weight rupees.

AGRA.—The secretaryship of the Agra College, has devolved on Mr. M. Wollaston, vice Dr. Duncan.

The long-pending dispute between the Rajahs of Bhurthope and Ulwar, regarding a stream of water rising in the Ulwar hills, has been settled by arbitration.

Native States,

SCINDE.—The following are extracts of letters from Scinde, received via Bombay.

MIRANPORE.—Nov. 26 1839. "We arrived here this morning, having made four marches from Kairudo, via. over the desert to Kojain 34 miles and three miles 35, total 69 miles in four days. At Korndo cholera broke out and we have lost 15 Europeans in the leading Division, and several in the rear Division, and are still having casualties,—6 already to-day. God grant it may leave us. We halt to-morrow under the impression that our prospects are improving, and because that with so many so seriously ill, as the convalescents that have survived cholera must be, the injury to them would overbalance the good of keeping moving, but with cholera in our Camp, we shall not remain beyond 48 hours on the ground. The country since we crossed the desert has been a perfect level—round the few villages in high cultivation, Jowarry, &c., and I am truly glad to see the effects of John Company's ruses, in the old-canal, that have not been opened apparently for at least 20 years, being in the process of being deepened and cleaned, so as to prepare for next year's inundation, and to extend cultivation to districts now utterly waste. The approach to Sukkarpoie is through a jungle of tamarisks, the town itself is surrounded with date and forest trees, and seems as prettily situated for fever, as any place I ever saw in my life. It is a modern town of great extent, without any relic of antiquity whatever, and no good buildings, contemptible mud walls and all the houses of mud. The supposed population amounts 50,000—chiefly supported by the Hindoo merchants, who make this place and Ballah the two grand emporia for the trade of Central Asia and the Punjab. Mr Bell has built a queer looking place for the Political Agent's dwelling, and has fixed, in as far as my first view of it can enable me to judge, on the worst site, in a most unhealthy neighbourhood. The 22d Regiment arrived at Sukkur, and immediately sent a wing to relieve the Grenadiers here, which arrived yesterday, and the Grenadiers under Highbottom, are gone to join Billamore at Poolajee, sending 30 camel loads of sick to Sukkur. The 22d left 200 sick behind on quitting India, and their weekly report of the 23d gives strength 381, sick 58. The wing arrived here, consists of 170 firelocks! The accounts received of the 23d at Patta, are most lamentable. The tribe of Belooches Billamore is now employed against at Poolajee, is reputed to have secured booty from our parties to the amount of some lakhs. We yesterday morning met and passed Lieutenant Martindale's party of Skinner's Horse, en route from Ferozepore to join Mr. Bell 100 of Captain Ward's horse from Lower Scinde, under Lieutenant Clarke, had joined him a few days ago, and with Keith Elstons' will fully equal all demands likely to be made now by these bold yagabonds, who have had their own way the year past. The destruction of their Ringleader at Khetlat, will have a good effect when properly known. Nothing could be more unfortunate than General Willshire's having no cavalry. Had he taken the whole Army with him, instead of sending us down the Bolan pass, he might have saved half the lives he lost on his own side, and destroyed three as many of the enemy; and slaughtering Belooches is, in my opinion, doing good service—they are the very scum of the creation, and ought to be hunted down as vultures were. Forty years of anarchy has made them mere beasts of prey, and it will require a bloody lesson to teach them submission to laws."

POOLAJEE NOV. 20, 1839.—"Amiel's affair was very short; the Belooch Irregulars, about 60 in number, most manfully chased some 6 or 7 sent on as decoy, but on coming in sight of the main body of about 100, immediately turned and fled, without drawing a sword, losing about 25 killed and 5 wounded. All the dead and wounded met their fate, by good arrows like slashes on the back, the Belooches slapping heavy swords give most tremendous wounds. The rule with these cowardly rascals seems to be, a hot chase, when they have decided which side is to run, which seems to be very soon settled. The only exceptions were two Bengal Sowars, who came in wounded in front like true men. Fagan's troop, poor fellows were lighted of 6 camels and all their kit the morning they joined us. Fagan's fit came in safe; they were after them sharply, but they got away safe, through some pass, into the hills. We have marked down and reconnoitered two of these passes, but they must have others we know not of, and whilst we were watching these two holes, they slipped in by a third. We are in hopes of moving into the hills to-morrow, unless prevented by the Politicals. Weather very pleasant and seems to agree well with the Sepoys, their being only three men in hospital out of the whole Force of about 500. However the excitement must do much to keep them in health. All our heavy stores were left behind at Sukkur, and I have no idea when we shall return. Infantry, as of little use here. Irregular horse is the only description of force that could ever come up with those mountain knaves—they only laugh at us and gallop away."

It is said, that the Bombay Troops, under the command of Major General Willshire, have been directed to return, with all convenient expedition, to Bombay, with the exception of Her Majesty's 17th Foot, which Regiment is to be cantoned at Sukkur, on the right bank of the Indus.

The Fort of Bukkur has been restored, by order of our Government, to Meer Rustum Khan, of Khyrpoor.

No less than 40 of our wounded soldiers at Khetlat have died, intense cold having caused their wounds to mortify.

MOVING.—Major General Thackerell's column of the Army of the Indus, marched into Ferozepore on the morning of the 1st instant. Sir John Keane's reached the right of the Sutledge, from Lahore, the same morning.

The most absurd reports prevailed in both camps, in consequence of sundry letters having been received from Captain Nuthall, warning Sir John that a plot had been laid at Lahore to kill both him and the stub long and carry off, dead or alive, Prince Hyder Khan!

The Prince was safe and sound, with General Thackerell's column on the evening of 20th ultimum, but it would appear that Major McSherry, in political charge of the Prince, had, to a certain extent, credited these reports, for on that day he had doubled the sentries over Hyder, and kept the whole of the European guard constantly alert!

Government have decided that the State Prisoner, Prince Hyder Khan, shall reside at Allahabad. Lieutenant Kaye, at present employed in the Deputy Assistant General's Office is to receive charge of the Prince from Major McSherry, on the arrival of the two columns of the Indus Army at Ferozepore.

The other State Prisoner, Hijjee Khan Kakkur, will be allowed to reside in India, in which ever part he pleases.

LARKHANA. Advices have been received from the Army at Larkhana to the 25th December, at which date they were all well. General Willshire and Staff, with H. M. 17th, were to march for Sukkur on the 27th, a distance of 4 marches, and the Queen's and H. M. 4th Dragoons were to proceed to a bivouac on the banks of the Indus, but it is said they would remain until they received the orders from Bombay as to the arrangements for their conveyance from Kurrachee.

KHETLAT.—It is said, that an individual at Khetlat offered to conduct General Willshire to a place where jewels and other valuable property was concealed, on condition of receiving as a consideration twenty per cent. of the amount. The offer was accepted, and the jewels, valued at about 4 lacs of rupees, have been added to the prize money.

Intelligence of the 9th ultimo, from Khelat, intimates, that the new Chief Shah Nowroz, had arrived and was received with the honours due to his rank. It is said, he is likely to become a great favourite with all classes.

The presence of a British Officer will be absolutely necessary for some time, in order to advise and support him. His attention has been directed to the copper currency in circulation, which is fluctuating in value; and the alterations which have been made by him are satisfactory to all the inhabitants. The new coin is of 32 "tukkas" or 64 pice to the rupee—equal to those of Shikarpore, and bears a good inscription.

The 3rd Bengal N. I. will remain for some little time at Khelat; affairs are going on well, the Shah is popular, and the chiefs are coming in to tender their allegiance.

PESHAWUR.—Private letters from Peshawur state, that Mr. Macnaghten and suit, with the Brigade under Brigadier Sale, C. B., escorting treasure to the amount of 18 lacs of rupees, reached Jullahad on the morning of the 21st December, without having experienced any annoyance from the Khyberies, in their passage through the Kyber Pass.

Much to the surprise of all in camp, Major Griffith, of the 37th Regt. N. I., rode quietly into camp, just as the corps had been dismissed, and assumed command of the regiment. The Major had made the journey from Candahar in 25 days, and appeared a great deal fatigued.

JODPORE.—It appears that Colonel Sutherland found it necessary to have an interview with Maun Singh, which his Rajahship nearly brought to close in a very unsatisfactory manner, by peremptorily refusing to consent to almost all the terms he had at first promised to abide by. The consequence was, that Colonel Sutherland left the Durbar and returned to his tents, where he was soon after followed by the wily old Rajah, who now began to think that he had gone too far this time. The Colonel disgusted at the Raja's behaviour, at first refused to admit his vacillating Highness, but the soft speeches of the old Rhatore mollified the gallant Colonel, who once more returned to the Durbar tent. Subsequently, however, he left Jodhpore, after a fruitless negotiation of some months.

HERAT.—Letters from Herat to the 2nd November, confirm the accounts received from Persia, as to the conciliatory disposition towards England of the Emperor, and state that Mahomed Shah was most anxious to be friends with the English again on any terms. It is said he had recalled the British Embassy, and was about to dispatch his Minister for Foreign affairs to England. The Government in Persia is represented as totally disorganised, the treasury empty, and H. M. the Shah, obliged to remain in his palace for fear of his troops, who had long been without pay, while the Governors of the provinces looked only to number one. The Vizier at Herat has received a letter from Dost Mahomed, urging him to get up a religious war to expel the English from Afghanistan, and stating that the gate of Ghuzni had been sold, or it never could have been taken. The Vizier had done all he could to prevail on the chief of Meshet, and other neighbouring chiefs, to come and take possession of Herat. The former declined his offers and advised the Vizier to take care of what he was about, else the English would get hold of him, and the other chiefs, looking on the Vizier's proposals as a trap to catch them, begged to be excused. Prince, Kamran had shown more energy latterly, and had been out riding with one of the Mission, to whom he complained of his being a mere puppet in the hands of the Vizier, that his orders were disobeyed, and that not a horseman or follower accompanied him, whilst the Vizier had two thousand.

NOOKI NA.—A correspondent writes thus:—"The insults offered to Colonel Stoddart should be resented, and as we shall have probably some matters to settle at Herat, a visit to Bokhara will be not be much out of our way. There is not, indeed, much likelihood of our establishing any friendly relations with the haughty Onzbeks, and carrying onr present policy to the hanks of the Oxus, but some submission to their ill treatment of our Ambassador is, of all means, the least likely to lead to these ends.

"Dost Mahomed left Khoolum on the 22nd of last month, with a retinue of 500 men, en route to Bokhara. At Bamecan the thermometer at sunrise is 41 below zero, and a good many natives have died from the severe cold. Our mission appears to be getting on badly at Herat, in fact letters mention that Toddi is all but a prisoner and that the Minister is entirely in the Persian interest. The King of Kooniah, as well as the chief of Bezour, have come in to the Shah, and as we are now all in the winter quarters at Jullahad, the campaign of 1839 may be said to have terminated, but numerous are the reports and various the conjectures of what is likely to ensue next spring. The politicals are very anxious that a force should proceed to Bokhara, when the passes of the Hindoo Kooch are open, to avenge the insult offered to Colonel Stoddart, who is still detained in the most unjustifiable manner, a prisoner in that city.

Colonel Stoddart was directed to proceed to Bokhara, by the order of Government, to form a commercial treaty with the chief of that country, and he has been exposed in the public bazar, for the bigoted Mahomedans to spit upon has twice been threatened with death, and has had his grave dug for him. The invasion of that country I consider by no means difficult, and a force of 5,000 men might level with the dust the pride of the holy Bokhara."

Other accounts from Bokhara have been received, which state that Col. Stoddart was at liberty, and employed in raising a troop of artillery for the Ameer, who declares a Russian invasion. All the statements agree in mentioning, that the Russians were expected to march on Khiva soon.—Col. Stoddart had the option given him of being put to death, or of entering the Ameer's service, and men were sent to dig his grave before his prison door, which induced him to accept the latter alternative.

BAMECAN.—Letters have been received from Bamecan, dated December 16, which mention that intelligence had reached that place, to the effect that the King of Bokhara, in a recent letter to Dost Mahomed, had offered him (the Dost) the governorship of all Turkistan south of the Oxus, with the command of 12,000 horse and 10 guns, with which to attack and destroy the detachment at Bamecan. A small party from that detachment, consisting of 2 companies of Infantry and a detail of Artillery, with two 3 inch mortars and a 3 pounder gun, was to have started on the 17th ultimo, for Syghian, the political agent accompanying. The Russian force had advanced four marches from Orenburg.

AFGHANISTAN.—GHUZNEH.—The following items are extracted from letters from Ghuznee up to the 7th December. There is no chance left for the 16th N. I. returning this season, who are in garrison at Ghuznee, as the frost and snow had already set in. Of the latter there have been several severe falls, and the water in the neighbourhood had been covered with ice for more than a month. Every body who could skate was preparing for the amusement. Some had their skates in the workmen's hands for six weeks, but the people about Ghuznee are very dilatory, though, as they are considered tolerable clever, they have had plenty of employers.

Ghuznee had begun to look wintry, not a leaf nor a blade was to be seen, and they were in expectation of a severe winter.

The sepoy were already beginning to drop off, and casualties were occurring daily, although it was only then considered bracingly cold, the atmosphere being very clear.

They had heard at that date in Ghuznee, that the annoyances of the Khyberries had reached Jellalabad, and that a force from that place, consisting of the European Regiment, two Squadrons 2nd Light Cavalry and the Light Battery, were ordered to hold themselves in readiness to move at the shortest notice, as well as the 37th and 48th, who were to act in conjunction, as their report had it, with 7,000 Sikhs. We have of course previously communicated that intelligence.

It is now said, and from a generally well informed source, that the Russians have not succeeded in their attempts to reach Khiva from the shores of the Caspian Sea, and that the Persian Army, which, it would appear, was certainly moving on Herat, had mutated for want of pay.

It is said, that Juhber Khan, the eldest brother of Dost Mahomed, has agreed to the terms offered him by Shah Shoojah, and joins His Majesty shortly at Jellalabad. Mr. Campbell, and many more of the Dost's followers have, we hear, joined the Shah.

CAHUL.—Recent advices from Cahul intimate, that the state of health in Her Majesty's 13th Light Infantry there, was anything but favorable; many casualties had taken place, which some would attribute to the men's own impudence in the abuse of spirituous liquors, readily procurable in the town, while others ascribed the mortality to the sudden reaction consequent on an abrupt transition from a warm climate, hard duty, and bad food, a state of repose with severe temperature, acting on constitutions previously debilitated.

The rumours of the advance of the Russians on Khiva were still rife at Cahul, and the folks in Affghanistan, Candahar, &c. will have the reports true, at any rate, they have gained fresh credence since our last, it is now added there remains but little doubt that all classes in Bukhara are decidedly in favor of Russian interests.

One of our correspondents adds a fact, "curious if true," namely that the Minister of Kairan at Herat, was busily engaged recruiting the impoverished finances of the State by the sale of his Tanjik subjects to the Ouzbeks as slaves. About 30,000 have been already disposed of to no mean advantage. The project reminds us of the proposition of honest Sauchio Panzi, who requests the Knight of La Mancha and the royal countenance, that his promised kingdom may be seated, if possible, on the Sea coast, to admit of the ready shipment and sale of his people as slaves, Sauchio however, took it for granted that his subjects were to, he but negroes and not decent Caucasians like the Tanjiks. Our correspondent further assures us, that the hitherto published accounts of the late mishap in the Khyber Pass, are very wide of the truth, and calculated to throw an unmerited shade on the character of many of those employed. Instead of having four companies at his disposal, it now appears that Captain Farmer had but 30 sepoy in his escort, and these entirely inefficient from sickness and fatigue.

JULLALABAD.—Letters from Jullala had give the following.

On the breaking up of the winter the troops here will proceed with Sahi Soojah to Cahul. Sickness had appeared in H. H. 15th and the diligent native corps, and carried off some men. The party at Bamean, under Lieutenant Maule, were suffering much from cold, the thermometer being frequently at 7d.

Hajee Khan is to be sent to Chunar, and from thence to the new station, Darjeeling, under charge of Lieut. Van Hornigh of the 48th Native Infantry. The latter is both politically and volubly speaking preferable to the lodging "usually provided in the plain."

The Khyberries are not over satisfied, and our politicals would not care if they showed their dissatisfaction more openly, by way of affording us the opportunity of giving them a good hiding, which they require to bring them to their senses, and which we could more conveniently do in the month of March next, than at any other time.

"We, the 37th and 48th, have just returned from the Khyber, where the Khyberries were stationed in force on the hill close to All Masjid. However, the politicals came to terms just as we expected a brush with them. The next morning we marched towards Peshawar, and about half way the rascals, though they had made a treaty, rushed down and carried off the baggage of several officers. However they did not come off scot free, as they acknowledged to having had 29 killed and wounded. Previous to this our breakfast things had a narrow escape. Between 4 and 500 Khyberries rushed down on the small guard protecting them—the guard consisting of the two Quarter Master Sergeants and 36 Sepoys of the 37th and 48th. The guard fought most gallantly and kept them off for upwards of an hour and half, when luckily, the Khyberries heard our advance hurls and decamped for the hills, which they reached before two companies that had been sent off to try and cut them off could get there. The hills were perfectly covered by them, but a balloon has no chance with them when there. Our loss was 3 killed and 4 wounded, and the 4th one wounded and Col. Wheeler's khailasse killed, another wounded and a kulnighur of the 48th mess since dead. The Khyberries cut one camel dead, but did not succeed in carrying off a single thing. It is impossible to tell their loss on the occasion, as they invariably, if they can, carry off their killed and wounded, and only one was left dead."

LAHORE.—Nothing new can be learned from Lahore; matters apparently remain in a state of slumber, and though intrigue is said to be as ripe as ever, the proximity of our Army, it is thought, has at least caused a due observance of decorum in that Court. A letter, however, speaks of a growing feeling against as in Now Nihal's party, which was sooner or later to be expected, and it intimates that he feels under the obligation he has been bound to render us. Much suspicion rests upon the Court of Lahore as to our late doings in the Khyber Pass, and it is said that Colonel Wade has intercepted letters that give a colour to this and other suspicious, but nothing is at present allowed to transpire.

Sir John Keane, escorted by the Lancers and Captain Grant's troop of Horse Artillery, arrived at Lahore on the 25th ultimo and quitted it on the 28th, having been so ill during that interval as entirely to preclude that possibility of an interview, with the Algharjah, which was, as well as could be, compensated by a complimentary deputation of a dozen of the British officers, who were well received;—and the whole camp was feasted at the Maharaja's expense, upon the date of their passing the Rare. On the 28th of December, a Sikh Force of about 30,000 men, with 150 guns, was reviewed before the returning column, on which their appearance and discipline made a favourable impression. General Vintner is said to be under a cloud at the Court of Lahore, owing to some correspondence.

pondence on his part with our Government, which the Shikhs now regard with excessive jealousy, as well they may!

Madras.

MR. HANDLEY, THE CHIEF MATE OF THE LORD TOWHER.—It will be remembered that a trial took place in April last before the Supreme Court, of certain parties connected with the ship Lord Louther, who were charged with mutiny on board, that the result was a conviction of several of the prisoners, and that, amongst other awards of punishment, Mr. Handley, the Chief Officer of the vessel, was condemned to eighteen months imprisonment. Mr. Handley was accordingly committed to the charge of the Sheriff and incarcerated in H. M. jail. Previous to the expiration of the term of imprisonment, it was brought to the notice of the visiting Magistrates that Mr. Handley was absent from the jail, and upon enquiry, he appeared to be so under the order or by permission of the Sheriff. In consequence of this discovery an examination into the case was instituted by the Chief Magistrate, and it was found, that Mr. Handley was so far at large as to be without the jail, to be or to have been living in a private house and to have been seen abroad by the police people. Under these circumstances, evidence was duly taken of the facts, the Sheriff bound over to answer any enquiry that might be instituted and the matter was reported to the Government and to the Court.

Sir Edward Gambier mentioned the circumstances in his charge to the Grand Jury, but his Lordship having observed that there must be a prosecutor in order to bring it directly before them, and the Advocate General or the Government having subsequently refused to undertake this office, the matter has altogether dropped, so far as its discussion in the arena of the Supreme Court is concerned.

Now the two points that in this extraordinary case, will prominently rise into consideration with every reader, are that a prisoner under sentence of incarceration has been partially released from his penalty, and that no party appears before the public to enquire into the question of this being a justifiable or an illegal act.

In respect of the first of these, the following is mentioned as the justification that would, it necessarily arose, be put forth for the liberation of Mr. Handley from the confinement of the jail. It is, that warrant of commitment addressed to the Sheriff, did not specify the jail as the place of imprisonment, that the Sheriff was, therefore, not compelled to keep him there; and that advantage of the flaw was only taken from a humane desire to relieve the prisoner from wanting health under the influence of the imprisonment.

Bombay.

ESCAPE OF CONVICTS AND MURDER.—On the afternoon of the 24th of December, the barque Virginia which left Bombay on the 14th of that month with thirty convicts for Singapore, returned to that port. On the morning of the 16th, by some means, the convicts obtained possession of the ship's arms, murdered Captain Whiffen and the chief mate, Mr. Harland, and drove their bodies overboard. They continued on board for two days, during which they plundered the ship, after which they made the crew hoist out the boats, took what articles they wanted, and pulled towards the land, which the Gunner supposes to be some where about Mangalore, where they left the ship. The Gunner then made the best of his way with the vessel to Bombay.

DEPUTY SECRETARY IN THE PERSIAN DEPARTMENT.—Government has determined upon having a Deputy Secretary in the Persian Department, and Sir James Carnac means to confer the appointment upon a native gentleman, thus carrying out his intention of elevating to offices of trust and honor, respectable and talented native gentlemen.

SIR H. FANE.—Sir Henry Fane embarked on the 30th of December, on board the Malabar. All the troops of the Garrison were out on the occasion, and formed a street through which his Excellency proceeded to the Bunder Head. The hon'ble the Government, and all the Garrison Staff accompanied the General to the boat which took him off to the ship.

DEATH OF THE RAJAH OF AHMEDNIGOUR.—Accounts have been received of the death of the Rajah of Ahmednigour, Mahes Cannia, and owing to the intervention of the British Authorities there, none of those tragic scenes of anarchy have occurred, which took place on the death of Kurrum Sing some years ago.

ROBBERY.—A gang of armed robbers entered the house of a Pahlwan in Poona and broke open every chest and box they could find in it, with hatchets, which they had provided themselves with, and carried away all the valuables contained in them. The inmates of the house avoided coming in contact with the depredators, by confining themselves within the cookroom, which was locked up on them; but one of the servants and a friend of the master of the house, who happened to go in while the robbers were busy with their work were stripped of their clothes and threatened by the gang with death, if they attempted to give out an alarm or interrupt their proceedings.

NAVIGATION OF THE RIVER INDUS.—As already stated, the navigation of the river Indus is free, and no duty of any kind is leviable on goods sent by this noble stream. The following notification appeared in the Government Gazette of the 2nd instant.

"With reference to the notification issued in the Government Gazette under date the 2nd March 1835, notice is hereby given that under the terms of the Treaty recently concluded with their highness the Amirs of Sindh, no duty of any kind is leviable on goods sent by the River Indus, but that the established Duties of the Port will be levied on all goods, not bona fide Government stores and supplies, that may be landed at Karachi."

By order of the Hon'ble the Governor in Council,

J. P. WHITCOMB, Secy to Govt.

CONVICTS ESCAPED FROM THE BARK VIRGINIA.—Letters from Gwalior state, that the officer in command of the H. C. brig Typtes, had an interview with the Governor Barons de Canal, respecting the convicts who escaped from the barque Virginia. The Governor had already heard of the party having landed and gave directions that they should be examined. On learning who they were, he immediately sent off to use every means for their recapture, and though they may have escaped from the Portuguese territory, they may yet be taken in the Dandelly jungles in the Honore district.

BOMBAY BANK SHARES.—Bombay Bank shares are said to be from fifteen to sixteen per cent premium.

wight of the 13th December, on a reef of rocks about thirteen miles east of Cape Comorin. The captain, after remaining by her eleven days, and finding he could get no assistance, proceeded to Cochin.

HIS HIGHNESS THE GUICOWAR.—Accounts from Baroda mention, that his highness the Guicowar has changed the line of conduct which he has pursued for several years past in opposition to the British Government. His highness has, it is said, addressed a communication to the Honble Mr. Sutherland, in which he promises to change his policy, and to abide in future by the advice of the Resident at his Court. The contents of this communication are not well known, but one of the principal articles of it is understood to relate to Veneram, his highness's late minister and ambassador to the Governor-General, whom, it is supposed, the Guicowar now acknowledges to have entirely dismissed from his service, in accordance with the repeated recommendation of the Governor-General.

THE NEW RAJA OF SATTARA.—Native reports represent the authority of the new Raja of Sattara as becoming more popular every day. Almost all persons that held any office of rank or trust under the late Raja, have been dismissed, and several have been required to give bail not to leave Sattara without leave. Balia Sahib Chitnees, have been released from confinement and sentenced to remain at Poona with his family.

THE STEAMER VICTORIA.—The steamer Victoria, came out of dock on the 23d ultimo, in readiness for service.

THE HANNAH.—The ship Hannah has been taken up for the conveyance of troops to Kuraicho, and started for that port with the depot of H. M. 40th and several officers of the 21st Bengal native infantry. She will, on her return, bring down the 17th N.I. The Hannah took the new iron steamer Comet to tow, and will call her off at the mouth of the Indus, in order that she may start on her expedition up that river without unnecessarily expending her supply of coal.

Burmah.

KYOOK PHYOO.—Letters from Kyook Phyoo to the 23d of December, give a deplorable account of the health of the troops at that station, the general calamity of sickness being aggravated by the circumstance that it has disabled the medical officers themselves. The Amherst, which was to have taken the officers' supplies, has been ordered to Madras on other duty, and the stores at the station, were nearly expended.

RANGOON.—Letters from Rangoon to the 20th of December, mention the continued pacific intentions of Tharrawaddi towards the British Government. They, however, hazard a conjecture, that were His Majesty aware, that the removal of Captain Macleod was preparatory to his proceeding to the capital via Monay, his Majesty would be induced promptly to make the expected concession to the British Government for the continuance he has deemed fit to shew, in the insults offered to three of our Residents, more especially in reference to the excited state of the nation. It is further stated, that Tharrawaddi is afraid to countenance French or Russian influence at his Court, and blames the British Government, for allowing its representative to remain at Rangoon.

ARRACAN.—Advises from Arracan, serve to shew, that the Burmese are either bent on some hostile movement, or cherish some unaccountable apprehension of aggressions on our part. Intelligence had come in from, Myhee, an out post, to the effect that the Burmese had encroached on our frontier, and were clearing a piece of ground for the erection of a stockade, two hundred and forty paces on our side the line of demarcation. A British officer had proceeded thither to examine and report particularly on the matter, and there is little doubt that it will be found to be part and parcel of a plan of general operations.

One of the Government flats for the transport of troops in Arracan, on her way to Sandoway, with thirty men on board, lost a crew of twenty, springing a leak before she had proceeded ten miles on her route, off a village called Salandong, and was obliged to be detained until assistance could reach her from Akyab. A special committee was immediately sent out to report upon her condition and to bring back the detachment. A leak was found between the planks, through which a haynet was thrust, and moved backwards and forwards laterally for about the space of 16 inches. The chink had been stuffed up pro tem. with old rags and wadding. The committee at once determined the fate of the boat and took all the sepoy, bag and baggage, on board their own boats and landed them the next day at Akyab.

MAULMAIN.—The Maulmain Chronicle of the 8th inst., enclosed, the following extract dated 9th instant:—

"H. M. Ship Conway arrived at Amherst this morning from Rangoon. She has on board Captain McLeod, the Acting Resident, who has at length thought proper to retire from Burmah altogether. Since the arrival of the new Governor at Rangoon, we understand circumstances have occurred to render Captain McLeod's residence at that place quite incompatible with the respect due either to himself or to his Government.

Although on the arrival of the Conway last week, at Rangoon, the usual salutes were fired, we learn that the Officers were precluded entrance into the town contrary to all former custom, and no personal civilities were observed towards them. The conduct of the new public Authorities at Rangoon is undoubtedly a true index to the feelings which prevail at the Capital. Indeed, acts of incivility on the part of the local Government, have recently not been rare, and have tended to contribute to the truth of previous rumours, that orders had been sent down from Court to treat the English with less courtesy than usual in Rangoon."

Previous to Capt. McLeod's departure from Rangoon he addressed the following circular to the merchants at Rangoon.

CIRCULAR.

GENTLEMEN,—I have the honor to inform you, that it is my intention to quit this with the residency with as little delay as possible.

It is unnecessary to detail the causes which have induced me to take this resolution, but, I think it my duty to notify to you, that they are in no way connected with any intended invasion of the country by, or other hostile act on the part of the British Government.

Prior to my departure, I shall address the Myo Woon, assuring him of the pacific and friendly disposition of the Government of India, and recommending to his special care and protection, all British merchants and subjects who may continue in the place. It is my intention, in the first instance, to remove to Maulmain, from whence I shall, most likely, (until I am honoured with the orders of the President in Council,) transact any business that may be necessary with the Government here, or the Ministers at Ava.

Should you require any information I can consistently afford you, or if you have any suggestions to offer on the state of affairs in this country, I would suggest, that you fix some hour with the other British merchants in the place, when I shall be happy to see you and speak with you.

: J. W. M'Leod, Capt, Offg. Resident Ava.

Rangoon Jan. 4, 1840.

Singapore.

Letters from Singapore state, that the Heber, from Singapore to London, had run ashore on the N. E. point of Biniang. Assistance had been sent to her, and it was expected, that, if the weather continued moderate, a part of her cargo would be saved. Considerable apprehension was entertained on account of the Nymph, no tidings of her having reached Singapore.

China.

Canton papers to the 10th of December, have been received during the month. As was anticipated, the Chinese authorities have, in their report to the Court of Peking, represented the return to Tongkoo of the British men-of-war, after the affair at Chumpee, as a fight from the junk, which are stated to have defeated the frigates with great slaughter, while the loss on the part of the Chinese, was very trifling, a few men being killed, some drowned, and others blown up by gun powder, which exploded through carelessness on board of one of the junks. The consequence of this report is, that the fleets of Chekeang and Fukien, have been ordered down to attack the British shipping, and the senior British naval officer, has issued a circular to the British vessels, to prepare for defence. Had the entire fleet under the Admiral at Chumpee been captured or destroyed, the Chinese would, most likely, ere this, have come to some arrangement with Capt. Elliot; but the ill-judged mercy which actuated the Superintendent to stop the firing of the frigates, ere half the work of destruction commenced on had been completed, has been misconceived by these conceited barbarians, who attribute every act of leniency or forbearance on our part, to want of power; and they will be induced by it to further and more daring aggressions, until taught a salutary lesson of forbearance, by severe but well-merited chastisement. The forces now said to be on the point of embarkation for China, will soon put our relations with the Celestials on a proper footing, and teach them a lesson which they will not quickly forget. A new Commissioner named Ah, it is reported, had arrived at Canton, as a conditor to Lin, and that the Portuguese authorities at Macao had been putting the forts of that place in a state capable of offering resistance to the Chinese, who are said to have been making aggressive demonstrations. The stoppage of the English trade "for ever," took place on the 6th of December, the same day on which the last of the East India Company's Agents, Mr. J. H. Astell, took his departure from China. In spite, however, of the edict, which prohibits the British trade, both directly and indirectly (excepting, however, that carried on by the Royal Saxon and Thomas Coutts, which vessels are allowed by the edict to trade as before,) the transshipping trade was still briskly carried on, and the Captain of an American vessel, who entered the port with 2,000 bales of cotton, had offered in return to Tongkoo, and re-enter the port with a similar cargo. The American merchants are reaping a rich harvest, but have suffered greatly in general estimation, in consequence of the spirit of incapacity developed by them, and their illiberal treatment of the British agents, at whose present situation they are said to evince much delight. A detailed account of the wreck of the Sunda and loss of seventeen lives, has been published by the Captain of that vessel, who was in distress at Canton, in the Consular house.

Egypt.

Letters from the Gulph mention, that affairs with Mehemet Ali had been settled. The Turkish fleet had been given up, but four of the ships, returning to Constantinople, had gone off nobody knew where. This is given on the authority of a letter to a Persian Merchant in Calcutta.

The following is the latest intelligence from Egypt, coming down to the 20th of November:—

"Concerning Egypt the Pasha of which, seems determined to have what he has so repeatedly asked for before, viz. the independent sovereignty of the countries of Egypt and Syria, including Candia, and that part of Arabia which he has won, and which he means to uphold his right to in the Sultan's name, paying tribute to govern independently of the intervention of any other power, thus carrying on the Sultan's independence in them without foreign control. Changes have taken place since our last in the Diplomatic, as follows:—Comte Dr. Pontis has relieved Admiral Rous as French Ambassador at Constantinople; Mons. Cochenet, French Consul General in Egypt, is to be forthwith relieved by Mons. Lecomte, Col. Campbell, the English Consul General, daily expects to be relieved by Col. Hodges late British Consul General in Servia. This officer greatly distinguished himself at Opinto, when Don Pedro landed there in 1833 to recover the Government of Portugal from Don Miguel, and who again very lately acquired the commendation of Downing Street from his great tact in Servia against Russian Agents there. These diplomatic changes are momentous as regard the English and French determination to have their respective interests properly borne out in Turkey and Egypt. The health of Mahommed Ali is again restored, and every thing in this country is progressing: large exports of grain, cotton, &c. have been daily leaving the Port of Alexandria for the use of Austria, France and England. The Egyptian army in Syria remains in its last mentioned position, Marash and its vicinity. The combined English and French fleets have partly broken up at Bahka Bay because that Bay in the winter season does not afford shelter or safe anchorage for the fleets there, but each fleet leaves a squadron of observation on their best sailing ships, as the united aid of England and France, at the mouth of the Dardanelles. It is said the British Admiral, Sir Placid, returns to Malta, and that the French Admiral, Laland, returns to Smyrna to winter. Prince Joinville is supposed to fly a Commodore's pennant in command of the cruising squadron of France at that point, and Captain Parker, of the Rolney, has already received orders to fly the same broad pennant for England. Captain Parker was Post Captain before Prince Joinville was born, therefore the command of the cruising squadron is at the right place. There is no plague in Egypt, Constantinople, or this part of the Levant at present. Messrs. Hill and Co. of Cairo, have demanded a fee of £2 for shelter to all travellers to and from India in their halting places. They say that those halting places belong to them by contract, for which they have produced a paper signed by Col. Bar, and thus the object of shelter "gratis," similar to that of the bungalows all over India, is frustrated. Mr. Waghorn, on account of passengers through his agency, has agreed to pay only £1, and says that even that is an extortion, because the Bombay Committee meant them to be free as regards shelter, and that each traveller had only to pay for what he ordered, at a fair price.

THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY

Our opinion respecting the state of the London press has been too often and too fully expressed to need further repetition. The state of affairs is such as to place amongst the very best that have been achieved within the last quarter of a century. But the best of course is always below the point of excellence which was reached by the nobly gifted writers of the times of Milton and James. We are glad to observe that Mr. Browning has very closely studied the principles of the good school, and has accordingly acquired a simplicity and strength of style, which a false refinement has exchanged for feeble pretensions and affect. We are not merely willing, but most eager, to award the writer his full due; but we cannot withhold the expression of our extreme disgust at the injudiciousness which has been levied upon him by some of his London critics. They actually accuse him that "he equals Shakespeare in originality of thought and expression." This kind of deplorable nonsense, shows too what a state of degradation the art of criticism has fallen.

But let us turn to the more agreeable task of furnishing our readers with a brief account of the style in which Mr. Knowler's highly estimable, though certainly not quite Shaksperean play, was performed by our British Indian Amateurs.

The performances at the Sans Gravité were so extremely successful, that we really begin to feel half ashamed of the high prices which a French artist compels us to bestow upon them. We are used to the habit of our readers as, have either no opportunity or no wish to attend the theatre, and judge for themselves. We all go gaily of the same expectation in our prediction of Indian amateurs, as that modern critics, in their comments upon favorite living authors. We should be sorry indeed, to be pronounced guilty of the vice to which we have just been referring in others. For let our own reputation suffer what it may, we cannot, from a selfish fear of this nature, be nigard in our praise of those who have afforded us so much entertainment, and who have impressed us with so strong a sense of their merits. We venture then to acknowledge that Alceste, in the part of Master Walter, left us absolutely nothing to desire. His conception of the part was perfect, and we really could not point out a single serious defect in his performance. We should have been better pleased, perhaps, if he had allowed himself, as the Frenchman is to be somewhat less austere and stern towards his own daughter, and wanted help thinking that if he had let out more frequently a few gleams of parental affection from behind the cold, dark veil of reserve, that the general effect of his part would have

The Kaiser of the stage, after a long absence, re-appeared last night in the part of Falstaff, in which he has long displayed his peculiar humour. He was very warmly greeted by the audience, who were delighted to see an old favourite again. We have to repeat the praise we awarded him on his former representation of this character. His expression of surprise and hope, when, after plotting with Blow the escape of Julia and laughing over the anticipated chastity of the Hunchback, he discovers that his master is behind him, is as good a specimen of broad humour as this admirable comic actor ever exhibited. His look and attitude are immitigable. They are worthy of being transferred to the canvas.

Sir Thomas Clifford is a rare walking gentleman, but Mados did his best for it. With all his skill, however, he could not make it very interesting. Why will this excellent actor take such poor parts? He is first rate in comedies, and more than respectable in the serious drama. His Inga is not yet forgotten. It was an admirable performance. There was but one single opportunity for display in the part of Sir Thomas Clifford, and he nobly availed himself of it. The gentleman who performed the part of Lord Tinsel, is greatly improved, and if he had been more confident of success would certainly have obtained it. He gave several points with considerable humour. Mrs. Francis made the part of Helen a very pleasant one by her judicious acting, and well supported her sheepish lover, Mados, (the Secretary) who with some few defects, did great justice to his part.

The Hunchback is to be repeated to-morrow, and we hope this notice will send a few of our readers to the theatre.—Coltratta Literary Gazette, February 9.

THE FANCY BALL.

(From a Correspondent.)

The "Bachelor's Ball" on Thursday, was a gay affair; but we have certainly attended gayer ones at the Town Hall. The company could scarcely have numbered less than 7 or 800 when the plot was thickest, yet there was an unusually small number of fancy costumes. We did not observe a single "group" the whole evening. Of the "Stewards" (a dozen in number) there were two only, we believe, in fancy dresses; the rest, after inviting their guests to come in the ball in costume, had the courtesy to make their appearance in themselves in plain clothes. We have another crow to pick with the Stewards. What in the name of wonder, was the object of allowing those absurd scene paintings to remain, diminishing by one third, the goodly proportions of that beautiful room? We believe those ugly scenes (or scenes) were first thrown across, upon the occasion of the first "Re-union" or "Assembly" of the present season, for the purpose (we are informed) of making a very empty room look crowded! This may have been a rational purpose enough, but why they should have been left for the purpose of converting a very crowded room into a very complete crush, we are quite unable to conjecture.

Among the fair guests, we noticed a few (and really very few) pretty and becoming dresses. We hope, we shall be pardoned, if we should happen to mis-describe any, as we pretend not to be connoisseurs ourselves, and no one ever heard of asking a lady what character her spangle dress aspired to. As far as the men are concerned, we have no sort of scruple, and we put the bounty to several of our male acquaintances. "Play" who and what the deuce may you be!"

Among the most conspicuous was a very handsome dress (which we were told was Russian) worn by Mrs. D. Mrs. D was simply and gracefully attired as a Scotch lassie, and a bonnet one never tripped over Highland heather or ball room floor. By the bye, we missed her accustomed "Scotch reel," although there were other wearers of the plaid, both gentlemen and ladies. Mrs. G——— and Mrs. A——— were in Scotch costumes. Mrs. M——— in a Finnish dress, remarkably elegant and recherché. Mrs. Y——— looked beautiful as a Circassian. Mrs. P——— and Mrs. J.——— were becomingly attired in Swiss dresses, and the Misses S——— as Tyrolese dancers. We observed two Persian ladies uncommonly brilliant in muslin and bangles, and a host in mysterious drapery, which we have not the slightest doubt, wonderful y resembled the original from which they were copied, but which originals we have never been fortunate enough to meet with.

Among the gentlemen, we counted about a dozen Lithuanians, Albanians, Greeks, Moors and Turks,

"There go a Turk and a Moor," said a friend to us:—"Which is the Turk and which the Moor?" said we, to our innocence. By-the-bye there were one or two dress episodes, which we have observed regularly at every Fancy Ball in Calcutta, since about the year of Grace 1819. Tinjours piedrix is applicable even to the most gorgeous of fancy costumes, however, the newcomers, (of which two thirds of every Ball consist) are fortunately none the wiser as to the number of occasions, on which the same identical habiliments have done duty! There was an excellently dressed "gent" of the old school," (Mr. F———), who looked and walked his character exceedingly well. We cannot bestow the same meed of praise upon another, who aspired to appear in the same character, but whose costume rather resembled that of a modern butler, or footman lively. In justice to him, however, we will say, that he displayed an excellent pair of calves, and an unexceptionable tie to his white neckcloth. Mr. G——— was very well dressed as a Turk, and Mr. H——— as a Tyrolese hunter. We took him for a minister at first, but upon closer inspection we observed a powder-flask in his belt (a bow and quiver would have been more picturesque), so we set him down at once for a Chamois-hunter. There were three members of different hunts, Mr. S———, Mr. H———, and Mr. L———, but their dashing scarlet coats were almost lost among the numerous red jackets present. Mr. P——— appeared in a remarkably handsome dress, but we do not know by what name precisely to designate it. In the early part of the evening a "weary knife-grinder" (Lieutenant P———) made his appearance, trundling his grinding machine among a crowd of guests, and being ordered off by the "Peeler," or member of the New Police, No. 22, (Mr. D———) for causing an obstruction in the thoroughfare, he stuck his little kimbo, and shewed fight. The most striking figure in the room was, undoubtedly, "Father Time," (Mr. H———), who appeared in a most quaint sort of a kind of a Diabical dress. "Time" was attired in a jacket and sheet, and wore a wreath of roses round his snowy locks, which consisted (apparently) of a profusion of tawdry white horse-tails. This was without exception the biggest "fore-lock" we ever heard of, but it had the effect of giving the old gentleman a very hoary and venerable appearance. "Time" carried in his hand a scythe and hour-glass, and pitched into the supper as though he knew the value of himself! Talking of the "supper," that was an excellent "character" too, and all the arrangements did credit to the Steward and Mr. Spruce. Altogether, we had a capital "lark" at the Town Hall, and when the next Fancy Ball takes place, may we be there to see. Amen.—Hurk, Feb. 15.

THE VALADARES' CONCERT.

The Concert given on the night of the 25th, at the Town Hall by the Valadares, went off with the usual credit concomitant on the musical festivals given by these talented artists; and, in spite of several large parties at the Government House and elsewhere, was very well attended. The performance commenced, with the immortal Weber's celebrated Overture to Onion, which was given with unprecedented success. The first was most startling, and drew the breathless attention paid by the entire audience, throughout its performance and the cheers which greeted its termination, it seemed to have been highly appreciated by all. The elder Ryckman, indeed, deserves great praise for his able superintendence of the Orchestra, with which he seemed to have worked wonders.

The next piece in order of succession, was Mr. Trew's Solo on the Ophelede. The tones of this instrument are not such as but, nevertheless, it is of considerable effect in an orchestra. Suffice it to say, that Mr. Trew did as much with the instrument as we could reasonably have expected.

The duet "When thy bosom heaves the sigh," which, we believe, has not been given in Calcutta since the days of the Ladies, was exquisitely sung by Madame Valadares and an Amateur, and was hailed with great applause by the audience. We really think that this delightful vocalist has recently attained a great degree of power to her voice, which, though at all times sweet, was very often quite effectual in a large room. This was not the case on the night of the 25th; for even the slightest of her mellow tones, was distinctly and sweetly heard throughout the whole room, and we were glad to perceive, that

"Ther accents, pleasing, soft and clear,
The audience lent attentive ear—
Around the little warbler hung,
And beat the measure as she sung"

The "Sapho Ode," was admirably sung by an Amateur, whose full, rich tones were highly applauded by the audience. The violin Solo, was given in Mr. Valadares's best style, and the Trio on the flute, pianoforte and bassoon, was very fine; but Philip Delmar seemed somewhat depressed in spirit, and omitted the variations on the flute. The glee of "Bow gentle gales," was sung with taste and feeling, and the overture, Karyaathe, very well executed, but it did not seem to produce quite the effect of that to Oberon. In the "Song of the Nightingale," Mrs. Valadares was not quite so happy as in the previous song, her organ voice did not sound with its usual mellow sweetness and at times a little stiffness jarred upon our ears. The Solo on the Bassoon, by the Elder Ryckman, was played as his solos on this instrument always are, with great success. We are not, however, partial to this instrument, the sweetness of the tones of which, we confess, we have yet to detect.

The duet between Madame Valadares and Mr. Linton, sung publicly, we believe, for the first time in this country, was excellently performed. Madame Valadares and our veteran favourite, excited themselves to the utmost, and with complete success. The variations on the pianoforte, were performed with the success always attending the younger Ryckman's almost magical power, and were loudly praised, and the entertainment closed with the exquisitely sung glee, "Give me the nap," by Madame Valadares and Amateurs.—Harnaru February 27.

BENGAL CIVIL FUND.

At a half yearly meeting of subscribers to the Bengal Civil Fund, held yesterday, at the Town Hall.

Present—H. Moore, R. Badlow, J. Lewis, C. Malet, G. F. McChesock, W. Dampier, E. D. de la, F. Starbuck, J. P. Grant, F. Gouldsbury, C.

Davidson, G. G. McIntosh, A. Dick and H. V. Bailey, Esqrs.

H. Moore, Esq. was called to the chair.

The proceedings with respect to the amount of 25,000 following resolutions were proposed and carried unanimously.

That the proceedings are highly satisfactory and be approved.

That it will be for the benefit of the Fund to rescind Rule—~~in~~—and to levy the surplus of 25,000 rupees from married and widower subscribers having an interest in the fund.

That the managers give due notice under article XIII. that the rule will be reconsidered at the next July meeting. Nine families were admitted to the benefit of the Fund.

The proceedings connected with bringing up the books were read and highly approved.

The half yearly statement of the Fund was laid before the Meeting, and gave general satisfaction. It was proposed and carried unanimously.

That the Meeting accepts with thanks the offer made by the Annuity Fund at their last Meeting of a Secretary.

That the thanks of the Meeting be voted to the old managers, who are requested to continue their services.

That the thanks of the Meeting be given to the Secretary for his valuable services.

Thanks were then voted to the chairman for his able conduct, and the Meeting dissolved.—Hark. Feb. 1.

MEETING OF THE ASIATIC SOCIETY,

A Meeting of this Society was held last night at their apartments. Sir Edward Ryan, the President, was in the Chair, and the meeting was very well attended.

The proceedings of the last Monthly Meeting were read and confirmed, and His Excellency Sir Jasper Nicolle, Commander-in-chief, and Maharajah Raha Ali Khan were elected Members of the Society. Captain Swetenham, Messrs Jas. Colquhoun, C. K. Robinson, Roberts and Cadogan, were proposed for election at the next Meeting.

The Secretary read a recommendation from the Committee of Papers, to elect M. Reinhard an Honorary Member of the Society. It was made over for consideration at next Meeting.

By the last Overland Mail a communication had been received from Professor Wilson, regarding the dispatch of the busts of Sir William Jones and Sir Edward Colebrooke, and also respecting certain anatomical plates which the Society had ordered from home.

Read a letter from the Superintendent of the Royal Museum at Copenhagen, advising the dispatch of several books in Danish, &c. for presentation to the Society's Library. The thanks of the Society were ordered to be returned to the liberal donor.

Read a letter from the sons of the late Nathaniel Bowditch, of Boston, requesting the Society's acceptance of the fourth volume of the translation of the "Mécanique Céleste."

Several other books have been presented to the Society since the last Meeting.

The Secretary then read to the Meeting an interesting and important communication from Lieutenant, now Captain Hutton, with the Cabool Army, regarding his late discoveries of fossils, &c., in that part of India. In 1836 Lieutenant Hutton had been requested by the Society to explore the Spiti valley, and one thousand rupees had been placed at his disposal for this purpose, this was his first communication on the subject, the second is expected shortly, and the third will follow, but ~~profossion~~ skeletons, &c. had yet been received.

The Secretary then called the attention of the Meeting to an important communication from Government, regarding their Museum. Some time ago an application had been made by the Society for assistance from Government, in the Oriental Department of the Museum and the Court had acceded to the grant of 500 rupees a month for the publication of their oriental works—subsequently another application had been made by the Society for assistance in extending and systematically arranging the antiquities and collection of shells, &c. in their Museum, for which it was thought 5,000 rupees per annum would have been an adequate sum, but the amount was left to the discretion of Government. The Court had acceded to the grant of 200 or 250 rupees a month, expressly for the salary of a practical and clever Curator, and 50 in addition for the purpose of paying other expenses, they had no objection also to the local Government granting assistance from time to time, with a due regard to the strictest economy of the public funds, but declined naming a specified amount. The subject of the above communications had been laid before the Committee of Papers, and their opinions had been given thereon to the following effect—Sir Edward Ryan recommended in his minutes that the Curator, should be bound to devote two or three hours of the day to the duties of the Museum, and also furnish monthly reports of the state of the Museum, and that the situation should in the first place be offered to Dr. McClelland, as he has been so kindly doing the duties of the Museum for so many months without any salary. Dr. O'Shaughnessy concurred with the President with regard to the offer being made to Dr. McClelland, if he could spare time for the purpose, but in case of his refusing it, suggested that application be made to the Society at home to send out a well qualified person on salary of 300 £ per annum, and outfit, &c. Mr. H. P. Pinnsep, agreed with his colleagues regarding the offer to Dr. McClelland in the first instance, if he could devote sufficient time to it, but in case of refusal, thought that it would be preferable to look out for a qualified person among the many literary and scientific gentlemen in this country, without going to England for one. Dr. McClelland was willing to agree to the Society's offer, but could not enter into any engagements regarding as to time or the furnishing of periodical reports—should he not be selected, he thought that it would be preferable to obtain a person qualified for the situation in this country.

A letter was then read from Dr. McClelland, containing Dr. Horsfield's remarks upon the collection in the Museum of the Company in the East India House.

Some conversation then ensued with regard to the selection of a Curator. Sir Edward was of opinion that the two hours, daily attendance, and the furnishing of monthly reports, should be made the stipulations, of the office. Dr. McClelland objected to these terms, as unnecessary and likely to cripple his endeavours. As to the required daily attendance he was at present in the habit of devoting two and eight hours daily to the duties of the office, but did not wish to be bound down to any limited attendance at the Society's room. As there were many specimens of natural curiosities which he would be desirous of taking home for the purpose of having drawings, &c. taken of them, which he could not do at the Society's apartments, in consequence of the inefficiency of the Library in that department of literature. As to monthly reports, he did not think them necessary, and also that they would subvert instead of answer the and for which it had been proposed to have them. Mr. H. T. Prinsep raised an objection to the removal of any of the specimens from the museum after they had once been permanently placed there. This was an invariable rule with all Societies at home, and he thought this should be embodied with the other stipulations for the Curatorship. Any specimens might, in the first instance, be sent to the Curator, who could take drawings, &c. of them; but after once being placed in the museum, no subsequent removal should be allowed.

It was then proposed by the President, and seconded by Mr. H. T. Prinsep, that the Committee of Papers be requested to draw up, as the rules on which the Curatorship be held—that two hours a day be allotted to the duties of the museum—that monthly reports be furnished, and that no specimens be allowed to be removed, upon similar rules of other Societies; and the Committee of Papers will submit their report on the subject at the next Meeting, when Dr. McClelland, if he thought proper, might accept the situation. Dr. McC. begged to say, that if these were enforced, he or any Curator would find his endeavours for the interests of the Society so limited, that for his part he must say he would not think it acting justly towards the Society, and therefore would decline accepting the situation.

The Meeting then proceeded to the election of office bearers, for the current year, and the following are their names:

President.—The Hon'ble Sir R. Ryan.

Vice Presidents.—The Hon'ble Sir J. P. Grant, Colonel Macleod, H. T. Prinsep, Esq., and the Hon'ble Sir H. W. Seton.

Members.—W. P. Grant, Esq., Major W. N. Forbes, Dr. J. McClelland, Dr. D. Stewart, D. Hare, Esq., H. W. Torrens, Esq., Dr. S. Grant, and Dr. Wallich.

A skeleton elephant's head and eighteen beautiful specimens of cutaneous skulls, from the Superintendent of the Royal Museum of Copenhagen, were displayed on the table.

It being past ten o'clock, some other matters which were to have been laid before the meeting last evening, were deferred to the next.

Thanks were given for all presentations and communications, and the meeting broke up.—Calcutta Courier, Feb. 6.

STEAM COMMUNICATION.

STEAM COMMUNICATION.

The following letters, received by the chairman of the half yearly meeting of the subscribers in the New Bengal Steam Fund, held on the 19th day of February last, are published for general information.

The publication of these letters has been delayed in expectation of a reply from Mr. Curtis, which has not come to hand.

13, Cavendish square, 6th July, 1839.

J. PATIL, Esq.

Sir,—I have the honor to receive your letter dated the 4th March 1839, and its accompanying resolution, thanking me for my conduct as chairman of a public meeting held at the Jerusalem Coffee House, on the 12th of October last.

In returning my grateful thanks for the honor conferred upon me by that resolution, I am induced to take the opportunity of entering into some details upon another subject which may be of extreme interest to the inhabitant of Calcutta—I advert to a Company called the "East India Inland Steam Navigation Company," which is now dissolved.

I was requested to become the chairman of that Company, and finding 141 names of admitted respectability attached to the following resolution, I consented under the impression that I was promoting the interest of British India.

London, the 1st May, 1838.

"We, the undersigned, are of opinion, that the object of this Company in the establishment of a regular inland navigation, by the steam boats on the Ganges and other principal rivers in India, has a direct tendency to strengthen the British possessions in India, and at the same time to facilitate and extend commercial intercourse and consequently to enlarge commercial prosperity generally in the East."

It is not my intention to trouble you with the history of this company from its commencement to its dissolution, those who have any curiosity on the subject will probably have in Calcutta, an opportunity of seeing of the following numbers of the "Asiatic Journal and Monthly Register," viz.

No. 111 for the month of March 1839.
" 112	April "
" 113	May "
" 114	June "

and I believe the present month July, though I have not had an opportunity of seeing it.

It will be perceived, from a perusal of the documents contained in this journal, that at a Public Meeting held at the London Tavern, on the 7th February 1839, the following Resolution was passed, viz.

"That the thanks of this meeting be given to the right Hon'ble Sir Robert Wilmut Horton, Bart. for his able, impartial and patient conduct in the chair."

While, on the other hand, Mr. Peter Anher, late Secretary to the East India Company, Colonel Deffland, late of Madras, and a Captain Dickenson, will be seen to have brought distinct charges against me of culpable partiality in the chair.

I hope I need not say that I am personally indifferent to such charges, nor do I blame the conduct of the gentlemen who, believing the report presented at this meeting to be fallacious, endeavored to get me out of the chair, and to put an end to the Company as constituted. But what I do blame them for is, that they did not present a report which they considered not to be fallacious, and that they did not make any endeavour to inform a company and elect a chairman more worthy of the public confidence.

The report presented to that meeting is probably in Calcutta. It was printed by Smith, Elder and Co., and is entitled "Report of a committee formed to show the prospects of a company established in London for the conducting of the Inland Navigation of India by steam."

Who were the substantive framers of that report, will be seen in the documents to which I have referred, and being myself ignorant of local and statistical details of Calcutta, I was necessarily compelled to give confidence where I thought it was due.

In closing this letter, I have only to apologize for taking the liberty of giving advice for which I alone am responsible to the Indian public. It should be still deemed desirable to form a Company for the purpose of promoting Inland Steam, &c in India, let the details of that Company be matured in Calcutta, and let the operation of the Calcutta Company be primary and not secondary: the operations of that Company being matured in India the amount of capital defined; the price of shares (in English as well as in Indian money) established, let a competent agent be appointed in London, and let British capitalists be invited to subscribe according to the terms set forth by a Company formed in India.

I have, &c,

R. WILMOT HOBSON.

JAMES PATTLE, Esq., Calcutta.

Sir,—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated 4th March, conveying to me a resolution that had been passed at a meeting of the Subscribers to the New Bengal Steam Fund

The vote of thanks it contains, and the sentiments you have been pleased to express in transmitting it, are particularly grateful to my feelings, and, while I find in them ample reward for my past conduct, they will stimulate my further exertions.

In returning my best thanks to the Subscribers at large for their vote of thanks, and to yourself for the good opinion you are pleased to entertain, I can most honestly assure you, that until the "Comprehensive Scheme" upon a proper basis is established, my endeavours to obtain it shall continue with unabated zeal.

I have, &c,

JAMES BARBER.

STEAM MEETING.

The half yearly Steam Meeting at the Town Hall last evening, proved the most amicable thing of the kind we have yet had. There was not one dissentient voice, not one syllable of opposition, every thing being done with the utmost harmony.

On a motion of H. M. Parker, Esquire, seconded by Major Forbes, J. F. M. Reid, Esquire, was called to the chair.

The chairman after reading the requisitions in the public papers convening a Meeting, called on the Secretary to read the report for the past half year, which he did accordingly:—

THE REPORT.

Report of the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund to the subscribers to the fund, and to the petitioners at the Town Hall Yearly Meeting, convened under the 10th Regulation of the original meeting of the Subscribers to the Fund, held on the 22d day of June, 1833.

The events which have taken place since the last half yearly meeting in August, must be so well known to the subscribers to the New Bengal Steam Fund, that the Committee do not consider it to be necessary to refer to them beyond expressing that their endeavours to unite all parties for the purpose of first completing the line on this side of the Isthmus should have failed.

The meeting will have to fill up the vacancies occasioned by the departure for England of Messrs. Harding and Young

The accounts are laid on the table as usual.

By order of the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund.

It was then proposed by Col. McLeod and seconded by Chas. Deane K-quire.

1. That the report be received and that Messrs. Christopher Webb Smith and Alexander Beatts, be elec-ed Members of the Committee in the room of Messrs. Harding and Young returned to England.

The following resolution was next proposed by W. Patrick, Esquire, and seconded by Capt. Viat.

2. 'That this Meeting would earnestly recommend to the Subscribers to the New Bengal Steam Fund, and to parties who have paid their first instalment, to permit their subscriptions to remain in the Union Bank until the arrival of the Mail, which will leave England in June next, agreeably to the report of Mr. Parker's amendment at the Meeting held on the 20th ultimo.

After which thanks being returned to the chairman the Meeting dispersed.—Hutkus u, Feb. 19.

In publishing the following communication to Mr Curtis, the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund trust that parties who have paid 1st instalment to the proposed London Company will, acting in the spirit of the amendment, as given below, passed at the late meeting of the subscribers to the New Bengal Steam Fund, and of the parties who have paid such 1st instalment, allow their payments to remain until the period mentioned in the said amendment, viz the arrival in Calcutta of the mail which will leave London in June next.

"That the subscribers under the resolution of the 15th. April 1839 here present, and to the old and new Bengal Steam Funds, feeling the utmost confidence in Mr. Curtis' Committee, and the deepest sense of gratitude for their admirable, zealous, and disinterested exertions will await the result of the measures now taking by the Committee for the establishment of the Comprehensive Scheme until the arrival in Calcutta of the mail which leaves London in June next, and that in the event of the mail adverted to not bringing official intimation from Mr. Curtis Committee, that a Joint Stock Company is actually formed, with sufficient means to carry the Comprehensive Scheme, or a Scheme for running Steamers monthly between Calcutta, Malacca, Ceylon and Suez, into effect (the scheme itself offering a moderate return for the capital invested) the subscribers will then feel it their duty to this country to aid and assist such measures for promoting and securing a regular and speedy Steam communication between Calcutta, Madras, Ceylon and Suez, as may appear to them most expedient."

By order of the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund.

SIR,—I have the honor, by direction of the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, to acknowledge the receipt of your letters dated 4th of Nov. and 4th Dec. last, with its enclosures.

You will have seen from the newspapers of this presidency, that great difference of opinion has arisen as to the course to be pursued under the refusal of the Hon'ble Court of Directors to adopt your proposition.

A majority of this Committee consider that this refusal ought not to operate to prevent continued direct support to your ulterior measures. While other members, as well as influential parties, not connected with this Committee, deem it to be expedient that a Company should be forthwith formed in Calcutta which should confine its views to this side of the Isthmus,—as however it is understood that a communication has been made to you by the parties adverted to, you will yourself be able to understand their objects and intentions from their own representation. You will see by the enclosure, that they are supported by the leading Houses in Calcutta; but the Committee are happy to say but one sentiment pervades every class of Society here, as to your own disinterested and zealous exertions in the cause.

The Committee desire to abstain from all comment on the existing state of things in this country. They can only await the result of your future measures, with reference to the amendment which was carried at the meeting of the Subscribers to the Fund and the parties who have paid first instalment to your proposed Company, which was held at the Town Hall on the 23rd ultimo, the proceedings of which meeting are forwarded to you by this opportunity.

[Harkara, February 21.]

THE SECRETARYSHIP OF THE BANK OF BENGAL.

30TH JANUARY, 1840.

1.—On Wednesday the 15th January, fixed (a) for the election of a Secretary to the Bank, the Three Official Directors who represent the Government in the Direction, proposed (b) "that the Secretary of the bank should be Government Servant, under the Resolution (c) of Government dated the 13th instant," communicated by the Official Director Mr. H. T. Prinsep, Secretary to the Government in the Financial Department. This proposition was met by two Resolutions (d), of the six elected Directors to the effect, that the Secretary chosen should be a person, in whom the Directors had full confidence without reference to his being in or out of the Service. And in pursuance thereof the six elected Directors proceeded to elect Mr. Thomas Bracken, deemed by them the most eligible of the candidates as well as of the nominees of Mr. Official Director H. T. Prinsep on the part of Government as per margin (e) from his attainments and long experience in Mercantile and Banking affairs, and from the high testimonials of Lord Glenelg, the late President of the Board of Control—of Lord Wm. Bentinck,

(a) Vide Paper No. 1. (b) Do Do Do 2 A. (c) Do Do Do 3 (d) Do Do 3 and 4. (e) S. Palmer, C. G. Mansell, W. Bracken, H. T. Prinsep, Esqrs. C. S. Vide Paper, No.

the late Governor General of India—and of the Right Hon'ble Holt Mackenzie, Esq. for many years financial Secretary to the Government of India and President of this Bank, in favour of his general character.

2.—It remains for the majority of the Directors to explain further in detail their views in adopting a course, not conforming with the suggestions of Government.

3.—The legal power of the Directors to appoint the Secretary from any class of society, under Act VI. of 1859, having been admitted, they have to consider, whether the practice of hitherto electing a Covenanted servant can be construed into any proof of their preference, having been thereby desirous to strengthen the connection between the Government and the Bank; or whether on the other hand the deviation from such practice on the present occasion can be held as indicating on their own part any wish to weaken the connection, or as affording to the Government any just ground for supposing such to be the wish.

4.—Assuming the practice to have been as stated from the first establishment of the Bank, the Directors attribute it solely to the want of candidates among the independent portion of the community, and not to any conviction, either of preceding Governments, Directors, or Proprietors, that the services of a Civilian, as such, were an essential link to secure the confidence of the former.

6.—It must be recollected that until comparatively within a very few years, there was scarcely an individual in Calcutta, qualified for the situation, either as regarded previous pursuits or position in society, who was not engaged in the large Commercial Houses then existing, and which were supposed to hold out better prospects than the appointment in question; and consequently the Directors are not aware of any instance of a person so situated having offered himself as a candidate. Moreover, it is due to their predecessors, that the Directors should express their opinion, that the majority of the Gentlemen proposed by the Governments of that day, such as Messrs. Shoret, Morton and Dorin, were eminently qualified for the situation by their aptitude for business, without reference to their being Civil Servants, and that on the non-exclusive principle, which has guided the present election, these Gentlemen were fully and fairly entitled to the appointment on their own personal merits, and faithfully and successfully administered the affairs of the Bank for the advantage of all concerned.

6.—That successive elections therefore, of Covenanted servants to the Secretaryship seems to have occurred as a matter of course, from the absence of other candidates as well as from the acknowledged fitness of the nominees of Government, and not from any recognized principle, that the latter, quasi Civilian, were alone eligible or were at all considered as necessary elements to connect the Government and the Proprietors in the bonds of mutual confidence.

7.—This inference is confirmed by the unqualified character of Clause 24 of the Charter Act of 1839 (f) had the parties to that Charter contemplated the exclusion of any class from the Secretaryship, it is incredible that, as men of sagacity and business, they should have permitted such a Clause to stand, opening as it does, so wide a door to difference of opinion; or that as men of candour they should have designed to grant a nominal and not a real power—empowering the Directors and the institution, whose interests they are bound to promote, to the best of their judgment, to the hostility of those who might happen to be in the possession of the Government, at the time of an election occurring. While, on the other hand, a Government composed of persons of different views might highly approve of the principal of selection now acted upon, viz, the endeavour to secure the most efficient instrument for discharging the duties of Secretary.

8.—Fortunately the Directors are not required to support their views by inferences, however sound and rational. They beg respectfully to refer the President in Confront to the 24th Clause of the Charter of 1809, (g) to the corresponding Clause (13) of the Charter of 1823, and to the 24th Clause of the existing Charter.

The Clauses of the first and second Charter, distinctly contemplate and provide for the appointment of persons out of the service by the exception there made, that the restrictions applicable to them, were not to be construed, as extending to persons in the service," and are clearly and undeniably decisive of the question of the Directors having in no way infringed either upon the letter or spirit of the successive Charters, or having contravened the intentions of preceding Governments which sanctioned those Charters, by holding the appointment of Secretary, to be open to all candidates, Civilian or not Civilian, and as in no degree involving any special and separate link between the Government or the Bank, or as liable in law or equity to be disposed of on principles different from those applicable to the Bank of England.

Strongly bearing on the same point, is the omission in the 24th Clause of the Act VI. of 1839, (h) of the provisions contained in the 24th and 13th Clauses of the previous Acts, which did apply to Civilian; and the retention of those, which referred to persons, not in the service; so that up to this recent period the corporate body of the Bank did continue, not only to contemplate the appointment of the latter to the Secretaryship, but also seemed to convey its impression, that the trading character of the East India Company having been taken away by the Charter of 1834, the field of selection from commercial men in the service, would thereby be narrowed.

9.—The special and separate link constitutionally framed to bind and strengthen the connection between Government and the Bank, is to be found elsewhere. It is to be found in the three Government Directors. The Secretary was designed, and properly designed, to be the organ of the Directors collectively—to be their servant exclusively—while the Official Directors were as clearly and as constitutionally intended to protect interests and expound the views of Government. If not for this, who can pretend to guess for what purpose they take their seat in the Bank Parlour at all? To enable them to act with the utmost efficiency in this capacity, a daily report of the entire transactions of the Bank is submitted to them; and their opinions have generally had, and deservedly so, great weight with their colleagues. The Mercantile Directors (i) refer with considerable satisfaction to the evidence of Mr. Holt Mackenzie, so familiar with the working of the Bank, before the Finance Committee of the House in 1838, on this point; as also, to the proceedings generally of that Committee, as illustrative of the strong feeling in favour of the independent action of the Mercantile Directors. The late Mr. Hyde Villiers was the Chairman of the Committee, and also Secretary to the Board of Control, under the Ministry of which the Noble Lord at the head of the Government was a Member. The Mercantile Directors particularly solicit the attention of the President in Council to the concluding sentence of the quotation from Mr. Mackenzie's evidence, respecting the course of Government, on a difference of opinion between the Official and independent Directors of the Bank.

10.—The Directors proceed to canvass the expediency of the views entertained by the present Government, and the tenableness of the position raised to limit the Secretaryship exclusively to the Civil Service. The latter is based apparently on the assumption that "the ties and advantages of the Civil Service ensure to the Government a greater degree of control over the principal Ministerial Officer of the Bank, and that such Agency, for that reason, is more entitled to their confidence." The Charters shew that this position was not occupied by former Government; (j) Nor in all, the same amount of security was required from the Secretary, he who he might; and the equality of trustworthiness thus declared from the first establishment of the Bank, was not modified on the introduction of the Pension system, the only change which has taken place in the relative position of Civilian and non-Civilian. Why it was not, the Directors are of opinion, is satisfactorily accounted for. The respectability and emoluments of the situation were doubtless held to be a powerful restraint upon one class as another. It never could be conceived for a moment, that incapacity and misconduct in the Bank, would not be disqualified for the General Service of Government, and, therefore, the loss of valuable provision was supposed over both parties alike. Again, the tie of a pension, claimable on the payment of Rupees 50,000 after a service of 25 years, would prove, it must be conceded, but a feeble barrier against present dishonesty of purpose. This is not matter of opinion, but fact. The Bank has been found inadequate to prevent individuals from exposing themselves to the loss of it, and therefore, the framers of the present Charter were justified in not considering it as a sufficient additional security to the honesty of the Civilian, so to render it expedient to introduce any alteration in the previous scale applicable to all parties.

11.—In regard to any distinct and separate control over the Secretary, as distinguished from the General Control of the aggregate body of the Directors, the Mercantile Directors are of opinion, such a system would be most injurious to the interests of the Bank. It has already been found to be so. It must be obvious, that good business may be repelled and bad business accepted by the supposed independence on the part of a Secretary of the recommendations of those practically most conversant with local credit. Such a Secretary may take his stand on his sole liability to Government; could this be otherwise than productive of incalculable mischief to the Bank? It is on this account, that the Directors see great advantage in the Secretary's deriving the whole of his salary from the Bank itself; (k) and having ascertained the intentions of Government on this point, they will be prepared to submit to the Proprietors their own opinion on the subject of remuneration at a future opportunity.

12.—The Directors most fully admit that in a public institution like the Bank of Bengal, all reasonable checks should be directed to the possible contingency of dishonesty on the part of the Ministerial Officers, whether in or out of the service; but they believe the existing checks counteracting the risk, are as complete as they can be, and more particularly as regards the identical situation, now the subject of discussion. It is secured in the custody of Government Paper, Cash, and Notes by a double lock and key, exclusive of the absence of fraud in the several and independent departments of account, receipt, and payment. If defects had been shown or suspected during the administration of former Secretaries, the Directors would have been prepared to supply remedies, and they are now equally so to receive and consider any suggestions on the part of their Colleagues to strengthen the checks in force.

13.—That the Government itself, however, until the present moment, must have been satisfied with the nature of the existing checks, whether as regarded persons in or out of the service, is manifest, from its concurrence in the appointment of a Deputy Secretary, not a Civilian, authorised to discharge all the duties, to exercise all the powers to their fullest extent of the Secretary, when absent from sickness or any other cause. In short, he has been and may be again, according to the impression of the President in Council, "the issuer and controller of all the Notes and Paper of the Bank," giving the same security as the Secretary, and no more. The Government has not on this account, ever intimated apprehension of danger nor diminution of confidence.

14.—Unquestionably there must be great reliance on individual character, in all trusts liable to abuse. No mechanical checks can altogether obviate possibility of fraud. It is this reliance which has justified the Directors of the Bank, both official and mercantile, in permitting the Mizapore Agent to value on the Bank, and to receive large remittances in specie and notes, far exceeding in amount his securities. It is the same principle which has left in the single possession of the Khazanchi, the Native Treasurer of the Bank, daily balances of cash and notes, necessarily exceeding any amount of security he could offer. It is also the same principle which imparts confidence to the public in the Promissory Notes of the Government. Every one knows, that unprincipled rascality will break through all artificial contrivances to prevent imposition. Every one knows that the pecuniary advantages of the highest station in the civil service are due to the balance against the successful fraudulent issue of 20 or 30 Lakhs of Company's Paper; but character is a guarantee against the danger, and the purchaser rests satisfied with the simple signature of the Financial Secretary.

15.—The Directors remark, that the President in Council freely admits that "so far as concerns the Banking business of this great commercial city, a commercial man selected for his aptitude for business, and for acquaintance with the credit of individuals, and with the wants of the commercial community, might perhaps be a fitter head ministerial Officer, than a Government servant." But adds, "if the Directors therefore desire to confine their views to the Banking business of Calcutta or to make their principal aim separately from the profit of the extended circulation, obtained through the aid of the Government, the President in Council would unwillingly interfere in the selection of the Secretary; but it is necessary they should make their choice with a full knowledge of the probable consequences of a deviation from the practice established in respect to the selection of a Secretary." These consequences are stated to be "a modified reception of the Notes and other Papers in the Provinces of the Government in the interior—the recession of the Government from any further measures for extending such circulation, or the establishment of an Agency of its own for the purpose, more under its control and more entitled to its confidence."

16.—Had the alternative been presented in the shape of a certainty instead of a contingency, the Directors could not consistently with their duty to the interests of the Proprietary Body, and their own strong convictions on the subject, have hesitated in choice. Such as they may be desirous to co-operate with the Government in any well devised plan of extending the benefits of a sound paper currency in the Muzasil, by the establishment of Branch Banks in favourable localities, they cannot conceal from themselves that the advantages of the experiment must be of very gradual remote accomplishment; and, therefore, that it would be the height of impudence to expose the Bank to the immediate loss of the great sources of profit—the monetary operations of this "great Commercial City" through the instrumentality of an incompetent secretary, in order to obtain some further extension of Muzasil circulation or even to retain that which it now possesses. The advantages of the latter are comparatively trifling as may be clearly proved by the position of the rival Bank; which having no circulation of Paper without the Mahara District, and a very limited amount within, proceeds to its unobscured path, even if it does not pass this Bank, in spite of its virtual monopoly.

It is seen too, that the Establishment enjoys the confidence of the commercial community and is in the full employment of its capital, while, unfortunately, this Bank, exhibits a treasury of unproductive specie, often pressing to the whole amount of its issues, and rendering this source of profits considerably less valuable.

17.—This state of things naturally alarmed the Proprietary Body, (l) and it took occasion, on the intended resignation of the late Secretary being announced, to convey their opinions to the Directors thereof. The letter is understood to have been drawn up by a gentleman in the Civil Service himself, and deeply interested in the prosperity of the Bank; and it received the signatures of Proprietors, and Representatives of Proprietors, who were bound to act for the benefit of absent parties to the best of their judgment, and as they would act for themselves, to the extent of about 1750 shares of the market value of near one crore of rupees. That letter contained the same general view, which the Directors feel and have communicated in this Minute.

18.—The Directors too would respectfully submit to the mature deliberation of Government, whether on a difference of opinion in the selection of a Secretary, whom the Directors are bound, in accordance with the special provisions of the Charter to appoint, and under the strongest responsibility to select the most fit, the Govt.

(m) Vide paper, No. 9.

on that account, would squander itself justified in withdrawing from the promotion of objects of general advantage to the Country whose welfare and prosperity is premises over, although perhaps of little present profit to the Bank itself.

19. The Directors are fully sensible of the desirableness to act cordially and harmoniously with their colleagues representing the opinion of Government, in the administration of the important trusts committed to them. They have acted in hitherto, and will continue to do so on all occasions, except when, as at the present, they conscientiously believe it to be their constitutional duty and essential to the vital interest of the Proprietors of the Bank, to adopt a different course.

20.—In conclusion, they have only to state, indeed, in reply, that they have been guided by no other principle than that of acting without reference to class, and in virtue of the powers entrusted to them by the Charter, the most efficient ministerial Officer for the Bank, especially in relation to the most important sources of banking profits; and they confidently rely on the approbation of the great majority of Shareholders in the steps they have taken to protect their interest.

Extract from the Directors' proceedings of date the 19th December, 1839. (m)

"Agreed further, that a letter be written to Government, intimating the proposed resignation of Mr. Uday, and stating that the Directors will proceed to nominate their new Secretary on the 15th January also requesting to know whether in case the appointment be given to a person out of the Service, the Government will continue to pay the same portion of salary they now pay to Mr. Uday."

To G. Uday, Esquire, Secretary to the Bank of Bengal, Financial Department.

Sir,—I am directed by the Honourable the President in Council, to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated the 29th instant, with its enclosure, and in reply to request that you will convey to the Directors of the Bank of Bengal, the thanks of the Government, for the intimation made of the date when it is proposed to proceed to the election of a successor to yourself, consequently upon your vacating by acceptance of a further term, the Office you have held as Secretary to the Bank of Bengal.

2. In reply to the question submitted in the Extract of Proceedings forwarded by you, I am directed to state, that if the election of the Bank Secretary fall upon a person not in the Service of the Honourable East India Company, the motives which led to the grant of an augmentation of salary in your case, will no longer exist, and the Directors, therefore, must not expect that the Government will continue to incur the charge.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient Servant,

Council Chamber, 26th December, 1839

(m) Paper, No 1.

Financial Department.—Muzar, 13th January, 1840.

The Secretary submits to the Council that the election of a Secretary and Treasurer to the Bank of Bengal, is fixed to take place at ten o'clock on Wednesday next, (n). That he has reason to believe a majority of the elected Directors are disposed in favor of the election of a Commercial man, not in the Service of Government. Under these circumstances he submits the orders and instructions of the Council, as to whether he shall put a Government Servant in nomination for the Office in conformity with the practice observed on former occasions. Read the Bank Charter Act, as referring to the election of the Secretary and other Officers of the Bank.

Resolution.—It appears that by the constitution of the Bank, as established by Act No. VI. of 1839, the appointment of all Officers is vested in the Directors for the time being—whereof three are Equivalents of the Government; that since the Bank of Bengal was first established by Charter, the same has been the legal footing, on which these appointments have stood. But on all past occasions the Directors, desirous apparently of strengthening their connexion with the Government, have appointed a Member of the Civil Service, who latterly has been lent to the Bank, for the exclusive performance of the duties of Secretary and Treasurer in that establishment. Consequently upon this arrangement, the Government, reposing implicit confidence in every part of the Bank Management, has prosecuted, through its Agency, the important experiment to what extent a paper currency can safely and conveniently be introduced into India, and was prepared to have counter-measures to the same end through the same Agency; so which account the power of establishing Branch Banks in the interior with the sanction of Government and the Court of Directors, has been conferred by the late Act of Incorporation. But if the relation of the Bank towards the Government be changed in so important a particular as the appointment of the principal ministerial Officer through whom all the Notes and Paper of the Bank is issued and controlled, it becomes a serious question whether to continue the same confidential footing in respect to receiving the Notes and other Paper in the Treasuries of the Government in the interior—and the President in Council is of opinion, that in lieu of joining in any further measures for extending the circulation of Paper Money of the Bank's creation, it will be necessary, either to relinquish altogether such intention, or to devise an Agency that shall be more subject to the control, and more entitled to the confidence of the Government, because managed ministerially by an Officer bound to the Government by covenant and by the ties and advantages of the Civil Service. So far as concerns the Banking business of this great Commercial City, the President in Council freely admits, that a commercial man selected for his aptitude for business, and his acquaintance with the credit of individuals and with the wants of the Commercial community, might perhaps be a fitter head Ministerial Officer than a Government Servant, trained in the forms of general business only, which are incident to the Departments of administration. If the Directors, therefore, desire to confine their views to the Banking business of Calcutta, or to make their principle aim separately from the profits of the extended circulation obtained through the aid of the Government, the President in Council would unwillingly interfere in the selection of the Secretary; but it is necessary that they should make their choice with a full knowledge of the probable consequences of a deviation from the practice established in respect to the election of Secretary to the institution.

Ordered.—That the Secretary explain the above view to the Directors, and preliminarily in the nomination of "Resolved that the Directors of the Bank express their thanks for the exposition of the views of Government, in the event of their exercising the powers given by the Charter in the election of a Secretary; and that a Minute be prepared by the Directors, explaining their views on the subject of the communication, and the effect they consider its adoption would have upon the constitution of the Bank.

"Further, that it is essential that the Secretary be a person in whom the Directors have full confidence—and not one selected exclusively from the Civil Service."

"That with reference to that part of the Government Resolution, (q) which makes it a question whether upon a proceeding such as is now adopted, the Government might not devise an Agency more subject to the control and more entitled to the confidence of Government.

"The Directors consider the circumstance that three of their chairs being filled by Members of Government, secures to Government all the control the Charter intended they should exercise.

Proceed to elect from the names of candidates submitted to them, the Gentleman they consider best fitted for the duties of the Office without reference to his being Covenanted or Uncovenanted—and they, accordingly, elect Mr. Thomas Bracken as Secretary to the Bank."

"I should be very happy if I could, in any way, assist you to public employment.

"If a simple testimony to your qualifications can be of any use, I shall readily give it. But Lord Glenelg already knows and has acknowledged the services you rendered at the time of discussing the Indian Charter Act, and Mr. Senior's opinion of your general talent and character, must far outweigh any thing I could offer. There ought not indeed to be any hesitation in admitting your fitness for Office and your claims to consideration."

XXI. And it is hereby enacted, (r) that the said Directors shall have power to appoint such Officers as may be necessary to conduct the business of the said Bank, and to remove any officer of the said Bank, and to fix the salaries of such Officers, provided that the whole expence of the establishment of the said Bank shall not in any one year exceed sixty thousand rupees, without previous authority from the General Meeting of the proprietors.

XXIV. And the said Governor-General in Council further establishes and appoints, (s) that neither the person appointed to the Office of Secretary and Treasurer, nor the person appointed to the Office of Head-Accountant, nor the person appointed to the Office of Native Khazanchee, shall, during the time of their holding the said Offices, engage or have any concern in any kind of trade, or act as Agents or Brokers, or in any other business or employment, but shall confine themselves exclusively to the duty and business of their said Offices. Provided always, the restriction hereinbefore last mentioned, shall not be construed to extend to the case of persons in the Service or employment of the United Company of Merchants of England, Trading to the East Indies, holding Public Offices under the Government of Bengal—but that such persons shall notwithstanding be capable of holding either of the said Offices of Secretary and Treasurer or Head-Accountant to the said Bank. And the persons appointed to the Offices of Treasurer and Secretary and of Native Khazanchee, shall each of them, before he enters upon the duties of his said Office, give security to the satisfaction of the said Directors, for the due and faithful discharge thereof, in a sum of fifty thousand sicca rupees.

XIII. As above.

XXIV. And it is hereby enacted, that no person who shall hold the Office of Secretary, Treasurer,

Q.—“Were the Mercantile Directors bona fide free Agents—particularly with reference to the subscription of 25 lakhs of rupees to the 4 per cent. loan in 1824? A.—“I think they were, but it is impossible to estimate the precise extent of influence which the Government Directors have, which, indeed, partly at least, depends upon personal character. And though I regard the private Directors as sufficiently independent to resist what they thought wrong, and to have been in fact free Agents, I would not be understood to deny that the Government Directors do have, from the force of their official situation, considerable influence over them. Generally, indeed, collective bodies are probably too ready to yield an assent to those who take the lead, and I dare say, the private Directors of the Bank, yielded something to such influence on the occasion in question. Yet, certainly, if they had rejected our proposal, though they might at the moment have offended the Government Directors personally, they would not have been in the slightest degree the object of hostility to Government.”

To the Directors of the Bank of Bengal. (u)

GENTLEMEN,—We, the undersigned Proprietors and Representatives of Proprietors of the Bank of Bengal, understanding that it is the intention of the present Secretary and Treasurer to resign his situation and embark for Europe early in the ensuing month, respectfully take leave on this occasion, under a sense of the grave importance attaching to the appointment of a successor, to express our conviction, that by selecting individuals of known, and efficient habits in business—of knowledge of Banking Operations generally—of local experience and personal knowledge of the commercial community—and of general character, the affairs of the institution can be alone conducted with ability and success. The qualifications we have named are indispensable at all times, and particularly now, when a most formidable competition is established in this City. At the same time we deprecate all invidious comparisons, and have no hesitation in stating that, under a well regulated system, abundance of field exists to secure prosperity for both.

There can be no doubt, but that the Bank possesses, in regard to its circulation, an advantage not known to any other, but this privilege is only of comparative importance. In Calcutta, where the circulation of its notes is mainly to be sought, and where mercantile discounts constitute the source of principal profit in Banking Operations, this boon at present loses much of its value; and successful employment for our extended Capital must depend on the degree of favor which our executive management may acquire in the estimation of the public.

We are aware that hitherto the situation has been held by a Covenanted Officer of Government; but we can recognize no sufficient reason for continuing this preference.

The qualifications suggested to the test of fitness, should, be addressed to your native satisfaction, and we not only think that such are scarcely to be anticipated in those Members of the Civil Service who would look to the Bank as worthy of their acceptance—much less consent to remain for a period of at least five or six years, but that the Government do already require in their Official Representatives in the Direction every security in regard to that soundness of administration which the Charter prescribes, and their interests can reasonably claim.

We shall not enlarge on the powerful incentives which urge the propriety of this address. We feel confident its contents will receive from you all the attention its importance demands, and whilst we cannot but anticipate the full concurrence of the Government Directors in all the schemes developed, we would only remind you, that the New Charter Act of 1839, accords to the Directors full power to exercise their own discretion in the selection of a Secretary.

We have the honor to be,

Gentlemen,

Your obedient Servants,

(Sd.) By Parties representing between 17 and 1800 Shareholders.

Calcutta, 20th December, 1839.

1. Yesterday at a late hour of the evening I first saw the Minutes of the Directors composing the Majority who have concurred in the appointment of Mr. T. Broughn to be Secretary to the Bank of Bengal. But I saw it only after it had been sent in to the Government with a separate letter from the new Secretary, written “by desire of the Mercantile Directors of the Bank of Bengal.” Thus it has been sent into Government uncirculated, undiscussed, and even unseen by the colleagues of these Directors—a proceeding quite unprecedented, and that I hope is ascribable to a mistake of the new Secretary, for I cannot suppose my colleagues had any intention to constitute themselves into a separate body addressing Government as from themselves, without communication with the Government Directors, one of whom is their President.

2. I complain of this in limine, because in the Minutes of these Directors I have been misrepresented, and misrepresented in such a manner as a few words of verbal discussion would have at once set right.

3. It is stated in the commencement of the Minute, that the Majority of the Directors deemed Mr. Thomas Broughn the most eligible as well of the candidates as of the nominees of Mr. Official Director H. F. Finlay on the part of Government, and four names are inserted in the margin as it had put these gentlemen in nomination. This was not the case—the only question put by me to the vote was, whether the Secretary should be a Government servant or not. That being negatived by the Majority, as one was put in nomination not needed to be so. It is true in the course of the verbal discussions upon my motion, I mentioned that if it were carried it was not my intention to follow it up by naming on the part of Government any specific person, the Government having no desire to impose a Secretary on the Bank. That I had authority to mention the names of four persons who had been in situations to be known to the commercial community, as likely persons to give satisfaction, but if the Directors had a preference for any other, I had no doubt that our representation to the Government his services would be granted. This is a widely different thing from putting candidates in nomination, and it is essential that the part intended to be taken by the Government at the election, should be set in its proper light for the perfect understanding of the Proprietors, on which account I beg that this Minute, besides being sent up to Government, may be printed as to be laid before the Proprietors at the Meeting of the 6th proximo.

4. Upon the arguments and reasoning of the Minute of my Colleague, I shall at the same time offer a few brief remarks.

5. It is admitted that the invariable practice since the Bank was instituted, has been to elect a Servant of the Government to be Secretary, but it is alleged, that the past Secretaries were elected on the ground of their personal merits, not because of their being Government Servants, that they were in each instance, the fittest of the candidates who offered, and, therefore, obtained the election without compromising the principle, as established by the old and recent Charters, that the best man should be elected whether a Government servant or not.

6. That the Charter of the Bank makes no condition as to the class of persons from whom the Secretary is to be elected, and never has done so, is not in the least denied; and it is not essential to the question, whether the Government Servants were chosen because they were the best qualified of those who offered themselves as Candidates—all that is maintained is that out of this practice a state of relation between the Government has arisen which will be changed, if a different system be followed in the present election. In reliance upon its continuance, the Government had set apart an allowance in augmentation of the Secretary's salary expressly for the purpose of making the office such a one as would be held for a considerable time by the same servant, so as to prevent the evil of frequent change consequent upon the routine of promotion amongst the class. In reliance on the same relation being maintained from a sense of interest, which had subsisted for more than thirty years without needing any law or rule of the Charter to enforce it, the Government at the late revision of the Charter having the point distinctly before them, resolved to leave the relation so to stand without imposing it as obligatory, by insertion of a clause to the effect in the Charter Act, and now that building upon the omission, the majority of the Directors desire to change the practice, the Government has explained in a specific resolution the view it takes of the change and the entanglement it may produce between the Bank and Government.

7. The principle maintained by the Commercial Directors, is let the office be given to the most worthy, whether a Government servant or a stranger. This certainly is a very plausible theory and would be unanswerable, if it were immaterial to the Bank how it stood towards the Government, and if the Bank would be unaffected by the withdrawal of the Government confidence, and if the Secretary, whether a Government servant or not, would have the same precise business to manage. But it is well known that the Bank has a Paper circulation of a crore, which is complete for all the purposes of money, only, because of the Government having ordered it to be received in Revenue payments in Bengal and Bihar, and likewise that a Bank standing on its own credit only, like the Union Bank, cannot keep out ten lakhs of paper, even though its Capital paid up amounts to a crore. Through this paper circulation the means of the Bank of Bengal are doubled, and its times favorable for extended business, its profits and its dividends are also doubled, purely from the Institutions having these means at command, in addition to its capital and deposits in Account Current.

8. The Commercial Directors will not deny that the loss of this means would materially impair the profits of the Bank. Even the admission of other Institutions to equal benefits in this respect, would destroy the profit in proportion as the paper was substituted for that of the Bank of Bengal. If therefore, it be dependent upon the choice of a Secretary, whether the Institution is to continue to enjoy this exclusive means of profit, surely there is a motive for allowing the balance to incline in favour of a Government Servant, even though for other reasons it might be desired to choose elsewhere. The "Desir digniori" principle of selection, requires to be qualified with the condition that the worthiest should be selected of those whose selection will be attended with no sacrifice.

9. The ground taken by the Government is not that the Bank shall take such a person as Secretary: under the condition of its confidential relations being withdrawn; but that the election shall be made from a class composed of several hundred, and it is surely going very far for the Commercial Directors to declare that a fit Secretary is not to be found in that class; or to uphold the candidate they favour, as superior, because of his past connexion with a Bank that once existed, to any individual that can be found in that class; and thus they urged with the same breath that they bear testimony to the rare qualities of past Secretaries of the Bank, who were all of the class they now repudiate.

10. It is stated that the nomination of three of the Directors, is the constitutional relation in which the Government stands to the Bank, and that the attempt to interfere in the election of Secretary, is extra to the Charter and prejudicial to the independent action of the body of Directors, of whom the Majority are elected and generally mercantile men; and it is assumed that a Secretary who takes his stand upon "his sole liability to Government", might act against the recommendation of the Majority in rejecting good business and accepting bad, to the material prejudice and loss of the Bank.

11. To answer the last part of this argument, first, it may suffice to observe that the Directors, that is, the Majority of them, have by Charter the power of removal, as well as of appointment; and this power will always be found sufficient to ensure the obedience of any Ministerial Officer, whether a Government servant or not, to the vote and resolutions of the Majority.

12. And with respect to the Government seeking an extra means of restraint or security, besides that provided for by the Charter, it is sufficient to observe that they ask it as the condition of giving facilities of circulation and consequent means, which the Bank is not entitled to by Charter. The alternative is distinctly put in the Government Resolution, that if the Directors confine their views to the Banking business of the Bank and make that their principal aim, separately from the profits to be derived from a recognised and extended circulation of notes, then of course there is no call for the Government to interfere at all in the nomination of Officers to carry on that business. The condition of electing a Government servant is imposed solely because of the Bank's having a privileged circulation, and because it is believed that the Proprietors, and hitherto the Directors, attach a high value to the continuance of the same advantage.

13. In the 16th paragraph of the Minute, the Mercantile Directors state broadly, that if the alternative of the loss of their privileged circulation "had been presented in the shape of a certainty instead of a contingency," they could not have hesitated in their choice; because it would have been the height of imprudence to expose the Bank to the immediate loss of the great sources of profit derivable from the monetary operations of this great Commercial City, "through the instrumentality of an incompetent Secretary, in order to obtain some further extension of Mutual circulation, or even to retain that which the Bank now possesses." I have read this paragraph with much pain, and I speak as a great Proprietor, rather than as a Government Director, because if such are the sentiments of the Directors, they surely take a mistaken view of the interests of the Institution they have to manage.

14 In the first place, it is not a question of electing an incompetent Secretary, nor of taking any particular individual at all: it is, merely a question whether, to choose a competent one from a certain class or a competent one generally without restriction to a class. The paragraph, therefore, can be construed only as a declaration by the elected Directors, that they attach comparatively small value to their privileged circulation, and consider the profits to be derived by Banking with their capital only, through the Agency of a person of their own class, as seconded to Banking in a spirit of accommodation, as of much superior importance and value, to the profits of Banking through the agency of a selected Government Servant, not only with their capital, but with the capital doubled and trebled through a wide and privileged circulation.

15 Surely these cannot be the sentiments of the Proprietors. It is true that in the course of the past twelve months, the condition the Calcutta market has been such that the Bank has not wanted the additional means afforded by its circulation. The business done has not exceeded the Capital. But short, indeed, must be the view of those who draw deductions from the state of things in this twelve month only—it is not two years since the Proprietors deemed their Banking means sufficient, having a circulation out of a Crore and a half, and upwards of two Crores employed in consequence in Banking business. They have a lively recollection of the 12, 15 and even 17 per cent. dividends declared in consequence under a Government Secretary, which are rates of profit that never could be realised unless the institution banked largely with the means derived from its circulation. So long as the market is unfavourable and the demand for accommodation small, the Union Bank and any other Bank of Credit will of course divide equal profits with the Bank of Bengal; indeed the Union Bank ought to divide higher, because, if done business at nearly the same rates, and, relying on the Bank of Bengal, has no reserve of cash which it is bound by the Charter to keep unemployed.

17 It certainly has been put abroad that the Bank of Bengal lost much good business through the understanding at the once to strict rule, which characterised the proceedings of the late Secretary, who was a Government Servant. I am free to confess that I have myself as a Director, had occasion to notice something of an unaccommodating spirit in some of his proceedings. The Government Directors never supported him in this line, and it is not to be presumed because the affairs of the Bank were in one person's hand administered without due consultation, that therefore that must be the character of all Government officers who might be chosen to succeed him. Great allowance is due to our late Secretary. It fell to his lot to fill that important Office at the time of the great mercantile failures, and the early part of his career in it, was marked by losses from over-taxing in the Directors in their grants of accommodation, such as the Bank had never experienced before, and I hope and trust will never experience again. It was the observation of the consequences of such accommodation that gave its character to the Secretary's over-conduct, and made him over-zealous in the application of every possible safeguard devised by the Charter, or prescribed by the rules of practice introduced under the authority of the Directors.

18 I advert to this particularly, because I think a very unfair advantage has been taken of the over-scrupulous zeal and pertinacious adherence to rule exhibited by the late Secretary, and because it has been held up to Proprietors as the main cause of the smallness of their two last dividends: whereas the reduction of business is attributable to the fluctuation of the market entirely. The Secretary's being right or conciliatory can never make a difference of an anna in the rate of dividend whereas in times when there is a demand for Banking, accommodation, the possession or the want of the additional means afforded by a circulation, to the amount of, double the Capital, may and must affect the ratio of 2 to 1, that is, to the extent of 8 per cent or more.

19. The alarm of the Proprietors alluded to at the close of the Minute, is founded altogether on erroneous data, and when they signed the representation erroneously circulated amongst them in aid of the canvass of a Candidate not in the Government Service, they assuredly did not mean to support the position assumed by the Directors, that consultation in the Bank Secretary was to be sought even at the sacrifice of the privileged circulation. It remains to be seen when all the papers shall be laid before the Proprietors and their vote taken at the meeting of the 6th Proximo, whether they support the Directors in this doctrine.

20. They have to decide whether it is for the benefit of the Bank to have a Secretary of the choice of their Directors from amongst the Government Servants paid on the scale of 2,800 per mensem, whereas the Government pays 1,200, or to have a commercial man with a salary of only 1,600, unless they pay the difference from their dividends.

21. They have to decide whether those dividends will be improved by choosing a commercial man in order that the Banking business may be managed more agreeably for commercial men, and by doing business in consequence with means diminished in proportion as the circulation is curtailed; and whether it is impossible to find a man in the Service, who will do business as agreeably without entailing any such sacrifice.

22. They have to decide whether, by looking out of the Service, they will be likely to obtain a better Secretary than by choosing from it one who will suck by the Bank more steadfastly; and this is a very material point, for through the Government add on to the salary, assurance given of many years service to the appointment, whereas a commercial man, if he establishes the character of being an able as well as a trusty man, will assuredly receive the offer to join some mercantile establishment on terms with which the Bank can compete. Such offers have won men heretofore from the brightest prospects of the Civil Service even from the Secretariat of Government, and it is only through recent notice from the Hon'ble Court, imposing the condition of forgoing the Service with all its advantages, that the services of good men are now secured to Government. But a commercial man seeking fortune will always be open to such offers, to the great prejudice of the business of the Bank, if they be made to its Secretary. The Bank has only one way to save itself from such consequences and that is, by selecting for its Secretary a person never likely to have such offers. Such a man will remain forever an incubus upon the institution, but the argument in favor of a general election from the most worthy of all classes, does not assume such a choice.

23. It cannot be necessary for me, at the conclusion of this Minute, to repeat what I here many times declared verbally, and what Mr. Bischoff himself well knows that in my opposition to his election I have no personal feeling. I oppose him because he is not of the class required by Government, not of the class necessary to secure to the Bank the retention of most important profits and advantages, because, in short, I look upon his election as prejudicial in a high degree to the interests of the Proprietors, and of myself amongst the number. It gave me infinite satisfaction to be able to mention the name of Mr. Backer's brother, who is of the Civil Service, amongst those whose election would be satisfactory in every respect, because this alone must show, if bitter evidence were wanting, that it is the principle I am contending for and not the individual.

equity, good faith, and dignity of this Government, as well as on a sense of its own convenience,* as not to apprehend the commission of any act prejudicial to the Bank, to the mercantile interests, or to the country itself, on account of a difference of opinion on a point which the Charter has left entirely open. But in making this remark, the Directors must guard themselves from being thought to acquiesce in their Colleague's views of the importance of the Mofussil circulation to the Bank, or that the issue of a crore of rupees of paper is dependent on its reception in the Collectorates of Bengal and Behar. It would be too tedious to go into details shewing the comparatively trifling benefit to the Bank from its Notes going into the Mofussil, for they can scarcely be said to be current there. The Collectors, under the long-standing Orders of Government, remit to the Calcutta Treasury all Notes received in payment at Revenue, when they amount, it is said, to 5 or 10,000 Rs., and he is not authorised to re-issue any. They come down in halves and are sent into the Bank at once. Again, the transmission of Notes into Mofussil, is much limited by the Treasury selling Bills in Calcutta at par on a very small premium, on a considerable number of the Collectorates, and making it even more disadvantageous, therefore, for those, who require cash in the Interior, to purchase such Bills instead of sending up Notes. The Notes too that do go up, are large in value, and not for small sums, added to a to circulate among the population, and are redeemed, at a discount—all circumstances unfavourable to their permanently keeping out.

The profit from this source is not perhaps 1/50th of that derivable from the discount and loan operations in Calcutta, although its exact amount is subject of ascertainment. But, according to a statement at page 53 of "papers printed for the use of the Proprietors of the Bank of Bengal 1837," furnished by Mr. H. T. Prinsep, the Directors are led to suppose that 10 lakhs of rupees would be the utmost extent of the Mofussil circulation, when the whole circulation was above one crore, and as the latter became reduced so proportionately would the former, averaging probably not more than 7 or 8 lakhs at the outside.

The elected Directors have already shewn, that the working of the Union Bank is a contradiction to the hypothesis of their colleague. Without any circulation, or at least a very small one, it makes on the same amount of Capital, as good or better dividends indicative of the little use of a paper circulation, however accredited, without commercial business and popular favor.

8. The Elected Directors demur to the propriety of the restriction imposed by their colleague on the Debt Dignity principle, as contradictory to the very nature of that principle. What statesman ever before announced, "you may have the best Medical Officer to attend your expedition, that you can find in Lincoln's Inn, but you must not go to Surgeon's Hall to look for one." The Directors, on the contrary, say—"you may go to take him by all means!"

9. The elected directors impute their colleague's 9th paragraph to the haste with which he appears to have read their Minute. They cannot acknowledge the justice or the propriety of his attempting to enforce any conditions on the exercise of their legal and constitutional power, to elect a Secretary from any class; but they have never declared that a fit Secretary may not be found in the Civil Service.

It is sufficient for them, that of the candidates or nominees or rather "of those whose names were mentioned" on the 15th ultimo, they selected the person they thought the fittest—the grounds of their selection are before the Government and the Proprietors; and how, therefore, the charge of inconsistency and "repudiation" is brought against them, they cannot conceive. Was Mr. Darn among the nominees? At the same time, it is no reflection upon the Civil Service to say, that since the trading character of the East India Company has been done away, it is less likely than formerly to find persons in it qualified for Bank Secretaries. The education of all must be supposed to be more directed to the study of Hindoo and Mahomedan Law, and to the political and diplomatic relations of the country, than to its commercial and monetary features.

10. Mr. H. T. Prinsep observes, in reply to his Colleague's remark, that a Secretary who takes his stand upon his sole liability to Government, might go against the recommendation of the majority in rejecting good business and accepting bad, to the material prejudice and loss of the Bank, that "as the majority have the power of removal as well as of appointment, this power would always be sufficient to ensure the obedience of any ministerial Officer, whether a Government servant or not." But surely their colleague, unaccountably forgets, that at this moment he is approving, if not urging, the application of coercion, through a threat, on the exercise of this very power, and if coercion can successfully be applied at one time, what is to prevent recourse to it on another. Indeed, it is in this view of the present case, that all minor considerations must give way, for the interests of the Proprietary body would be thrown prostrate at the foot of their colleague, if the Directors were deterred from their course of action, within the provisions of the Charter, under any apprehension of his hostility.

11. The Directors find also, a considerable confusion and discrepancy in the 13th paragraph of their colleague's Minute.

The Government Resolution, limited its contingent intentions to a modification of the existing rules for the reception of Bank Notes in the Treasuries of the Interior, and to a recession from establishing Branch Banks and the consequent extension of circulation through them; but their Colleague in the use of general expressions, susceptible of a much wider application. The Directors admit that by the 38th Clause of the present Charter, the establishment of Branch Banks requires the sanction of the Governor-General of India, but they cannot concede to their Colleague the propriety of the sanction being withheld on grounds foreign to the intrinsic expediency or otherwise of such branches; but no doubt the Government has the legal power to declare it will not sanction them, without the condition of having a civilian elected as a Secretary. To have accepted this condition—not however positive, but contingent—on the present occasion, would have been in their opinion more injurious to the interests of the Bank, than declining it, and the

* There is no doubt that it is as great a convenience to the Government and its officers as to the Bank itself that Notes should be available for its receipts and issues especially in Calcutta. There are 80 lakhs of rupees payable on London and China bills on one day of this month and what establishment would be able to make such an issue from the General Treasury, if Bank Notes were not forthcoming for the better part of the payment. So when loans are advertised for discharge or any extensive operation of finance has to be conducted, the facility afforded by Notes for such transactions is one of the greatest benefits resulting from the present system of Banking.

Directors have shown why. They apprehend they might be exposed in jeopardy, the great sources of the Bank's profits—the operations in Calcutta.

If, then, the Mofussil circulation were greater than it actually is, the Mercantile Directors may ask can there be the absence of business in Calcutta fills their coffers with a corresponding amount in specie. They would submit also to their colleagues, whether it would be a sounder policy to rely on the occasional de-angement of the money-market, arising from political causes, for high temporary dividends, than to adopt measures calculated to bring back to the Bank a steady, permanent business through the instrumentality of the Commercial Community, and thus secure, under ordinary circumstances, a continuance of even and reasonable profit.

12. The elected Directors regret to see the introduction of the late Secretary's proceedings on this discussion. They had scrupulously avoided direct reference to them. Their election of the present Secretary was guided by the principle, the plausible principle, as their colleague terms it, of endeavouring to choose the fittest person from the candidates before them, and not from any wish to make invidious comparisons between him and his predecessor. But as the latter has been brought forward so prominently, they are prepared to shew, if called upon, that his "over-scrupulous seal and pertinacious adherence to rule," did infinite mischief to the Bank.

Their colleague palliates this great error of management, by stating, that the over-laxity of Directors in the early part of the late Secretary's career, occasioned some heavy losses. The Directors, without pretending to deny or admit the accuracy of the charge, thus vaguely made against their Predecessors, may be permitted to ask, were there no Government Directors in those days, or was the Secretary not in the service? It is the duty of the Secretary to bring to the notice of all the Directors any transactions which may appear to him of a partial or dangerous character. Why was this not done on the alleged laxity occurring?

13. With all deference, the elected Directors presume to think that the Proprietors and Representatives of Proprietors, who signed the letter to the Directors, are as able to judge of what is best for their interest, as their colleague can be. The letter in question referred to no particular individual. It laid down the general principle, that the Directors should be guided by certain tests of qualification, free from all prejudice in favour of or against any class. The Directors have adopted that principle, but on their own responsibility and in virtue of their legal powers, and in having done so, they have the fullest confidence in the approbation of those, by whose suffrages they were elected.

14. The elected Directors believe that the Proprietors will fully agree with them, that a Secretary paid entirely by themselves, is as likely to do his duty as faithfully, and as successfully, as if only partly paid, and that the appeal to the equity of savings a few hundred rupees per month, will signify but, on a great question of principle like the present

15. The possibility of finding a man to the Service qualified for the Secretaryship is not the question the Directors have decided, or that the Proprietors will have to decide. The Directors have appointed the Candidate they thought the most fit of those before them on the day of election, and that appointment is final, so long as the Secretary's conduct be satisfactory to them, and their successors. But unquestionably the Proprietors may approve or disapprove of the Directors' exercise of the power conferred by Charter upon them.

16. The elected Directors beg to remark that, under the ordinary motives which influence human conduct, the permanency of a Secretary is more likely to follow where there is no pension to retire upon, than where there is, and that the certainty of such pension in the case of a Civilian, is a sufficient counter balance to the contingency of a non-Civilian being induced to join a Mercantile House. They also suggest, that it is very easy to require the notice of a twelve month previous to any Secretary's resigning his appointment, except in the event of sickness. Moreover, the creditable ambition of a talented Civilian, is as likely to lead him to look to the Secretariat of the Financial, Political and Judicial Departments of the Service or higher station, as the offer of a seat in a Mercantile House would tempt a non-civilian from the Bank.

17.—The elected Directors rejoice to observe, that their colleague's opposition to Mr Bracken, proceeds from no doubt of that Gentleman's personal fitness for the situation to which he has been appointed, but they may be permitted to add, that it is also due to Mr W Bracken to state, that he never canvassed the Directors in opposition to his elder brother.

Mr Secy Prinsep's Minute, 16th August, 1836.

18.—In conclusion, the elected Directors cheerfully submit their motives and their decision to the Proprietary body, deeply impressed with the obligation of the duty they have had to perform—fully sensible of the great advantages of the continuance of harmony and confidence between the Government and the Bank—but equally so, that the continuance can only be firm, lasting, and profitable, so long as the provisions of the Charter are faithfully adhered to.

TO THE HONORABLE T. C. ROBERTSON, Esq.
President of the Council of India in Council,
&c. &c. &c.

HONORABLE SIR,—We have the honour to state, for the information of your Honor in Council, that we have appointed Mr. Thomas Bracken to be our Secretary and Treasurer, in succession to Mr George Udny

We request that your Honor will be pleased to issue the necessary orders to all public offices of the said appointment.

We are about to notify to the public, through the Calcutta Gazette (the Official Gazette of Government) the appointment of Mr Bracken to be our Secretary and Treasurer.

This appointment has been made under protest of the Government Directors, who have called a General Meeting, at which the Proceedings of the Directors will be laid before the Proprietors.

We have the honor to be,

Respectfully Sir,

Your most obedient humble Servants,

To the Directors of the Bank of Bengal.

Genl. } GENTLEMEN,— Dept. }

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of two letters from you and your Secretary, dated the 15th instant, with the enclosures mentioned to accompany the letter, and in reply to state, that under the circumstances of Mr. Bracken's appointment, the Hon'ble the President in Council deems it preferable to postpone the announcement in the Gazette and other usual notification to the Authorities of Government, until the result of the Meeting advertised for the 6th Proximo, shall have been reported.

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen,

Your most Obedient Servant,

H. T. PRINSEP,

Secretary to the Government of India.

COUNCIL CHAMBER,
The 22d January, 1840.

[Hark, Feb. 6.]

BANK OF BENGAL MEETING.

The Meeting of Proprietors of this Bank, was held this morning at the Bank; where about sixty Members were present.

At the proposition of Bahoo Dwarkanath Tagore, seconded by Mr. Cullen, James Pattie, Esq., C. S., was called to the chair.

Mr. H. T. Prinsep, opened the business of the Meeting, by stating the objects for which they had met, and regretted exceedingly that a collision (the first which had ever occurred) should have taken place between the Government and the Bank. The Bank Directors say, they may appoint whom they please, the Government say nothing to the contrary, for the appointment is quite constitutional with the Charter; but, Government say, if they choose (though he would not say or think that they would) withhold the circulation of the notes of the Bank from their treasury; he was sorry that the Directors thought so lightly of the privilege which the bank enjoys exclusively in this particular, which constituted in fact, the whole circulation of their immense capital, a privilege which the Government were never bound to afford and could take away whenever they thought proper. When the deposit of 20 lakhs in the Treasury was made by the Bank, the privilege was granted, but this exclusive privilege may be withdrawn or extended to the advantage of other establishments as may be thought necessary; it was this alone which allowed the circulation of its large capital, and the Union Bank or any other Bank may come forward with a deposit of 20 lakhs, and be allowed the same privilege if Government thought proper, which would soon make the circulation of their notes equal the amount of the Bank of Bengal notes. Government say, if you wish to retain this exclusive privilege, you must abide by the usual custom of selecting your officers from the Service—and recollect, the notes of this Bank are not a legal tender.

If they had been appointed as such by the Government, you might have Government to relieve the position. It may have been supposed that Mr. E. had opposed the election of Mr. Bracken from personal feelings—it was not so; the question whether will be a question of competency or incompetency, Mr. Bracken might be fit for the office in any body else, but the question was whether the relation with subsisting between the Government and the Bank, should be changed or not, and not having submitted on the part of the Government their views on the subject, he begged to proceed.

That it is the opinion of this Meeting, that the confidential relation in which the Bank of Bengal stands towards Government as evidenced by the selection of a Government servant to be Secretary, ought not to be changed at the hazard of the consequences indicated as possible in the Government Resolution of 12th ultimo. This not being seconded fell to the ground.

Bahoo Dwarkanath Tagore, with a few words on Proprietors not having the right or power to elect a Secretary themselves, but merely to confirm or disavow the selection of the Directors, moved—

That it is the opinion of this Meeting, that the Directors have exercised their elective functions constitutionally to the Charter, and in a manner calculated to be beneficial to the Bank.

This was seconded by Mr. Cullen and carried, Mr. Prinsep being the only dissenter.

Mr. Bracken then rose and addressed the Meeting, not as Secretary but as a Proprietor. He said that when he was about to become a candidate for the office of Secretary, he sent his application to Lord Auckland, who placed his name among the list of candidates, and he was not prepared to meet with that extreme opposition from the Government which he had had, though his Lordship no doubt was favorable to the service, and had another candidate in his eye at the time of his being put in nomination. If he had anticipated this kind of opposition, he would not have left a lucrative situation, which he then held, but would have remained as agent for the Agency Bank, and not have given cause for any fear of detriment to the Bank. But although a humble individual, he thought it his duty to continue a candidate, when so broad a principle was put in question, whether a man could be found out of the Service fit for the duties of Secretary of the Bank.

Mr. Trotter then moved the following, which was seconded by Mr. Bagshaw and carried—

“That this Meeting, entertaining unbounded confidence in the support of the Government of India towards this Institution, and consistently with the wise, liberal, and enlightened policy which has generally characterized its measures, and also with due reference to the principles upon which this Bank is constituted by its Charter, the Proprietors now present cannot for one moment suppose that the contingency expressed in the Minutes of Government, dated the 13th ultimo, could ever be carried into effect, in justice either to the Proprietors or the interest of the Government themselves—and that these sentiments are recorded for the satisfaction of distant Proprietors.”

The thanks of the Meeting were then proposed to the Chairman by Mr. Patrick, and seconded by Mr. Bagshaw, and the Meeting separated.—Calcutta Courier, Feb. 6.

THE BANK OF BOMBAY.

We subjoin a memorial addressed to the Court of Directors in London, by the Chairman of a meeting of the Proprietors (holders of the Scrip) of the Bank of Bombay. It is an important document, and deserves particular attention.

TO THE HONORABLE THE COURT OF DIRECTORS, OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.

Resolved. That a memorial be transmitted to the Honorable the Court of Directors, expressing the thanks of the Proprietors for the very prompt satisfaction of the Honorable Court in annulling the decision of the Government of India to sell the shares in the Bank of Bombay by Public Auction, and also representing to the Honorable Court the heavy losses and great inconvenience, to which the proprietors have been subjected, in consequence of the delays that have taken place in giving effect to their instructions; and at the same time to point out the discouraging effects on public enterprise generally, which the present instant interference in the detail of the affairs of the Proprietors, in so called to province, if the course pursued by the Government of India relating to the Bank of Bombay, be not disapproved of.

Mr. Greenhill then proposed, seconded by Dr. J. J. Gordon and Davidson, with the Chairman of the meeting, Mr. Skinner, be appointed to prepare and transmit a memorial to be signed by the Chairman, according to the foregoing Resolution.

A Bank was approved of by the Bombay Government, under Sir Robert Grant, and a Charter granted by them subject to your confirmation.

3 After a very considerable expense to your Memorialists, a Charter was obtained, under the express authority of your Honorable Court, and was formally tendered to your Memorialists by the Bombay Government, and accepted by a General Meeting of the Bank Proprietors held on the 30th December 1838. At this General Meeting also, a list of Proprietors, which had been previously publicly exhibited in the Town Hall, was approved of, and with the appearance of the Charter was at the same time forwarded to Government, for the purpose of their names being engrossed on the Charter, which it was thought the Government of India, in accordance with instructions from your Honorable Court, had merely by virtue of their Legislative Power to pass into a Law in the usual manner, your Honorable Court, need scarcely be here, reminded, that in opposition to your express instructions His Honor the Vice President in Council, determined that all the shares of the Bank, the property of the Individual Proprietors, should be sold by Public Auction, and that the premium there were likely to sell for, should belong to Government, though the value these Shares had attained, was caused solely by the exertion of your Memorialists, and at their cost. Owing to the remonstrance addressed to the right Honorable the Governor General by the Bank Committee, this intended spoliation of confiscation of the property of your Memorialists,—for this extraordinary decision can be considered as nothing less,—was prevented by his Lordship withholding his assent, and by referring the matter to the decision of your Honorable Court.

4. With a consideration for the great importance of the interests affected, your Honorable Court suffered no delay to occur in giving your decision, but with an expedition and promptitude, for which your Memorialists must ever feel most grateful, your Honorable Court reiterated your commands, to carry your original instructions into effect. Though this despatch reached India in the month of June, your Memorialists grieve to inform your Honorable Court that your orders have not yet been complied with, nor will likely be for some months to come. Your Memorialists, through their Committee, applied for a copy or for the substance of that despatch, to guide them in their proceedings, but though such could only be in reply to their own direct appeal to your Honorable Court, your Memorialists remain to this day in ignorance of the nature of these instructions in any official form, relating solely as they also did, to the interests of your Memorialists. The only reply made to the respectful request of the Bank Committee by His Honor the Vice President in Council, for a copy of the substance of the orders issued in regard to the Bank from your Honorable Court being, that your memorialists were at liberty to apply to your Honorable Court for a copy of the same,

5. Having become acquainted that by that despatch your Honorable Court distinctly instructed the Charter to be given to the existing proprietors, expressing your hope that any individual claims in dispute would, in your opinion, be amicably settled by them. Your Memorialists lost no time in taking advantage of what they thus knew to be your commands, and on the 15th of July, the Committee addressed the Government, proposing three modes of arrangement for their consideration, and at the same time begged to be honored with the instructions of His Honor the Vice President in Council, if none of these should meet his Honor's views. The Committee, however, have not, up to this time, been honored even with an acknowledgement of the receipt of the same.

6. On the 16th of September, it would appear, the Bank Committee were called on by the Government of Bombay, for certain information, which they furnished on the 25th of the same month, and on that occasion, with a view of removing all cause of delay from the claims for shares preferred, they placed at the disposal of the Government of India, a number of shares that had been appropriated conditionally, amounting to three times the total number claimed. This ample concession the Government of India passed without notice, and in a despatch dated the 5th November, received by this Government about the 8th December last, your Memorialists are informed instead of deciding on the claims preferred, to the admission of which your Memorialists have offered to accede, and which your Memorialists would submit, were alone subject in any degree to the criticism of the Government, but the Government of India had determined to adopt in preference a list of persons, many of whom the Committee of your Memorialists had pointed out were not claimants; several of whom had formally relinquished all right and title whatever to be Proprietors. Others, moreover, resigned by their respective holders to the Committee, had been by them, with the sanction of your Memorialists, transferred to others, many of whom also had actually received back their deposits with interest, and some of whom can never in consequence of their advanced know of the Bank's insolvency be considered till after it has been liquidated, thus amounting to offer with the left hand what the right is ready to give.

7. It will be obvious to your Honorable Court, that many changes in the original or first list in so numerous a Proprietary body, would necessarily follow from the protracted delay which had occurred, and from the uncertainty, during so long a period, when a charter would be got, for though each monthly Packet from England gave some hope of such, the time or period never could to a certainty be calculated on, when the Charter eventually would arrive.

8. Owing chiefly to this, the original list underwent several changes, but all such were made and arranged, for under resolutions of General Meetings which there was every care taken to make as public as possible, by regularly printing the Proceedings in all the Public newspapers, and by circulating them amongst the Proprietors, every one thus having the opportunity to dissent, if so disposed, and in this way several parties took the places of others, so that your Memorialists cannot but view the determination of the Government of India to adopt a list differing from that thus properly approved of by the Proprietors, as not only depriving many Parties of their recognized property, but as inconsistent with the orders of your Honorable Court, as arbitrary and unjust in many respects, as well as an unusual interference with the affairs of the parties who preferred no claims and had not applied to the Honorable Board, as is more fully detailed in the correspondence with the Government. Though your Memorialist could not but thus view this decision by the Government, the Bank Committee yet expressed their determination to throw no obstacles in the way of the immediate establishment of the Bank on this account, but to recommend the acceptance of this Charter to the Proprietors, exactly as His Honor the Vice President in Council might choose to grant it; and rather than allow the interests of a large body of Persons and the Public generally to be sacrificed offered every concession, yielding every point, and urgently prayed that the Charter might in return be granted, as directed by your Honorable Court, without any further delay. In pressing this most important point, your Memorialists drew the attention of His Honor the Vice President in Council to the heavy losses the Proprietors had already suffered by the expenditures of money, monthly increasing, the large sums necessarily kept in readiness, to the impotence also of enabling the Bank to open by the 1st of January in order to take advantage of the few succeeding months of the busy season, the better to dispose of a portion, at least, of the large capital required to be at once paid up, as well as to the grievous injuries in various ways sustained by the uncertainty of the result and the veritable delay already seriously felt and loudly complained against.

9. Nevertheless, your Memorialists would humbly represent, that although the Proprietors offered to pay up the whole capital on the 1st January, and that the Charter was to be passed into law on the 17th of that month, that a provision has nevertheless been introduced against the wishes of the Proprietors themselves and altogether unequal for, to prevent the opening of the Bank till March following, and thus virtually imposing a most onerous burden, till the season for business, as specially noticed to His Honor the Vice President in Council, will have entirely passed, operating as it does upon the interests of the Proprietors, nearly the same as if your Honorable Court's orders had been suspended for another year, to the great detriment both of the public and private interest of this Presidency.

10. When then your Memorialists address to the clear and positive orders of your Honorable Court, received by His Honor the Vice President in Council upwards of a year ago, your Memorialists cannot but feel that they would have had cause of complaint that so much delay had already taken place, even if your Honorable Court had not felt it requisite to interpose your authority; but when your Memorialists recur to the fact, that your Honorable Court, by a second mandate resolved in June last, directed the Charter to be granted to your Memorialists without any delay whatever; and that His Honor the Vice President in Council, did find it practicable and convenient to pass the Charter to the Bank of Bombay, after a publication of 6 weeks only from the receipt of your first order, and nearly two years ago, your Memorialists cannot but particularly feel the delay thus suffered to occur, as a serious grievance, the more especially when your Memorialists call to recollection, that the same despatch, under which the Charter for the Bank of Bombay has passed, and which has been in full operation for the last nine months, conveyed instructions for the passing of a similar enactment for the Bank of Bengal.

11. In the communication which the Government of this Presidency has honored your Memorialists with, under date the 19th Decr., and received on the 19th November, it is intimated that His Honor the Vice President in Council intended to read the draft act of the Charter the first time immediately, in order to expedite its passing as much as possible; that despatch is dated the 6th November, but the first publication of the draft act has appeared only in the Government Gazette dated the 26th of December.

From all which circumstances and facts, connected with the case of the Bank of Bombay, the meeting cannot but view the decision of the Government of India, as a most flagrant deviation from the just and common usage and practice, which in their experience, is invariably followed by the British Legislature, and the Government of every civilized country, of conferring the benefit of a Charter on the original projectors of a public undertaking. That in refusing also, the Charter of the Bank of Bombay to those parties who first originated, planned and managed that scheme, and who have finally procured the sanction and instructions lately obtained from the Home Authorities for the Charter being granted, this Meeting have now to record their opinion that the Government of India will, in effect, by this extraordinary course, tends to destroy all confidence in any individual

12. The interests at stake are not of trifling extent, for the effects of the protracted delay in regard to the establishment of the Bank of Bombay will have the tendency to greatly discourage enterprising individuals from attempting to introduce associations or institutions for the good of the community or the welfare of this country, unless a different course be now recommended by your Honorable Court. That such was the feeling created in this instance, is seen from the extract per margin of resolutions passed at a meeting of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce in February last.

13. Your Memorialists believe such interference with the lists of Proprietors of any association about to be incorporated, as the Government of India has in this instance used, is quite unprecedented, and that it would be most unusual for the British Parliament or body expecting from them, hereafter, that support and protection, the Government has the exclusive power to bring, for securing to such the benefits of the enterprise, and which hitherto all have considered they had a right to look for, without partiality, at the hands of Govt.

21. That any act which tends to crush the zeal and efforts of parties to undertake projects which involve the good or convenience of the public, cannot but have a most baneful influence on the improvement and prosperity of this rising Presidency, and is accordingly deserving of the immediate and unqualified disapprobation of the members of the Chamber of commerce, one of the objects of that association being to aid and promote the improvement of the Presidency and the development of its resources.

useful public undertaking, likely to lead to, or to increase the prosperity of this country, and not to raise difficulties, to create delay and throw obstacles in the way or to thwart such, your Memorialists sincerely trust, on a full consideration of the facts now stated, that your Honorable Court will issue such instructions to your Government in India, that the public in this country may never have the same cause again to feel aggrieved, as they certainly have experienced in the instance of the Bank of Bombay.

And your Memorialists will ever pray.

(Signed) JOHN SKINNER,
Chairman of the Meeting.

Bombay, 31st January 1840.

The letter of the Chairman of the meeting to the Secretary of the Court of Directors, inclosing the memorial, is as follows.

"To the Secretary, of the Honorable the Court of Directors, of the East India Company.

London.

Sir,—I have the honor to enclose a Memorial addressed to the Honorable Court from the Shareholders of the Bank of Bombay, as agreed to at a General Meeting of Proprietors called by Public Advertisement and held on Tuesday the 25th ultimo.

The Committee appointed by the General Meeting to prepare the accompanying Memorial, have further requested me to beg the favour of your bringing to the notice of the Honorable the Court of Directors, that His Honor the Vice President in Council has lately signified to the Bombay Government, his determination to admit 6 parties as Shareholders, whose claims, though strongly pressed by the Provisional Committee, to be admitted as Shareholders in preference to those who had actually resigned their shares. His Honor has previously stated, on mature consideration of all the circumstances of their case, that he had determined to reject them. Thus, in granting charters act on the Government of India have done, while your Memorialists and the public generally fear and consider the course they have pursued, as contrary to and evening a slur on your express commands.

14. While therefore your Memorialists have now to sit in their duty gratefully to thank your Honorable Court for the very prompt attention given to their interests, they have considered it necessary then to state the great delay which has occurred in giving effect to your commands, even under what they cannot but view as the erroneous and mistaken decision come to by the Government of India, which is far from satisfactory to those concerned. And as they cannot but think it might be the wish and desire of your Honorable Court to promote and encourage every after-feeding on a list of Proprietors, and publishing their names, His Honor now requires a revision and alteration of this list to admit these 6 parties. Having thus consented to abandon his decision in order to admit 6, if others choose to state and can state a similar claim, he must again order a fresh revision of the list to admit them also, so that when a list may be decided on as final and irrevocable, and the Bank opened for business, seems quite uncertain.

The Honorable the Court of Directors are aware of the pressure of the money market here, which the confiscation of the Opium in China occasioned. Such has been increased by the anxiety of members of the Bank Proprietors to pay into the Treasury the amounts of their Shares, and to effect this, sacrifices in the Sale of Company's Papers and to Exchanges have, in many instances, been submitted to, and many lots of rupees have thus been withdrawn from circulation, and now lie unemployed in the Treasury, with no certainty either, from the decision of the Government of India, when such may again be brought into circulation through the Bank and made useful to the Public and the Individual Proprietors, while the general trade of this Port suffers, and is greatly deranged by the scarcity of the money in circulation being thus ascribed.

On the part of the Memorialists, I have thus further respectfully to pray, that the Honorable the Court of Directors, will be pleased to interpose their paramount authority in favour of the Bank Proprietors, who cannot but feel this further interference with the Proprietors, just as the Charter was to have passed into a Law, and most serious addition to their grievances now laid before the Honorable Court.

I have the honor to be, Sir, your most obdt. servt,

(Signed) JOHN SKINNER,
Chairman of the Meeting.

Bombay, 31st January, 1840.

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA IN COUNCIL.

The humble memorial of the undersigned shareholders in the proposed Bank of Bombay.

SHETHS.—That the desire exhibited by your Excellency and the President in Council, to protect all parties interested in the Bank of Bombay, encourages your Memorialists to submit with confidence their rights to change in that Bank to the consideration of your Excellency in Council, but the having been somewhat confused with those of other parties, rather resembling them in interest, as in fact, your memorialists at once proceed to a succinct statement of their case.

At a meeting of several of the Inhabitants of Bombay, on the 26th December 1838, they agreed to associate themselves together upon the basis of a prospectus of the same date for the purpose of establishing a chartered Bank at Bombay, by which prospectus it was provided in Section 8. "That no individual be restricted as to the amount of his subscription; that the rules in force in other institutions of this kind to prevent an overwhelming influence on the part of great Capitalists, be established; provided, however, that no more than one half of the proposed capital be allowed to be subscribed at the present meeting; or by the members present, and that the remaining half be added to the Public during two months; at the end of which period, if any should remain unsold, the original subscribers be permitted, ratably, to increase their subscriptions; and in Section 10, "That as soon as one half the Capital shall have been subscribed, a provisional Committee of 11 persons be appointed to superintend the application for and the promotion of the proposed charter, and all other matters of a preliminary nature, the promotion of which Sections the whole Capital was subscribed for and a Committee duly appointed."

At a general meeting of the Bank, held on the 24th Nov., it was resolved, that the shares of the Bank, which may be assigned or left to be placed at the disposal of the provisional Committee, and in the event of a Charter in which Government is a party being granted, those shares which have been issued below par, be made up to that amount, the balance after correcting errors being for distribution amongst those whose applications have been Registered between the 17th January and 1st February. And at another general meeting, held on the 24th Jan., it was resolved "that the Committee be at liberty to treat with all persons desiring to dispose of their Shares, for the purchase of the same, and that all such Shares, when so purchased, be at the disposal of the Committee in such manner as they may deem most conducive to the interests of the Bank, and that all parties wishing to dispose of their shares, be requested to offer them to the Committee."

The Committee having, under the above resolutions, become possessed of 221 shares appropriated them in the month of July 1838 to your memorialists, as stated in the margin jointly with others, who, having accepted them and paid to the Committee a deposit of three per cent, became proprietors of those shares, and thenceforth exercised equal rights and privileges with the original projectors.

That your memorialists learn with regret, that they are now excluded by the President in Council, from the list of Shareholders in the Bank, for the reasons urged at length, in a dispatch from the Secretary to the Government of India of the 6th November last, in respectfully dissenting from which your memorialists venture to offer a few observations.

Your memorialists do not dispute the right of the President in Council to adopt the latest list, which was in the possession of the Government at the date of its assent to the Charter, as that of the proprietors with whom it was then in commendation, and consequently as the body to whom the Court referred, though from the context of their dispatch, alluded to as so obscure in Para 19 of the Secretary's letter, it would appear that this should be enlarged "to the Receipt of the Charter orders in Bombay;" but your memorialists conceive that this decision should be so limited as to constitute those persons merely ostensible proprietors as regards the Government, and should not be extended to controul or effect any arrangement as regards the proprietors themselves, which might have been previously made for the disposal of their own interests.

Your memorialists humbly submit, that the Proprietary body named in the list now adopted by the Government, having undoubtedly to some degree been altered by agreements amongst the Proprietors themselves, the proposed Act of Charter is evaded by recognizing the parties in General terms, "as the body of proprietors in existence at the date of the dispatch which contained the Charter for the incorporation of the Bank of Bombay," for if the adopted list be null and void, it can only be considered as the body of proprietors who were at that time named in the Charter as the body of proprietors in existence at the date when the Charter was delivered to the Bombay Government, which body might not have been altered in the period intervening between that time and the adoption of the Charter.

The President in Council having declared that the dissolution of the Chartered Bank voted on the 20th March 1838, was made "without a transfer of its rights to any other body" your memorialists respectfully submit, that it must be also held, that the consecutive resolutions passed at the same meeting were equally without reference to any other body, and that the acquisition of shares by the Committee, under the sixth of those Resolutions, was also made without reference to any other body, and therefore exclusively a transaction of the Chartered Bank.

Your memorialists, advert to the reasons for the adoption of the 2d or corrected list, cannot but feel that if the Committee had upon the admission of your memorialists as proprietors in the month of July 1838 forwarded to the Government a 2d corrected list, the Governor in Council would, for the same reason, have adopted that list and recognized your memorialists as proprietors, but your memorialists cannot discover that this assent of the Committee to perform an act, which would have been subsequent, can invalidate the rights which your memorialists have previously acquired.

It appears to your memorialists, that their having purchased their shares in the Bank, through the intervention of this Committee, cannot be distinguished from private purchases direct from the individual shareholders themselves, of which, many were made by parties at that period, not in any ignorance of their rights but upon an equal knowledge of the uncertainty of the result of the Committee's negotiations with the Government; both the seller and buyer alike speculating upon the future unknown decision of the Government, or perhaps being influenced by considerations of pecuniary convenience.

Your memorialists have been informed, that in Royal and Parliamentary Grants of Charters, a few of the leading projectors alone are individually named, by which your memorialists believe the rights of unnamed persons to participate in the profits of the Charter, are left to the adjudication of the legal tribunals, upon the basis of any agreement by which those parties may be bound; the Law holding that the projectors upon obtaining a Charter, are both individually and as a body bound to fulfil any engagements which they may have entered into previously to its acquisition, and treating the right to share in the advantages of a new project as a subject of legal cognizance; but the Legislative Council, however, in deviating from this course, has become the arbiter of private interests, but still proceeding upon a "broad principle," which can only be supported by public Policy, and expediency, has unjustifiably, without doubt, deprived your memorialists of their private rights as well as of the power of asserting them by legal means.

Your memorialists, therefore, without advert to the many other cogent arguments urged on their behalf by the Committee of the Bank, humbly pray:

That the names of your memorialists may be inserted in the Charter in lieu of those who abandoned their shares and received back their deposits;—or

That a clause may be inserted in the charter "that the subscribers shall hold their shares subject to any arrangement they may have previously made for their disposal, and that any subsequent purchasers of such

"may be at liberty to pay the subscription for the same"—or,

That your Excellency in Council will be pleased to authorize the Honorable the Governor in Council to appropriate, in favor of your Memorialists, the shares which may be forfeited by non-payment or that your Excellency in Council, in exercise of the power conferred upon you by the act of the Charter will be pleased for authorize the same to be paid to the petitioners claiming your Memorialists as Shareholders in the Bank.

And your memorialists, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

Signed by the Shareholders of the proposed Bank of Bombay.

INDIGO PLANTERS' MEETING, &c.

GENERAL COMMITTEE, — FEBRUARY 3, 1880.

Present, — J. ALLAN, in the chair.

R. J. Bagshaw; J. W. Cragg; A. C. Dunlop; R. H. Matthews; T. P. Morrell; C. Oman, R. J. R. Campbell, A. J. Lambe; M. J. Lemarchand; A. Imbach; C. J. Richards, G. F. Remry, and J. S. B. Scott.

Visitors — John Russell and R. Wright

The Secretary reports that Messrs. J. S. May, R. DeCourcy, James Gibbon & Wilker, and T. J. Saunders, have joined the Association, and that he has received from Messrs. R. J. R. Campbell and C. Oman, a donation of Co.'s Rs- 100 each, for the use of the Society.

He intimates that he has employed a native writer at 25 Rs- per mensem who, with a peon and a duffery, should suffice for the present, and that, in the course of two or three days, the office will have furniture enough to be used.

Passed 4 bills for advertisements amounting to C's Rs- 15 6 0, and one for printing amounting to Co.'s Rs- 100.

Ordered one thousand rupees of the funds in the Union Bank to be invested in Government 5 per cent Securities, in the name of R. Watson, or the Chairman for the time being of the Association.

Read a letter dated 18th ultimo, from Mr. J. Gibbon. Mr. Gibbon will be thanked for his candid communication. The subject of his representation will be referred to the Committee of his district when organized; and, in the mean time, he will be asked if he wishes any further notice to be taken of it.

Having read the proceedings of last meeting of the Committee, Mr. Cragg, seconded by Captain Vint, moves that the Resolutions therein recorded be confirmed.

Mr. Morrell moves as an amendment, that, in the 2d Resolution of last meeting, the words "all Resolutions" be inserted after the words "altered to" This amendment having been put to the vote and lost, the original motion is carried.

Mr. R. H. Matthews mentions, that he has been told by several members that they believe there are many Planters not belonging to the Association, who will cheerfully subscribe to a Fund for the relief of indigent Planters; and, in urging the members of the attention of the Committee, he recommends that all such Planters as the former, be invited to contribute to the support of so valuable a provision.

The Committee having had under its consideration the subject of establishing, as recommended by several members, the establishment of a Benevolent Fund for the benefit of distressed Planters and animals, and of their families, feels a difficulty how to proceed in such measure at present, or until the sentiments of the District Committee can be obtained on its merits, but as a preliminary step, it is agreed that the Association shall receive contributions for this purpose, to be placed in the hands of trustees appointed by the General Committee.

Resolved, on the motion of Mr. A. C. Dunlop, seconded by Mr. R. J. R. Campbell, that, as a temporary arrangement, the following gentlemen be requested to act as Trustees, provisionally for the proposed Charity Fund: John Allan, R. J. Bagshaw, C. J. Richards, R. Watson, and W. Limoud.

Mr. J. Russell, on the proposition of Mr. Morley, seconded by Capt. Vint, is appointed an Honorary Member of this Committee.

AGRA BANK.

Proceedings of a General Half-yearly meeting of the Shareholders of the Agra Bank, held on the 31st January 1910.

MR. BOLDERO, IN THE CHAIR.

Read the following Report of the Directors:—

In submitting the accounts of the last half-year the Directors have pleasure in drawing attention to the successful operations of the establishment, the profits of which fully equal in the aggregate those of the preceding six months, notwithstanding a falling off in Hoendeau from Rs. 36,650-9 6, to Rs. 13,184 11-9. This great reduction is attributable to the rise in the rate of Hoendeau consequent on the effect produced on the market by the depressed state of the opium and cotton trades. Independently of the loss on this hitherto large addition to the profits, a charge of Rs. 2, 678 13 2 for commission paid to Messrs. Lyall, Matheson and Co., has been paid from the present profits, although in reality appertaining to preceding periods.

The Directors have been in negotiation with parties in the service, for the Secretaryship, as they consider such a nomination the best calculated to afford satisfaction to the Proprietors at large, and pending the final selection of a gentleman, they have deemed it inexpedient to make any alteration in the Managing and Colonial Agencies, the more so as the present state of profits would seem fully to justify the views entertained by the Directors, of the advantages to be derived from these branch establishments.

By order of the Directors.

H. W. ABBOTT,

Acting Secretary, Agra Bank.

1st. Resolved.—That the report now read be published, that the accounts submitted be passed.

Proposed by Mr. Woolleston, and seconded by Mr. Preston.

2nd. Resolved.—That a dividend at the rate of 9 per cent. per annum, or Rs. 22-8 per share, be declared.

Proposed by Mr. Stowell and seconded by Mr. Mansel.

3rd. Resolved.—That a Reserve Fund be created and that the surplus of profit Rs. 3,517 14-2 be carried to the credit of the fund.

4th. The following gentlemen were elected Directors for the current half-year.

Messrs Pollock, Richards, Dalzell, Graham, Blair Tandy, Woolleston, Boldero and Mansel.

5th. Thanks being voted to the chair, the Meeting was dissolved.

THE MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.

The half yearly, and, on this occasion, the Anniversary Meeting of the Mechanics' Institute, was held yesterday evening at the Sans Souci. It was very respectfully attended, and the Chair was taken by the President, Sir J. P. Grant. The Report of the Committee of Management was read and approved; the officers were re-elected, and the usual thanks voted to all except the auditors, which, to say the least, was an unexpected piece of ingratitude; however, upon enquiring we find that these gentlemen do not consider it imperative upon them to resign their offices. One vote was passed to which we do not think a dissentient voice could be raised, an attitude to that of fifty rupees per month to Mr. G. Grant, for his services as Secretary. Those services for twelve months have been gratuitous, and we know that they have been efficient, judicious, and accurate. Dr. Gortyn, Sir J. P. Grant, the Revd. Mr. Boaz, Mr. G. T. F. Spence, and other gentlemen addressed the Meeting. All agreed that the Society is gradually, though slowly, progressing. Dr. Gortyn reminded the meeting that the early career of the now celebrated Polytechnic School at Paris was singularly tardy; yet much as it was then at first neglected, eventually its students built the first and most approved war host for the invasion of England. Mr. Boaz said he hoped the students of the Mechanics' Institute would soon become equally expert, and if they turned their attention to warlike implements, in some future contest with the clerical empire, they might provide our forces with those steam batteries which were said to be calculated to kill one hundred and fifty thousand men per second, and then the succeeding generation of Commissioners Lin would very speedily be blown into the interior. Sir J. P. Grant also very ably addressed the meeting. In the course of his address he said he hoped the public press would not allow the progress of the Institution to be calm. He had often thought that man never was so helpless as when at sea in a calm—he made no progress—no one aided him, for no one could tell where he was or what he was doing, and so with any public institution, nothing was so fatal to it as a calm—a want of notice. He would rather that it was ridiculed, slandered, abused, blown upon from all four quarters of the heavens, because then it was sure to make progress. Sir John concluded his address with some very excellent advice to the pupils of the Institute, who, we find, are eighteen in number, recommending them to perseverance and attention to the elementary departments of the sciences auxiliary to Mechanics, and pointing out the importance of being well grounded in these if they aspired to excellence.

Altogether the meeting was a gratifying one. We have given some extracts from the report.

This report says that there is an objection made by the Secretary of the Union Bank to the allowing any interest upon a balance of more than 6,000 rupees, which has been in the hands of the Bank for more than six months. The objection is founded upon some omission of notice on the part of the Mechanics' Institute, but we can hardly think the directors of the Bank will take advantage of this deficiency.—Calcutta Courier, February 15.

REPORT OF THE MECHANICS' INSTITUTION.

The committee has to report that since the last Half Yearly General Meeting, there has been received on account of the Institution, by subscriptions and donations, the sum of Rs. 315.

In furtherance of the wishes of the Members both of the Committee and the Institution generally as expressed in a Resolution passed at the last Half Yearly General Meeting—that a subscription should be set on foot in aid of the proposed Union of this Institution with the Horticultural Society of India and the Public Library, the Secretary was instructed to address the Public and friends of the Institution, explanatory of the object in view, and urgently soliciting them, for their consideration and assistance in carrying that object into effect.

Whilst bearing willing and grateful testimony to the ready and liberal spirit with which the appeal was received and responded to by many whose names had been previously enrolled on the list of benefactors to the Institution, the Committee cannot conceal the painful disappointment occasioned by the result of the efforts made in favour of what was generally acknowledged a measure of the highest importance. In this feeling the Members and friends of the Institution, it is believed, will fully participate when they learn to how trifling an extent their expectations have been realised towards the building Fund.

That the expectations formed were not entirely ill-founded, the list now read, of those to whom the appeal was not made in vain, bears sufficient proof, and is submitted to the Meeting. It is accompanied by an assurance that when time, and the means yet possessed by the Institution, shall have enabled it to work out some of the objects for which it was established—shall have shown by the steady perseverance of its operations, its utility and its value concerning the object, though necessarily abandoned will yet find its way to public favor, and many a name be added to the now brief list of donors.

The rule which it was deemed necessary to adopt, of making all subscriptions payable in advance, and binding them at whatever intermediate period they might be made, to the expiration of the first twelve months, has, the Committee is aware, induced several to withhold the enrollment of their names as members, until the commencement of the second year. Some modification of this rule, it is thought, may now be recommended to the consideration of the gentlemen to whom the affairs of the Institution are about to be confided for the ensuing year. The number of those who may not intend renewing their subscriptions, the Committee have no means of ascertaining.

The total number of subscribers to the present time, is 462. With a view to the establishment of the Schools of the Institution, and the selection of a Teacher and Lecturer—a Committee consisting of the following gentlemen—Sir John Grant; Dr. Gortyn, Rev. T. Boaz; and Mr. Rochfort, Esq., was appointed. The claims of several Calcutta candidates were submitted, but as a practical knowledge of science and art appeared to the Committee an indispensable qualification in the teacher required, the Committee decided on selecting Mr. Anderson, who as a Civil Engineer practically engaged in this city, presented claims of the value of which the Members have now had several opportunities of forming judgment. Mr. A. was engaged on a salary of 100 rupees per month, and since his engagement, has delivered lectures on Mechanics at intervals of one fortnight. The schools are now open three evenings in the week, and expressly devoted to the different classes. On the Secretary to the comfort, benefit and well-being of the great bulk of the people. But during his absence, Lord Auckland has achieved great things, carrying the British arms across the Indus, and spreading conquest at every step of his progress. And this, no doubt, is a subject of congratulation and exultation, in the empire at large, whilst his Lordship's safe return and immediate presence among us, is a matter of local benefit.

The Speaker believed that there were few persons who were not aware of the lively interest evinced by the Governor-General, in every matter connected with the improvement of the country and the benefit of the people in general. His Lordship has ever taken an active interest in every object of charity, which he has not only supported by his munificent donations, but encouraged by his presence—and all this, so, as to show that no Governor-General has ever done. Thus the presence of the Earl of Auckland, serves to spread, as it were, an animation around, and this should be the principal burden of our address, to show ourselves sensible of the blessing. Mr. Prinsep also made a passing allusion to certain sentiments that had been expressed at one of the sister presidencies, of the eligibility of that station as the principal seat of Government, and in respect to it observed, among other things, that we should appreciate the blessing of this being the chief seat of the Government, by which we enjoy the blessing of the presence of the Governor-General. He concluded by informing the meeting, that he had drawn up an address which, being no caligrapher, it would be necessary for him to read himself, only remarking that if the address possesses any recommendation it was that of brevity. The address was as follows—

MY LORD—The inhabitants of Calcutta present to your Lordship their respectful gratulations upon again beholding you at the seat of Government. Great occasions called you hence—you return to us crowned with eminent success, and graced with honors by the approving hand of the Sovereign. Believe my Lord, that we have followed your progress with far more of interest than of anxiety—that we have exulted in your successes and that we have hailed every accession to your personal dignity, as a mark of distinction to the community of which you are the head.

It will be for the Empire at large to declare the conviction, that in all that concerns this important member of it under the happy auspices of your Lordship's administration, it may look upon the past with pride and upon the future with confidence. But local interests are best appreciated on the spot—and none so competent as ourselves to bear witness to the constant and enlightened attention which you have bestowed upon them even from a distance. Yet somewhat of a selfish feeling makes us covet your presence, as affording double assurance that nothing will be wanting for their promotion which public spirit and liberality can effect.

Permit us so far to indulge that feeling, as to express the hope that no imperative call of duty may again deplete us of that presence, which diffuses animation through every department of industry, and sheds a lustre upon our social arrangements. Be it ours to study how best we may render your stay as agreeable to your Lordship as to ourselves, by the cordial union of all in the common pursuit of public good and private benevolence.

After reading the address, he left it in the hands of the Chair for the approval of the meeting.

N. Alexander, Esq., seconded the motion for the approval of the address brought forward by Mr. Prinsep, which being put to the meeting, was carried unanimously.

In seconding the motion, Mr. Alexander observed, that he had heard that there were some who did not agree with the proposal of the address on the ground that the occasion was destitute of public interest. He referred to the great events that had transpired during the absence of Lord Auckland, and the wisdom of the policy by which those events had been directed, and which had been accepted by Parliament and was, therefore, beyond our praise or censure. But although on the subject of policy, it was not becoming for us to utter various eulogies; yet the acts of the Governor-General certainly required our expressions of praise, acts which have emanated from pure feelings of justice, integrity and benevolence. Mr. Alexander then alluded to the address which has already been got up by the native inhabitants, who have passed a higher eulogy on Lord Auckland, than that proposed by the present meeting, and in respect to it the speaker remarked, that he was glad the native inhabitants had preceded them, since this would acquit all parties from the charge of the want of honesty. From the connection of several gentlemen present with the Honorable Company, their feelings might have been thought to be biased, but as the native inhabitants had by themselves so strongly eulogised his Lordship, this imputation could hardly be now made. He concluded by saying, that he agreed with the address drawn up by Mr. Prinsep, and having mentioned it in favorable terms, trusted, that it would meet with general approbation.

It was next proposed by N. Alexander, Esq., and seconded by W. Patrick, Esq.—That the Sheriff be requested to invite a citizen member of persons of each class of the inhabitants, to present the address to Lord Auckland, F. Bracken, Esq. then vacated the chair, and C. R. Prinsep, Esq., took it, when, thanks being voted to the High Sheriff, the meeting dissolved.—Herk, Feb. 25.

The address having been presented to his Lordship on the 27th of February, he was pleased to return the following answer—

GENTLEMEN,—Accept my hearty acknowledgments and thanks for the very kind and flattering reception which you have accorded to me, on my return to the seat of the Supreme Government, and for the valued expressions of confidence and good will contained in your address.

I am grateful to you for the personal, as for the public interest, with which you have followed my measures, and I well know how truly you will have rejoiced with me in triumphs, which have shed a new lustre on the British arms.

It will always be a source of real gratification to me that the favour, which a gracious Sovereign has condescended to confer, will be associated in my recollection with my residence among the Indian Community, and with the sympathy and congratulations, which I have now received from you, the inhabitants of this great Metropolis.

On the policy which has guided my Government it becomes me to swear with respectful submission, the judgement of my country, but I hail with real satisfaction your recognition of the deep interest which I must ever feel in the local concerns, the useful institutions, the active and extending commerce, of your important City. I trust with you, that we may not again be separated, while the superintendence of the administration of India remains committed to my hands. It is a happiness to me to be again joined with you in social intercourse; and by no means can our association be made more pleasing to me than by that cordial union of all, for objects of public and private good, for which you have promised to me your best efforts, and which you may be assured, it will be on all occasions my anxious study to promote.

NATIVE ADDRESS TO LORD AUCKLAND.

The delegation of Mahomedan and Hindu gentlemen, consisting of Nowab Munshif-ul-Nowab Syad Meer Rhason, Rajah Ram Chunder, Rajah Radhikanth Deb Bahadur, Rajah Kalhinesh Bahadur, Dwikananth Tagore, Prasanna Comar Tagore, Chandy Lal Tagore,

[REDACTED]

Remondy Dutt, Ray-Sekundabhatt Choudhary, Dhama Chandra Das, a Kachua Das, and others respectively and intelligent native gentlemen, in all 600 members, assembled to present an address to Lord Auckland, met His Lordship by appointment at 4 P. M. yesterday; They were very graciously received by his Lordship, into whose presence they were escorted by one of the Aides de Camp Rajah Bahadur Das; Bahadur, as Chairman of the Meeting, asked his Lordship's permission to read the address, which being granted, and the address read by the Rajah, his Lordship sent in the deputation his reply, which was in his own hand writing; after which the deputation retired. The following are the address and his Lordship's reply:

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE ORIGIN EARL OF AUCKLAND,
BARON EDIN, & C. B., & CO., SEC.,

My Lords.—We the undersigned subjects of her Britannic Majesty, Native inhabitants of Calcutta and its vicinity, respectfully offer to your Lordship our sincere congratulations on your return amongst us.

It is indeed with no ordinary feeling of satisfaction that we had an event so gratifying, for independent of our conviction that the presence of a nobleman of your Lordship's enlightened commercial and general views, cannot fail to be infinitely beneficial to this great mercantile metropolis, we have, on the present occasion, to approach with extraordinary feelings of gratitude the head of a Government, which has, by a firm and vigorous manifestation of warlike power, secured to our country the inestimable blessing of peace.

Yes, my Lord, little as it has been our practice to study the graver questions of war and policy, we should be chargeable with dullness equal to our ingratitude, if we failed to perceive that the wisdom and firmness of your Lordship's Councils, and the might of the British arms, have on all sides baffled the open and overawed the more disguised enemies of that supremacy under which this great empire is reposing and recovering from a long period of convulsion and calamity.

My Lord, it has been reserved for us to see the soldiers of our country carry victory into regions towards which India has hitherto looked with so other feeling than those of apprehension. It has been reserved for us to see those regions become the scene on which the power and greatness of the Indian Empire have been made memorably manifest, in the vindication of its honour and its rights, in the face of Asia and of the world. It has been reserved for us to see the tide of conquest, which for so many ages has flowed towards the East, at length turned back by heroic bands, in whose ranks we proudly recognize the Sepoy Warrior marching to triumph and to renown, side by side with his British fellow soldier.

My Lord, for this elevated position, for this further step in the regeneration of our native country, we feel indebted to the vigor and decision of your Lordships' measures, and in offering our honest and hearty congratulations on their success, and on the well merited testimonial of our sovereign's approbation, by which it has been recognized, we trust that these congratulations will not be less acceptable, proceeding from the

We have the honor to subscribe ourselves, as
 Your Lordship's most obedient and humble Servants, (Here follow upwards of four hundred signatures of Mohammedan and Hindu).
 Calcutta, 14th February, 1840.

TO REVEAL THE TRUTH OF THE MATTER AND OTHERS.
 Native Inhabitants of California and its vicinity.

CHANDERKAR, — I thank you for your kind and gratifying address. It is with feelings of peculiar pleasure that I receive this testimony of regard and approbation from the intelligent Native community of Calcutta.

Your good opinion is to me of the highest value, coming as it does from those to whose enlightened views and liberal exertions, I have long looked, as a strong support and assurance to me in my ardent desires for the improvement of India.

I am happy to be again among you, and to be able to co-operate with you for the advancement of great public objects of general and local interest, in the consideration of which you will always find me attentive to your wishes, anxious for your welfare and grateful for your assistance. I have further to offer you my cordial acknowledgements for the statement of your favorable opinion upon the momentous measures of external policy, which, for the defence and security of this empire, I felt myself bound to pursue. I rejoice with you that the success which has been granted those measures, by an overruling and gracious Providence, has baffled the designs of secret and of open enemies, and removed the dangers by which the tranquillity of India was threatened.

These results, which have strikingly avinced the power and resources of the British Indian Government, are indeed a cause of earnest congratulation to us all. That by you, who are so deeply interested in them, they are justly understood and valued, is to me a source of the greatest happiness, and I shall ever regard this expression of your feelings, with pride and with satisfaction.

We share, as fellow-subjects, in feelings of patriotism and loyalty, and I need not say that I exult with you in the glorious achievements by which our proud successes have been won. Marks of Royal approbation have signalled the services of the Army of the Indies and of its gallant leaders, and to them, from us also, the warmest gratitude is due.

A peculiar interest attended their daring enterprise, and the spirit and conduct of the Native, as of the English soldier, have their merited reward in the admiration and the applause of the world.

Accept again, gentlemen, my deep felt thanks for your welcome kindness, and let us unite our hearts and our exertions for the prosperity of British India.

MEETING OF THE DCKING ASSOCIATION.

The sixth half yearly meeting of the Docking Association, was held at the secretary's office, yesterday forenoon. K. McKenzie, Esq., acted as Chairman on the occasion, and the secretary's report was as follows:

The books of the past year, (1839,) the third number this Society was formed, being closed, the result now submitted by the Committee of Directors, is as favorable as could be anticipated from the natural dearth of work, and the competition of the establishments of individuals, whose forestalling system of securing a preference by reduced charges, is not, perhaps, to be deemed as maintainable.

The operations of the past year, it will be observed, from the books and accounts now upon the table, have closed with a net gain to the concern of Co.'s rupees 67,176 0½, giving upon the present capital of six lakh of rupees, a net profit of eleven Co.'s rupees, two annas, eleven pies, and 712⁄100 decimals, or a fraction less than eleven rupees and three annas per cent.

The number of ships and vessels repaired in 1839, at Kidderpore was 18, and at Howrah 26, and in 1839 at the former 20, and at the latter 25, while the new built vessels completed in the last year were three only; the steam tug Dwarkanath and Andrew Henderson and the ship Rustomjee Cowasjee, and three having been constructed upon a regulated commission, have yielded a certain return unaccompanied with risk, or any contingency that could have operated prejudicially to the Society.

At the close of 1838 there was a balance due to the Society on account of the steamer Enterprise, of rupees 26,664-14 11, of which rupees 3,000 were realised in September last, and the remaining amount, rupees 23,664-14-11, being objected to on behalf of Government, has been referred to arbitration, and the realisation or otherwise of the latter sum, or of any portion of it, must necessarily depend on the award of the arbitrator.

The following resolutions were then proposed and passed:

1. That the Report be approved.
2. That thanks be given to the Directors for their services during the past year, and that they be requested to continue to act for the current year.
3. That a dividend, at the rate of 10 per cent. on Co.'s rupees 60,000, be now declared, and the balance of profit be transferred to the reserve fund.
4. That the annual repairs to the dock and premises, and cost of all additional buildings, improvements, &c., be carried to the debit of separate account, and that the Directors do determine, prior to the Annual Meeting, what portion of such charge shall be considered as an addition to the capital stock.

After which thanks were voted to the chairman, and the meeting dissolved.—Hutch, Feb. 26.

NEW CALCUTTA LANDABLE SOCIETY.

The tenth and last Half Yearly General Meeting of the members of the New Calcutta Landable Society, for the inspection of the final accounts of first term of the society, and also a General Meeting of the Members of the Indian Landable and Mutual Assurance Society, for the inspection of accounts, filling up vacancies in the direction, and the transaction of general business was held yesterday at the office of the Secretary.

Proposed by James Hill, Esq., and seconded by T. E. McFarlan, Esq., and carried unanimously.

8. That a the statement of the surplus funds due to surviving policy holders on the 31st December 1899, and shown to this meeting, must have cost the compiler (Mr. John Bartlett) much labour in its preparation, that this meeting do award him the sum of 1 000 Co's fs.

Thanks were voted to the Chairman, and the meeting broke up. — Hark. Feb. 29.

The names of the following gentlemen were read as candidates for election.

William Quimio, Esq., of the civil service,—proposed by Mr. F. C. Smith, seconded by Mr. W. M. Dixon.

Captain E. P. Niboy, of the ship Windsor,—proposed by Dr. Spry, seconded by Dr. Strong.

Geo. Henderson, Esq., Attorney,—proposed by Mr. Chas. Huffleagle, seconded by Dr. Spry.

James Davidson, Esq., of the civil service,—proposed by Mr. R. H. Clarke, seconded by the secretary.

F. Williams, Esq., of the civil service,—proposed by Mr. R. H. Clarke, seconded by the secretary.

H. Astell, Esq., of the civil service,—proposed by Mr. R. H. Clarke, seconded by the secretary.

K. H. Rattray, Esq., of the civil service,—proposed by Dr. Spry, seconded by Dr. Strong.

Major J. R. Ouseley, political agent at Hassanabad,—proposed by Mr. F. G. Smith, seconded by the secretary.

A. De H. Larpent, Esq., (Firm of Cookerell and Co.)—proposed by Mr. W. F. Ferguson, seconded by the Secretary.

Baboo Hurunauth Roy, (Noral, Jessore),—proposed by Mr. Wm. Bennett, seconded by the secretary.

Thomas Charles Cadogan, Esq., (Firm of Bagshaw and Co.), proposed by Mr. R. J. Bagshaw, seconded by Mr. C. J. Richards.

Edward Whyte, Esq., (Firm of Mackenzie, Lyall and Co.),—proposed by Mr. Charles Huffleagle, seconded by Dr. Spry.

Mathew Herring, Esq., of Bishenauth, Assam,—proposed by Captain Francis Jenkins,—seconded by Dr. Wallich.

Baboo Ramgopal Ghose,—proposed by Mr. David Hare, seconded by Mr. A. C. Dunlop.

C. C. Fowell, Esq., (Indigo Planter, Tirhoot),—proposed by Mr. W. P. Downing, seconded by Dr. Spry.

PRESENTATIONS TO THE SOCIETY.

Library.

1.—Proceedings of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of Madras for the months of July, August, and September, 1839. Presented by the Madras Agricultural and Horticultural Society.

2.—Madras Journal of Literature and Science, Presented by the Madras Literary Society.

3.—Lecture on Agriculture, its Mechanics, &c. Presented by the author Mr. G. T. F. Sprede.

5.—Proceedings of a Special General Meeting of Agricultural and Horticultural Society of Madras, Presented by the Madras Society.

6.—Report of the sittings of the committee of agriculture, established at Bourbon, as printed in Le Feuille Hebdomadaire à l'île Bourbon. Forwarded by M. Beldier.

7.—Phipps' Statistics of Ship-building in India, &c. Purchased by the Society.

8.—Two copies of a Catalogue of the Plants growing in Bombay and its vicinity, spontaneous, cultivated or introduced, as far as they have been ascertained. By John Graham, Esq.

This most useful work has been published under the auspices and for the use of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of Western India. Not a single plant has been put down which has not been seen and examined either by the author or his able colleague Mr. Nimmo. Presented by the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of Western India.

Museum.

1.—A minute sample of Cotton from the Tipperah Hills.

Mr. Wise, the superintendent of the affairs of the Rajah of Tipperah, who forwards this, states nearly 1,00,000 musade, (8,572 tons,) of such Cotton is annually brought down by the Hill tribes, subject to the Rajah of Tipperah, &c. The cotton seed lately supplied to Mr. Wise, by the Society, he proposes distributing in the Tipperah Hills.

2.—Two boxes of different sorts of English Vegetable Seeds, presented by Captain Nabis of the Ship Windsor.

3.—A sample of a peculiar kind of Grain grown on the Coast of the Hon'ble E. I. Company's newly acquired Province of Amherst, and called by the Native 'Kyalh Jase.' The plant whence this seed is obtained, is stated by Mr. Rily, who presents it to the society, to be of a very hardy nature and thrives almost any kind of soil yielding a good amount of produce, and in taste resembling wheat. Dr. Wallich stated to the Meeting, that the seed now submitted was from the corn lacryma.

4.—A Selacet or Planter's Hat, such as is universally worn at Manilla, both by European, and Natives, presented by Mr. Piddington, who states, that after so experience of twenty years, he has found, for those whose business obliges them to expose in the sun, it to be a very far superior hat or cap to any other, not only for the shade it affords to the face, but (and in this consists its peculiar advantage,) in the freedom with which, by means of the basket-work crown within, it allows the perspiration of the head to be freely carried off.

5.—A paper of Caulbul Drum-head Cabbage Seed, Caulbul, Candahar, and Bokhara Melon Seeds, Candahar Cherry-stones, and Caulbul Red Clover Seed, Presented by Col. Smyth.

6.—A sample of Cotton, second year's growth, from Sea Island Seed, grown on the sand upon Keaker soil on the Ganges at Cawnpore, without attention to irrigation or pruning. Presented by Dr. Campbell.

This Cotton was pronounced to be of a very superior kind.

7.—Two Knole Kola plants from Hidgallee, presented by J. H. Barlow, Esq.

These plants attracted much attention, from the circumstances which induced Mr. Barlow to forward them to the Society—namely, their being raised from sprouts and not from seed. The present is the second year of trial of this Horticultural experiment with Mr. Barlow, and altogether he has succeeded in raising eleven plants. The facility with which early cabbages are raised from sprouts, induced Mr. Barlow to undertake the experiment with Knole Kola. The method pursued is not to cut the Kola but allow the plant to grow on in the soil till it ripens and breaks into three or four portions. From each of these portions sprouts are thrown out. The divisions are separated from the old root and the sprouts cut off from them with a sufficient portion of the division to serve for the protection of the roots of the young sprout. These are put in some cool place and watered, being protected by mats from heavy rain.

9.—A sample of cotton grown in the Bhutty States, presented by Lt. Robinson, Superintendent of the Bhutty States.

This Cotton is of a very inferior quality.

8.—A specimen of a plant growing in abundance in the vicinity of Tipperah, and sent to the Society for its beauty. Presented by Henry Roe, Esq.

The Meeting was informed by Dr. Wallich, that this very pretty specimen of the Moss Club Thistle, was the Lycopodium complanatum.

The Board is the President, President is the National charter between them to be used to direct the action of the members of the National Association of the Poor Building, for the consideration of which a special General meeting had been held some months since, and a Committee of Management appointed. Since then a plan had been adopted for the purchase of an appropriate site in the city of New York, and an application made to the government for the appropriation of the same work, which is now in progress, being approximately to be situated in the city of New York, the great majority of those for whom the building was designed.
He therefore desired to give notice of the following motion for the next General Meeting. "That the management of Co's stipend 10,000 be divided out of the fund aword of the Society for the purpose of contributing to the construction of the National Public Library, Donor Fund, the National Temperance Fund, and the National Public Library Fund. Towards the erection of a house at the E corner of Third Avenue, for the joint accommodation of these several institutions."

The attention of the meeting being called to the report which had been framed by the special committee on Canton, it was moved by Mr. Deane that resolved, that as the time of the members was much wanted to complete their correspondence for the overland mail, the subject be postponed to Wednesday, the 19th inst., when a special general meeting shall be held for the consideration of this important business.

The award made by the Judges, at the Exhibition of Cattle, held on the 1st instant, was next brought forward and passed.

The annual report of work done by the Society, during the past year was then submitted by the Hon'ble the President and on the motion of Dr. Walllich, seconded by Mr. Piddington, it was resolved, that the same be printed.

The first communication, which was submitted to the meeting, was the following, letter with a despatch and an enclosure from the Government of India.

Genl. Dept. Sir, - I am directed by His Excellency (the President) in Council to transmit to you, for the information of the Society, the answer given by the Secretary of the Board, No. 15 of 1836, from the Hon. his the Court of Directors, in the public department, dated the 24th July, and of an enclosure on the subject of the Corporation of Bombay in India.

Council Chamber, 14th January, 1910

3. In conformity with the recommendation of Dr. Hoyle, we shall at the earliest opportunity send out samples of the different qualities of Hemp found in the markets of this country, with indication of the prices which they bear, and we desire that agreement may be furnished to us of Himalayan Hemp in different states as reported by the people of the Hills, and also such specimens of human hair as are available.

3.—We propose from time to time to print and publish such information as may come before us calculated either to extend the knowledge of the productions of India, to increase their amount, and we desire that you improve their quality, or give a stimulus to the demand for them, and we desire that you will cause similar measures to be taken for effecting the same objects throughout India.

London, 24th July, 1839.

The union of strength with flexibility being so essential for many mechanical purposes, various experiments have been made at different times and places, to find substances fit for manufacturing into cordage. Skin and Jewell were first employed for this purpose in many countries, but vegetable fibre having been found very superior for many purposes, leather ropes, became superseded, and attention was turned to the vegetable kingdom for the best cordage materials, and the hemp plant containing the required properties in the greatest degree, has come to be almost exclusively employed for making the ropes and sails of vessels. It is cultivated, therefore, by many nations for home use and by others for export. To these, therefore, its culture is of great importance and its commerce very considerable. In the year 1836 of 556,032 cwt. was imported into the United Kingdom 558 458 cwt. were shipped at St. Petersburg and Riga. The subject, therefore, is of vital importance to a nation which imports such large quantities of the raw material for the rigging of its vast Navy and Merchant shipping, as they might at any time, by the occurrence of war, be deprived of this supply,

This deprivation did in fact take place during the last war, and great inconvenience was occasioned by British shipping. At the price of hemp, which in 1782 was only 25s per ton, rose to 218s in 1800, and only 27s, 6d per cwt. were imported in that year. The colonies, therefore and India, were looked to for a supply of hemp, and the cultivation was encouraged in North America.

The cultivation of hemp in India obtained very great attention from the Court of Directors, and instructions were sent to the Government there to encourage the growth as well as that of other carriage plants. At the instance of India employ between 40 and 50 different kinds of plants for the fibre which they yield, fitted for this purpose in different degrees. The subject of investigation was sufficiently extensive, and received great attention from Dr Rumburgh. A few only, however, of the cordage plants of India, are extensively cultivated in that country, or known to commerce as Coir, Sun, Sunnee, or brown Indian Hemp and Jute. The first yielded by the husk of the Coccoloba (Cordia nucifera) and the others by the plants known to botanists by the names of Crotalaria Juncea, Hibiscus Cannabinus, Corchorus Olitorius and Corchorus Capensis. These being in general so inferior in strength to the true hemp, do not realize above one third or one-half of the price of that imported from Russia, but for this very reason they continue to be imported for the purpose of making the inferior kinds of rope. There are several other plants yielding more valuable products suited to the climate of India, and which might easily be cultivated there, and, therefore, worthy of attention. Some of these I propose subsequently bringing under notice, as it is important to find plants yielding eligible products suited to the soil and climate of different parts of India, so they would occupy space often uncultivated, as well as serve to fill up the time of the agricultural labourers, at the same time that they afforded materials for both internal and external commerce.

On the present occasion I confine myself to the hemp plant itself, (the Cannabis Sativa of botanists) as being the most valuable of the whole and because it is in general erroneously supposed that it can only be successfully cultivated in European regions, though there is every reason to believe that it is originally a native of Asia, and even that its Greek and Latin name Cannabis is derived from the Arabic Kannab. It is well known to be common in Arabia and Persia as well as in every part of China and of India, and likewise in Egypt and Turkey; but in all these countries it is valued chiefly, if not only, for yielding an intoxicating drug commonly called bang. In European countries it is on the contrary cultivated only on account of its ligneous fibre, so extensively employed in the manufacture of the strongest ropes and of coarse, but strong kinds of cloth. The wide distribution of the plant throughout Europe and Asia, is remarkable, but easily explained, when we consider that it is an annual, which requires only few months of summer temperature to bring it to full perfection. The requisites for its successful cultivation, it is however necessary to notice when endeavouring to introduce elsewhere its culture.

Hemp is cultivated in almost every part of Europe for home consumption but only in large quantities for export in Russia and Poland, though the finest quality of hemp come from Italy. French hemp is also much esteemed, as well as that grown in both England and Ireland, but for the present purpose it is necessary only to notice the culture of the chief kinds which enter into commerce.

Hemp is cultivated in almost every Province of Russia, but in the largest quantities in the interior beyond Moscow, as well as nearer St. Petersburg, and in the Polish Provinces which belong to Russia. The soil must not be over-rich nor too sterile, of moderate depth and friable. The time of sowing varies from the middle of May to the end of June, and by some it is recommended not to be sown until the latter end of June, as frosts are very injurious to its growth. The season of reaping is from the end of August to the end of September, the male plants being pulled some weeks before the female. The Russian summer though short, is regular while it lasts and the temperature sufficiently high to bring it to full perfection.

That the northern latitudes of Russia are not essential for the successful cultivation of hemp, is however evident, from the large quantities which are grown in the southern climate of Italy, both Bologna and Romagna, and along the banks of the Po, as well as in the neighbourhood of Naples. The Italians have a saying, that "Hemp may be grown everywhere, but it cannot be produced fit for use, either in Europe or earth without manure." The climate of Italy, it is well known, is remarkable for its clearness, regularity, dryness and warmth, and that brightness is necessarily necessary for much of its Agriculture. The Italian hemp is fine, soft, light coloured and strong, and is the staple, and it is important to remark that it brings the highest price in the London market, for instance it sells for 58 shillings per ton, while the best Russia was at 47 shillings for the same quantity.

If we compare the Summer temperature of the northern with the Southern situations, we shall not find so great a difference as we might be led to expect, by considering only their latitudes on their mean annual temperature.

Thus Petersburg and Moscow in north latitude 59. 58 and 55 45, have summer temperature of 53 6 and 67 10 of thermometer, while Milan and Rome in north latitude 45 23, and 41. 53, have summer temperature of 73 4, and 75 20.

The climate of the southern parts of Italy has some resemblance to that of the north of India, inasmuch as here is a mild winter with little frost and no snow, early spring and a hot, dry, clear summer (the India climate is however much modified, indeed ameliorated by the coming on of the rainy season) yet we find that with the aid of irrigation they are able in Italy to cultivate many of the same grains which are cultivated in India in the rainy season, as for instance Rice, Indian Corn, Millet, (Panicum Italicum) and Sorghum vulgare. Cotton is also cultivated and sugar cane and the Banana in small quantities. Lemons and Oranges and Citrons originally introduced from India are perfectly at home. The Date and Palmetto Palm are quite naturalized, together with the Oleander, Yucca and Poinsettia, with the Neem Tree, American and common Aloe and the Laurel with some African and Asiatic Acacias.

Without entering into details it might be inferred as probable, that as Italy grows rice and many other plants of India, so might the latter cultivate a plant like the hemp which succeeds so well even so far south as Naples, and which requires only a few months to bring it to perfection, and this given if India did not already possess it.

But so far from this being the case, the reverse is the fact, and it is well known that the plant so commonly cultivated in so many parts of India is the true Hemp Plant, which is there called ganga, but which differs in no respect from the European Plant, though the natives employ it only for the purpose of yielding bang. But cultivated for this purpose instead of being sown thick as it ought to be when intended for cordage, it is sown thin by the natives, who afterwards transplant the young plants and place them at distances of 9 or 10 feet from each other. The effect of this is to expose them more fully to light, heat and air, by the agency of which the plant is enabled to perfect its secretions in a more complete manner, and the bang will consequently bear a more intoxicating nature. The fibres and woody parts at the same time attain a greater degree of strength and solidity, as is found to be the case with timber trees similarly exposed. The Hemp Plant thus grows with branch much. It may be small in dry situations and large in wet and moist ones, but in either case its fibres are found both in Europe and India to be rough, stiffer and more difficultly separated from the woody part than a desirable, but wood is produced in large quantity and of better quality. This mode of cultivation has, however, the disadvantage of being more expensive from taking up more space than the hemp, which the natives require to yield the same quantity of fibre for spinning.

Hemp, when grown in moist situations, is made, or at least together, are well known to the natives, shoot up and to become more Jan 18-1860, while their receptacles are imperfectly formed, as is exemplified in the growing of leaves, celery, &c. Hemp plant. The hemp is cultivated for their fibres, which are thickly together and they shoot up into long, round, thin plants, which are much less branched than when they are exposed, and are not having less from the action of the heat, but the influence in evaporating the sap, the effect is to produce a longer fibre, which is at the same time soft and pliable as well as more easily separated, and in larger quantity in the same space, than when they are not widely apart.

The natives of India also sow their Sun and Jute very thickly together, when for the sake of their fibres they form the exclusive crops. The effect is to produce a long and flexible fibre, though this is not sufficiently strong to form a good substitute for the true hemp; but if this were cultivated in suitable situations in India, in a manner similar to that adopted in Europe or like that practised with its substitutes in India, the effect would undoubtedly be to produce a sufficiently long fibre, which would also be softer and more pliable, at the same time that it retained a great portion of its original strength and probably in a large quantity as is yielded by the Sun plants, and thus no article might be produced which, judging from the Indian sample, might enter, into competition with the Russian product, and at all events afford much more valuable cordage than the several inefficient substitutes now so extensively cultivated in India, and which imported into this country sell only for 75 to 20 shillings a cwt., at the same time the Russian, Polish and India hemp are selling for that 42 to 50 shillings a cwt.

The difference in price would appear a sufficient inducement to attempt the culture of the true hemp in India, especially as there could be no doubt respecting its growth, as it is already so common in every part of that country, and requiring, if any thing, only a little modification of its properties, which could be ensured not probably by a change in the mode of cultivation. Dr Roxburgh has long since as the year 1850, thought Rohilcund and the neighbouring hills suited to the cultivation of hemp. I have seen it in great abundance in a wild state in the Deyra Doon and also in the Khudj land of the Saharunpore district, especially along the upper part of the Doab Canal, and where it was chiefly valued for its leaves being made into hemp and subjug, the stems when dried being burnt for fire-wood.

There would be little difficulty in cultivating this plant in the low Khudj land, where it is wild, not in converting it into merchantable hemp, for the natives of the neighbourhood already make use of it, partly for the manufacture of ropes, and the inhabitants of Muljhar are said by Dr. B. H. Scott, to employ the hemp for making their fishing nets.

The natives of the Himalayas likewise possess the plant from which, though they prepare an intoxicating drug which they call ibum, they likewise value for its lignous fibre, from which they prepare a coarse kind of cloth, which they send into the plains for making very durable garments as well as the strongest ropes (called bell) for creating their plows.

This fact, though not generally known, is mentioned by Kirkpatrick in his account of Nepal, and was recorded by General Hardwick in his visit to Sarnagur, as well as by myself, when travelling in the Himalayas. I also obtained specimens of the rope and cloth when travelling there, but which I regret I am unable now to find. The plant I have seen is in a very luxuriant state, at least in the neighbourhood of the village of Saharunpore, and it is not unlikely that it is a great culture, and yield a valuable and useful product.

The hemp would likewise be cultivated in the plains at two seasons of the year, during the rainy season, as in now the rice, and likewise the cold weather, by cultivating similar to that of the summer culture of European countries. But experiments require to be made and specimens be procured, in order to determine which season is most proper for the culture of this plant, in order to yield hemp of the best quality.

If people might, no doubt, easily be obtained for preparing the hemp, according to their own method, and teaching the people in the plains, who are already practised in the art of preparing Sun. It would, however, be desirable to procure, if practicable, the assistance of some Europeans, (and such might be found among the Sikhs) who had seen practised the preparation of hemp in this country. The experiment might be made with little expense, and probably great advantage (from the useful information which would be obtained for the use of cultivators) in the botanic garden at Saharunpore. If instructions were given to the effect to Dr. Falconer, superintendent of that institution.

For due attention being paid to the details of this subject, it would be extremely desirable to send out to India specimens, with prices of the different quantities of hemp found in the markets of this country, so that cultivators in India might know what they had to imitate and rival. It would also be extremely desirable, in order to ascertain the present quality of the Himalayan Hemp, if specimens in different states of preparation were sent home as prepared by the hill people, together with specimens of the hempen rope and sack cloth of the Himalayas. Secretary to the Government of India.

THE GREAT NATURAL RESOURCES OF THE NEWLY ACQUIRED PROVINCE OF NAGALAND IN UPPER ASSAM—THE PROGRESS OF THE TEA CULTIVATION.

A highly valuable and interesting communication from Captain Jenkins, the agent of the Governor General in Assam, was next submitted. Captain Jenkins has referred to the report made by the Silk Committee of the 9016, on the specimen of Moonga silk lately submitted by Messrs Watkins and Menley, and states, that as soon as the document reached him he lost no time in writing off to Mr Watkins, to beg of him to endeavour to comply with the request of the Committee, as early as practicable, and send the required sample for the London market. The report, Captain Jenkins states, holds out most pleasing prospects for Assam, as the extent to which the silk would be shipped from that province, is almost unlimited, from the abundance of Arctia plants, on which the worm feeds, and from the facility with which they can be propagated.

The companies of the 36th regiment, Captain Jenkire adds, have been beating themselves out against me in what they thought was a natural forest, but which in reality is a deserted plantation of Soom trees, one of the best of these plants; and all about Dibroo Mookh, in Blattock, the place whence Captain Jenkins despatches his letter, the land is covered with old plantations of the same tree.

Captain Jenkins adverts to the application which the secretary addressed to him on the subject of the cotton minute by the Governor General, and thinks with the Committee that little satisfactory operations could be done with foreign cotton seed, except by trees cultivated. He wishes he could get a pair of the Arborescens in that look, for he has there very superior lands for growing them, he can give land for nothing to any extent, and he knows no place where the committee are more likely to find the ryots tractable. They are all cotton cultivation, and, owing, Captain Jenkins supposes, to the sterility of soil and climate, the Cotton of Blattock, which to all appearance is the same stock as that of other parts of Assam and of the Garrow country, is far superior to any other in the valley, and fetches from 2 to 2 8 rupees per maund more in the market than the Kupas. All the natives would try any other cotton, for they have no prejudices as to seeds. With the assistance of the Missionaries, the military, and the superintendents and assistants of the Assam Joint Stock Company, seed might be distributed largely round the country, and much attention could be paid to their cultivation. Blattock has only just fallen into the hands of the Government of India, but Captain Jenkins hopes, that there is a very fair prospect of the British soon rendering it a most important district. Tea, Catechou, Silk, Sugar and Cotton are abundant, and the lands are well adapted to any cereal crops. It was, Capt Jenkins states, the garden of Assam, and may readily become so again. A station has been found close to Dibroo Mookh, where Captain Vetch is to reside, and a thriving town is expected to be made of it immediately. In conclusion, Captain Jenkins mentions, that Mr Bruce has made for Government this season, one hundred and twenty boxes of Black Tea and seventy of Green, "but with the meagre of the Joint Stock Assam Company," adds Captain Jenkins, "this might be increased next season a hundred fold were the Government establishments transferred at once."

The contents of this highly interesting communication excited much attention from the meeting. The concluding paragraph of the letter was particularly dwelt on and the importance of encouraging the investment of private capital in the interesting experiment of producing Tea in our own provinces, referred to. As a legitimate object of the Society's consideration, the extension of the cultivation of Tea throughout British India, was thought to merit an application to Government for the presentation to this society of a box of each kind of Assam Tea in order to give an extensive notoriety to the article as possible, and it was, therefore, moved by Major Carter and seconded by Mr Preston, and resolved, "That an application be at once addressed to the Right Hon'ble the Governor of Bengal, through the Tea Committee, for a supply of one box of each kind of Tea manufactured at the Government grounds in Assam for the purposes of the Society."

Dr Wallich, secretary to the Tea Committee in approving of this resolution intimated that the Isabella Robertson, which had just arrived in the river, from China, had brought round, notwithstanding our present disputes with China, an entire family of Chinese Tea cultivators, who were to be forthwith sent to the Assam gardens.

GOVERNMENT RESEARCH INTO NATURAL PRODUCTIONS OF CEYLON.

The next important document brought forward, was a letter from the Right Hon'ble J. A. Stewart Mackenzie, Governor of Ceylon, relative to an application which had been made to him by the Secretary, touching agriculture and vegetable productions of that island, with reference to its soil and climate.

His excellency states, that it will give him the greatest pleasure to be able to contribute into matters on the subject, as he considers it one of the importance of which he is fully sensible, and the development of which he is well aware, will be followed by great improvements in his society, and undoubtedly in India also, if practical information upon this subject be given and taken, by those who can afford it, that he shall endeavour seriously to apply himself to the enquiries which the letter of the Secretary would lead. The real difficulty, his Excellency states, is that the expense that must attend a general and a thorough enquiry, and secondly, of the almost entire want there of instruments to carry that enquiry into execution. The superintendency of the royal botanic garden at Peradenia is, however, now undergoing a change, and as soon as Mr Normansell the new superintendent, is placed in full possession of the department, his Excellency states, he shall not fail to lay down some plan for obtaining the information required in the form of classification as annexed in the secretary's letter.

ESTABLISHMENT OF A BRANCH SOCIETY AT AKYAB.

A letter from Lieutenant Letley, was next read, announcing that resolutions (copy of which are furnished) were passed by Captains Begle, and MacGraith, Lieutenants Aphorpe, Plavre, Edwards, Baker, Eliot and himself, on the 3d of December, establishing a society at Akyab, to be denominated "The Arracan Branch Agri and Horticultural Society."

Lieutenant Letley, in the course of his letter, states, that a good and convenient piece of ground has been enclosed, and begs a supply of seeds may be supplied to him. The soil of the garden is like that of the entire island of Akyab light and sandy, and requires great trouble in manuring. The usual forest trees, such as Oak, Ironwood, Gurjun (wood pillar) Teak, Jarul, and different species of ebony, &c., can be procured from the interior in any quantity. Tobacco, Cotton and Rice, are indigenous, Indigo grows wild, and coffee thrives well when slightly shaded. There is, however, a great want of excellent vegetables. He has no doubt these may be acclimated, an object greatly to be desired, not only for the benefit of the crews of the numerous vessels continually on the coast.

AGRICULTURAL REPORT FROM THE TENASSERIM COAST.

Mr. Riley, at Amherst, favors the society with the result of experiments made under his care at the request of Mr. Blandell, the Commissioner of the province.

Jeanpore Maize has not proved so good as that already cultivated by the Burmese. Bourbon, Seychelles, Sen Island and Malia cotton seeds have had the year's trial, but the seed for the most part proving rotten, no satisfactory results have been obtained. The Guinea grass has thriven most luxuriously—so have the arrow-root plants, the black bean and sugar cane.

HORTICULTURE IN NEPAUL.

Mr. Hodgson, the British Resident at the Court of Nepal, intimates, that he can let the society have a supply of good red and white clover seed, and good apple grafts, the importance of the human element in this process, we may begin by asking whether a culture can be transferred from one people to another. The answer is, of course, no. In India it is not so easy to transplant or imitate, where the environment, by natural limitation, hinders that the culture can be adopted without sacrificing in any certain extent that of another; thus, diminishing as it were the benefits which might otherwise be expected. But here, on the contrary, the influence of untutored people will admit of the widest extension, without encroaching in any way on that which may be already in progress. This is a fact of great consideration.

Again, habits of intercourse with the superior intelligence of the English character are rendering the inhabitants yearly more and more able and expert, in the application of skill and the adaptation of scientific invention, and whenever the native working farmer can be brought to be so far enriched as to possess an accumulated stock, and this, without fear of oppression, from any quarter, point with safety to the hoard of materials which his husbandry has secured for him, or, in other words, when he shall be the owner of CAPITAL, which, in times of need he can fall back on for support till more prosperous times come round, then the regeneration of India may be said to have commenced, and the riches of her soil be considered to have been fairly and efficiently tested.

"The consideration of the foregoing subject, to be dealt justly by, requires much more space than can be afforded in an Annual Report, interesting and absorbing as the topic is, and, therefore, it must be allowed to give place to matters more immediately connected with the economy of the Society. That the truth of the doctrine here advanced is, however, appreciated, the growing strength of this institution abundantly testifies, and the generous labours in the cause of benevolence, have the best testimony of their European brethren in exile to stimulate them in the exercise of their philanthropic exertions, by the additional monthly aid which is continually coming in to contribute towards the good work they have in hand. What can be more satisfactory than this, and if pages were written nothing more gratifying to the members of the Society could be adduced to encourage and cheer them in their onward course.

"To turn to the more immediate concerns of the Society, since the close of last year, there has been an accession of ninety five new members. Of these 27 are civilians in the service of the Government, 22 are military and medical officers, 23 are indigo planters or residents in the interior, engaged in pursuits of agriculture, 15 are mercantile and 8 are of a miscellaneous class.

"The total number of members on the list of the Society at the end of December 1838, was 411.* This with the addition of the 95 new election, makes the total number of members up to the present time, to amount to 506. From this must be deducted resignations 9, and deaths 11, is all 20, making the real number now borne on the records to be 486.

"The following tabular statement affords the details more fully in comparison with foregoing periods, and

* In the Annual Report for 1838, the number is stated to be 450, but this is an error.

"Of this number 46 are members who have been added for their subscriptions, 47 are in Europe, and 6 are honorary, leaving 387 as the actual number of paying members on the books of the Society.

"The accession of 94 new members during the present year, is a circumstance well worthy of congratulation, for after the great additions made in the year 1837 and 1838 to the ranks of membership (the circle of the European community in this country being limited), there was much reason to suppose that the Annual Report of succeeding years would necessarily present a diminished return.

"When the result of the year just closed is viewed in this light, the number of 94 may be regarded as a demonstration of public feeling, equal if not surpassing that of any previous period.

"The calamity which the Society has sustained by the hand of death, has been severely felt during the past year. Member after member, among those whose devotion to the cause led them to give their time, when it could be but ill spared, to the manifold duties required by the Society have been taken from us. Perhaps no year, since the foundation of the Institution in the year 1820 has the benevolence, by death and departure for England which the Society has experienced, been greater than during the last period, Messrs. George Princep, Ewart and Cockerell may be instance in the most prominent of them.

George Princep. "The first was always foremost in promoting every measure calculated to advance the interests of the Society and the good of the country. His enterprising spirit was abundantly shown in the projection of more than one great scheme of national improvement, and the practical knowledge which he brought to bear on all points in which he engaged, gave to his opinions that weight and influence that earned; confidence whenever expressed, and tended so much to the security of the reputation which the Society now enjoys. Alent in the cause in which he embarked, he left no means untied to secure success; labour to him, in the ardour of pursuit, was quite lost sight of, and it is much to be feared, that the untiring industry of his spirit, in this incessant clime, precipitated him prematurely to his grave. As one of the warmest friends of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India, his name stands foremost, and his loss will long be felt with regret.

W. K. Ewart. "The melancholy and distressing death of Mr Ewart, must be fresh in the recollection of the minds of every reverent member of the Society. From the first moment of setting foot in India, Mr. Ewart entered warmly into the advantages of Indian research. Trained to habits of inquiry, he had early learnt to appreciate the value of attested facts, and like all minds once so tempered, never felt contented till the truth could be elicited in his clearest form. Thus his attention was early directed to the value of statistics, and as a member of the Statistical Committee of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, he did his utmost to impress on those who have not given the subject consideration the importance of this department of science. He brought these great practical acquisitions with him to the assistance of the Agricultural Society, and, had his life been spared, the institution would, there is little doubt, have had many proud testimonials of his ability and worth. As it is the record bears proof of the interest which he took in that great national object—the improvement and spread of the cotton cultivation throughout the empire, and his constant attendance at the meetings of the members, has caused his untimely end to be severely and deeply felt. The other members who have been taken from the Society during the past year by death, are Messrs. Cockerell, Oram, C. R. Martin, Wm Allen George S. Mills, John Maclean, M. Maclean, F. H. Senter, and R. H. Bain.

Work done by the Society during the past year. "Passing now to the consideration of the work which has been done by the Society during the past twelve months, we come first to the call made on the Society by the Government of India, to furnish it, for the information of the Court of Directors and Committee of Agricultural and Commerce of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain, with particulars touching the productions and prices of Agricultural articles at the chief marts, and on obscure villages conjointly in each district of the various provinces of the empire, arranging the returns in such a manner, that the course of trade geographically may be best shown.

Collection of Agricultural statistics. "The Society, ever anxious to support the acquisition of information of public utility in every form, appointed, for the purpose of carrying into effect the wishes of the Supreme Government, a special Committee, from among its members, to undertake the task of inquiry,—and a report having been presented to the Society by the Committee, in which the mode best Bengel, in the early part of the year great hopes were entertained, that the talents which had been received from England and Scotland, would have lived and have spread; but subsequent experience does not enable the Society to confirm this ardent wish.

"The plants have thriven well, and are at the present moment in a great state of perfection at the nursery; but owing to one accident and the other, the insects have never been landed in a state of healthful vigour or in that quantity which could be said to allow of the climate being fairly tested; and, after enduring a state of sickly existence for a few weeks, they have gradually died away till all have disappeared. The Society is now in a better condition to receive insects than ever it was before, as the nepolaris is well stocked with the Bourbon plant, and through the generous exertions of M. M. Richard, and Bedier, who have so kindly forwarded more than one consignment of insects and plants, the Society hopes to be put in possession of a further supply. As a mark of the sense entertained by the Society for the valuable endeavours of both M. M. Richard and Bedier, the Society has voted to each of these gentlemen its gold medal.

“The third in order, but ~~not~~ perhaps in importance, is the ~~question~~ ^{question} which the Society has put to the prosecution of its labours in the cause of cotton cultivation in India—a subject the magnitude of which can only be measured by the millions of pounds sterling which may be said to be involved in the success or otherwise of the undertaking.

"The more the Society gives its consideration to the improvement of this important culture, the more it becomes convinced that capital and skill are those required to raise the indigenous cottons of the country to the parent stock, be it observed, whereas all other India have been supplied to a standard worthy of a comparison with the productions of the west. The accumulated mass of information in respect of the state of the lands of India, to furnish cotton, from the eyes of the perennial plants of the western world, leaves no doubt that with careful selection of the sites, attention to the husbandry of the tree, and the skillful application of modern knowledge to the art of cleaning the article or the market, the export of cotton from India will be a business of yearly increase, and form a most material item in the future cotton culture of the state.

With the conviction that the public attention alone requires to be directed to the subject, the opportunity for the presentation of the memorial of the Churches, for merchants to the Society through the Glasgow Chamber of Commerce afforded an excellent opportunity of preparing a Summary, from the records of the office, of what has been done by the Society and the success which had "The persons thus brought prominently forward by the leading nation, community of Great Britain, was no alien to the nation, but a man appointed to preside over the services of India, and hence we find that about the time the Secretary had to journey to head the British Government of India, he was driving means to meet the player, which had been abandoned by the merchants of Manchester in their petition to the Honorable Court of Directors of the India Company."

The dispatch conveying the sentiments of the body of the Directors, bears date March 14th, 1839, and the sole authority of the Right Honourable the Governor-General's warrant, which has been transmitted for the consideration of the Society, was completed on the 14th August, 1839. The documents themselves, and the steps taken in fulfilment of the sentiments contained in them, have been so recently before the members and the public, that a circumstantial detail in this place is rendered unnecessary. It is sufficient to mention that the Government of India has been more determined to embark in the most efficient measure that can be devised, for this most laudable national object; and that it has sought to secure success by obtaining, from America, the services of duly qualified planters in order to give to the undertaking the benefit of the best practical knowledge. The arrangement of the details for carrying the resolution of the Government into effect, the Society has been rejoiced to undertake, and this is now in course of preparation. That success in its most enlarged sense will attend the efforts now to be made, must depend on the energy and zeal of the individuals whose province it will be to watch over and attend to the working of the enterprise. The amplest testimony exists that the diversified soil and climate of India are capable of supplying the demands of Europe with cotton of a marketable and profitable quality, and it rests with the executive, to justify the expectation of what the soil can do.

"In the rising staple of unwholesome Indian cane- the Society has received and communicated the 'Lettuce' of 1844. Indeed, during the past year, many interesting items of intelligence calculated to stimulate the application of capital to the production of this remarkable produce of the vegetable kingdom. The attention which has been directed to the preparation by men of science, has afforded for the manufacturer of it, much practical information; but as yet some obstacles remain, which it is desirable would be removed. Opium-juice obtained from the lactaceous juice of the Ficus Elastica of Assam, is liable to decomposition, and the security of the article reaching the English market, in its solid form, is much endangered. Drs. Royle and Ure,* have for some time had the subject under consideration, and it is hoped, from the success which has already attended their inquiries, that their researches will eventually be crowned by the discovery of an efficient remedy for the evil."

The establishment of a Tea manufactory in Assam.

"The next most important subject which has come under the consideration of the Society, is the progress made by the Government of India in establishing a manufactory of Tea in Assam. The papers and documents which have been laid before the Society, incontrovertibly prove how vastly abundant the country is in this most valuable shrub. In the management of this new and interesting branch of agricultural pursuit, the Society has no concern directly, but the desire of the Government to engage the attention of the members and capitalists, generally, to the facilities which the province of Assam affords for manufacturing tea to any extent, has induced it to make, from time to time, communications to the Society on this highly important culture. In order to attract attention to the subject, the Court of Directors, both individually, and collectively, being prohibited from embarking in the cultivation as a source of commercial profit.

"In their despatch, dated London 25th September 1838, they have signified to the Governor-General in Council, that the Government tea establishment in Assam must not be increased beyond what is absolutely necessary to bring the trial to a fair practical issue, as they consider that when generally known, the speculation will doubtless be taken up with avidity by the commercial capitalist. And again, in their despatch of January 23, 1839, they desire that the best means for encouraging the cultivation of the Tea, with as little present loss to Government be suggested with as great prospective benefit to commerce as possible. Already the promise of the Honourable Court, has been fulfilled. A joint-stock company to undertake the severe and hazardous task of bringing the 'Tea colonies of Assam into cultivation has been formed with a capital of a million sterling and the Society has the formation of it as an undertaking that requires the most liberal consideration of the Government, as if successful, it will be one of the grandest achievements that private enterprise has ever effected for the good of India of the indigenous cattle of India

"As a material branch of Indian husbandry the improvement of the present impoverished bullock of the country has attracted the notice of the Society, and in April a full report was brought up from the Cattle Committee, and adopted, having for its object the introduction of the middle horned bull of England into India, and a schedule of prizes on a most liberal scale as an inducement to the public to undertake the introduction of good neat and other cattle into India has been held out.

Oppressive discriminating duties on foreign commodities from

"One of the difficulties which Indian Commerce has hitherto laboured under, has been the invidious distinction made by the legislature of the mother-country between staple articles, the produce of the British possessions in India, and similar articles the produce of the Crown colonies, until within the last three years a distinction of this kind was made between sugars of the East and West Indies, and it yet continues to be in force with respect to the two commodities of Tobacco and Rum.

"To assist, by every legitimate means in its power, to remove so impolitic, to use no stronger expression, distinction the Society in May last, determined on drawing the attention of the constituted authorities of the state, to the burthen thus unfairly thrown on the energies of the country, and, therefore, moved the various organs of the Government to obtain from the legislature of England's removal of these discriminating duties. The Society trusts that its labour has not been in vain. The receipt of a recent despatch from the Court of Directors, in reply to the representation of the Society, intimates that that influential body has a petition to the imperial Parliament in preparation, with which it proposes going to the legislature on the first Meeting of the Session.

State measures for conducting an interchange of vegetable products between East India and the

"The Society in June last had placed at its disposal a despatch from the Home Government, addressed to the Governor-General of India in reference to a communication which had been transmitted by him touching the importance of interchange of vegetable productions, and intimating to His Lordship that the Court had resolved on gradually furnishing the means of carrying on, extensively, experiments for naturalizing in India, useful and desirable plants indigenous in other countries.

"On the receipt of the communication here adverted to, the Society lost no time in constituting a Committee for the purpose of assisting the Government in the prosecution of its views. The recommendation adopted was to issue circulars to all persons scattered over the country, inviting them to furnish the Committee with the extent of their individual knowledge. This has since been done, and the Society purposes to continue to render its services to the promotion of this laudable work with its best ability.

Introduction of Foreign seed corn
into India

"Another object of solicitude by the Society, during the past year, has been the introduction of foreign seed corn into India, and for this purpose a sum of money has been voted to enable the Society to commence this desirable object, and an invitation issued to all persons who may be desirous of trying the benefits likely to result from this measure, to register their names at the office of the Society, and any quantity they may require shall be obtained for them from the seedsmen of the Society.

Spread of anguar-cane culture throughout Hindustan

"Turning now to the consideration of the efforts made by the Society in extending the propagation of the Sugar cane in India, in order to contribute the best aid in its power to forward the interests of the nation in the promotion of this great necessary staple of commerce, the Society has the pleasing duty of noting that such has been the avidity shown by the members and others to possess the valuable varieties of cane grown in the Nursery of the Society that in the space of six weeks from the commencement of the distribution not a cane was left for tardy applicants. The stock supplied amounts to 32,494 canes, and these have gone forth into the different districts of Bengal, to meet the growing demand which exists for this profitable and valuable culture. A further crop of cane is expected to be ready for cutting in February, when applicants can again be supplied.

Branch Socities

"At the close of last year, the Society had to report the existence of fourteen Branch Societies. During the year just closed, an addition of four, Rackerungge, Darjeeling, Chittagong and Beaulah, has to be made to this number, making in all seventeen, of these most valuable aids to the diffusion of the great designs which it is the object of the Parent Institution to disseminate.

Prizes awarded by the Society

"In the Department of reward for the encouragement of the great objects adverted to in the foregoing paragraphs, the Society has to report the adjudication, at the annual exhibition held in February last, of the large Silver Medal of the Society and 250 rupees to Mrs. Pattle for the best bred cow.

For Cattle.

"To W. F. Gibbon, Esq, the Gold Medal of the Society and 200 rupees, for the best Woolled Merino Ram

To W. F. Gibbon, Esq, the large Silver Medal and 150 rupees, for the second best woolled Merino Ram.

For Cochineal

"In consideration of the readiness with which Mr. Bodier, Minister of Marine at the Isle of Bourbon, has met the wishes of the Society in promoting the introduction of the true grained Cochineal Insect into Bengal

For bringing the cocoons of the Eri silk into use

"As a means of contribution to the liberal donation of Captain Jenkins, Commissioner of the Assam Provinces, to promote the discovery of an efficient method of bringing the cocoons of the Eri silk worm into use, as an article of commercial value, the Society has determined to meet Captain Jenkins' donation of 500 rupees by a similar amount, and a schedule of prizes to the extent of 1000 rupees is now before the public, for the purpose of encouraging the discovery.

For Raw Silk

"In the article of silk, the Gold Medal of the Society for the second time has been awarded to Mr. Rose, of Ramnaghur Factory, in the collectorate of Moorsheda bed. On this occasion there were six competitors.

For Sugar.

"To J. Balestier, Esq., American Consul at Singapore, the Gold Medal of the Society has been awarded, for affording a strong grained, useful sugar which would answer well for refining; and which has been classed as brown to good brown.

Money vote for foreign seed corn

"In order to carry out the intention of the Society in procuring the introduction of foreign seed corn into Hindostan, the sum of five hundred rupees has been appropriated for that purpose

Money vote for purchase of Cotton Seed

"In the way of outlay for cotton seed, the Society has appropriated the sum of 500 rupees for the purchase of the best sorts of indigenous seeds, and 1000 rupees for the purchase of American seeds. The assignment of further sums has been unnecessary, owing to the liberality of donors, who, in a spirit of noble generosity, have preferred that their consignments of seeds to the Society should be received as a gift rather than be paid for. To Mr. Waghorn of Egypt, Mr. Jackson of Calcutta, Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co. of Madras, Mr. Richards of Calcutta, Mr. G. H. Adam of Calcutta, Messrs. Adam, Scott and Co. of Calcutta the thanks of the Society are especially due for the extensive and most acceptable presents of foreign Cotton seeds which they have made.

Literary De-

"In the literary department, the Society has to call attention to the alteration which has for the past year, been made in the manner of giving the various important communications, as they come before them, an extended form of publicity as possible, by enlarging the monthly Report of Proceedings. Much of the present popularity, which the Society enjoys, may be traced to the valuable information which, from time to time, is given to the world, while the subject is fresh and acceptable to the public. In this way the intelligence which the Society is favored with, has been disposed of and in the forthcoming volume of Transactions, the reader will, in consequence, find that all the shorter essays and contributions have been recorded in the Reports of Monthly Proceedings. Papers of more lengthy size, and which could not, without extending the Monthly Report to undue limits, be so disposed of, have been reserved for the body of the Transactions, and these are now in course of preparation at the press.

Horticultural Department.

"In the Horticultural Department the Society has every reason to be satisfied. Seeds have been distributed, to a large extent, all over the country. Of the excellence of the Calcutta market in all the varieties of ordinary vegetables, the daily supply in all the chief market places of the city is an incontestable proof, and to the Society is this state of perfection and plenty mainly due. By furnishing the native gardeners with foreign seed at half price, they are able to furnish every year a continued supply which, without this assistance, they could not do, as many of the vegetables, although they grow luxuriantly, give little or no fruitful seed.

"The Annual Horticultural Exhibition of the Society further contributes towards the encouragement of this useful object, by the award of medallion and money prizes, and the Society has reason to believe, that there are much sought after by the class of persons for whom they are intended.

Conclusion In conclusion, the Society has to present, for the information of all concerned, the particulars of the different objects for which prizes are held out, and it is hoped that the review of the labours of the Institution for the past year now given, will afford that satisfaction that shall earn for it the continued support of the members and the influx of new and additional support."
—Hurkaru, February 21.

the Society has awarded to that gentleman its Gold Medal.

A Special Meeting of the Members of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society took place yesterday morning, in the Town Hall, to receive the Report of the Cotton Committee. The President of the Society, Mr. Edward Ryan, was present on the occasion. The Report of the Cotton Committee was brought before the Meeting, duly discussed and altered or adopted clause by clause, the most important points of discussion, relating to the disposal of the three American workmen, and the relative positions of the superintendent and workmen, and the relative positions of the superintendent and workmen. In regard to the first of these points, an amendment was proposed to confine all three workmen to one station at first, and allot their separate spheres of labour by and-by as it may seem most expedient and desirable, but this amendment was over ruled, and the original intention of appointing them to three different districts, was adopted.

In the course of the proceedings, a letter was read from Mr. Bruce, of Calcutta, tendering his service to the Committee in furthering the cotton cultivation, qualified as he was, for this purpose, from an experience of no less than thirty two years. But as it was not contemplated by the Committee to incur any expense for the kind of assistance Mr. Bruce proffered, the Secretary was requested to make a reply to Mr. Bruce to that effect.

Nothing further of importance was brought before the Meeting, the whole time having been taken up by the discussion and consideration of the Cotton Committee's Report —Hurkaru February 20.

Third day, Saturday, 18th January.

The sport of this morning is entitled to little notice although there was no abatement of encouragement as far as the attendance of the public, and the display of much of the Beauty and Fashion of the Presidency, may be considered as incentive to the well directed exertions of those sporting owners of Horses, who have contributed to the amusement of the meeting.

Silkworm won both his Races with great ease to himself

For the Fairy Sweepstakes three started—His Majesty Charles the XII under the auspices of a larking name, was victorious in the 1st heat, although it was apparent he had on a sly customer at least to deal with, —and accordingly in the two next heats his dugout was not to be concealed—so putting his dignity in his riders pocket, and his tail at least so much of it as remained “a pique” before his legs, he came in second.

Fourth day, Tuesday, 21st January.

As usual there was no lack of spectators (a word to the Editor) who were certainly rewarded with on very interesting and well contested races.

In the Handicap “the Major's Mare” had it all very much her own way, playing first fiddle to her own tunes against those inveterate amateurs “Enigma” and “Test” Dost Mahomed cutting copers in the rear salon son egie.

The Purm brought out not a few of the elite of the Meeting! The absence of "Kaled" being not less regretted on his account than on that of his sporting owner—had he appeared there is no saying how the true disciple of the Prophet might have come off—as it was, however, "The Moslem" par excellence, like a true one, took the lead and kept at without ever allowing either Englishman or Caner to shew in front! This gallant little horse went off at score, closely pursued by Rushden, the Fly-Fisher and Darfour bringing up the rear at a respectable distance. Ere reaching the Monument they all closed and separated again, Moslem and Fly-Fisher leading at the top of their speed till they came to the distance post, from which it was a beautiful struggle—Darfour coming up with an awful stride, hand over hand, well piloted by his gentleman rider, but not in time to head the Arab who well jockeyed by "tumbler" won by half a length—Fly Fisher who made all the running against the Moslem from the Monument an excellent third.—Spectator, Jan 22.

BOMBAY RACES.

Our races began yesterday, as will be seen by the following accounts there seems to have been good sport.

First Day, Tuesday, 4th February, 1840.

First Race.—Sweepstakes of Rupees 500 P. P. with Rupees 500 from the Fund, for all Arab Horses that have never started for Purse, Plate, Cup, Match or Sweepstakes previous to the day of closing—2 miles, 8st. 7lbs. Closed on the 15th of October.

Mr. Field's..... b a h.....Xereen.
Mr. Boyd's..... g a h.....Amato.
Mr. McDonald's..... c a h.....St Andrew.
Mr. Vibart's..... g a h.....Parvenu.

1st half mile—1 0—2nd,—1 3—3rd,—1 0—4th,—1 3—Total 46.

A beautiful start—all four horses close together the 1st half mile, Parvenu leading when they passed the stand, Amato dropped after running a mile, the other three rating it close together to the turn, where St. Andrew took the lead and increased his distance to several lengths, winning easily hard-held.

Time—4 6
by other watches—4 3

Second Race.—A Welter, Rupees 500 from the Fund, with a Sweepstakes of Rupees 150 each—1½ miles, 11st 7lbs. Gentlemen Riders.

Mr. Vibart's..... g a h.....Mameluke.
Mr. Black's..... g a h.....Hoffman.
Colonel Stalker's..... g a h.....Yg Govnr.
Mr. Boyd's..... b a h.....Sam Slick.
Major Robert's..... g a h.....Tartar.

1st half mile—1 4
2nd 1 0

Total 3 4

The whole started well together. Tartar taking the lead on rounding the first corner,—Mameluke and the rest following in a string a length apart, and thus they ran till nearing the two mile starting post, Mameluke, Young Governor, and Hoffman closed with the leading horse, but Tartar still kept it up, when Mameluke gained the lead and appeared to be winning in hand, —but Young Governor within half a dozen strides from home, sprung like a true one to the whip, and was most handsomely ruled a winner by half a neck—Tartar and Mameluke running a dead heat for the second place, Hoffman close up.

Third Race.—Give and Take, Rupees 500 from the Fund, with a Sweepstakes of Rupees 150—1½ mile heats—14 hands, carrying 9st.

Mr. Vibart's..... g a h.....Merlin
Mr. Black's..... w a h.....Mantahine.
Mr. Field's..... w a h.....Orelia.

2nd Heat—3 minutes 8 seconds.

Both heats won with the greatest ease by Merlin, though Mantahine pressed him hard the 1st mile, and Orelia from the distance position the first heat.

1st half mile—58—2nd,—59—3rd,—1 3—Total—3 0.

MOZUFFURPORE RACES.

R. C. 1½ miles and 287 yards and 2 feet.

First Race—A purse of 15 G. M. for maiden C R, and Arab horses Entrance 5 G M Heats R. C weight for age. Arabs allowed 5lbs.

Mr Cloud's b c b h Vandyke, 8st 2½lbs..... 2 1
Mr Namreh's g c b m Maria, 8st. 11½lbs 1 2

Vandyke the favorite at any odds Maria off at score leading, was never headed and won easy in 3m 7s. The second heat both off at score, Maria leading, Vandyke on her quarter, at ¼ mile from home, the mare went away about a length, at ½ mile, Vandyke closed and b at the mare very easy in 3m. 15s. The third heat Maria was drawn, having broke a blood vessel in the second heat. The colt was evidently sick.

Second Race—A purse of 10 G. M. added to a Sweepstakes of 1 G M for all horses used bona fide for factory work, that have never won before the meeting. R. C. 11st. Gentlemen riders. Mr. Jock names b a g Mshap, 10st. 11½ (Mr. Jock) . . . 1
Mr. George's c. Cutch g Baithe 10st. 11½ 2
Mr. Cloud's b c b g Prince Albert, 10st, 11½..distanced.

Mshap took the lead at starting, Prince Albert running rusty, but was fast making up to the Arab, at the first ¼ mile, when his rider's stirrup leather gave way Prince halted and his rider was thrown No race between the Arab and the Cutch horse, the former having at all his own way. No time taken.

Third Race—A purse of 10 G. M. for all untrained horses. Entrance 2 G. M., ½ mile. Heats 11st. Gentlemen riders.

Mr. A. Wood's g c b g Old Tom, 10st. 11½, (Mr Jock)..... 1
Mr L. names ch c b g Spectre, 10st. 11½ (Mr. L) dist.

A good race was expected, for in the event of Spectre not bolting as though a sulky horse, he is a known good one when inclined to go, but not being in the humour this morning, he bolted after running 50 yards, taking a line of his own across the country.

SECOND DAY.

First Race—The Planter's subscription Cup value —, for all horses Lancer Cup wei hts, 2½ miles, 10 G. M entrance To close and nominate the day before the meeting, and 5 G M forfeit if declared the day before the race The winner to be sold for 1200 rupees, if claimed within ¼ of an hour after the race.

Mr. Cloud's b a h Chancery, aged, 8st 4½lbs 1
Mr. Beeroo's b a h Smoker, 5 years old 8st 2
Mr. Peter's g a h Fiasco aged, 8st 4½lbs 3

All off well together Fiasco, made the running from the post, but owing to some misconception of orders on the part of the jockey, pulled up after passing the stand the first time and so lost all chance, Chancery then took up the running, and was never headed, winning easy.

Time 5m. 34s.

Second Race—A purse of 15 G. M for all horses, give and take weight for age and inches, 14 hands to carry 8st 7½lbs, Maidens allowed 3½lbs, entrance 5 G. M. heats 1½ mile.

Mr Cloud's g c b m Victoria 10st 11½ 2
Mr. Hughes names Mr Eraser's b c b h Smoker, 11st..... 3

Smoker off, leading by several lengths Heathbell collared him in the first ¼ mile and at the ½ mile post went a head of both and had it all her own way with a strong pull.—Time 2m 7s.

For the second heat both Smoker and Victoria were drawn.

Fourth Race—A Purse of 5 G M. for all horses untrained, entrance 2 G. M., ½ mile heats, gentlemen riders, 11st.

Mr. North's g m Susannah, (Mr. Cox)....; 2 1 1
Mr Cloud's ch b Spectre, (Mr. L) 1 2 2
Mr. A. Wood's g g Old Tom, (Mr Jock).. 3 3 3

A false start, Spectre running all the way to the distance post, before he could be pulled up. The first heat a splendid race The mare got a bad start, but made it up, at the distance post from whence there was a tremendous struggle between the three, Spectre winning by a head. Susannah and Old Tom receiving lots of punishment.—Time 1m 2d Heat.—Old Tom had a bad start. Susannah and Spectre rating it all the way, the mare at last winning by a head.—Time 1m.

3d Heat.—The mare again got a bad start, but caught Spectre half way home and won by a nose after a desperate struggle. Old Tom no where.—Time 1m. 1s.

HURDLE RACES.

The Hurdle Race came off yesterday evening at 5 p.m., and was won by Mr. J. H. Fergusson's b a Bricks (Mr. Barnes) beating by a head Mr. Curtis' g mare Blanche and four others. The following started.

Mr. Fergusson's b a h Bricks, (Mr. Barnes)....	1
Mr. Curtis' g m Blanche,	2
Mr. Little's b c h Tiptop ..	3
Mr. Fergusson's b a h Belshazzar,.....	4
Mr. Cowper's g a h Lollypop,.....	5
Mr. Barnes' g a h Timkins,.....	6

Timkins was felled at the first hurdle which took away his chance, and Belshazzar refused the second, which took him his. The mare and the others took all the hurdles well, but the mare had so much the foot of her companions that she was over the last hurdle some seconds before any of them. Her rider then pulled up, and gazed complacently at the array of beauty in the stand, so the rider of Bricks quickly stole a march upon him, and poked his horse's head in first. There being however, no judge on the box, to declare the winner, the race was disputed, and we believe it is to be run on Monday evening at the same hour.—Hark. Feb. 9

The second heat of the "Hurdle Race" was run yesterday evening. The same horses started as before, but came in in somewhat of a different order, as follow.

Mr. Hutchinson's b A h Bricks, (Mr. Barnes)	1
Mr. Little's b A h Tiptop,.....(Owner)	2
Mr. Curtis' g m Blanche,	3
Mr. Leslie's g A h Timkins,	4
Mr. Hutchinson's b A h Belshazzar.
Mr. Cooper's g A h Lollypop.

Belshazzar made tremendous play at starting—clearing the first hurdle far ahead of the others, all however, followed his good example—except the unlucky wight of a Lollypop, who suddenly brought up all standing to the tune of "I was a donkey wot wouldn't go," and may be there at this present writing for all we know to the contrary. Away they went, Belshazzar leading them over the three first hurdles in splendid style, but as he approached the fourth in the open maidan there were evident symptoms of shying, and off he bolted towards Calcutta—and no more was seen of him in the race. Tiptop also swerving gave the lead to the mare, who took the leaps well, but Bricks who was ridden with considerable judgment throughout, and who bounded over each hurdle like an antelope, gradually closed upon her, and gave her the go by as they came upon the race-course again at the half mile post. The mare was soon dead beat, and all pretty considerably blown, before they came to the last hurdle. Little Bricks, however, still had some steam aboard, and went it like himself to the last, winning the purse amidst the acclamations of thousands, and to the great gratification of the many bright eyes who witnessed his rider's success.—*Hark. CALCUTTA RACES, 2nd MEETING 1839 40

First Day, February 1, 1840.

First Race.—A Silver Breakfast Service, presented by the Merchants of Calcutta, added to a Sweepstakes of 25 G. M. each, 10 forst, for all Arabs, 2½ miles heat. Calcutta weight for age; Maidens allowed 10 lbs. To close and name the day before the first meeting, 27th December, 1839.

Mr. Bacon's gr. a. h. Mishap 8st 3lbs (Ross)	1
Mr. Alright's gr a. h. The Exile, 9st 5lbs.	2
Mr. Dale's gr. a. h. Gazelle, 9st 5lbs	3

The Merchant's Breakfast Service opened the ball for the Second Meeting, and afforded as pretty a race as may be seen on any course. At one of the best ordinaries, (held at the Club) we have had for many a long day. The Exile was backed freely against Mishap, these two selling in the lottery 26 and 21 respectively and Gazelle for 10. A few thought 16lbs extra must tell, tho' the distance was against Mishap, and took the odds at 2 to 1, and occasionally at 3 to 2.

1st Heat.—After one false start, (and the second too was a bad one for Gazelle), away went The Exile having the lead of Mishap abut half a length, up to the stand, the pace was slow for the first three quarter mile, until Gazelle closed at the 1st f, and they then ran neck in neck at a good rate to the mile post. Here Robert pulled back, and lay about a couple of lengths behind leaving Gazelle and Exile to race it together to the turn home, where Gazelle was shaken off. Mishap then ran up to The Exile, and the race home was extremely interesting, both working from the distance, and Hall doing all, he could to push Exile in first, but Mishap was not to be beaten and won by about half a length in 4m 31s. Both horses seemed much distressed.

2d Heat.—Gazelle made a waiting race of it; Mishap and The Exile going away together, keeping excellent company to the Hospital, Mishap having rather the lead, which Exile could not take from him, Gazelle observing this, began his running at the goal, and made up his distance in best style. Exile was beaten at the turn home,—up went Gazelle and collared Mishap, and at the distance apparently had the race, but the whip told on Mishap about 20 yards from home, and with one Comenlers spring on was Gazelle a-head of us an instant, winning a most beautiful race in 4m. 34s.

Second Race —Handicap Stakes of 25 G. M. each, P. P. for each acceptance, two miles, for all horses, to be handicapped by a Committee selected for the purpose. Any number of horses may be put in to be handicapped, and any number may accept, 'paying accordingly,' but only one horse to start from any one stable. Names of horses to be sent to the Committee on the last day of first meeting, and the weights to be declared on the day following, after which, one week will be given for acceptance. No horse will be handicapped that has not started in public.

Mr. Alright's br. a. h. Sweetlips, 8st 12lbs. (Hall.)	1
Mr. Cozey's ch. c. b. c. Evergreen, 7st. 7lbs.	2
Mr. Grey's b a. h. Silvertail, 7st 8lbs.
Mr. Allan's gr. a. h. Glendower, 8st 10lbs.
Mr. Bacon's b. a. h. Balsac, 8st 8lbs.

The great Handicap proved a failure, and the Committee were evidently any thing but awake when they put on Sweetlips only 8st 12lbs. Some few fancied the Country Bred with 7st. 7lbs, and took the long odds, and others had hopes of the great Glendower, doing still greater things than he had done, but after a pretty fair run as far as the $\frac{1}{2}$ mile post, Sweetlips just playing with them, and allowing Evergreen the lead to the goal, Hall let the old horse out passed one after another in a canter, and won by several lengths, hard held in 4 minutes. Not one seemingly had a chance with him.

Third Race—A Writer Stakes of 20 G. M. each, P. P. with 30 G. M. from the funds, for all Araba 11st. 7lbs. each, maidens allowed 10lbs., horses that have never started 1st. The winner of the Great Writer to put up 5lbs. extra. R. O. and a distance. To close and name the day preceding the race by 3 p. m. Three subscribers or no race.

Mr. Allright names gr a. h. Fearnought, 11st. 7lbs.

Mr. Bacon's br. a. h. Comet, 11st 7lbs. 2

Mr. Smollett's gr a. h. Bedouin 11st. 7lbs.

Mr. White names gr. a. h. Aladdin, 10st. 11lbs.

Mr. Curth's gr. a. h. Precursor, 10st 7lbs.

Aladdin, with his 10lbs. less, tried to run away from the heavy weights, and led to the mile. Fearnought holding hard about three lengths behind. But he soon took first place, which he might have done whenever he liked, at the $\frac{1}{2}$ post Precursor made a stumpy struggle, but immediately dropped astern. Bedouin was brought up near the Hospital, but gave way to Comet at a turn home. Fearnought however kept the lead to the end. Time 3m 50s. The R. C. 3m. 34s.—Hurkaru, February 1.

the following are the races for to morrow:

Second Day February 4, 1840.

The Tagore Cup, presented by Dwarkanauth Tagore, Esq., added to a Sweepstakes of 25 G. M. each, 10 forfeit, for all Araba, 9 stone each, maidens allowed 10 lb., one three mile heat. To close and name the day before the first meeting, 27th December, 1839.

A Sweepstakes of 20 G. M. each, H. F. for all horses (English excepted) R. C. heats, weight for age, viz 3 years 7st, 4lbs. 4 years 8st 4lbs, 5 years 8st, 12lbs., 6 years and aged 9st 2lbs. Countrybreds and N. S. Wales horses to carry 7lbs, and Cape horses 1 stone extra winners once to carry 5lbs., twice or oftener 7lbs. extra To close and name the day before the first meeting, 27th December, 1839. Four subscribers or no race.

A Sweepstakes of 50 G. M., P. P. for maiden Araba, 8st 4lbs. each, two miles; winners once 3lbs, twice 7lbs three times or oftener 10lbs. extra. To close the day before the first meeting 27th December, 1839, and name the day before the race by 8 a. m. Three subscribers or no race.—Hurk. Feb. 1.

SECOND DAY FEBRUARY 1840.

First Race.—The Tagore Cup, presented by Dwarkanauth Tagore, Esq. added to a Sweepstakes of 25 G. M. each, 10 forfeit, for all Araba 9 stone each, maidens allowed 10lbs; one three-mile heat. To close and name the day before the first meeting, 27th Dec 1839

Mr. Bacon's gr a. h. Fieschi 9st. 1

Mr. Dale's gr a. h. Gazelle, 9st. 2

Mr. Allright's a. h. Sweetlips, 9st. 3

Time 6 2 $\frac{1}{2}$.

Little sport this morning; Fieschi was booked as a matter of course to win which he did though not without a struggle from Gazelle who led for the first two miles at a steady pace, from the Gilbert mile to the last quarter the two horses appeared strong, but were Fieschi took the lead and who by three lengths Sweetlips never ran up and was three or four lengths behind Gazelle at the finish.

Second Race—A Sweepstakes of 20 G. M. each H. F. for all horses (English excepted) R. C. heats; weight for age viz 3 years 7st 4lbs, 4 years 8st 4lbs 5 years 8st 12lbs, 6 years and aged 9st 2lbs Country-bred and N. S. Wales' horses to carry 7 lbs; and Cape horses 1 stone extra, winners once to carry 5lbs., twice or oftener 7lbs extra To close and name the day before the first meeting 27th December, 1839 Four subscribers or no race,

Mr Allright's gr a. h Fearnought, 9st 8lbs 1

Time 3 37.

Fearnought led throughout and won very easy in 3.37, 1st mile in 1.59.

Third Race—A Sweepstakes of 50 G. M. P. P. for maiden Araba 8st 4lbs each two miles, winners once 3lbs, twice 7lbs., three times or oftener 10lbs extra To close the day before the first meeting 27th Dec. 1839, and name the day before the race by 8 a. m. Three subscribers or no race.

Mr Bacon's gr a. h. Mishap, 8st 11lbs 1

Mr Allright's gr a. h. Ilderie, 8st 4lbs, 2

Mr White's bk a. h. Blackball, 9st. 3

Mr Smollett's gr a. h. Cuddy, 8st 4lbs, 4

Time 4 6.

Mishap was looked upon as the winner, his old and successful opponent Blackball having been lame for a considerable time Cuddy made the running to the Jail, when all the horses closed and ran for about half a mile went together, but Mishap had the race at any moment and came in very easy in poor time for the present state of going—even lbs up would not have lost it to him.—Hurkaru, February 4.

Third day, February 6, 1840.

First Race. Magazine Cup, presented by the Editor of the Bengal Sporting Magazine, added to a Sweepstakes of 20 G. M. H. F., for all maiden horses Byculla weight for age English horses to carry 3 stone, Cape horses one stone, Country-breds and N. S. Wales horses 5lbs. Heats R. C. To close and name the day before the first meeting 27th December, 1839.

Mr. Allan's gr a. h. Glendower, 8st 5lbs, (Cash) 1 1

Mr. Bacon's gr a. h. Mishap, 8st 5lbs, 2 2

Only Mishap and Glendower came out for the Magazine Cup, but as they had never met alone at even weights, considerable interest was taken in the match. Mishap had the call at the ordinary, and he was backed pretty freely. Both horses came to the post in tip top order, especially Glendower, who certainly looked as if he must win and no mistake.

1st Heat. Away they went, not very fast at first—but they rattled up together neck and neck to the mile post, increasing the pace as they went. At the three quarter post, Glendower had got half a length ahead, and Mishap could not again take the lead from him. The race was excellent from the turn home, both jockeys working from the distance Glendower winning by two lengths in 3m 50s.

2d Heat. Glendower took the lead, Mishap laying behind to the turn home, when Ross led him out, doing all he could to win, and making a very pretty race of it but he could only get to within a length of Glendower, as they past the post. Time 3m 30s.

Second Race—A Sweepstakes of 50 G. M. H. F. for all horses, Gilbert mile, Araba, 8st 4lbs Country-breds and N. S. Wales horses, 9st, Cape 9st. 7lbs, English, 11st. 10lbs To close the day before the first meeting, and name the day preceding the race by 8 a. m.

There are "crows" in races as in lilliards; and we must consider "The Exile" pocketing this 60 G M Sweepstakes to be a notable instance thereof. From the stand the horses appeared to come up well together for the start and off all went but Bedouin who moved not an inch from the post—and it was in consequence thought to be a false start, which impression was confirmed by Ross or Fieschi apparently pulling his horse up. Away, however had gone Gazelle and the mare at full speed. Exile following third having by Ross's check the lead of Fieschi during the first quarter of a mile, a lead five and thirty yards, and the leading horse Gazelle must have been 10 beyond that. Ross discovering his error let Fieschi out but it was said he could never make up the distance. Gazelle continued to lead at a slapping pace round the goal corner where the mare was beaten off. Exile then took her place, made his running from the hospital and colonized Gazelle at the turn home. Rutland over hand up camp Fieschi, nearing them at every stride. At the distance post, he had caught Gazelle whom Exile had beaten off, short by him and reached the Exile only just too near home to allow of his winning. Exile passed the post a head first, 10 yards further and it must have been Fieschi's race, as it would undoubtedly have been and easy had not Ross mistaken about the start. Considering the time in which the race was run 1 m. 54½ sec. and the distance Fieschi made up at such as that, we conceive that he proved his immense superiority to every other Arab more by his running this morning, than by any other race for which he has started. The starting Steward was eagerly looked for after the race, to declare whether it was start or no start—a start of course he said, and Fieschi's many backers looked very blue indeed.

Third Race.—Handicap 30 G M P P, with 30 G M from the funds, 1½ mile

Mr Bacon's b a h Balzac, 8st 5lbs... .. (Ross) 1
Mr Allright's br a h Sweetlips 9st, 2
Mr. Dilc's gr a h Gazelle 9-t 3bs, 3
Mr. Allan's gr a h Promise, 7st, 4

Promise had it all to himself for the first round, for he would go before the judge had allowed him, and his rider could not pull him up. Mr Curtis was greeted with a most hearty cheer as he passed the stand all alone in his glory. When he got to the starting post again, off they went he taking the lead for the first half mile. The pace however, was too much for promise, and he gave away to Balzac, Sweetlips holding third to Gazelle's quarter. At the turn in Sweetlips passed Gazelle and ran up to Balzac, but could not head him. Balzac, well held to the last winning by half a length in the first rate time of 2 m 51 sec.

The following are the races for to-morrow.

FOURTH DAY, FEBRUARY 8TH, 1840.

Cap value—presented by the Tradersmen of Calcutta, added to a Sweepstakes of 20 G M each, H F for all horses. Heat two miles (Calcutta weight for age). Maidens allowed at 7lbs, English horses to carry 2-t 7lbs, Cape horses, 1st Country breeds and N S Wales horses, 5lbs, extra. To close and name the day before first meeting 27th December, 1839.

Forced Handicap Sweepstakes of 10 G M each, for which all winners of races during either the first or second meetings must enter, Hack Stakes and Matches excepted two miles. Horses to be handicapped by a committee appointed by the Stewards,

Free Handicap Sweepstakes of 25 G M each, for all beaten horses, of both first and second meetings. One mile and a half heats. Horses not standing the handicap to pay 3 G M declaration to be made on the morning preceding the race by 8 a m.—Hark. Feb 7

FOURTH DAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1840.

First Race—Cup value—presented by the Tradersmen of Calcutta added to a Sweepstakes of 20 G M. each, H. F for all horses. Heat two miles. Calcutta weight for age. Mr. White names gr a b Aladdin, 8st. 11b.

Exile and Glendower were backed freely against the field. Exile selling the favorite in the lottery—30 for him, 25 for Glendower, Mishap for 18. Bedouin had the best, and at once took the lead at a slapping pace—the others well together behind. Before passing the stand, Exile began to make play, collared the lion, and rated it with him neck and neck past the F. S. Mishap lost by some lengths. But the price and weight told on Exile, and as the other closed in the run up to the mile—he was first to give way, then Bedouin. Aladdin then let out and took the lead, Glendower second, and Mishap third, about a couple of lengths behind. Glendower past Aladdin at the goal, and up went Mishap, collared Glendower at the turn home, and ran neck and neck with him every stride. "Glendower's race, Mishap's race—Glendower, Mishap from all sides as nose to nose they came from the distance—neither first, and so they past the post. The judge declaring it to be a dead heat, in one of the quickest races ever run in India—3m. 51½. The R. C. 3m 24½.

It was thought Glendower's pluck would decide the next heat in his favor—and so it was. He led from the post and though it was a beautiful race from the goal, when Mishap closed with him, he still maintained his lead, winning by a length in 3m. 58s. The first mile run in 2m. 4s. the second in 1m. 54s. The R. C. 3m 26s.

Third Race—Free Handicap Sweepstakes of 25 G. M. each with 20 G M. from the funds for all beaten horses, of both first and second meetings. One mile and a half heats. Horses not standing the handicap to pay 3 G. M. declaration to be made on the morning preceding the race by 8 a. m.

CIRCULAR BY THE NIZAMUT ADAWLUT.

In pursuance of instructions received from Government, the Assistant Registrar of the Presidency Court of Nizamut Adawlut, in obedience to the directions of the Court, transmitted for the information and guidance of the Magistrate, the following copies of papers regarding the course to be followed in cases where Europeans in the Mofussil are charged with offences for which they will be tried in the Supreme Court, and requesting a careful observance of the rule prescribed therein.

(Copies)

To the Offg. Secretary to the Govt. of India.

Sir,—With reference to your letter, dated the 7th of January last, I am directed by the Hon'ble the Governor in Council, to transmit, for the information of the Hon'ble the President in Council, copies of a letter from the acting Advocate-General and of a Circular this day issued to all the Magistrates under the Presidency, directing them, in all cases where Europeans in the districts are charged with offences for which they will be tried in the Supreme Court, to forward the depositions to the Hon'ble Company's Solicitor, in order that they may be advised of the evidence which should be brought forward in such cases.

I have the honor to be, &c.

(Sd.) L. R. RAO,
Ag. Chief Secy to Govt.

Bombay Castle, 22d Aug 1839.

From the Acting Advocate General, dated 12th July 1839.

Sir,—I have the honor to report to Government the result of cases tried at the present Criminal Sessions in the Supreme Court, in which Government prosecuted.

2d. The first was that of Michael Dunn, a private, who was indicted for stabbing a borah with intent to murder or to maim, disfigure or disable him. The Prosecutor deposed, that he was drinking goods near the quarters of the prisoner, when the latter beckoned to him, stating that he had some copper to sell. The prisoner then asked the borah, what money he had with him, and the borah replied three rupees in piece. Upon which the prisoner said he did not like his wife to see him selling the copper, but that if the borah would walk on, he, the prisoner, would follow. The prisoner then took the borah to the edge of the river at Kirkee, and waited for a very long time, pretending that he expected another soldier. After remaining there upwards of two hours the borah said he would go, upon which the prisoner told him to stay, saying he would look for the soldier. The prisoner after being absent about half an hour, suddenly returned and without saying a word, stabbed the prosecutor over the hip about 2½ inches in depth. The prisoner made an attempt to rob him, and on the borah crying out, ran off. This story seemed very improbable, and could scarcely in its details be true. Still, however, the facts remained, that the borah had been severely wounded by someone. The borah made the best of his way to the Sergeant Major, and complained that he had been stabbed by a soldier whose name he did not know. The Sergeant Major sent another Sergeant with the borah, who said he could point out the man's bungalow. The borah then took the Sergeant to the bungalow of the prisoner, and pointed him out as the person who had wounded him. These facts occurring whilst the wound was still fresh and smarting, and when, therefore, every reason existed for believing the borah would point out the really guilty party, were proved by other parties. The case was further confirmed by a native woman in the service of the prisoner, who deposed that her master came home on that day about one o'clock in great heat and confusion, instantly took off his shoes and hat, and desired this woman to hide them. The prisoner called witnesses to his character, who gave him a very bad character. After retiring some hours, the Jury returned a verdict of "not guilty."

3d. I am unwilling to pass over this case without drawing the attention of Government to the want of care that exists in the local investigation of offences committed by Europeans in the districts. Amongst the witnesses sent down on the present occasion, were three women, one of them the prisoner's wife, (who by law cannot be a witness to criminate her husband) and the other two to depose not to any thing within their own knowledge, connected with the offence, but to what they had been told by the prisoner's wife, and which, it is plain, could not be evidence, though the facts told were in themselves true.

4th. The present season rendered it the more hard upon these persons, (one had an infant in arms,) that they should have been sent here from Kirkee, to prove that they had seen nothing, but had been told a great many things. In addition to which Government have to reimburse them their expenses, a very trifling sum no doubt.

5th. The main cause of it so often happening, when Europeans are committed in the district trial in Bombay, that persons who can give no personal testimony, are yet compelled to travel down as witnesses, arises, as far as my experience goes, from the magistrate making no distinction between hearsay and original evidence. Witnesses in the Supreme Court, are allowed to speak to what they know only, and not to what they have been told by others, for many persons are told what is very untrue, and whilst on the one hand the communication has not been made on oath, on the other the Court has no opportunity of ascertaining what were the informant's means of knowledge.

6th. I wish to be considered as casting no blame on Mr. RUI, the magistrate, in this instance. He was investigating an offence under an Act of Parliament, and technical rules of evidence, he can scarcely be expected to know.

7th. But to avoid such things for the future, I take the liberty of suggesting, that in all cases where Europeans in the districts are charged with offences, for which they will be tried in the Supreme Court, the magistrate taking the depositions, should be directed to forward them if time will admit of it, to the Hon'ble Company's Solicitor, who will at once be able to inform the magistrate what persons should be sent to Bombay, and whether the evidence collected, is sufficient or not, and if not, what further enquiries should be made.

8th. The next case was that of Cribbs and Newton, who were charged by three indictments, with obtaining goods from different persons on false pretences. On the first indictment, Cribbs was proved to be a common swindler, and was found guilty. Newton produced witnesses to character, and the evidence not being strong in his case, he was acquitted. In the second case, Cribbs pleaded guilty, and though there was great reason to believe that Newton had been concerned in the offence, yet the witnesses failed in proving him guilty of the specific offence laid in the indictment, and he was therefore acquitted a second time, feeling that I should experience the same difficulty in the third case in Sir Newton with being a party to the false pretences, I do not think it desirable to proceed further. Cribba was sentenced to transportation for seven years.

I have, &c.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY, 2D.

(Before C. Tucker, Esq.)

THE REPRESENTATIVES OF BHAYA JHA V THE HEIRS OF RAJAH SREENARAYN ROY.

The application of Mr. C. Reed to be allowed to take the account of the Wazidat due from the estate of Rajah Sreenarayn Roy in the above suit, was to have been heard by appointment yesterday morning, but the parties not being in attendance at the sitting of the Court, another case was called on.

When this application was previously made and in part heard before Mr. Tucker (see former reports in the Hindustan), an objection was taken by Mr. Bailie that the whole of the Wazidat had been already taken and that the decree of 1812 was fully executed. Mr. Reed and his advisers expressed great surprise at this statement, and doubted, whether Mr. Bailie had any authority to urge such an objection, as it was clearly prejudicial to the interests of his own client Rajah Beeje Govind Sing, who was now actually suing for Wazidat, alleged to be due from Sreenarayn's estate. I have therefore directed the Sheristadar to inquire and report what proceedings had taken place under the decree of 1812. It has been chiefly the preparation of this Report which has caused the delay in the hearing of Mr. Reed's application.

This morning (Tuesday) the Report of the Sheristadar was read and occupied about two hours.

The native Mookhtarkars of Rajah Beeje Govind Sing, protested against the statement of Mr. Bailie, that no Wazidat was due, and declared, that his own client would repudiate the assertion. One of the mookhtarkars had been sent down to Calcutta expressly to contradict the statement.

Mr. Tucker said that it would be advisable for the Mookhtarkars to reduce their statements to writing, that there might be no mistake upon the subject hereafter.

Two days were allowed for this, and the hearing of the application was fixed for Thursday the 27th instant — Hindustan February 28.

INSOLVENT COURT.

FEBRUARY 1, 1840.

(Before Sir H. W. Seton.)

IN THE MATTER OF JOHN CARRAU.

The insolvent was opposed by Mr. Francis Botelho, his father in law. It appears that the insolvent had hired a house from Mr. Stewart, an assistant at the Sudder Dewauny Adawlut, which he assigned to Mr. Botelho, from whom he had to receive the sum of 360 rupees, being the amount of rent for 12 months at 30 rupees per month. His claim was put down in the insolvent's schedule, and Mr. Botelho wanted that item to be cancelled from it, as he thought it was very hard that he should pay the amount to the Assignee, when he was answerable for 1,000 rupees to Mr. Stewart, and 90 rupees to Mr. Fraser of the same office, from whom the insolvent had borrowed money on his security.

Mr. Botelho said, that the insolvent had to receive some money from France, which he omitted to mention in his schedule.

The insolvent on being questioned by the Court, regarding this circumstance, said, that he did not expect to receive any money from France or any other quarter. He might in the course of conversation have mentioned in the office, that he expected some money but Mr. Botelho ought not to have given credence to his assertion, as many things are said in an office merely to kill time. He added, that he might have said that he expected money from the Queen of England.

It appears, that some of the insolvent's creditors had not been served with notices. The Court did not think that this circumstance, which might involve some difficulty nor Mr. Botelho's opposition, were sufficient to detain the insolvent in custody.

Mr. Botelho was referred to the Assignee, and the insolvent was discharged, except to those creditors upon whom notices had not been served.

IN THE MATTER OF JAMES JACOBS.

The insolvent's schedule being made out on paper, he was remanded, to enable his Attorney to prepare another upon parchment.

IN THE MATTER OF RAMCHURN MOODAS.

The insolvent was brought up for further hearing. He was opposed by Messrs. Turton and Leith, on behalf of Messrs. Mahadeo Meshkie, one of his creditors.

Being examined by Mr. Turton, he said, that the whole of the property put down in his schedule, had been sold by a judgment of the Court. He was requested to go to equity; property that was worth a lakh of rupees being sold for only 900 rupees. The Assignee did not get possession of it. The Master about six or seven years ago, assigned to him property to the amount of 64,000 rupees; he married twice and spent about 10 or 12,000 rupees at his weddings. He lost 8,000 rupees on the failure of Alexander and Co., and 2 or 3,000 rupees in lottery chances, and the rest he embarked in trade and lost.

He presented his petition to the Court in January 1838. The insolvent then mentioned, that he could make over property to the extent of one half of his debts. After the adjudication of insolvency, Mr. Alexander was appointed his Assignee, who went to take possession of his property; but Mr. Paliologus did not allow him to do so, and then an action of ejectment was brought against him. Mr. Anley was the attorney, who was to be paid by certain of his creditors. The insolvent left a Company's paper for 500 rupees with Mr. Anley, and took a receipt for it, as he wanted the counsel's costs. The Company's paper was obtained from the females of his family. He does not recollect whether it originally belonged to him, but all that he possessed had been disposed of.

The money belonging to his wife, had been given to her by his brother at the time of his marriage at Patna. He did not make over any Company's papers to her, which he had received from the Court.

Mr. Anley's receipt for the Company's paper of 500 rupees, was with the females of his family, and he was subsequently told, that they gave it to Mr. Marshall for the purpose of proceeding against Mr. Anley. He did not give it to Mr. Marshall. The receipt was written at his house by Mr. Anley, who had called then, and he gave it to the females of his family.

Upon Carr, Fagore and Co. taking the responsibility, as the administrators of his brother, he took possession of his property, consisting of house, lands and cash, to the amount of 4 or 5,000 rupees. He did not receive any Company's paper.

The insolvent failed in March 1837. He had not at the time Company's papers amounting to 60,000 rupees and paid away a small sum, the amount of which he did not recollect.

His books were taken by the Assignee at the jail. It was stated, that he had concealed some books, and his chest was opened and searched. The insolvent knows Messrs. Mahadeo Meshkie, to whom he is indebted in the sum of 4 or 5,000 rupees. He offered him Company's papers for 3,000 rupees for the debt, and he refused to accept it. He subsequently sold them and used the money, as his books, which are quite correct, will prove. The books produced are all that he had. There was a small memorandum book, but that was left at his house—he never had it at the jail. Mr. Shaw put a padlock to the door, which Mr. Paliologus broke and took every thing that the house contained. He does not recollect having paid Ramnarain Misser two hundredes, one for 2,200 rupees, and the other for 2,000 rupees. He had accepted hundredes, which he thinks he never paid away. He is acquainted with Baboo Aukhontoo Day, but never said things to him to the amount of 3,700 rupees after he had closed his doors. The insolvent said he took letters, globes, &c. to him, to the amount of 3 or 600 rupees but he refused to purchase them, and he was obliged to dispose of them to another person, and had used the money. He knows Messrs. Moodas and Ramgoolas Moodas, but he never parted on business with them after his failure. He never purchased sugar or anything from him, as he had not the means to do so.

He never purchased any gold mohurs subsequent to his failure. People who came and lodged at his house, were in the habit of buying and selling gold-mohurs. No person of the name of Piemchand Doss lived with him, but there is a mahajun of that name, to whom he is indebted for a balance of some opium sold him. He is quite positive he never purchased gold-mohurs. He knows Tekchurn Shunakholl. An entry in one of the insolvent's books was shewed to him. He said, that it appeared to be the entry of gold mohurs purchased after his failure. They were bought and used. He did not recollect the circumstance, as it was a solitary transaction. He owed 13,000 rupees to Tekchurn and paid him 6,000. He now recollects that it was previous to his presenting the petition.

The entry was of gold mohurs sent by dak to Tekchurn, at Benares for sale. This is more than two and a half years ago. They were sold and carried to his account. They were purchased three months prior to his failure, and sold previous to it. An entry of this may have been made in his book, but he was not sure, as he never made entries until the receipt of annual accounts.

After paying Tekchurn the proceeds of the gold-mohurs, there was still a balance in his favour of 13,000 rupees. He paid him 6,000 rupees after his failure, by transferring the demands he had against Culloo and Lalloo Baboo of Patna.

He never purchased gold mohurs to the extent of 10,000 rupees after his failure. It might be to the value of 500 rupees, and not more.

The names of his wives are, Lalitha Coommarree and Mungul Coommarree. Their relatives are respectable and they received money from their fathers on their marriage. He did not know, nor had he any means of ascertaining, if any Company's papers are standing in their names or in their possession. He was given to understand, that each of them purchased Company's papers to the amount of 4 or 5,000 rupees after his failure. They had the money in their own possession and they thought fit to invest it in Company's papers, to prevent its being squandered away. They were in the habit of lending money on the pledge of articles.

He had a Company's paper No. 5,319 of 1835-36 for 500 rupees after his failure. He had not two lakhs in 1834. His father's estate was all that he possessed and that did not amount to so much. In 1834, he sent Culloo and Lillan Baboo at Patna, 7,000 rupees worth of Company's papers by dak, which he instructed them to sell and keep as a deposit. This amount was paid to Tekchurn, with the exception of what he drew. Independent of this amount, he paid 5,000 rupees to the Bank of Bengal, and obtained a post bill, which was likewise sent. All this transaction happened in the month of Choyt 1894, which was a month or two after his failure.

He knows Luchmenarain Misser, who is his brother-in-law, also Sootursur Sen. He never lent the latter any money in the name of Luchmenarain. The latter lent money to Sootursur himself on the insolvent's recommendation. Luchmenarain was not at Patna at the time. He never sent for him. The insolvent's belief was, that Luchmenarain came down to Calcutta, in consequence of a letter he received to the effect, that he (the insolvent) had killed his wife. This letter was, no doubt, written by Messrs. Mahadeo Meshkie, and this person, (pointing to an individual along side of him,) He never offered the man 1,500 rupees in jail, to dissuade him from opposing him. The man was in the habit of calling upon him at the jail of his own accord, and asked 2 or 300 rupees as a bribe, but he never gave him any money.

He never negotiated with Sootoomr Sen about the purchase of a house. There was a treaty about his sale. He had not the means of buying it, and never produced Company's papers to him, saying, that although they were in the names of his wives, yet they were his.

He never obtained possession of his share of zemindarry for 10,000 rupees. A cousin of his, who held an equal share, took his portion from the Master one year previous to his getting it. Not being acquainted with the situation of the villages, his cousin took advantage of his ignorance, and collected the rents and took them himself. He never let his share for 75 rupees annually. It was Shibnarain Colleah that took this zemindarry and executed a kabooliat in his brother's name.

The Company's papers for 7,000 rupees sent to Culloo and Lalloo at Patna, were sold. He does not recollect whether he wrote back for them. A letter was shewn to the insolvent, and on looking at it, he said, that he recollected that he did write back for them.

He dismissed Colloo Lall, his gomastah, some time ago, who wrote about the entries of 2 lakhs and 4,000 rupees. The books were written by Culloo Lall and Amrut Loll.

A kabooliat shewn him. He recognised it as the one signed by Shibnarain Colleah for the whole of the zemindarry.

Examined by Mr. Leith.—The insolvent said that the house he lived in was his property given to him by his father, and seized by the Sheriff at the suit of Merzi Mahadeo Mesikkee. All the property in the house was sold and purchased in a fictitious name. The Sheriff's people did not take possession of the house, and he brought no action against the Sheriff.

Fearing further molestation, his wives hired a house to which they removed, and he lived in it up to the time he went to jail. When the house was taken by his wife, he had no property, previous to that all had been sold by public and private sale. The house was hired from Sooturair Sen, but not in the name of his wife. Her brother, Luchmenarain, originally rented it, and after the expiration of two months he transferred the lease to his sister. The insolvent never paid the rent to Sooturair Sen. Luchmenarain allowed the rent to be deducted from the money due to him, and took it from his sister.

The title deeds of the property seized by the Sheriff, are with Mr. Anley. They were put in his possession at the time when the suit of ejectment had been commenced.

Whenever he received accounts from Patna, he made entries of them in his books, and afterwards destroyed them. All the accounts received within the last two or three years are entered in his books.

He never lent any money to Nurreendurnath, neither did Luchmenarain, but a person of the name of Bulmokun, gave him a loan. Bulmokun is a second cousin to Luchmenarain. He did not lend any money to Nurreendurnath in Bulmokun's name. When Bulmokun was on the eve of leaving Calcutta, he might perhaps have sold the debt to the insolvent, amounting to 6,000 rupees. He was empowered to recover it, but gave no consideration for it. This was previous to his failure. He issued a capias against the man for the amount. He was arrested and taken to jail. The costs, &c. came up to 7,000 rupees, he took a fresh acknowledgement for this sum, and released him. This was about two or three years ago. He remembers it perfectly well, from the circumstance of a wonderful occurrence—Mr. Robertson's ascending the air in a balloon.

Prankeson Haubilar, of Chinsurah, mortgaged a Company's paper for 13,400 rupees to him. He does not know what has become of it. He thinks the assignment is with Messrs. Allan and Marshall, who were his attorneys. He never enquired about it. The assignment had not been mentioned in his schedule, but he believes the amount is mentioned.

Balmokun is dead and the money has devolved upon him, he being the only surviving relative. Bulmokun left a widow, but he never paid the money to her.

The insolvent was told by the Sheriff's people, that his wife had sugar, piece goods, and opium in the house. He never asked her about them, for fear of being turned out.

Examined by Mr. Clarke, who was for the insolvent.—The insolvent never sent any sugar, piece goods or opium into the house which belonged to him, his wearing apparel was sent to him at the jail. The Sheriff's people sometimes said there were 500 chests of opium in the house.

Sooturair Sen, examined by Mr. Turton—Witness knows the insolvent—he wanted to purchase a house belonging to him. There was some conversation about the payment of the money. He thinks that the insolvent shewed him one or two Company's papers for about 1,000 or 1,200 rupees. He looked at the papers, and finding the names of females upon them, he questioned the insolvent about them, who told him that they belonged to his wife. The insolvent said, he would give 12,000 Rs. for the house, and that he would pay 9,000 Rs. in Company's papers and 3,000 in property, consisting of watches, clocks, shawls, &c. This was in February, 1839. It is the same house where the wife of the insolvent now resides. In the following month the insolvent gave him property and cash, to the extent of 1,000 rupees. There was no conversation about the Company's papers. He said he would go to the expense of 10,000 rupees, and file a bill in equity against Mr. Paliologus.

Witness is indebted to the insolvent in the sum of 100 rupees. He is acquainted with Luchmenarain Misser, who is about 16 years of age. The insolvent advanced the money to this witness and took two promissory notes in the name of Luchmenarain. Witness does not know whether the insolvent is possessed of any property. He has heard about the sugar &c. removed from the house, and the Sheriff's people bribed, but he knows nothing of his own knowledge.

Examined by Mr. Clarke.—The 100 rupees he is indebted to the insolvent, is a part of 1,000 rupees. Witness has paid him 900 rupees. The house is let out to the insolvent's wives for 50 rupees a month and he has received rent in advance up to the 2nd April, which has been deducted out of the 1,000 rupees. Witness refused to give the house unless an advance for three months were paid. The 1,000 rupees given to him, were considered as earnest money. The insolvent subsequently told him, he would not purchase the house.

Gavin Ichund Sircar examined.—He said, that about two years ago, he drew and paid the interest of five or six Company's papers, amounting to 10,000 rupees, for the insolvent. There were blank endorsemments on the papers. Witness drew interest for the insolvent on several occasions, and also purchased and sold Company's papers for him subsequent to the failure of the insolvent in 1837. Witness had no other transaction with him, except drawing the interest. Witness knows nothing of the sugar, cloth, &c.

The examination closed here, and Mr. Turton contended that the insolvent ought to be remanded.

Mr. Clarke referred to the 58th section of the act, and said, that as there was no proof of fraud against the insolvent, his hearing ought not to be adjourned. The only blame attached to him, is, that about two years ago he possessed property.

The Court was of opinion that the objections made were not sufficient to remand the insolvent.

He was discharged, amending the schedule as to the assignment with Messrs. Marshall and Allan.

IN THE MATTER OF PETER PORTER.

Mr. Thomas applied for an order nisi for the mortgage creditor to be paid.

The application was granted.

IN THE MATTER OF RICHARD FARMER.

Mr. Staples applied on behalf of the assignees for an attachment against the insolvent, as his instalments are in arrears.

Mr. Hudson opposed the application, as there was a reference to the Examiner for the insolvents' final discharge, and wished it to stand over until the reference be disposed of.

It was ordered accordingly.—Hurk, February 3.

SUPREME COURT.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 31.

FIRST TERM OF 1840.

(Before Sir E. Ryan, Sir J. P. Grant, and Sir H. W. Selous.)

THE QUEEN V. RAJAH RAJANARAIN ROY.

Sir E. Ryan, C. J., mentioned this case. His Lordship did not know in what stage the proceedings were at present, but he presumed that the interrogatories either had been, or would be immediately exhibited, as the four days had nearly expired. He wished to intimate that the practice in this Court had been, for the Clerk of the Crown to administer the interrogatories. That would be the course adopted on the present occasion.

The Advocate-General said, that the four days would expire to day, and that the interrogatories would be filed this evening.

Mr. Prinsep said, that there was a matter which he wished to bring to the Court's notice. Some of the interrogatories might be objectionable, and such as the party was not bound to answer. It was impossible for one in his situation to decide the question himself, and it would be but reasonable that his Counsel should be furnished with copies.

Ryan, C. J. If a motion is made that the Counsel may be furnished with copies of the interrogatories, we shall dispose of the motion; but we shall give no opinion now.

It was subsequently intimated by the Court, that the Counsel on both sides were at liberty to attend when the interrogatories were administered by the Clerk of the Crown. The question might thus afterwards be raised as to the admissibility of particular interrogatories, by moving the Court for an order nisi why such and such interrogatories should not be answered.

The course of practice in this Court, has been, where the party in contempt is out on bail, for the Clerk of the Crown to give notice to the parties when the interrogatories are to be administered. As the Rajah is in custody, and not upon bail, his Counsel will move tomorrow upon a certificate of the interrogatories filed for a writ of habeas corpus to bring him up to attend the examination in the Crown Office.*

* It is said, that on one occasion the Chief Justice (Sir C. Grey) ex abundanti cautela, drew up the interrogatories himself, that the Court might be satisfied the party did not come with prepared answers. But it happened, somehow or other, that the paper was filched out of his Lordship's desk, the interrogatories copied out, and the answers drawn by counsel, and learnt by rote by the party in contempt, who accordingly recited them with a readiness and fluency which rather astonished the learned Chief Justice.

ANUNDNARAIN OHORE V. DISNUMBER TOLDAR.

Mr. Clarke moved in this case for a writ of attachment and a writ of assistance, upon affidavits, that the defendant obstinately retained possession of the land, after an order for delivery of possession under a decree of foreclosure. There were three questions;—first, whether the two writs could be moved for together;—secondly, if not, whether the writ of assistance should be moved for before or after the return of the attachment;—and thirdly, whether it could be moved for upon the same affidavit, or whether fresh affidavits were necessary to shew that the party was still retreating. The learned Counsel submitted, that according to the words of the Rule, both writ might be moved for together, the writ of assistance in aid of the attachment.

The Court wished to consider the point.

SURROOPPOOK V. GOVINDOHUNDER BONDOPADHIAH.

This was an action of assumpsit on the common counts, for the sum of Rs. 6,400, due upon a certain loan on the deposit of copper.

The Advocate-General, and Mr. Leith, appeared for the plaintiff.

It appeared in evidence that two different sums of money were advanced at different times by the owner of the plaintiff, to pay for certain copper purchased by the defendant's firm Gilmore and Co, and Cockerell and Co. The whole sum advanced as between 80 and 90,000 rupees. The copper was delivered over to the plaintiff, who took mortgages of it from the defendant, with a power of sale, conditional on the money not being paid within a certain time.

The plaintiff afterwards sold the copper, and credited the proceeds to the defendant. By the particulars filed in the action it appeared, that the balance now claimed was due on the whole transaction, but this balance was made out by charging interest at twelve per cent, according to the terms of the mortgage, and by charging warehouse rent and sundry other items.

Mr. Clarke (with whom was Mr. Morton) for the defence, submitted, that the plaintiff must be non-suited, or that he was at all events only entitled to a nominal verdict. He ought to have declared specially upon the written agreements. No doubt he was entitled to recover the money lent, without any special plea, because that was an executed contract, but this did not apply to the warehouse rent, &c., and the interest at twelve per cent. If the interest was charged at six per cent, the balance would be found to be in favour of the defendant, and six per cent was the highest interest which the Court would allow without a special agreement. Now, if a special agreement existed, without which the plaintiff could not have recovered, the Court would not allow the demand according to the terms of such agreement, unless the agreement itself was specially declared upon.

The Court said they should give a verdict for the plaintiff for the sum claimed, and it would be for the defendant's Counsel to consider whether they would move hereafter for a nonsuit or for a nominal verdict.

Verdict for the plaintiff.

DOE ON THE DEMISE OF RAMRUTON BONNERJEE V. E. HILDER.

This was an ejectment to recover a house and land in Calcutta, in the occupation of Rajchunder Mitter. The action came on ex parte against the casual ejector.

The title of the plaintiff was a bill of sale from the Sheriff of Calcutta under a writ of venditioni exponas, in the action Sichunder Chatterjee v. Rajchunder Mitter.

The Advocate General and Mr. Morton, for the lessor of the plaintiff.

Verdict for the lessor of the plaintiff.—Hurkaru, February 1.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 3.

ANUNDNARAIN GHOSH A. BISSUMPER HOLIDAR.

In this case in which Mr. Clarke moved last week, the motion was not for a writ of attachment and a writ of assistance together, as erroneously reported, but for a writ of assistance before the return of the attachment which had previously issued. A question was raised by the learned counsel, however, on the former point also.

The Court this morning said, that the writ of assistance might be moved for before the return of the writ of attachment. And with reference to Equity Process Rule 7 (Smull and Ryan's Rules p. 165) the Chief Justice said, that the Rule was accidentally worded differently from the corresponding Rule in England, and the latter rule would be henceforth adopted in practice. By the English Rule 11 Geo. IV. and 1 Will. IV c 36, rule 19) the intermediate writ of attachment as well as the intermediate writ of injunction, are dispensed with, where the party refuses to deliver up possession of the land. Henceforth, therefore, the practice will be to move for the writ of assistance at once, upon an affidavit of the due service of the writ of excoition, and demand of possession and refusal.

Writ of assistance granted.

WILLIAM GREAVES V. FRAWNKISSIN BAUCHER.

Mr. Morton shewed cause against a rule nisi for setting aside the judgement by default for irregularity with costs, or (in the alternative) for setting aside the judgement merely. The former part of the motion was upon the ground that four terms has been allowed to elapse without any step being taken in the cause, and the judgement by default had been signed upon the ordinary day rule to plead, without a term's notice. The learned counsel admitted that a term's notice was ordinarily necessary before taking any fresh step in the cause, but he relied upon affidavits for the plaintiff, from which it appeared that the delay took place at the request and for the indulgence of the defendant himself, pending certain negotiations for a compromise which were only broken off a few weeks ago. The reason of the rule was to prevent surprise upon the defendant; and upon this principle, it was held not to be apply where the cause has been tried up by a writ of injunction, or where the proceedings had been delayed at the instance of the defendant. For Buller Justice, Blund v. Darley, 3 Farm. Rep. With respect to the second part of the application, it must be refused at all events, because there was no affidavit of merits.

The Advocate-General contra, contended that it did not sufficiently appear from the plaintiff's affidavit that the negotiation was originally set a foot by the defendant. It was not sufficient to show that there was a mere proposal for a compromise, without distinctly shewing that it came from the defendant and not from the plaintiff. The learned counsel questioned the authority of the decision in Blund v. Darley, and said that it was a mere dictum. He contended too that it appeared by the plaintiff's own shewing that the defendant had a defence to the action with respect to some portion at all events of the demand.

SIR E. RYAN, C. J. We consider that the principle laid down by Mr. Justice BULLER in the case of Blund v. Darley is correct, and that the rule does not apply where the delay has been caused by the defendant, or where it has taken place at his express request. This disposes of the question of irregularity, considering it then as regular judgment, it could only be set aside on certain terms, and upon an affidavit of merits. The rule therefore must be discharged with costs.

Rule discharged.

The Advocate-General in the day, moved to set aside the judgment upon an affidavit of merits, and upon the usual terms of paying all costs, pleading verisubly instant and taking short notice of trial.

Mr. Morton shewed cause in the first instance. This was in effect the same application as the one previously disposed of, though indeed upon different grounds. Now the practice was that a motion could not be renewed in the same term, and here was a motion renewed the same day. Besides the plaintiff had already lost a trial. The cause was set down for trial this term, and to-day was the last day, so that the plaintiff had been already thrown over to the sittings by the rule nisi which had been already discharged.

The Court said that the application could not be granted. This was in effect the very motion previously disposed of, though now made in a different shape.

Rule refused with costs.

INDERCHURN DADAR V. ARCHIBALD KEAM.

Mr. Clarke moved for a new trial or for a nonsuit in the above. This action, which was on a bill of exchange drawn by the Mirzapore Bank, and in which the defence was want of due notice of dishonor, was tried last week, and a verdict found for the plaintiff. The learned counsel moved first on the ground that the words proved: "I have no danger about your money; I have sent a chitnee to Mirzapore, and your money will not be lost," furnished no sufficient evidence to go to a jury of any subsequent promise to pay. He cited Lundy v. Robertson 7 East Rep., Cumming v. French 2 Campb, and other authorities. The second ground of the application was that certain letters, had been improperly received in evidence. And lastly the learned counsel contended that the verdict was against evidence.

The Court were of opinion that the rule must be refused. With respect to the last point, their Lordships said that there certainly was contradictory evidence at the trial, but it would be difficult to persuade the Court, now when the evidence was state, that they had formed a wrong conclusion upon the facts which appeared at the trial at the time when those facts were fresh in Rule refused.

THE QUEEN V. RAJAH RAJANARATH ROY.

Mr. Princep said that out of 40 interrogatories filed, eight had been administered to the Rajah, and seven out of that number demurred to. The learned counsel had little doubt that some of the rest would be found to be demurrable also on the same ground, namely, that they were not confined to the mere question of contempt, and that the answers would tend to criminate the Rajah. This day was the last day of term, and as a motion to expunge the objectionable interrogatories could not be made out of term without the special leave of the Court, it was hoped that their Lordships would give leave. If this were not done, the Rajah would be obliged to remain in prison at all events until next term, before which time no step could be taken.

The Court refused to grant leave. Their Lordships thought that if there was any hardship in case, the defendant had brought it upon himself.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 4.

WILLIAM GREAVES V. PRAEMERISSEN DAUDCHIE.

Mr. Morton opened the pleadings.

Mr. Clarke for the plaintiff stated, that this action was brought to recover the sum of Co's Rs 4956, being money due for the price and value of certain milk choppas consigned for sale by the plaintiff to the defendant from Serampore, and also for money lent and advanced by the plaintiff to the defendant. The defendant had appeared to the action but had not pleaded, and judgment by default having been signed for want of a plea, the case now came on upon a writ of enquiry to assess damages.

The Advocate-General for the defendant, observed that the cause had been set down for trial for Saturday last, and yesterday (Monday) was the last day of Term. The rule of the Court was that no cause was to be set down for hearing within the two last days of the term, and as Sunday was dies non the learned Counsel apprehended that in the present case the rule was infringed.

Sir E. Ryan, C. J. If you have any motion to make on the subject, we will entertain it; but otherwise we shall give no opinion, but leave it to the plaintiff's Counsel to proceed at their peril. If you now appear upon the inquiry of damages, it is a matter for your own consideration how far it may tend to waive the irregularity, if there be any.

The case then proceeded; and the amount of damages specified in the particulars of demand, was proved. Mr. Clarke applied for interest, as part of the general damages under the recent Act of the Legislative Council, No. XXXV of 1839.

The Court thought that the case did not come within the Act. To bring a case within the Act, either there must be a specific sum due and payable on a day certain, or a distinct demand of payment in writing of principal and interest.

Verdict for C's Rs. 4,956.

EQUITY SIDE.

MAHA RAJA BHUNOWARRER LOOL V. RANTONOO DOSS

In this cause after the case for the complainants and defendant respectively had been opened by the Counsel their Lordships intimated that they would look over the pleadings and evidence out of Court and hear the Counsel on both sides on a future day. The proceedings in this cause are very voluminous. The Advocate-General, and Mr. Clarke, and Mr. Barwell, for the complainants, Mr. Leith for the defendants.

Stands over.—Harkum. February 5.

EQUITY SIDE

SHEENGOONCHERY DABRY V. RAJCOOMAR HOLLAR AND OTHERS.

This cause on the Equity Side, had been partially proceeded with, when it appeared that the guardian ad litem of one of the infant defendants was dead, and that the proceedings had not been revived ago for his representatives, and that there was no guardian of the infant before the Court.

The court directed the cause to stand over, until a guardian ad litem should be appointed for the infant.

Stands over.

DEBNAUTH SANDIEL V. PATRICK MAITLAND AND OTHERS AND THE REVIVED CAUSE.

In this cause the original bill was filed, many years ago, against the executors of Rossbaharry Surmono, for an account, and to carry into effect the trusts of the will.

The first interlocutory decree in the cause was made in 1818, when it was referred to the Master to inquire and report (among other matters) what sum of money was requisite to be set apart for the feeding of one hundred thousand Brahmins, according to the directions contained in the Will of the testator, and who was the proper party to make the distribution.

The Master reported that the sum of Rs. 43,000 was necessary, and that Debnauth Sandiel the son-in-law of the testator, was a proper person to perform the charity.

By a decree of 1820 the Master's Report was confirmed, and the executors Maitland and Dros were discharged from the executorship, upon payment to Debnauth of the said sum of Rs. 43,000, and upon paying the residue of the property in their hands into Court to the credit of the cause. The executors have long since been dead.

In 1827 the said sum with the accumulated interest (then amounting altogether to Rs. 64,000) was paid over to Debnauth. (The proceedings in the cause had been tied up in the interim by a cross bill filed by Brijnauth Sandiel, another son-in-law of Rossbaharry Surmono, which bill was ultimately dismissed.)

A bill of supplement was afterwards filed by Debnauth, in which he stated that he had fed 60,000 Brahmins, but that he was unable to procure a sufficient number to make up the required lakh. The sum remaining in his hands was rupees 27,000, which he offered by his bill to bring into Court.

Debnauth subsequently died and the proceedings were revived by his second son and executor, Seetnauth, who claimed the privilege of feeding the remaining Brahmins, and performing the others religious and charitable bequests. This right was contested by Golucknauth, one of the present defendants, the son of Brijnauth. The eldest son of Debnauth (Sreenaut Sandiel) was a lunatic, and was a party to the bill of revival, and further supplement by Mr. W. H. Smout, his Counsel.

The sum now standing to the credit of the cause is about six lakhs of rupees. All of the debts and some of the legacies have been long since paid.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Morton appeared for the complainants.

The Advocate General and Mr. Barwell for the Committee of the Lunatic.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith for the other defendants.

The Court ordered that it should be referred to the Master to enquire and report what number of Brahmins had been fed, and what sum of money now remained of the fund, originally destined for that purpose, and also what sum would be necessary for the feeding of the remainder of the Brahmins. It was also referred to the Master to report what legacies and bequests still remained unpaid, and who were the representatives of such of the legatees as were deceased, and what would be the clear residue.

Order accordingly.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 6.

M. CASPER versus E. WHYTE AND ANOTHER.

Mr. Morton opened the pleadings.

Mr. Leith stated the plaintiff's case. This was an action of Trover brought to recover two 5 per cent Company's papers, for Rs. 6,000 and Rs. 1,700 respectively, being the deposit upon the sale of a house and premises, No 16, Tank-quare, agreed to be purchased by the plaintiff from P. Sutherland, the executor of Colonel Lobbe. The defendants had acted as agents for the executor and had given an undertaking to return the deposit in the event of a good title not being made out. The circumstances under which the defendants obtained the deposit, were pleaded specially with an averment that a good title had been deduced, and that the plaintiff refused to accept it. The learned counsel submitted that upon these pleadings the issue was upon the other side, the conversion being admitted upon the record.

Mr. Clarke (with whom was Mr. Barwell) for the defendants, had previously made an application to postpone the trial, until evidence could be taken on behalf of the defendants, under a commission to England. The plaintiff could not be prejudiced in any way, because if the commission had been obtained, and the motion to postpone the trial been made last term, nothing could have been yet done. An application had been made to the other side to admit the execution of a power of attorney under which one of the conveyances was executed, but this application had not been acceded to, and a commission to take evidence in England was thus rendered indispensable.

The Court said, that unless terms were agreed upon by arrangement between the parties, they would not interfere at this stage, to postpone the cause, for the purpose of sending a commission to England to take evidence.

This application having been refused, no evidence was offered on the part of the defendants.

Mr. Leith submitted that he was entitled at once to a verdict. The sum for which the plaintiff went, was more than the nominal value of the Company's paper, because there was interest due, and the 5 per cents.

bore a premium. About Co's Rs. 8,000 would cover the whole, and a verdict might be given for this sum, subject to reduction to nominal damages upon the usual terms.

The Court awarded a verdict for that amount, with judgment instanter.

Verdict for plaintiff for Co's Rs 8,000.

DOE ON THE DEATH OF AMIR KHAN, v. MIRZA MEHET ISPAHANE.

Mr. Morton opened the pleadings.

The Advocate-General stated the case on behalf of the lessor of the plaintiff. The main question was a question of Mahomedan law. The lessor of the plaintiff claimed as heir of one Bebee Anaro, who died some years ago, possessed (among other property) of the houses and lands for which this ejectment was brought. About her title, indeed, there was no dispute, as the defendant himself (a rich Mogul) claimed under a deed of gift from her. The sole question was, whether this deed of gift was valid according to Mahomedan law. In the 4th vol of the Hidaya it was laid down, that Will or deed of gift made during the last illness of the donor, was insufficient to pass more than one third of the property. It would appear, in the present case, that the transfer was made during the last illness of Bebee Anaro, and it was submitted, therefore, that such transfer was not valid in respect of more than one-third of the property.

On the part of the plaintiff the title of Bebee Anaro who died in October 1833, was proved, and that the lessor of the plaintiff was an heir according to the Mahomedan law of inheritance.

On the part of the defendant, the execution by Bebee, Anaro of three instruments in favour of the defendant, was proved. The first was a Will, in English, dated 20th September 1833, and the others were two Persian Instruments, a Haibehnameh, and, a Towlecutnameh, dated October. About a month after the execution of the latter, Bebee Anaro died; but the witnesses for the defence swore, that though she was ailing at the time she executed the instruments, she was not seriously ill, and that she died of a totally different complaint with which she had been attacked only a few days before her decease. It appeared, that possession had been given of the moveable property under the Will, but there was no evidence of possession being given of the houses and land.

Mr. Clarke (with whom was Mr. Leith) for the defence, addressed the court, and contended, that the instruments were perfectly valid and sufficient to pass the whole property, real and personal.

The Advocate General, in reply, contended, that the complaint under which the donor was suffering at the time of her death, was in truth the very illness of which she died. The learned Counsel also contended, that the deeds of gift were not valid as to the lands and houses, because there was no proof whatever of delivery of possession.

The Court found that the instruments were duly executed, and that they were not executed during the last illness of the donor; and they therefore gave a verdict for the defendant, with liberty to the plaintiff to move upon the points of law reserved.

Verdict for defendant with liberty to move.

THOMPSON v. RAMTONG DOSS ROY

This was an action of assumpsit, in which judgment had passed by default.

This cause was struck out.

NOWNITRY, & CO. v. G. G. MACPHERSON.

This cause was settled out of Court between the parties, and struck out.—Hark. Feb 7.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 7.

BREEMUTTY BIBER NARUM v. SHAIK KHODABUT MISTRY.

Mr Morton opened the pleadings.

The Advocate General stated the case for the plaintiff. This was an action brought to recover the principal and interest of monies lent, for which two Bengallee mortgages had been given as collateral security. The defendant had pleaded in person, that he did not promise in manner and form as the plaintiff had declared against him. The execution of the two instruments, and the consideration for them, would be distinctly proved. The defendant attended in Court in person.

Sir E. Ryan, C. J., said, that if no Counsel appeared on behalf of the defendant, the proceedings must be explained to him as they went on.

Mr Leith said, that a brief had been sent to him by the defendant himself, but as no Attorney had been employed on his behalf, and as it was contrary to professional etiquette to conduct proceedings in Court otherwise than through the medium of an Attorney, he had declined to accept it.*

Sir E. Ryan said, that the learned counsel had acted according to the recognised rules at home and in this country. As this was not a criminal case, the Court could not assign the duty of defending the party to the learned counsel, but if he had no objection to act, it might be of some assistance to their Lordships.

The defence was accordingly conducted by Mr. Leith. The defendant did not dispute the first of the two instruments upon which the action was brought, but evidence was adduced on his behalf, to prove an alibi at the period of the alleged execution of the second instrument. This evidence, however, failed.

* This is a very essential rule, because unqualified persons would otherwise be enabled (in effect) to practise as attorneys. If a party does not possess the means of employing counsel and attorney he must either act altogether in person, or apply for admission on the pauper establishment.

This rule applies only to civil cases. In criminal proceedings counsel may act for the defence, without the intervention of an attorney, and where counsel are employed for the prosecution, the Court frequently direct an advocate to act for the defence.

The Advocate-General thought that the defendant must have studied the "Pickwick Papers," and adopted the notion of Mr Weller, senior, touching the value of alibis!

The Court gave a verdict for the amount claimed.

Verdict for the plaintiff.

DOE DEM. BRIDGES v. DARRIE S. SUTHERLAND DARRIE.

Mr. Morton opened the pleadings.

Mr. Prinsep for the plaintiff stated, that the action was brought to recover possession of certain premises in Bag Bazar, in the town of Calcutta. Judgment had passed by default for two-thirds of the property, and defence had been taken for the remaining and third. The main question in the case would be whether a deed of assignment executed by three brothers of a joint family one of whom was an infant at the time, would bind the heirs of the infant. The title of the lessor of the plaintiff rested upon such a deed of transfer. It would be proved that possession had been enjoyed under the deed, and that no attempt was ever made by the infant in his lifetime or by his representatives after his death formally to set aside the instrument. The validity of the instrument was now disputed by the widow of the infant, so far as it related to the transfer of his share.

It appeared from the plaintiff's own evidence, that at the time of the execution of the deed (the execution of which was proved distinctly, and indeed was not denied) the infant brother was reluctant to sign, and that after he attained full age he continued to express his dissent. It further appeared that the lessor of the plaintiff in whose favour the deed was executed, held possession of the premises for some years, until within the last few months, and that her husband died there, but there was no evidence to shew that the possession was held during the lifetime of the brother, who was an infant when the deed was executed.

The Court said, at the close of the plaintiff's case, that according to their present opinion, the deed did not bind the infant. They would therefore, find the facts proved, and give a verdict for the defendant, with liberty to the plaintiff to move to enter a verdict.

The Advocate-General said, that he did not admit all the facts as they had been stated by the plaintiff's witnesses, and their Lordships could scarcely reserve liberty to move to enter a verdict upon the facts found, when the defendant's case had not been gone into at all.

The Court admitted, that it was so, and said that all they could do, would be to enter a nonsuit now, with liberty to move for a new trial, though certainly new trials were rarely allowed in ejectment, and the liberty reserved could be of little utility.†

Nonsuit.

† With submission, the more convenient course would be, when a doubtful point of law arises on the plaintiff's evidence not to stop the case but to hear the defendant's evidence and then find the facts, because, unless this be done, the liberty reserved can only be for a new trial, which in ejectment especially, is of very little use. The points of law can scarcely be otherwise raised. If a new trial even should be obtained or a new ejectment brought, the Court might again stop the case on the plaintiff's evidence, upon precisely the same ground, and the matter not be advanced a whit.

ANANDMOCHUN GOSWAMI V. KRISHNAMOCHUN DOSA PAUL AND ANOTHER.

This was an action upon a promissory note, and came on ex parte for want of appearance.

MONDAY FEB. 10.

ANDERSON V. GRANT.

This cause was settled out of Court, the defendant agreeing that a verdict should be taken for the sum of Rupees 6,000.

The Advocate General and Mr. Morton for the plaintiff.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith for the defence.

Verdict for the plaintiff; Co.'s Rs. 6,000.

THOMAS ALLARDICE V. WILLOUGHBY DA COSTA.

Mr. Sandes opened the pleadings. The action was for money had and received, and the defendant had pleaded the general issue and a set-off for guarantee-commission at two and a half per cent. The plaintiff had replied the statute of limitations, to which the defendant rejoined that the debts had accrued within six years.

Mr. Leith for the plaintiff, stated that the action was brought to recover the sum of Co.'s Rs. 11,585, being a sum charged for commission at the rate of two and a half per cent, upon eighty-nine acceptances, the total amount of which was upwards of four lakhs. It would appear that the greater number of these acceptances were acceptances of renewed bills; and it was apprehended that according to the decision of the Court in the recent case of Oman and Campbell v. T. H. Gardiner, the charge of commission upon renewals of bills would not be recognised by the Court.

Evidence for the plaintiff was then gone into. It appeared that the plaintiff carried on business for several years under the style and firm of Middleton and Co., as a jeweller in Calcutta, and that he had been set up and supported in business by the defendant, who acted as the general agent of the firm. The defendant was in the habit of lending his acceptances to the firm from the year 1821 until two or three years since, when the firm failed. Accounts current were rendered every year, but the general account was not closed until a few months ago. In October 1838, Mr. Da Costa, the defendant, by the plaintiff's direction, seized and sold the stock in trade of the plaintiff, and paid himself out of the proceeds. The final account was rendered by the defendant on the 31st of that month, and in that account defendant debited plaintiff with the $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. guarantee commission upon his 89 acceptances, retaining the sum in his hands and paying over the balance of the proceeds. This commission had not been entered in the annual accounts current previously rendered.

The Advocate-General (with whom was Mr. Morton for the defence, said that the only question which the Court had to consider, was whether the defendant's claim of set-off was barred by the Statute of limitations. It appeared from the plaintiff's own evidence that there were Merchants' accounts between plaintiff and the defendant, and that they remained unclosed until less than two years ago. The rule was that if there was a single item within the six years, such item would save the residue from the operation of the Statute. This appeared to him to dispose of the whole question. At the same time he did not by any means concede to his learned friend that the principle of the decision in the recent case in this Court at all affected the right to charge a guarantee-commission upon renewed bills, supposing that that question were here raised. All that the Court then decided, was that the agency commission of one per cent could only be charged once upon the same actual sum, and that it could not be allowed therefore upon the renewal of bills.

Mr. Leith contended (upon the pleadings) that the defendant ought to have rejoined specially that the accounts were merchants' accounts, and that some of the items accrued within six years.

The Advocate General cited Webber versus Twiss, 2 Saund. Rep. 127 b, and other authorities which expressly shewed that the general rejoinder was proper.

The Court were of the same opinion, and said that there must be a verdict for the defendant; or the plaintiff might be nonsuited if he preferred it.

The plaintiff's counsel electing to be nonsuited, there was a Nonsuit.

DINNOMNEY DABEE V. MUDDOOSODDEN SANDAL.

Mr. Clarke opened the pleadings.

The Advocate-General said, that this action was brought to recover the sum of Sicca Rupees 5,000, with interest upon certain instrument executed by the defendant several years ago, in favour of the plaintiff and three others, the sisters of the defendant. The general issue had been pleaded, and also a Release. It would be shown that the release was a forgery, and that the plaintiff (who was a purdah woman) had been personated in the execution of the instrument.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Morton were for the defence.

The case turned upon the genuineness of the release. It was proved clearly that such an instrument had been executed by a Hindu female represented to be the plaintiff, and that a sum of money was paid upon the occasion; and a person was called for the defendant who swore that he identified the plaintiff.

The Court did not believe the witness who swore to the identity, and found a verdict for the plaintiff, without hearing witnesses in reply.

A question arose as to the amount of interest to be allowed, a doubt having been suggested whether according to Hindoo-law interest could be given under any circumstances beyond the amount of the principal sum. In the present case the interest claimed more than exceeded the principal, but the plaintiff's counsel agreed to waive the surplus and take judgment for double of the principal sum.

Verdict for plaintiff, Sicca Rupees, 10,000.—Hark. Jan. 11, 1840.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 12.

IN EQUITY.

JOYKISHEN BYRACK V. RADAKISHEN MITTER.

Sir E. Ryan, C.J. mentioned this case, in which the Advocate General yesterday moved, (as a motion of course) to set aside the order for taking the bill pro confesso, and for leave to clear contempt, and file the defendant's answer upon payment of costs. The Court intended to adopt in future the practice which prevailed in the Court of Chancery in England. In Carr v. Paullet (Simon's Reports, p. 142, a motion to discharge the order for taking the bill pro confesso against one of the defendants was refused with costs, although the defendants on whose behalf the motion was made did not mean to enter into evidence and undertook that the evidence which had been taken against the other defendants, their case being identical with his) should be read against him. In future, therefore, the motion in this Court must be a motion on notice, and made upon special grounds. In the present case, however, the Court would grant the motion as it was in conformity with the practice hitherto recognised.

RAMARUNGINES DOSSER v GOOROODOSS ROY.

This was a motion for a receiver before answer, which stood for this morning; but the defendant having obtained a month's further time to file his answer, it was agreed, that the receiver-motion should stand over until the month had expired.

Stands over.

RAMOULLIAN MUNDELL v RAMCHUNDER SEAL AND ANOTHER.

Mr. Clarke opened the pleadings.

Mr. Prinsep stated the case. This action was brought to recover the sum of rupees 13,800, being the balance due upon the sale of certain silk by the plaintiff to the defendants. The defendants had pleaded the general issue, and given notice of their intention to contest the jurisdiction.

The question of jurisdiction was soon disposed of. The jurisdiction clause stated, that the defendants were inhabitants of Calcutta, and it was proved on behalf of the plaintiff (and not attempted to be denied) that they carried on trade and business here, though they were actual residents of Chinsurah. For the defendants it was urged that although this would have been a good ground of jurisdiction if specially stated, it could not be given in evidence under the clause of jurisdiction contained in this plaint.

The Court said, that the plaintiff was certainly tied down to proving the jurisdiction as laid; but evidence of trading in Calcutta was clearly receivable under the general allegation of inhabitancy.

The case then proceeded. The delivery of silk to the defendants was proved; but the case for the defence was that the real owner and vendor was one Moonthpor anauth Brjjobassoe, and that the defendant had no property whatsoever therein, being a mere duflot, and had no title to bring the action.

The Advocate General and Mr. Leith appeared for the defence.

The Court ultimately gave a verdict for the defendants.

Verdict for defendants.—Harkara February, 14.

THURSDAY, FEB. 13.

IN EQUITY.

JOHANNES STEPHEN, THE YOUNGER, AND OTHERS v. EDWARD KENT HUME AND ANOTHER, AND THE CROSS CAUSE

In this cause the original bill was filed, by the infant devisees and legatees under the Will of Mariam Hume (formerly Mariam Stephen) an Armenian Lady the wife of the defendant E. K. Hume. The testatrix died in May 1835, and left one moiety of her real estate to her husband, Mr. Hume, and the other moiety to the children of her brother, Mr. Johannes Stephen. The will also disposed of her personal property, and contained divers bequests and legacies.

Shortly after the death of Mrs. Hume, a bill was filed by her brother Mr. Stephen as heir at law. This bill was demurred to, and the demurrer allowed. A question was then raised whether an Armenian woman could make a valid Will, during her coverture, with the consent of her husband; but this question was not determined by the Court, the bill being dismissed upon the ground that it was an Ejectment Bill, and that there was no equity to support it.

The bill in the above cause was thereupon filed by the infants in February 1835, to carry the trusts of the Will into execution; and in the July following a cross-bill was filed by Mr. Hume, (who also supported the Will) containing nearly the same prayer as the original bill, with some additions.

The defendant, Johannes Stephen the elder, by his answer to the original bill still contested the validity of his sister's Will; but a compromise having been afterwards entered into between him and Mr. Hume, on behalf of himself and the infant devisees and legatees, Mr. Stephen, on the 29th of April 1839, put in his further answer and disclaimer, whereby he abandoned and renounced all his rights and claims as heir at law, and in opposition to the Will.

In July 1839 a supplemental bill was filed by the infant complainants, (two afterborn children of Mr. Stephen being joined as co complainants) to establish and carry into effect the compromise and to declare it binding upon all parties. It had been previously referred to the Master to inquire and report whether the compromise was for the benefit of the infants, and the Master's report, finding that it was for their benefit, had been confirmed.

The causes were now set down, by consent, on the pleadings, in order to obtain the usual decree ad computandum.

Mr. Leith and Mr. Morton appeared on behalf of the complainants in the original and supplemental suits (the defendants in the cross suit). There appeared to be at present, but two points upon which the parties were at issue. In the first place, a question was raised by the answer of Mr. Hume, whether certain Company's Paper and other property of the testatrix was reduced into possession by Mr. Hume in the lifetime of his wife. This however was rather a matter included in the general reference to the Master to take an account, and the question might be specifically raised hereafter when the facts appeared before the Court upon the report of the Master. Another question related to the costs of the cross suit. There appeared no necessity of filing the cross bill. It was of course wholly unavailable for the purposes of discovery as far as the infants were concerned, and whatever relief was obtainable under it, might have been obtained under the original bill.

* Mr. Prinsep appeared for Stephen the elder. The only matter in which he was concerned was the carrying into effect the compromise, and making it binding upon all parties.

The Advocate General, Mr. Clarke, and Mr. Hume appeared for E. K. Hume. They contended the question whether the personal property and effects, alleged in the answer to have been reduced into possession, were or were not chosen in action at the time of the death of the testatrix, did not arise at all, because there was nothing to contradict the statement upon oath in the answer. With respect to the costs of the cross suit, there were many reasons assignable for filing the cross bill. The guardian of the infant appointed by the Mofussil Courts (a Mr. Thomas Bird) was a necessary party, and yet he had not been joined in the original suit. The cross bill cured this defect, and prayed an injunction to restrain him from proceeding in the cause in the Mofussil Courts, and this injunction had been actually granted. It was in the cross suit too that the Receiver had been appointed. The learned Counsel also urged that it was doubtful whether an executor could pass his accounts and be discharged, without filing a bill for the express purpose.

Mr. Leith in reply waived the question of costs. With respect to the inquiry whether the personal property was reduced into possession or not, it was necessarily included in the general matter of account. This rather depended upon law than fact. But even if it was a question of fact, the complainant (especially infant parties) were not concluded by the statements in the answer where a repudiation has been filed, and the cause set down for hearing upon the pleadings by consent. It might be as well urged that the averment in the answer that nothing was due, was conclusus, and then there would be no necessity for an account at all!

The court requested that the Counsel on each side would put in the Minutes of their proposed decree.—Hurkaru, Jan. 14.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 17.

JUMNA BHOOD, THE EAST INDIA COMPANY AND OTHERS.

This was a demurrer to a bill in equity by one of the defendants (Theodore Dickens, Esquire, the Ecclesiastical Registrar) on the ground that he was a mere agent in the matter, and that the complainant showed no title either to relief or discovery against him.

Mr. Clarke for the demurrer. The bill is filed for the purpose of establishing and carrying into effect the trust of the Will of Jaykissen Doss, by his widow the complainant, who claims to be entitled under the Will to certain legacies and bequests. It appears by the bill, that the East India Company were nominated by the testator to act as his Attorney, and Messrs. Morley, Macnaghten and Oakes, three financial officers in the Civil Service of the Company, were authorized to appear and apply for probate or letters on behalf of Government. Letters of administration were obtained by these three gentlemen, who afterwards, by a power of attorney appointed Mr. Smoult, the then Registrar, and afterwards Mr. Dickens, his successor, their agent for the purpose of administering the estate. It is charged by the bill that Mr. Dickens has acted on behalf of the administrators (who are also made defendants), and that he himself holds possession of the greater part of the property, and refuses to perform certain trusts of the Will. The demurrer of Mr. Dickens proceeds upon the ground that according to the statements in the bill, he is merely an agent. It is well established that a mere Agent, having no interest in the subject matter of the suit, and competent as a witness, cannot be joined as a party. The case of Dove v. Everett, 1 Mylne and Keene, and numerous other authorities establish this position.

Mr. Leith and Mr. Morton contra. There is no doubt that the general rule is that a mere Agent cannot be made a party to a suit in equity; but there are exceptions to the rule, and it is submitted that the present case falls within the exception both with respect to the relief and the discovery sought by this bill. If the complainant can show herself to be entitled either to relief or discovery the demurrer must be overruled, as too large. First, with respect to the discovery prayed. It is charged that Mr. Dickens is the only person who possesses any knowledge or information concerning the subject matter of the suit, or from whom the complainant can obtain any available discovery. This brings the case within the principle of the authorities which hold that the agent, officer or servant of a corporation may be made a party for the purpose of discovery. Wyck v. Neal, 3 Peere Wins. 310; and several others. In the present case Mr. Dickens has clearly acted as the Agent of the East India Company, a corporate body, and not merely as the agent of Messrs. Morley, Macnaghten and Oakes, who are nominal actors only. Secondly, with respect to the relief sought, — he is an Agent who holds specific property in his hands upon which the complainants have a lien. A party is entitled in equity to follow funds even in the hands of a person not actually interested in the claim. Under particular circumstances, a mere stakeholder, may be made a party to a bill in equity. Low v. Faurie, 2 Maddock Rep., and other cases establish this doctrine.

Sir E. Ryan, C. J.—The court are of opinion that this demurrer must be allowed. The defendant, Mr. Dickens, is not the agent of the Company, but of the administrators; and with respect therefore to the discovery sought, the case does not fall within the principle of officers or servants of corporations being made defendants. Then as to the relief prayed, an Agent is never liable except where fraud and collusion are charged, or where under the circumstances of the case he acquires the character or liabilities of a trustee. It would be dangerous to extend the principle of allowing parties not interested to be joined, as they may be thus shut out from giving evidence as witnesses.

Demurrer allowed.

IN CHAMBERS.

THE QUEEN v. PFER ATLY.

Mr. Clarke applied to the Court for an order that the defendant should be discharged. It appeared by the grounds that a true bill for perjury had been found against the defendant at the last sessions, and he obtained the usual order for leave to enter into his recognizances, to plead, and traverse; his bail being objected to, he had not till that morning been able to offer satisfactory securities, when he had come to the Court house for the purpose of entering into the recognizance before a Judge. An attachment had been obtained against the defendant for the nonpayment of money due on an award by arbitrators, and on coming to the Court this morning to enter into his recognizances, he had been arrested under the attachment, in the verandah of the Court house, and while the Judges were sitting.

The Chief Justice suggested that the Court could do nothing, as the prisoner was in custody of the Sheriff, and he could only be brought before them by Habeas Corpus.

Mr. Clarke contended that as the arrest was made while the Judges were sitting, it was a contempt in open Court, and as such the Court would take immediate notice of it, and order the officer to bring him into their presence.

The Chief Justice stated, he would hear the case, in Chambers immediately, and if necessary, he could refer to the other Judges.

The parties accordingly attended in Chambers, when Mr. Clarke took two objections to the arrest, &c. That the arrest under an attachment for non-payment of money although a contempt of Court, for not obeying its order, was in point of fact an arrest on meine process and an action would not be against the Sheriff for an escape if he bailed the defendant, and that the prisoner was protected from such arrests, while attending the Court to perfect his recognizances, so much as if he had been a bail attending to justify. — 2ndly. That he could not be arrested in the Court house while the Judges were sitting. (Archibald 186.)

The Chief Justice then consulted with the other Judges, and stated that they were all unanimously of opinion, that the arrest on the attachment must be considered as an arrest on meine process; and that if improperly made, the prisoner would be entitled to his discharge. 2ndly. That they considered the arrest had not been improperly made, for that the prisoner ought to have entered into his recognizances during the last Sessions, and before the Court, and had no right to enter into them before a Judge after the Sessions had terminated, and was not therefore protected in coming to the Court house. That a practice had certainly existed of taking recognizance before a Judge, but that it was irregular, and must have arisen from a misconception of the 15th Crown Rule, but which rule was framed for a different object, and solely to enable a defendant to compel a prosecutor to try. 3rdly. That the Court would not permit a party to be arrested in the Court itself, while they were sitting, as it might tend to disturb their proceedings, but they were not inclined to stretch the rule, and to extend it to an arrest made in the veranda, especially as the Sheriff's office was held in the Court house, and his officers domiciled there. — Murk, Feb. 18.

FEBRUARY 18, 1840.

The first sessions for 1840 opened this day. After the Grand Jury had been impanelled Sir John Peter Grant briefly charged the jurors to the following purport.

Gentlemen of the Grand Jury, — I am happy to inform you that there will be an alleviation in the administration of justice in the present sessions as far as the Calendar goes, which you will find will not require your attention nor occupy your time long. The cases on the Calendar also I am happy to say, are not of a very aggravated character generally, but consist chiefly of the petty description of crime, such as burglary, larceny and others, with the nature and character of which you are no doubt aware; and it is therefore unnecessary for me to enter into explanation with regard to them.

I would, however, draw the attention of the jury shortly to some alterations made in the Criminal Act of 1839. These alterations in the first place relate to burglaries with regard to which crime, a distinction has been made in respect to the character of it. It has been divided in two offences. The first is that, if a man enter a house burglariously and if such entrance be attended with cutting, wounding, murder, &c. this will constitute burglary in aggravated form, as distinct from simple burglary, where unlawful entrance is made into a house, but no violence, such as cutting, wounding, &c., ensues, and this though felony subjects the parties convicted to transportation.

In like manner the offence of robbery has been divided, distinguishing aggravated from simple robbery. The one when it is attended with stabbing, &c. and the other not. In either case it will be the duty of the jury to consider the circumstances of the cases before them, in making their presentment.

Distinction has also been made with regard to the offence of assault, in cases where the consequence are not serious and where homicide ensues. A case of the latter description His Lordship alluded to, in which a homicide had been committed by an Englishman which had been intimated to His Lordship, but not exactly brought before him, and therefore he would not delay the jury by entering on that case, particularly as the jury must be acquainted with the difference between cases of murder and man-slaughter. If, however, the jury required any information on the subject, his Lordship would be very happy to render it to the best of his ability. His Lordship also adverted to another case of homicide which had been just then sent up and the depositions connected with which he had no time to read.

His Lordship concluded by saying that he would not detain the jury with any farther observation, but would leave them to the consideration of the cases before them and if in the course of their making their presentment, they required information on any point, he would be most happy to give it.—Hurk., Feb 19.

FEBRUARY 21, 1840.

On the opening of the Court this morning, two of the petty jurors were fined, being absent and not answering to their names. The names of the parties are James Walpole Powell and Hurrynarain Chatterjee, and the extent of the fines 50 Rs. each.

A young native named Chundoo, stood charged with stealing on the 12th February, a silver gote or waist chain, valued 18 Rs, belonging to a Hindoostanee female, who is keeper of a dancing girl establishment.

The prosecutrix being sworn identified her silver gote, as also the prisoner of the bar, by whom and two other the ornament had been violently taken off from her person. It was at night and in the street that this took place, and before the Police came up the two accomplices escaped, and the prisoner only was taken.

The next witness was a chowkeedar in whose division the circumstance transpired, and who began by intimating to the gentlemen of the jury, that he never saw the prisoner in the whole course of his mortal existence. He was told to look at the prisoner and to say if he ever saw him; when the reply was that he never did. At length, after some circumlocutory questioning, he said that in the night in question, he was sitting at his post when he heard a noise, and on going to the spot whence it proceeded, he saw the prosecutrix held by two men and the prisoner standing in front of her. Before he went up, however, the other two ran away while he was able to apprehend the prisoner only in whose hand he found the gote.

The prisoner in his defence, and in contradiction of the prosecutrix's statement said, that he was employed with her for a year; that she has never paid him his wages, and that the gote was crammed (thrust) into his waist cloth by her, and then she had him confined. In corroboration of his story, he called the two following witnesses.

The first was a Brahmin who could only say that he knew the prisoner, who, together with his friend, were his tenants.

The other was a young up-country hindoo, who said, that the prisoner was in the employ of the prosecutrix.

He authenticated the prisoner's defence, and positively contradicted the evidence for the prosecution, and concluded by saying that he has known the prisoner from a considerable time, and always found him an excellent person.

Sir John Peter Grant then summed up the evidence; after which the jury consulted for a short time, then retired to deliberate on the matter more at leisure, and returning in about twenty minutes, returned a verdict of "guilty of simple larceny."

The prisoner Chundoo was sentenced to imprisonment in the House of Correction for 12 months.

PRIVATE JOHNSON'S CASE.

John Johnson, a private of the 26th was then brought up and arraigned with having, on the 28th of December last, maliciously and violently assaulted Charles George Strettell with the intent of stealing the monies of the said Charles George Strettell. Johnson pleaded "not guilty."

Charles George Strettell, sworn. He recognised the prisoner at the bar whom he saw on the 28th of December last, at about $\frac{1}{2}$ past 9 o'clock, when on his way home, passing through Wellesley Street. His palanquin was stopped by the prisoner, under the circumstances that have already been published in the Police Report of the case.

The ticea bearers being examined, related, how they saw a golah the prisoners who on the night in question stopped the palanquin, struck their master and ran a way, and how they pursued him, and saw him enter a prostitute's house in Colinga.

Hooanee, prostitute, being sworn, deposed, that on the night in question, after gun fire, her gate being open, the prisoner came into her house. That not long after Mr. Strettell, whom she knows, and who is an Attorney of the Supreme Court, came into the house also accompanied with a Constable and other Police Officers; and that after some words had passed in English, the prisoner, together with the rest of the party, left her house.

Constable Weir on oath said, that on the night in question, he was called out and accompanied the prosecutor to the house of the last witness, when he saw the prisoner, and he being pointed out by Mr. Strettell as the man that had attempted to rob him, he (Weir) took him into custody. On their way to the Police he conversed with the prisoner, who sued hard, first of the prosecutor to be let off, and then of the witness, stating, that the affair would bring him into trouble, and be heard by the Rev. Mr. Charles, which above all the prisoner wanted to avoid.

The prisoner being asked if he had any thing to say, replied, that he had nothing to state, excepting that his adjutant and other officers could speak as to his prisoner's) character. But as those parties were not present and had not been served with subpoenas, the prisoner could not avail himself of such testimony, and His Lordship proceeded to address the jury.

The jury then again retired and after nearly an hour's consultation, returned a verdict of "guilty of the third count of the indictment," namely of demanding money by force and menaces. The jury, however, recommended the prisoner to the mercy of the Court.

The sentence has been deferred to Monday next.—Hurku, Feb. 22.

FEBRUARY 22, 1840.

Ramehand Dos s, charged with burglariously entering the Dwelling of Shaumchand Chuckerbutty, and stealing therefrom various articles of value, and with cutting the said Shaumchand Chuckerbutty, while in the act of effecting his escape,—was found guilty of the simple act of burglary on the second count and sentenced to be transported during the term of his natural life.

Burraut Bangdy, charged with breaking into the dwelling of Hurlall Doss, in Simlis, by cutting the fastening of the door thereof with intent to steal,—was found not guilty, and discharged.

Golaum Naboo and Beboo, charged with stealing from the Chowringhee plain, two cows, value 18 rupees, the property of Lobin Raur, were found guilty and sentenced to hard labour for twelve calendar months.

Hurku, Feb. 24.

FEBRUARY 24.

On the sitting of the Court this morning, Mr. Clarke brought to its notice a paragraph which appeared in the Eastern Star newspaper, in reference to the case of the Queen v. Kalkissen and Rajkissen Roy, involving a charge of murder, which cases are under consideration before the Grand Jury. Mr. Clarke said that two instances of the same kind had been brought to the knowledge of his lordship some time ago, when his lordship expressed himself on the impropriety of such notices in the public papers. In the present case the paragraph in question assumed a tone of dictation to the Grand Jury, which he (the learned counsel) thought was calculated to mislead the Grand Jury, particularly as the Court had not had an opportunity of commenting on the case. The paragraph alluded to, appeared in yesterday's Eastern Star, just when the Grand Jury were to sit to consider the case, and in regard to the impropriety of the article, Mr. Clarke cited passages from Chitty and Coke, authorities which the writer of the article evidently does not appear to be acquainted with. The learned Counsel went on to say, that the paragraph was not only prejudicial to the prisoners but also to the case for the prosecution. He related a case which, on slight evidence, was thrown out by the Grand Jury. In consequence it was a second time taken up by the magistrate, and after further investigation, a fresh commitment was made out. The result proved that a true bill was this time found, and the prisoners convicted. Under these circumstances Mr. Clarke argued, that the paragraph in the Eastern Star was both illegal and mischievous.

Sir John Peter Grant said, that on a former occasion he had to comment on the impropriety of such notices in the newspapers, and expressed his surprise and sorrow in regard to the present case. His lordship said "I do not know who the writer of this paragraph is, but this I do know, that be he who he may, he has displayed a most profound ignorance of the most common principles of law, and the most common principles of the constitution, and were a Grand Jury to return a true bill on the slightest evidence," as this person states they ought, they would act in contravention of their oaths, and be guilty of perjury." But His Lordship thought, that whether misstated or not, it was of minor importance as such remarks should not at all be made. And when they were made, the Court was bound to notice them. He, however, was confident that the Grand Jury were too sensible to attend to any information from such a source, and that if they required to be satisfied in regard to any point, he would be happy to afford the information. His Lordship then explained the great obligation under which the Grand Jury were, they wanted to weigh the cases before them previous to making their presentment, and added that the responsibility of a Grand Jury was equally as great as that of a petty jury. His Lordship concluded by observing, that the papers should not admit such remarks in such cases, and asked Mr. Clarke, if he moved for a contempt of Court, in respect to the paragraph in the Eastern Star.

Mr. Clarke said, that he did not move for a contempt, stating that his object was to guard against the possible effect of a public journalist broaching so illegal and mischievous a doctrine, only a few hours before the Grand Jury would have to discharge their duty, and that in having elicited the Court's opinion on the point, he had obtained all that he required.—Hurku, February, 25.

FEB. 24, 1840.

(Before Sir J. P. Grant.)

Culltoo stood indicted with having, on the night of the 13th December last, stolen from the dwelling house of Nissur Ally in Amrahollah lane, 163 Rupees, Poiso and Kalanlee stood charged with having received a portion of the amount knowing it to be stolen.

The Jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

Madoo stood charged with having stolen, on the 3d Pous last, from the dwelling house of Rebutty, gold ornaments to the value of 96 Rupees.

The Jury returned a verdict of guilty, and the prisoner was sentenced to be transported for seven years.

Mr. Leith, Counsel for Rajkissen Roy and Kalkissen Roy applied, that the defendants be allowed to enter into recognizances to the extent of any sum the Court may think proper.

Mr. Clarke added that the defendants voluntarily appeared at the inquest, and also from time to time before the Chief Magistrate Mr. Clarke brought forward as an instance the case of Mr. Ogilvy.

His Lordship said that Mr. Ogilvy was charged with manslaughter, and therefore allowed to be bailed, but as the defendants are charged with murder, he could not grant the application.

Mr. Leith then asked his Lordship to fix a day for the trial but as Mr. Clarke has not read the depositions yet, this could not be done.

Private John Johnstone.—His Lordship spoke to the prisoner as follows: You are convicted of the charge brought against you, I am now to pass sentence on you. You belong to a Regiment which has always maintained a good name; you have not only disgraced your character as a soldier, but that Regiment. I have up to this moment taken pains to enquire of your past character, and I am happy to find it has been very good, and that this is your first offence. You must now endeavour to redeem your character by an amelioration of your conduct.

The sentence is, that you are to be confined in the common jail for the space of three weeks, and one of the weeks you are to be placed in strict and solitary confinement. I am not desirous of prolonging your confinement, as your services would be shortly required

FINE.

Harrymohun Chatterjee was yesterday fined by Sir John Peter Grand in the sum of 50 Rupees for his absence from the Petty Jury. This is the second or third instance of this individual being fined.—Commercial Advertiser, Feb. 25.

FEBRUARY 25.

A native woman by the name of Bundo, tried and convicted for child stealing. The sentence has been postponed.

Goberdhone, the Up-country Hindoo, who was committed by the Coroner for manslaughter, was tried this day. The witnesses underwent examination in due order, and stated all they had stated in the Coroner's Court, according to the report of the request already published.

The prisoner, during the examination of the witnesses for the prosecution did not question any of them except Dr. Maxton, whom, in rather a pseudo-professional style, highly amusing to all present, he cross-questioned, anent a certain inflammation in a certain part of his body. But unfortunately for his cause, he elicited nothing favorable to his exculpation. The evidence for the defence then began and first of all was called.

Charles Chander Egerton, who said, that he knows the prisoner on whom he performed a operation in the College Hospital, whence he was discharged about a month ago.

The prisoner here branched off into a variety of ludicrous questions, and on being asked his object for so doing, answered, that he wished to prove that from the state in which he was at the time, it was not in his power to raise his foot so as to kick any body, in the manner in which the deceased was stated to have been kicked. Accordingly, the question was put Dr. Egerton, whose reply was,

"It was possible."

Prisoner—People generally hit me down for a fool and madman, and did you not give me a certificate to the effect that I was neither?

Dr. Ederton.—No.

Showanath Tewaree being sworn said, that on the day occasionally he saw the deceased brush against the prisoner, who holding out his hand to prevent a concussion the deceased fell down. He saw several come to his assistance, and saw the deceased set up also. After which he went away, and knows nothing further.

Ramlal Bahoo. This witness also said, that he saw the deceased go against the prisoner in consequence of having taken fright at something. The deceased fell, and a great deal of noise ensued as is commonly the case among the native. After a short time, the owner of the bag which was carried by the deceased, came and took deceased away.

Next, at the special request of the prisoner, Mr McCann of the Police was sworn; but as the prisoner had nothing definitive in view, Mr. McCann could say nothing of importance as to the purpose.

The jury were then charged and the verdict returned after about half an hour, of "guilty."

The sentence put off to the last day of the Session—Clark, Feb. 26.

FEBRUARY 26.

On the opening of the Court this morning, Mr. Lefth on behalf of the defendants in the Potterghat murder case, moved for the depositions taken by the Coroner, which application after a little conversation, was refused by the Court.

Mr. Clarke, in regard to the motion said, that he would leave to the discretion of the Court, only observing that he expected to be allowed them if necessary.

The Court replied, that in case of any obstruction offering they would be given to him.

Mr. Turlion moved for permission for two parties in a misdemeanour case to speak together. The application was granted.

THE QUEEN ON THE PROSECUTION OF JAMES SMITH.

The prisoner having been arraigned, pleaded "not guilty."

The Advocate-General then addressed the jury to the following purport.

The learned Counsel first of all stated the charge against the prisoner, namely, that of receiving two Company's Papers to the amount of eleven thousand rupees, knowing them to have been stolen. He then went on to say that the prisoner lately went to England from whence he has a short time ago returned; that he commenced dealings with Watts and Co. and Ahmuty and Co. by which dealings he got into their debt to a large amount by July last. That sometime after he deposited a Company's paper with Mr. Lawrie, as a security for his debt. That he went on dealing, and receiving credit, when he made a further deposit of a Company's Paper. That the principal evidence in the case was Mr. Lawrie, by whose evidence it would appear that he discovered, that the interest for four years on the notes had not been paid, which circumstance induced him to question Smith on the subject when his reply was that the notes were parts of a large one, the interest of which was not due. That Mr. Lawrie recommended the note being sent to the Treasury in order to the payment of the accounts, to which the prisoner did not agree. That Mr. Lawrie afterwards determined to send the notes to the Treasury to dissipate certain doubts on his own mind in regard to them, but without success. That it was subsequently sent to the Union Bank. That Mr. Gordon, of the Union Bank, sending the note to the Treasury for the interest, ascertained, that it belonged to a batch of notes to the amount of fifty thousand rupees, which had been stolen from the General Post Office. The learned Counsel concluded by adverting to the two circumstances under which the charge against the prisoner was involved, namely, that the Company's Papers were stolen, and that the prisoner had received them, knowing them to be stolen, adverting also to the poverty of the prisoner.

Miss Ally sworn, examined by Mr. Clarke—I am a merchant and carry on business with my brother, with whom I was in partnership in Nov., 1836, and have been ever since. In Nov., 1836, I had nine Company's Papers, to the amount—altogether of 50,000 Rupees, which I put into the Calcutta Post Office, for which I received the receipt shown to me. I know these two Company's Papers, the one for 5,000 Rupees, and the other for 5,000 Rupees. These papers were in my possession, and belonged to the number I put into the Post Office, which since that time I never saw till about two months ago in the Police Office. I learnt, that they had not reached my brother at Lucknow, and which I published a notification in the Government Gazette, for three successive weeks, and also made application at the Treasury to stop the payment of them. And moreover, applied to the Government to obtain duplicates of the notes I had lost. Duplicates were granted to me, though not before I had given security for them. As far as my memory serves me, I obtained the duplicates, about six months after the loss of the notes, which information I got eight or nine days after despatch of the notes. After four, five, or six days, I sent the public notification alluded to.

Cross examined by Mr. Norton.—There were no indorsements on the notes when I despatched them. The indorsements I point to, are forgeries; namely, that of Meermahamed Bakur Rowshan ool Dowlat, and Meermahamed Bakur again. The tenth indorsement on this note I cannot read, being in Bengallee, nor the fifth, being in English. The indorsements in the other note are also forgeries. I had two notes of 30,000 each in exchange, for which I received eleven other notes of which these are two. I had sold two of the eleven notes. When the notes were despatched, I made them payable to my brother or order. I do not recollect if I got interest for the duplicates or not, as they have been transmitted to my brother by me some time after obtaining them. My brother parted with them. I believe I am not aware that he received interest, which is payable here.

Robert Deetholts sworn and examined by Mr. Norton.—I was a clerk in the General Post office of Calcutta, in November, 1836. The register and receipt shown, are written in my writing signed by Mr. Pereira and Mr. Moore. Mr. Pereira, along with me, examined this paper marked A with the Government's Promissory Notes. There were nine of them, for 50,000 rupees. This receipt and register were made as the notes were for despatch to Lucknow. The Company's Papers were of the eleven entered and examined, as I think, from their agreeing with the entries. The nine papers I put up in an envelope, which was sealed in the presence of the Deputy Post Master. In putting them into the envelope, I made the usual remarks on the envelope in red ink. I afterwards delivered the envelope to Mr. Pereira, at which time it was not sealed, but on getting it back I found it sealed, and it seemed to contain as much as when I delivered it to Mr. Pereira. I then gave it to the receiving sircar of that division, who also received the postage money. His name is Cosinath Mookerjee.

Lewis Francis Pereira, examined by Mr. Clarke.—I am a clerk in the General Post Office, where I was employed in November, 1836. That is my signature on the paper marked A which I signed on the day it is dated to have been signed. This is an extract of a Company's Paper received that day. I examined it, and it gives a correct detail of the Company's Papers. These two Company's Papers corresponded with the entries in number and date. After the whole of the papers nine in number had been put into an envelope I took them to Mr. Moore myself, when they were sealed in my presence and that of Mr. Moor by a distree, according to the usual course of business. After the sealing was over, I brought down the envelope and gave it to the last witness at which time I can say it contained all the papers. I cannot say if these papers reached Lucknow. They were addressed to Meerbuckkur Lucknow. In regard to them, an investigation took place in the Post Office, as the papers were said to be lost.

By the Court. In the course of business, it is my impression that they were despatched to be forwarded to Lucknow, according to the inscription.

Re-examined by Mr. Clarke.—This paper has the last witness's writing upon it. The red ink is in his writing.

Robert Deetholts recalled and examined by Mr. Norton.—This is a copy of the challan sent with the papers. This is the duplicate returned from Lucknow. The writing in red ink is mine, which is usually put on challans.

Cosinath Chatterjee.—I am a sircar in the General Post Office, and it is my duty to receive letters that are put in for despatch as also to receive the postage. I see my hand writing on this document, testifying that five rupees postage had been paid. The papers mentioned in that receipt, were intended for Lucknow. I received a letter from Mr. Deetholts for despatch to Lucknow, for which the receipt above alluded to was granted. On receiving the letter, I weighed it; and taking the postage I delivered it to another man, who is called the cheque-man, whose name is Calchand sircar, and who delivered it to another, according to the routine of business.

Calchand sircar examined by Mr. Clarke.—I am the cheque man in the Calcutta Post Office. Cosinath Chatterjee takes the postage and hands the letters to me; and from me they pass to the sorting sircar, and Ramnath Dass was in that situation in November, 1836. I do not know these papers.

Wuzzerally sworn, and questioned by Mr. Norton.—I am a writer in the Lucknow Division of the Post Office here, know the Chullian marked D. This is my writing on two parts of the chullian, and the rest, that of my under writer. The entry of packets made by me, is signed by me not in full, but those are my initials. I did not see Mr. Deetholts write in red ink, as I only count the number of letters and pack them together, comparing with the statement of the chullian. The packet was sealed up by the jemadar, whose name is Kuffuroodun. The paper coat of the packet was sealed by me. The usual time of packing is from 6 to a quarter to 7 in the evening; but on the day in question, I do not recollect when I packed. After this, we leave office and the dawk is despatched about a past 7. The packets then pass into the hands of the jemadar and are enclosed in a letter. I know one Furrul Aley, who was in the jemadar's department and was dismissed. He was at first confined in consequence of the loss of the packet. After his release he never attended and was accordingly dismissed.

Frankissen Ray, Chowdrie, examined by Mr. Clarke.—I was employed in the Lucknow Post Office November 8.6, when Mr. T. Bunney was the head writer and Captain Patton the Post Master, who having gone to Cawnpore, Lieutenant Shikhar was in charge. I remember having received this chullian in Lucknow as also the packet with which it came. The chullian has my writing from the number of letters stated in the chullian I missed two one addressed to Khoshbukt Ray, and the other to Meermahomed Bakur the first of which did afterwards arrive, but the one intended for Meermahomed Bakur, did not. I do not know why they are gummed red—there must be some reason but I do not know what. In this despatch there were only two numbered letters. That numbered letter addressed to Meer Bakur never reached and I never got it.

John Laurie examined by Mr. Norton.—I am a member of the firm of Watt and Co. and Ahmady and Co. I know the prisoner at the bar, with whom I had dealings, which commenced about the latter end of April or in May last. The nature of the dealings was partly for provisions and partly for adultery. The debt incurred he did not pay. I went on dealing till about 28th of May, when I received from him a note of hand amounting might be 100 to 200 rupees. He owed at that time from one to two hundred rupees. I went on dealing, before he gave any thing further. I do not positively know how much he gave me. Afterwards he gave me a Company's Paper for 5,000 rupees, as a guarantee for what was due to me, and for me to draw upon. That is in the Company's Paper I, but received from Amah. I received it on or about the 15th or 16th July last. At that time he owed me beyond the amount of the paper. Nothing transpired to induce Smith to deposit the paper excepting applications both verbal and in writing for payment. All that passed between us when he gave the paper, was that he said that interest on the principal was not due until the beginning of November, and that was his reason for not presenting the paper then. I still went on dealing with the prisoner. Smith made a deposit of another Company's promissory note for 6,000 rupees which is the one I see. On this occasion, I do not recollect of having had any conversation excepting that I requested the disposal of the paper, and pressed payment of my account, which the prisoner promised to do. I made enquiry about the paper at the General Treasury, sending the paper there. I am not aware that I stated to Smith, that I had sent the paper to the treasury. About the 8th or 9th of Oct. last, the second paper was deposited with me. At the time of the first deposit the papers were not endorsed, but on the second occasion, both of them were endorsed to me. The Persian and Bengallee endorsements were on it at the time. Smith wrote that endorsement in my presence, and the words "purchased from, &c." under which was the name Hurris Chunder in Bengallee. I do not know Juggodoolub Sing, but have heard Smith use his name. I do not remember the Sircar's name. He is not here. "I'll send for him." There is but one Bengallee endorsement on the papers. Written under the words spoken to "purchased, &c." is Sree Hurnachunder Ghose, and my endorsement follows. He did not endorse it to me at the time he wrote those words. Two were endorsed on or about 8th or 9th of October last. They were endorsed in consequence of my pressing payment of the account. When I got them endorsed, I sent them to the Union Bank Secretary with a note, requesting him to draw the interest on them. (Looks at a note from the Secretary.) I saw nothing of the papers from that time until 25th November at the Police. I saw the prisoner during the interval, but had no conversation on the subject of the notes with him. I asked him why interest had not been drawn for four years on them, and he stated these two papers to be a portion of a larger paper which had been lost, and that interest was not due on these papers until November. This conversation was in June, and I then sent to the Treasury, where I received the same report. I had no other conversation with him about drawing the interest. He never told me how he got the paper.

By Mr. Morton.—I cannot say when Mr. Smith returned. I knew him in the latter end of May or April. I have heard of one Juggodoolub Sing, with whom I heard Smith was to enter into partnership.

By Mr. Turton.—I received those letters from prisoner on the dates they bear. This letter is in his hand writing. I think the first paper was left about the 15th of June or July; but both were endorsed about the 8th or 9th of October. The whole of this letter I believe to be in Smith's writing.

By Mr. Morton.—The only explanation given about not drawing was the interest not being due, with which I was satisfied. My endorsement was not made in Smith's presence. I never made any particular enquiry about Hurnachunder Bose or any of the endorsements being satisfied at the time with Smith's explanation. He owed me about 5,000 Rs.—I was satisfied with his respectability. I never was intimate with him. I was sufficiently satisfied both in regard to the papers and the explanation. I heard him say that Smith was about to enter into an Indigo concern. From about May the papers were in the house and delivered to me in June or July. Both of them were in a box belonging to Smith. I first saw the papers in May. I made no enquiry about the papers till about the 15th or 16th July. I never calculated on the interest. I do not know how long it had not been drawn. One of the papers was in particular in the box in May or June. A day or two after sending to the Treasury, I made the enquiry about the interest of Smith. The explanation given I was satisfied with, and if any one asked me about the interest not being drawn, I would give the same information.

George James Gordon, by Mr. Clarke.—I am Secretary to the Union Bank. I can identify these papers, seeing my signature. I can implicitly tell whom they came from. They were sent to ascertain about the interest in the beginning of November. In respect to the date I have not referred to any memorandum to refresh my memory. I know this letter written at my instruction and signed by me, and addressed to Mr. Lawrie, by whom the notes were stated to have been sent. The interest was refused to be paid at the Treasury, where I sent the notes. After I got back the papers, they were taken to the Police, in consequence of some information in respect to them.

Nobisoomar Chatterjee, by Mr. Turton.—I am a sircar to Mr. Lawrie's employ. I know the prisoner at the bar. The name of Hurris Chunder on the back of the Company's paper, I once read to Mr. Lawrie, as well as the prisoner. I was requested to read it. I do not recollect that Mr. Smith said any thing about that name before I read it. I do not recollect of any conversation on the subject between the prisoner and my master. I saw those words put above the name alluded to, after I had read out the name in Bengallee. The same name in the other paper I also read out.

By Mr. Morton.—I do not recollect the date of this reading.

Thomas Oxborough, by Mr. Clarke.—I am Second Assistant in the Accountant General's Office. Duplicates have been granted for these two Company's papers to Meer Mahomed Bakur, in consequence of the originals having been lost. These are the original notes. I think duplicates were then granted to the extent of about 60,000 Rs. I have the duplicates of these notes with one which I produce, and which have since come into the Treasury, surrendered for other notes about March 1838.

By Mr. Morton.—In March 1838, other notes were granted in lieu of these, to Shew Beharilal and Ruggoahardal. The numbers of these notes are registered. After the duplicates had been granted no interest would have been paid for the originals were they presented.

By Mr. Clarke.—The original notes were presented, but the interest refused when the discovery of the lost notes was made.

David McFarlane, examined by Mr. Turton.—I am Chief Magistrate of Calcutta. The prisoner was brought before me on this charge, when I took his examination, warning him. These depositions were signed by him. The first examination was consequent on the appearance of the papers, and the second examination on account of the discovery of a receipt.

By Mr. Morton.—Gopal Chunder Ghose was examined by me. This note was not produced the first day. By the prisoner's evidence I was able to trace it. The note I found in Juggodoolub's house, consequent on a search made from a statement by the prisoner.

By Mr. Turton.—There were two cases before me, separate from each other, one against Smith, and another case on Dacca papers against Juggodoolub. No other note of hand was produced but the one I have spoken of.

The Clerk of the Crown here read the deposition of the prisoner, as taken before the Chief Magistrate, the principal points of which were, that the (Smith) got the papers for 10,000 rupees, from Juggodoolub Sing, with whom prisoner was about to enter into a partnership as a broker as also in an Indigo concern. That prisoner had dealings several years ago with Juggodoolub. A letter was also read, addressed by the prisoner to John Lawrie, together with Post office records and other documents and papers connected with the case.

Mr. Morton then rose in defence of the prisoner, and submitted that his client was entitled to an acquittal on two grounds. First, the indictment charged him with receiving "valuable property." Now the Counsel contended that from the whole of the evidence it appeared that the notes up to the latest period they have been traced in the possession of his client, were totally valueless, it having been stated in precise terms that were they offered to the Treasury, payment would have been refused. Besides, they were proved to be forged, and this was another reason why they are valueless, and articles that were not negotiable. The next ground was that it had not been proved that the guilty receiving of the notes took place within the jurisdiction of the Court, and that his client was born within the jurisdiction. On these grounds it was urged that his client was entitled to an acquittal.

Mr. Turton, in reply, urged, that the notes were valuable property; that their being stolen was felony, and the receiving of such valuable stolen property also constituted a crime. If connected with the guilty knowledge of such property having been stolen or come by illegally. If stealing a note be felony, then to pass that note is a crime. In regard to the objection about jurisdiction Mr Turton replied, that it had been deposed that Juggodoolub Sing lived in Burabazar, where the receiving of the notes happened, and that the box with the note was in Comatollah, both of which places he presumed were situated in Calcutta.

Mr Clarke remarked, on the subject, that the notes were not valueless, for they were proved to be original and genuine, and that the Treasury held themselves responsible for them, in as much as they took proper security before granting duplicates for them.

Some further discussion of these points took place, when the objection of jurisdiction was waived, and the other objection reserved.

The following witnesses were then called for the defence.

John James McCann, by Mr. Turton.—I know the house of Juggodoolubbing, where I went on a recent occasion, and found this box, which I have since had in my possession. The key of the box I got from Juggodoolub. I opened the box and found the document you show me in the box.

By Mr. Turton.—I had some conversation with Smith on that day, which was general. I found a paper in Juggodoolub's for 12 000 Rs. I went there with a warrant to search for Company's paper on the statement of Smith, who said there were two other papers. Smith lived in Seramroze. He is a man of no property, except what he realised by the Company's papers. I have known him from the time he arrived in the country. The 12,000 Rs. paper was a stolen note—stolen, as I understood, from the Police. I do not know how Smith was to pay 18,000 Rs. with 5,000 Rs. interest, as mentioned in his letter to Mr. Lawrie.

Gopal Chunder Ghose, by Mr. Morton.—I know Juggodoolub Sing, who is my uncle. I live in Burabazar. This box belongs to my uncle. I know of these two Company's papers, which I saw in Juggodoolub's possession about two years ago. I know James Smith, to whom, I heard, those papers had been given by Juggodoolub. From my uncle I heard Smith gave the notes. He gave me none but that my uncle told me so. He is not in the habits of taking banyan security.

By Mr. Turton.—My uncle and the prisoner were great friends, and Smith would always go to my uncle's and remain there all day, and to late hours at night. My uncle would sometimes give a few rupees to assist the prisoner. My uncle is a man in middling circumstance, and Smith was in a poor condition.

By Mr. Morton.—Juggodoolub did not carry on business—he served Cantor and Co. and had been the bookkeeper of Raja Koomar Kisonath. My uncle was in the habits of advancing money to people. I heard that my uncle and Smith were about to enter into business.

Mr. Morton then addressed the jury, commenting on the evidence in general, and on that of Mr. Lawrie in particular.

The Advocate-General in a lengthy speech, made a rejoinder.

The Court then charged the jury at very great length, dwelling lucidly on every point, after which, the Jury retired, and in half an hour returned a verdict of "Not Guilty."

James Smith bowed, and the Court expressed its approbation of the propriety of the verdict.

The Court broke up at $\frac{1}{2}$ past 7 o'clock.

[Harkara, Feb. 27.]

Instead of Sir John Peter Grant, who presided from the commencement of the present Sessions, the Chief Justice was on the bench this morning.

FEBRUARY, 28 1840.

A native named Kiso Kyal, was indicted and tried for stealing four Company's rupees from Ram-mondier Naug. He was convicted of the offence, and sentenced to four month's hard labour in the House of Correction.

The Court adjourned until Tuesday next, the 31 March, when the remaining criminal cases will be taken.—Harkara, Feb. 28.

MISCELLANEA.

Calcutta:

JAMES YOUNG, Esq.—Several of the most respectable members of the native community, have addressed a highly flattering letter to Jas. Young, Esq., on the event of his retiring from this country.

DISORDERLY CHARACTERS.—We are glad to state, that, during the month, one of the leaders of a well known set of rioters, commonly designated the Waterford gang, and two of his followers, have been taught a salutary lesson of forbearance, by a man of color, in Cyroo Mater's Lane, by which we hope that, for the sake of all parties, they will profit. The lesson, we understand, was ineffectual, by means of certain cerulean decorations being fixed under the optics of the towers; the dyeing of their breast vestments, by a generous supply of incarnadine from their nasal organs; and the infliction of sundry pedal applications to the region vulgarly designated the "seat of honour." The lesson was so strongly impressed on the so-called gentlemen, that it is not likely that they will be so oblivious as to forget it very quickly. On another occasion, a few days previously, two more of the ad idem honorable gang, were very thankful to the above-mentioned man of color, for his having permitted them to decamp from the same house, with merely a few fundamental remembrances from his brawny foot.

PACKETS FOR THE STRAITS.—A line of packets has been established, to run between Calcutta and Singapore, taking departure every twenty days. The vessels provided for this purpose, consisting of three schooners, are in every way calculated for their object, and should the undertaking prosper, it is proposed to add an additional one, so that the periods of sailing may take place at intervals of fifteen days only.

DUM-DUM REVIEW.—The annual inspection of the Artillery at Dum Dum, took place on the 31st ultimo, under General Burgh, commanding the Presidency Division, when, as is usual on these occasions there was a great assemblage of people and a great expenditure of gunpowder. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief attended the Review, which commenced about 4 p. m., and he was highly delighted with all he saw, especially the field battery bullocks. After the usual salutes upon the appearance of his Excellency on the ground, the regiment was inspected by a miscellaneous cortege of commanding and naval officers, civilians and native gentlemen, who rode past the front of the ranks, apparently very much to their personal satisfaction. The inspection being over, the lines were broken into column and marched past in review order—the acting infantry leading, then the troop and then the field-bullock batteries. After passing the general's flag the acting-infantry were marched into the siege battery, whilst the troop and the field batteries commenced exercising, and went through a variety of formations in a most creditable manner, the horse artillery doing the thing in great style, and the bullock-batteries putting forth a fine example of the attainment of excellence "under difficulties." The brigading being over, curtain practice was commenced from the troop and field batteries, and in a little time the canvas was drilled through, like a curtain by a shower of grape from half-batteries. After this there was further practice against the said curtain, with round shot and shrapnel and then the field battery guns were paraded, and practice from the siege battery commenced. Heavy guns, heavy howitzers, mortars of sorts, and light guns and howitzers, began to play against divers curtains and flag staffs, showing at every round the precision with which fuses were cut, charge determined, and guns laid by the scientific officers. A little after sunset, the mine, which is always the great lion of the Dum-Dum Review, was exploded by a shell from the 10 inch mortar, and the tomahawk was brought to a close.

CHITTAGONG SCHOOL.—"The School at Chittagong, is not going to be abolished as was stated. At present there are 150 boys, paying eight annas a month each, and only fifty have deserted the school from inability to pay their schooling."

A PROPOSED HOSPITAL.—"On the 7th of January, the Commissioners of Chittagong, Mr. Harvey, convened a meeting at which were present most of the public functionaries, European and Native, at the station; when the following gentlemen were chosen to form a committee, viz. Messrs. Harvey, Raikes, Scence, H. Raulph, Messrs. Hamedulla, Moulvies Mameeruddin, Baboo Rajkissen Roy, Bahadoor, and Baboo Kalkishan Roy, Bahadoor. A petition has since been preferred to Government, to the effect that a subscription had been set on foot for the purpose of establishing a Dispensary and Hospital at Chittagong, but that the object of the petitioners can not be accomplished without the aid of Government, and praying that it would be pleased to forward the views of the petitioners. A piece of ground in the vicinity of the Judge's office, for the purpose of erecting a building for the institution, has been fixed upon; and they are going to pay Rs. 1,500 for it."

NEW ROAD FROM RAMPOO TO RANGOON.—"It is said, that orders have been sent by Government to the public functionaries to report on the feasibility of establishing a road from Rampoo to Rangoon for the passage of the military."

A DEPUTY COLLECTOR SUSPENDED.—A Deputy Collector of Chittagong, has been suspended under the following circumstances:—There is a place called Lakneek, inhabited by Mugs, and the functionary in question, had been ordered to measure lands belonging to them; and what he had made 400 dhooas, or 7,600 biggahs, was found out, upon a re-measurement by Mr. Harvey and Lieut. Siddons, to be 1,000 dhooas, or 19,000 biggahs.

IRON STEAMERS.—Two iron steamers for river service have lately been sent out by the Hon'ble Court of Directors, together with two flats, and they will be about in about four months. Four more steamers, with their accompanying flats, are on the way out, so that in another twelve months there will be almost as many boats plying on the Ganges as the present wants of the community, and the Government can render necessary.

BURGLARIES, &c.—The police have become so extremely vigilant, that in Calcutta burglaries and thefts are daily committed with impunity; and in the Motalal gang robberies, sometimes attended with murder, and almost always with torture, are of common occurrence. Very many cases have been noticed during the week.

MONSTROUS BIRTH.—On the 31st instant, a woman of the Cowra caste, residing at Kidderpore, was delivered of a still female infant, with two heads, both being complete and separate, and with their faces looking one way; and what was more astonishing the body and one face were tolerably fair, and the other face was black, with hair somewhat resembling a negro's. It has been forwarded to W. B. O'Shaughnessy Esq., by Lieut. Scott Churn Ghose, in order to be preserved and placed in the museum.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—The brother of the Captain of the S. George, which vessel is anchored in the middle of the stream, met with a very grave one on the 31st instant. About noon, a dingy came alongside to take the youth on shore, which was about the time that the flood also set in, and as he went down the side, and made a jump into the boat, it unluckily moved off, and he fell into the water between the vessel and the dingy. Being a swimmer, he was seen to make several strokes with his hands to keep himself afloat, and the dingy cast off to his rescue, but overwhelmed by the violence of the stream, his efforts soon ceased, and he sank. The unfortunate youth was not above fifteen or sixteen years old.

LAUNCH.—The H. C. revenue cruiser Osprey, was on the 7th instant launched from the yard of Messrs. Beanchamp and Co., Howrah. She left the stocks in beautiful style, and was shortly afterwards secured to one of the buoys, where she will remain till masted. The members of the Marine Department present upon the occasion pronounced her one of the most elegant models of her class that they had ever seen. Her moulding certainly does infinite credit to the taste of Mr. Simpson, who supplied her lines, and superintended her building. She is intended to cruise on the African Coast, and her armament of two long one pounders will doubtless prove an efficient and valuable acquisition to the establishment under the orders of Capt. Bogie, Commissioner of the province.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL H. LLOYD.—Lieutenant-Colonel Lloyd, 3d Regiment Native Infantry, has been appointed to the Command of the Volunteer-Regiment now raising for service to the Eastward.

CATTLE SHOW.—The cattle show at the Town Hall on the 1st instant, was very fair. The following prizes were awarded.

Imported Neat Cattle.—Nos. 1 and 2.—For the best and second best imported bulls of the year 1839, not less than two years old, there were no competitors.

Produce.—No. 3.—For the best produce of imported cattle, a premium of 250 rupees, and the gold medal, were awarded to Mr. Hufnagle.

No. 4.—For the second best produce of imported cattle, a premium of 200 rupees and the silver medal, were awarded to Messrs. Cook and Co.

No. 5.—For the best bull calf of any denomination calved in 1839, the prize was withheld.

No. 6.—For the best cow calf of any denomination calved in 1839, the silver medal was awarded to Mr. Hufnagle.

SHEEP.—No. 1.—For the best imported woolled merino ram of the year 1839, not less than 2 years old, a premium of 200 rupees and the gold medal, were awarded to Mr. W. F. Gibbon.

No. 2.—For the second best imported wool merino ram of the year 1839, and less than 2 years old, a premium of 150 rupees, and the silver medal, were awarded to Mr. Storm.

No. 3.—For the best pen of merino ewes to the number of six, no prize was awarded.

No. 4.—For the best thorough bred merino ram lamb, lambed in 1839, the gold medal was awarded to Mr. Gibbon.

No. 5.—For the best thorough-bred merino ewe lamb, lambed in 1839, the silver medal was also awarded to Mr. Gibbon.

No. 6.—For the best lamb, either ram or ewe, cross of a merino ram and an indigenous ewe, lambed in 1839, the small silver medal was also awarded to Mr. Gibbon.

NOTE.—The successful competitors of sheep, are requested to send in the success of the prize sheep when shorn, to the Secretary of the Agricultural Society.

ATLAS INSURANCE OFFICE.—At the eighth half yearly meeting of the proprietors of the Atlas Insurance Office, held on Tuesday, at the office of the Secretaries, the following papers were submitted before the meeting, viz.

The statement of the affairs of the Office for the past six months, ending 31st December 1839, together with an abstract of assets, &c.

A list of Government Securities, together with the Company's paper, amounting to Co.'s Rupees 2,47,660

The following resolutions were proposed and carried unanimously.

1. That the statement submitted be approved of, and passed.

2. That the thanks of the meeting be given to the Directors for their past services, and that they be requested to act for the ensuing year.

THE BRIGAND.—It is said, that the crew of the Brigand, belonging to this port, had murdered the Captain and second officer, soon after leaving Singapore. The chief mate, however, had succeeded in carrying the vessel back to Singapore, with the aid of a few of the crew.

INDIGO PROSPECTS.—In the Kishnughur district, some fine refreshing showers of rain have fallen, which have given a promising appearance to the October crop. Partial showers likewise fell in Dacca and Jessore a few days since, and sowings to a small extent commenced accordingly.

THE ABKAARE.—Government intend to remodel the Abkary regulation, and to adopt a far better plan than the present, the introduction of which, it is hoped, will materially check the illicit manufacture and sale of spirituous liquors, tawry, punchwey, and narcotic drugs of different kinds. Mr. Samuel Palmer, has been nominated to be Commissioner of the new Abkaree, and has been succeeded in the Board of Customs Salt and Opium, by Mr. Henry Torrens, who declined the Abkaree Commissioner ship.

MILITARY COURT OF ENQUIRY.—A court of enquiry is now sitting in the fort, to investigate into the conduct of some officers, who are said to have misconducted themselves on board the Edinburgh, on their passage out to India.

THE FANCY FAIR.—The fancy fair held on the 14th instant, was a total failure. Five stalls, scantily supplied with ill-chosen articles, were laid out, and there were but a very few purchasers.

FIRES.—A large number of conflagrations has occurred during this month, only one of which, that took place at Kilderpore, has destroyed property to a large amount, nine hundred huts having been consumed by it. Only one fire has been unaccompanied with loss of life; the victim was a poor little girl. The aggregate of the mischief done by these fires is great; but the amount of damage done by each conflagration, has been, comparatively speaking, trifling. It is worthy of remark, that fires are prevalent in the suburbs and native parts of the town only—the tiling of the huts in the town of Calcutta, having put a check to them.

ACCIDENT.—Several accidents have occurred during the week, by which several individuals have lost their lives. In one instance, four persons were blown up, in Amratollah, by the explosion of a quantity of gunpowder, in the shop of an unlicensed fire-work maker. This man, it appears, had carried on his illegal trade under the very noses of the police myrmidon, without the slightest remonstrance even from any body but a poor widow, who resided under the same roof with him, until the catastrophe above mentioned, put an end to his career, and caused the death also of three other individuals.

DARJELING.—Reports have been received of the progress made on the road, bazar, and various works at Darjeling, during the past month, and they are of a most satisfactory character. The following is an extract from a letter by Dr. Pearson, to the Secretary's address, dated the 1st instant.—"I have been to the hotel this morning; the two middle large rooms, and the raised end to the north are tiled; mats are laid on for the tiles of that wing also, and the tiling will be begun to-day. All the rafters of both wings are up; most of the walls of the south wing, are ready for leaping, and part of them leaped. One large room and several bed-rooms are plank'd. The godowns are all ready, so far as the roofs are concerned, except I think the kitchen, and tiles enough to complete the north wing are now on the ground. In short, I think, that there is every reason to be satisfied with the progress made since I last wrote you about it."

Another letter describes the weather as having been "exquisite" during the first four weeks of January, the last three days overcast and cloudy, and on the 31st rain, hail and sleet. On the 1st, the sky had cleared again.

Samples of bricks and tiles baked at Darjeling, have been received during the week. They are full of minute pebbles, but appear, nevertheless, to be very strong and well baked.

THE BACHELORS' BALL.—The ball given by the bachelors on the 13th instant, was crowded even more than Town Hall fair generally are; but there were very few fancy characters, and of those but a very small proportion was well sustained. There were no groups.

SWINDLING, FORGERIES AND HOUSERIES.—Numerous reports of forgeries, robberies and swindling have been published during the month. None of these, however, are of a remarkable nature; but as the pensive public may become sufferers, unless warned respecting the forgeries, we hereby intimate to them, that clumsily forged bank notes are at present in circulation in Calcutta and its vicinity, and they should, therefore, be cautious in receiving them from strangers, or without carefully examining them.

THE DUKE OF BUCKLEIGH.—That fine ship, the Duke of Buckleigh, has been totally wrecked on Point Palmiras reef. She had recruits on board and went on shore with all her canvas set, sailing at a rapid rate, with the wind on her quarter. Her officers, passengers and crew, have all been brought on to Calcutta on the Miranda, with the exception of one recruit, who was drowned. The vessel was laden with coals and specie. The wreck of the Duke of Buckleigh, was, on the 21st of February, put up to auction at the Exchange, and sold for six hundred rupees. The sale was protested, and the wreck was re-sold on the 27th instant, for one hundred rupees.

GOVERNMENT LIBERALITY.—Government have granted Mrs. Wilson permission to send articles for fancy fairs, free of cost, on their river steamers.

NATIVE LIBERALITY.—Baboo Muttylell Seal, has communicated, through Dr. O'Shaughnessy, to the Government, his intention of expending a lac of rupees on the immediate establishment of an asylum for pregnant Hindoo widows, together with a Foundling Hospital and School. The arrangement and medical charge of the Institution the Baboo has requested Dr. O'Shaughnessy undertake. This and the gift of Dwarkanauth Tagore to the District Charitable Society, are the best refuta-tions of such libels as those uttered by the Bishop of London.

BRUTAL ASSAULT.—A native woman residing at Callyghat, was recently attacked by a party of natives, headed by one of the Muldars, and forcibly conveyed to a godown, where she experienced the most barbarous and revolting treatment at the hands of the Muldar and his people. The Darogah took cognizance of the matter, and reported the circumstance to the Magistrate, forwarding the deposition of the female, and witnesses in support of the charge preferred against the defendant. On the former being called into Court, she alleged, that being intoxicated at the time, she is not aware what she said in her deposition at the thannah; but that she had no charge to prefer against the Muldar, who had never ill-treated her. As the statement before the Darogah was made upon oath, and she had clearly charged the party with the offence, and adduced witnesses in support of the charge, she was made over to the Nasir, and will be dealt with according to law for perjuring herself, and the case is still going on against the Muldar, who is a notorious character, and is said to have given his victim a handsome douceur to compromise matters.

SERIOUS AFFRAY AT GURRIA.—Conductor Lithgow, in charge of a fleet of Military boats, proceeding to the Upper Provinces, while passing through the Nullah at Gurria, was severely struck, while endeavouring to quell a disturbance that took place between his people and the crew of some mahajan boats, lying athwart the Nullah at that place. It is reported, that on the commencement of the affray, the Conservative establishment of Folly's Nullah, were being molested and receiving their monthly pay at the Canal Office, so that they could render the Conductor no assistance, and it was a long time before he could get the Police to aid him; and when a herkundautz did come, he was almost worse than useless, being quite careless whether the affray was quelled or not. This fellow subsequently ran away from the scene of action. Mr. Lithgow applied to Captain Boileau, Superintendent of Canals, who is in charge of the Police at Gurria, on the subject, regretting his inability to send the wounded people to enable Captain B. to have the case investigated, and though he had himself been severely struck, he had it not in his power to delay the fleet. Captain Boileau forwarded copy of Mr. Lithgow's letter to the magistrate, stating that the authors of the disturbance were Sarroop Sikdar and Moheschunder Roy, of Manickgunge or Gurria, and respectfully suggesting the propriety of binding over these persons in some heavy sum, to keep the peace towards all men in general, and towards the Canal Conservative in particular, whose duty it is to compel them to have a free passage for boats.

CRICKET.—The Cricket match—"Calcutta against Barrackpore and Dum Dum,"—came off on Saturday, and terminated, after a hard struggle, in favour of Calcutta. There was some excellent play on both sides, and great interest was excited among the numerous lookers-on. The Calcutta Club went in first, and had their wickets lowered in about an hour for 15 runs! So effective was the bowling of Mr. Mills and of Mr. Wood, junior, that the best bats of Calcutta were not able to stand up many minutes, and scarcely one scored half-a-dozen. This was an auspicious commencement for the "allies," and when their turn came they took the bat in high spirits. One of the best Calcutta bowlers (Mr. W. Frith) was unable to play from the effects of an accident which he had met with on the preceding day; but his place was well supplied by Mr. Pierce Taylor. The bowling of Mr. Hayley too, was in his best style. Three clipping balls lowered three wickets in a single "over." About two o'clock the "united" wickets, were all down; their score, however, being 107, and therefore, more than double that of their opponents.

The return-match between the Calcutta Club and eleven officers from Dum-Dum and Barrackpore, was played at Calcutta on the 15th instant, and terminated in favor of the "allies," after one of the most interesting games—perhaps the most interesting game—that has been played throughout the season.

CHESS CLUB.—A meeting of gentlemen took place on the 7th instant, and decided on establishing a Chess Club. Apartments have been taken for the use of the Club at No. 8, Old Post Office Street, and the meetings are to commence next week. About 25 members have already joined. The following are the rules of the Club.

1. The Club shall be called "The Calcutta Chess Club."

2. The Club shall be open, excepting on Sundays at 10 A. M.

3. No other game than Chess shall be played in the Club Room.

4. The game shall be played according to the laws of the Westminster Chess Club, as appended to these rules.

5. The Members shall be admitted by Ballot, and on two Black Balls shall be excluded.

6. Any person applying to be admitted a Member, must be proposed by two Members in a letter addressed to the Secretary, and the application is to be hung up on the walls of the Club Room for 8 days, before a Ballot shall take place.

7. No Ballot shall take place unless 5 Members of the Club be present.

8. Every Member shall pay one R G. M. or rupees 16, on his admission as entrance-money, and 1 G. M. or Rupees 16 of Annual Subscription, in advance.

9. The accounts of the Treasurer, and a report of the Council thereon, shall be laid on the table in the Club Room on the 1st of January in each year.

10. There shall be one stated General Meeting of the Club in each year, to be held in the Club Room on the 21 Monday of January at 4 P. M., when the accounts of the Treasurer and the report thereon shall be approved, if found correct.

11. The business of the Club shall be managed by a Council or Standing Committee of five Members, 3 to be a quorum; such Standing Committee to consist of a President and four Members of Council, who shall all be elected annually at the General Meeting in January.

12. It shall be in the power of the Council to call an Extraordinary Meeting of the Club at any time, provided 14 day's notice be given to the Members.

13. The Rules shall not be altered nor added to, except at Meetings of the Club called for that purpose, and where there is a majority of two-thirds of those present in favour of the alterations.

The following are the office-bearers chosen for this year.

President.—C. B. Greenlaw, Esq.

Council.—Dwarkanath Tagore, Esq.; Thos. Chas. Motion, Esq.; Prince Golaam Mahomed, and Henry Malcolm Low, Esq.

Treasurer.—Wm. J. Judge, Esq.

Secretary.—H. C. Maiklejohn, Esq.

CHANGES IN THE GOVERNMENT.—Mr. Robertson took charge of his office, as Lieutenant Governor of the North-Western Provinces, at Allahabad, on the 4th instant; and Mr. Henry Theby Prinsap was on the 11th instant, sworn in as Third Ordinary Member of Council, under the usual salary from the Empress of Fort William.

MR. BRETT—LOST HIS NOSE.—An application was made by Mr. Brett, Surgeon to the Governor-General's Body Guard, to Mr. Secretary Maddock, when the Governor-General's Camp was at Gwalior, for a khillat on a rather novel grounds. It appears that three women, owing to the rigour of the laws, had lost the cartilages of their noses by amputation. These women, finding the absence of their nasal organs a very perplexing circumstance, as well as rendering them inconveniently ugly, happened to hear of the high reputation of Mr. Brett, and applied to the Surgeon, not exactly for the restoration of the identical noses lost, but for three new, spick and span noses. The women rosd from Mr. Brett's hand with nasal promises again on their delighted faces; and the learned Surgeon applied to Mr. Secretary Maddock, for a khillat from the Gwalior durbar, as a reward for his services.

A PROPOSED NUNNERY.—It has been creditably stated, that the active Roman Catholic body of priesthood of this city, have commissioned out for half a dozen qualified "sisters," for the conduct and management of a nunnery, which they propose to establish in Calcutta.

ALMANACS.—The eclipse of the moon on the 17th instant, has served to prove the claims of the respective Calcutta Almanacs to public patronage, on the score of accuracy. All the Almanacs, except Messrs. Samuel Smith and Co.'s, stated, that a total eclipse would have taken place, which statement was proved to be utterly wrong, by the occurrence of a partial eclipse only, which Messrs. S. Smith and C.'s Almanac mentioned would occur. With respect to the tides, the Almanacs are all out—Messrs. S. Smith and C.'s by a few minutes, the others by an hour or so.

AN ECCENTRIC PROLOG.—One of the constables of the police, was called out on duty for the apprehension of a party of gentlemen who had commenced a very unaccountable proceeding on a large tree, near the tank, in the vicinity of the Great Jail. The party consisted of three Europeans, armed with axes, who had repaired to the spot in a buggy, and having arrived, began to cut down huge branches from the tree in question, which having done, they proceeded to exercise their skill on the trunk of the tree. Before the constable arrived, however, they were off, leaving the result of their nocturnal labour behind. From the marks on the tree, it is evident, they must have been at it at least for a couple of hours. The party made a second attempt to cut down the tree, and being caught in the act, were bound down to behave better.

ANOTHER NOT DISSENT RAJAH.—An Up-country Hindoo, rather flashily attired in silk, with gloves and stock ings on, the last of which articles, afforded demonstration of having been service, was introduced to the Chief Magistrate, by a perwannah from the Magistrate of Beacres, and the contents of the perwannah were to the effect, that the individual had advanced a claim to the Gwalior Raj, giving himself out as Maharubnarain Bahadur, son of the well-known Futtah Bahadur Sing. This son-descent Mahatab seems to know a number of influential natives in Calcutta, and declares, that in a short time it will be in his power to show to the world, that he is the veritable claimant of the Gwalior raj.

CUTTACK.—A letter from our correspondent at Cuttack states, that owing to great dearth, amounting to a famine almost, a great number of deaths are taking place in and about that place. The cholera, the small-pox, and the fever, are all at work, aiding famine in the work of slaughter.

HIGHWAY ROBBERIES FROM THE EFFECTS OF DEATH.—By the letter of a friend, it appears, that in consequence of great dearth of articles of food prevailing almost all over Orissa, the poorer orders have been reduced to the necessity of committing robberies on the highways. When they attacked a traveller, if their demand was not easily and instantly met with, he was sure to be put to death. This is the state of things prevailing from Ballasore to Pooree, and more so in roads not much frequented.

MR. CLINT'S LECTURE.—Mr. Clint, of the Hindu College, gave a lecture to the members of the Mechanics' Institute, on the 17th instant, but it was a poor affair, and the lecturer did not succeed in performing his experiment, in consequence of his apparatus becoming deranged.

PIRACY AND MURDER.—On the 2nd of January last, the corpse of a man was observed floating on the surface of the river Koomar, to the west of the village Chamardee, zilla Furzedpoor. Hence the circumstance, exciting the suspicion of the inhabitants of the neighbourhood, they sent for the darogah of Mucksoodpoor thannah, who had the corpse taken out of the water. During the investigation, a boat was discovered sunk under water, which being also taken out, the corpses of two other men were found in it, with their hands and feet tied, and a hole observed in the bottom of the boat, which had no article of property in it. The conclusion which the facts have led to, is, that these were the bodies of some dealers who were proceeding to the next fair, when they were robbed and put to death by pirates.

A great many dead bodies, apparently of Mussulmans, have also been seen floating on the Hooghly, which, it is apprehended, met with a violent death, as Mahomedans do not commit their dead to the stream.

UNCOVENANTED SERVICE PENSION FUND.—An official extract from a despatch recently received from the Court of Directors to the Local Government, which has been published during the week, shows that the question of pensionary aid to the widows and families of Uncovenanted Servants, still remains in an undefined, and on that account an unsatisfactory state. This despatch, however, although not a direct support, gives practical assistance to the Uncovenanted Servants' Family Pension Fund, in so far, that it is hardly to be supposed that there will now be any married Uncovenanted Servant, who will not, by subscribing to the Fund, leave their families on "conditional charity." The Managers of the Uncovenanted Service Family Pension Fund, have appealed to the Court for pecuniary contributions, but no decision has been yet passed upon this appeal.

SECRET ENLISTMENT.—It is said, that a number of fakerees are going about the country, endeavouring to induce people to enlist in strong numbers, in order to go to Mecca. They say it is prophesied in the Shastras, that the time is at hand when a new incarnation of the Hindoo Divinity is to appear at Mecca, for the purpose of overturning the Mahomedan religion, and of establishing Hindooism in its place; but that before this prophecy can be fulfilled, the holy water of the Ganges must be sprinkled over the shrine of the prophet in that city. The fakerees, therefore, call upon all true Hindoos, to bind themselves by a solemn oath, to assemble at such places as may be fixed upon, and to accompany the said holy water to Mecca. All kinds of heavenly rewards are held out to such as enroll their names, and provision is to be made for their families in their absence. Persons enlisting were to meet at a place near Revelgunge, in the Sarun Zillah, and thence march to Ajoodah in Oude, where future orders would be awaiting them, and where they were to receive an advance of six months' pay at the same rate as the Company pay their sepoys.

DWARAKANATH'S BALL.—A splendid ball and supper, accompanied with a pyrotechnic exhibition, took place on the night of the 19th instant, at the villa of Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore, in Belgachia. The party was both highly respectable and numerous, being composed of the elite of the land. The carriages, we are told, began to pour in about half past eight, and amounted to nearly three hundred by midnight. The ball commenced about 10 o'clock, and an hour after the fire works were let off, which proved the most brilliant and beautiful ever witnessed. After this exhibition, which lasted about an hour, the ball was resumed. Dancing was kept up with great spirit, till about half past two o'clock, when the guests retired, highly satisfied with the entertainment. There were a great many native gentlemen present on the occasion, many of whom remained to witness the exhibition of the fire-works only, and then returned, no doubt to escape the steam of the supper table.

MRS. WIFFIN AND HER ORPHANS.—Four thousand rupees have been subscribed for the relief of the unfortunate widow and orphans of the late Captain Wiffin, who was murdered on board of the Virginia. This sum, however, will not answer for the support of the bereaved parties, beyond a brief period, and we trust our fellow-citizens will come forward more liberally to aid these unfortunates. A rupee from each of the East Indians, Natives and Europeans, who can afford to throw away twenty times that sum monthly in play going and gewgaws, will amply suffice for the support of the poor widow and her fatherless children.

STEAM MEETING.—At a Steam Meeting, held at the Town Hall on the 11th instant, the following resolutions were passed:

1 That the report be received and that Messrs. Christopher Webb Smith and Alexander Beattie, be elected Members of the Committee in the room of Messrs Harding and Young, returned to England.

2 That this Meeting would earnestly recommend to the Subscribers to the New Bengal Steam Fund, and to parties who have paid their first instalment, to permit their subscriptions to remain in the Union Bank, until the arrival of the Mail, which will leave England in June next, agreeably to the report of Mr. Parker's amendment at the Meeting held on the 20th ultimo.

THE TURF.—The Turf suffered a severe loss by the death of the late Mr. Cockerell, whose Stud was sold some weeks ago. Since then it has been announced that Mr G W Bacon's would be put up for sale, that gentleman being about to quit the Turf. A similar cause, perhaps, induces the sale of Mr. Gray's valuable Stud, which will be disposed of by Messrs. Moore, Hickey and Co., on the 25th instant, when all sorts of purchasers may suit themselves—the horses being declared suitable for the turf, parade, or harness!

STOLEN PROPERTY RECOVERED.—A brace of pistols, of which Captain Humphreys, of the Artillery, had been robbed some time ago, were recently found in the possession of a bearer. A chowkedar got possession of the pistols, but the bearer managed to effect his escape.

SIR J. G. BREMER.—Commodore Sir J G Bremer, arrived at Calcutta on the 20th instant. He came in H M S Wallace.

ICE.—The Dalmatia has brought the expected cargo of ice, &c. from Boston. It consists of 447 tons of ice, 75 barrels of apples, and 5 barrels of pears. She left Boston at the close of October, and has accomplished the passage in less than four months, which may be considered a pretty fair passage. Another cargo had been shipped by Mr. Tudor in the Caroline Augusta, which vessel left Boston about the same time as the Dalmatia, and may, therefore, be expected here very shortly. She will bring about the same quantity of ice, 50 half casks of grapes, and 25 barrels of apples.

THE REPRESENTATIVES OF RYAJA JEE V. THE SONS OF RAJAH SREENARAYN ROY.—The application of Mr. C. Reed, to be allowed to take the account of the Waisat due from the estate of Rajah Sreenarayn Roy in the above suit, was to have been heard by appointment on the 24th; but the parties not being in attendance at the sitting of the Court, another case was called on.

When this application was previously made, and in part heard before Mr. Tucker, an objection was taken by Mr. Baillie, that the whole of the Waisat had been already taken; and that the decree of 1812 was fully executed. Mr. Reed and his advisers expressed great surprise at this statement; and doubted, whether Mr. Baillie had any authority to urge such an objection, as it was clearly prejudicial to the interests of his own client Rajah Beeje Govind Sing; who was now actually suing for Waisat, alleged to be due from Sreenarayn's estate! The learned Judge directed the Sheristadar to inquire and report what proceedings had taken place under the decree of 1812. It has been chiefly the preparation of his Report, which has caused the delay in the hearing; of Mr. Reed's application.

On the 25th, the Report of the Sheristadar was read, and occupied about two hours.

The native Mooktarkars of Rajah Beeje Govind Sing, protested against the statement of Mr. Baillie, that no Waisat was due, and declared, that his own client would repudiate the assertion! One of the mooktarkars had been sent down to Calcutta expressly to contradict the statement.

Mr. Tucker said, that it would be advisable for the Mooktarkars to reduce their statements to writing, that there might be no mistake upon the subject hereafter.

Two days were allowed for this, and the hearing of the application was fixed for Thursday the 27th instant.

THE RUMA WOUNDING CASE.—Shahazadeh Warriswood-deyn, one of the Mysore Princes, was tried, on the 23rd of February, at the Twenty-four Pergunnah's Sessions, for with a bill-hook, cutting and maiming a poor passer, or vendor of date and palmira juice.

The charge being fully established, the intemperate descendant of Tipoo Sultan was sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment in the district jail.

GORACHAND'S MELA.—Few of our readers are aware that a great fair, called "Gorachand's Mela," is annually held at Pyghautee, a place some twenty or twenty-five miles from Calcutta. It is a Moulsiep fair, in honor of one of their saints, called "Gorachand," who, from his name, which is a Hindoo one, was, there is no doubt, a native of Bengal, if not a convert. The last fair is just over. It commenced on the 22nd of February and ended yesterday. Thousands of people resort to it from various distances; many for the sake of amusement only, and some out of veneration for the saint, and make offerings of fowls, goats, &c., at the shrine. The number of people that had assembled this year, amounted during the first two days, to sixty or seventy thousand. The goods that were brought for sale were to the amount of a lack of rupees at least. Pyghautee lies within the Zemindary of Moonshoe Amgar, and the fair is question is a great source of profit to the Zemindar.

M. DUPUIS' SALE.—Mr. Dupuis' Juvenile Hall took place at the Trades' Hall on the 26th of February. It was crowdedly attended, and went off very well. Four or five individuals, who have obtained for themselves an unenviable notoriety, managed to get into the Hall, but, to their credit be it spoken, behaved like gentlemen. We hope they will not retrograde in the road to reformation.

THE STUPENDOUS COLLAPSE.—It is said, that while the Governor-General was at the Barrack College on the 22d of February, a petition was presented to his Lordship by the students of that institution, praying that His Lordship would be pleased to order the stipends (5 rupees and 8 rupees, each) formerly allowed to them, to be restored on its original footing. The petitioners have not as yet received an answer, but it is hoped the prayer will be granted.

The Probationer says, that since the abolition of the stipends to the students of the college, a great falling off has taken place in their number; the generosity of the students being children of indigent Bramins, residing in the country, who could ill afford to defray the expenses attending upon the former lodging in town, and unless the stipend system be restored, the institution will soon fall to the ground.

THE GOVERNOR GENERAL.—The Governor-General did not arrive at Calcutta by water, as was expected. The state carriage was taken to Barrackpore for his Lordship, in which he came down at 5 o'clock, on the 11th instant. A large number of gentlemen of the Civil and Military Services, headed by His Excellency Sir Jasper Nicolls, and the Honourable W. W. Bird, received His Lordship at the Government House, under the usual salute from the ramparts of Fort William. His Lordship held a levee at Government House, on the 12th instant, which was crowded by European and native gentlemen.

PROPOSAL TO BUILD A THEATRE.—The success which has attended the performances at the Sans Souci, having established that a well regulated theatre will receive ample support from the Calcutta community, Mrs. Leach, encouraged by the liberal patronage bestowed upon her humble efforts, now ventures to appeal to the public for their aid in the construction of a permanent edifice, sufficiently large for the production of good plays with proper effect, and for the accommodation of the numbers who regard a theatre as a rational place of entertainment. It is computed, that the sum of twenty-five to thirty thousand rupees, will suffice for the erection of a building of the requisite dimensions, and for the necessary furniture and decorations; and it is believed, that such a sum will be readily subscribed by the public, provided that they are not called upon to share in the responsibilities and anxieties of proprietorship.

Should this supposition prove to be well founded, and this appeal be answered by subscriptions, Mrs. Leach engages, on her own part, to contribute her proportion of the profits derived from the performances at the Sans Souci, since its establishment in August last, together with the properties, scenery, wardrobe, chandeliers, &c.; &c., which now pertain to that theatre. The contribution of the public she proposes to place in the UNION BANK, until a sufficiency shall have been subscribed to authorize the commencement of the edifice; and when the Theatre shall have been finished, Mrs. Leach will undertake, with competent aid, to conduct a series of performances throughout the dry season, on the condition that she be permitted to appropriate the profits to her own purposes. The Theatre, however, will be so far considered public property, that when circumstances induce Mrs. Leach to withdraw, she will transfer it, without charge, to any person who has the necessary capacity for the management of a public theatre, and who will enter into an engagement to make a similar transfer on his or her retirement, and in order that this transfer may be properly effected, it is proposed to appoint a Committee of three persons from amongst the subscribers, who will hold the theatre in trust for the public, but exercise no interference in the management of its internal concerns.

Parties who are disposed to support the proposition now respectfully submitted to them, are requested to have the goodness to send their names to the Secretary to the Sans-Serai, specifying the amount which they will honour Mrs. Leach by subscribing.

The Governor-General, with his usual liberality, has already presented Mrs. Leach with a thousand rupees for the purpose of building the theatre.

THE MURDER IN RAJA BUDDENATH'S HOUSE.—The investigation by the Chief Magistrate of this case, has progressed a slight degree farther than had been stated in the last report on the subject. Though a difficult process of strict and active enquiry, the unfortunate deceased's brother has turned up, who is said to be a Kaur by caste and a darwan by profession. It has farther been discovered, that the deceased at the time of his being murdered in Raja Buddenath's house, was in the employ of a native prostitute. But this is the sum total of the important informations and it still remains unknown, how or by what means the deceased happened to get into the Raja's house, or in fact how any thing transpired at all. The Chief Magistrate has requested the brother of the deceased to ascertain as much as may be in his power, other particulars and facts connected with this mysterious murder.

A SERIOUS AFFRAY.—A serious affray occurred at Howrah, between two parties of Chinese, in which clubs and brick-bats were the chief missiles used. Several of the long-tailed gentlemen, were very severely wounded.

THE CHOLERA.—That dreadful scourge, the cholera, is making a great havoc amongst our native fellow-subjects in Calcutta. It has assumed a very obstinate character, and, generally, has thwarted every remedy.

The cholera is raging with great violence almost all over Bengal, and numerous natives almost daily fall victims to that scourge.

MR. BACON'S STUD.—The entire racing stud of Mr. Bacon, (who is rearing from the turf) consisting of the two English horses, Felix and Lucifer, and the Arabs, Corrimone, Frolic, Mishap, Balsac, Comet, Piccoloon, Sam Stick, and several others of great promise, were brought to the hammer at Messrs. More, Hickey and Co.'s Horse Repository, on the 13th instant.

THE VALADEARES' CONCERT.—The Concert given by the Valadeares at the Town Hall on the 25th instant, was tolerably well attended, and was excellently executed. The Overture to Oberon, was magnificent.

MR. PATTON.—Mr. Patton lately succeeded in apprehending a gang of disorderly characters, who used to extort money, by means of abuse and obscene language, from the respectable Hindu females who come within their clutches. Mr. Patton went to Bahala, the site of their disturbances, disguised as a native female, in a doolee. He was stopped by the rioters, whom he caused to be stopped in their turn, and sent to prison.

Three boys, belonging to the family of the late Dorgachurn Mittra, of Shoba Bazar, in Calcutta, were proceeding, without the permission of their friends, to the shrine of Taruckiasur, a place of much resort of Hindoo pilgrims, when, on the way, all three of them were murdered on the side of a tank, where they had gone to drink water. It is supposed that they were butchered for the sake of the money they had with them.

MARRIAGE OF HINDOO WIDOWS.—Baboo Moteselaul Seal, proposed to give a donation of 10,000 Rs. to the first Hindoo widow of respectability, that will re-enter the marriage state.

THE LARK.—No. 5311, an unsold ticket, the grand prize of a lakh of rupees was drawn.

WONDERS OF THE AGES.—The Commercial Advertiser, whose wisdom seems capable of accomplishing every thing, has just succeeded in performing a miracle which has never been equalled. The Commercial Advertiser has, absolutely, made the wife of a clerk in a public office, lay a hundred eggs—at least so he says. Credas Judas Apella.

MILITARY FUND.—Major Henderson has been appointed to succeed the late Mr. Henry Martindell, as Secretary to the Military Fund.

MR. MCKENNA.—It is said, that Mr. McKenna, the Police Magistrate, is about to go to England.

THE GAILLARDON.—The Gaillardon, is reported to be on shore nineteen miles to the southward of False Point, and in want of assistance.

MR. H. T. PRINSEP.—The Gazette of the 29th of February, announces the retirement from the Company's service, of Mr. H. T. Prinsep; but he will still retain his seat in the Council.

KHIVA EMBASSY.—Letters from Herat mention, that Lieut. James Abbott is proceeding to Khiva on an Embassy. The district of Gureum Sab has yielded to the authority of Shah Soofah.

CASE OF MARRIAGE.—Sheik Mudden, charged with biting off part of the nose of a woman residing at Chitpore, was this day sentenced by the Session Judge, to be imprisoned in irons, but without labor, for the term of five years, in the jail of the district.

NEW SANATORIUM.—It is said, that Colonel Tapp has been directed by order of the Governor-General, to report on the capabilities of Baughat, a mountain in the first range of hills, as a station for a European Regiment or a second sanatorium, on the plan of the established at Landour.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.—The annual general meeting of the Public Library, was held on the 28th of February. The report furnished matter for congratulation. There has been an increased circulation of books, and an accession of subscribers—the former having amounted to upwards of twenty-two thousand volumes in one year—the latter numbering, with the proprietors, two hundred and nine. The cash receipts for the year came to Rs. 10,333 3 2,—which sum has been appropriated to the purposes of the Library. The vested fund amounts to Rs. 4,273. Nothing has yet been done about a building for the Library, but there are grounds for hoping that a plan will soon be submitted to, and approved by Government, for erecting a large building in a suitable site. The union of the Library with other institutions, under the same roof, continues a favourite project, but the sum of six thousand rupees more, is necessary, to enable the Curators of the Library to contribute a proper quota to the funds for such a purpose.

CHULIA MERCHANTS.—The Nagore and Madras Chulia Merchants, resident in Calcutta, were thrown into a state of great consternation on the 29th of February, in consequence of the Police having, in conformity to the orders of Government, refused to let them inter one of their sect in a burying ground, which they purchased, about fifty years ago, near the Mauchua Bazaar. Three different petitions for permission to inter the dead Chulia, were presented to the Chief Magistrate, by the whole body of the Chulia merchants, with Khedar Mahomed, a respectable merchant and agent, at their head, but without effect. In one of these they stated, they had not drank a drop of water nor eaten a morsel of food, from the moment that the deceased breathed his last, and will not be able to do so till the funeral ceremony of the deceased is performed; and that they would not on any account avail themselves of the common burying-ground for the Moslems at Manicktulla.

THE MISSES EDEN.—The Misses Eden arrived in Calcutta on the 1st instant. On the 26th a grand masquerade and fancy ball, is to be given in their honor.

THE SHERISTADAR OF BANCOORA.—The Sheristadar of Bancoora, Ramnauth Roy, it is said, has been expelled the Government service, for detaining a parwanah which he was directed to send to the Darogah of that district, to prevent an affray, which consequently took place, and several parties were severely wounded.

RECAPITULATION

DULHI.—Major Warren's detachment, with the State Prisoner Hajra Khatun, reached Dulhi on the 9th instant, in progress to Meerut.

The prospects of the crops are cheering, and the late heavy rains have been most beneficial. The cold weather has again set in, and all fears of a poor supply of rice for the ensuing hot weather have vanished. It has also been raining very heavily at Simla, and on the 27th ultimo two feet of snow fell, giving the scenery a truly English appearance.

The natives are beginning to appreciate the superior qualities of the Orabette sugar cane, from the fact that the stock of a market gardener at Meerut, who has received a considerable quantity, is selling readily at the rate of ten rupees per hundred, for seed.

It is said, that a Court of Enquiry has been sitting at Kurnaul, to investigate certain charges brought against a field Officer of Her Majesty's Army, by his Commanding Officer.

A boat with property, belonging to Messrs. Gibbon and Co., was attacked by dacoits, near Canouge, a few days since, and five or six of the packages broken up; but the contents not pleasing the fellows, no further damage or depredation was committed as far as the goods were concerned, though one of the crew, all of whom went over board when the attack was made, is reported to have been drowned. One person, who was pointed out to the Police at Canouge, has been sent to Futtighur on suspicion of having been concerned in the affair.

AGRA.—The Artillery at Agra were reviewed on the 29th ultimo, by General Pollock, and got through their manoeuvres in a most creditable manner.

The pupils attached to the Agra College, were examined the same day. Mr. Boldero presided on the occasion, and the dialogues and speeches were long and loudly applauded by the audience, in one case by the performer himself, who inconspicuously set the example, when he had concluded his part of the play. The prizes were distributed by Mrs. Boldero, after a very interesting scrutiny into the merits of the fortunate winners.

The following resolutions were adopted at a meeting of the Agra Bank, held on the 31st of January last. 1st, Resolved—That the report now read be published, and that the accounts submitted be passed.

Proposed by Mr. Woollaston, and seconded by Mr. Preston.

2nd. Resolved—That a dividend at the rate of 9 per cent. per annum or Rs 22 8 per share, be declared.

Proposed by Mr. Stowell, and seconded by Mr. Mansel.

3rd. Resolved—That a Reserve Fund be created, and that the surplus of profit Rs. 3,517-14 2 be carried to the credit of the fund.

4th. The following gentlemen were elected Directors for the current half-year.

Messrs. Pollock, Richards, Dalzell, Graham, Blois, Tandy, Woollaston, Boldero, and Mansel.

MHOW.—The deposed Rajah of Sattarah, now under escort to Allahabad, arrived at Simla on the 24th, whither a detachment of the 17th Bombay Native Infantry proceed from this station to relieve the escort in charge of him. He was not permitted to enter Mhow, by order of Mr. Bax.

ASSAM.—The following is extracted from a letter from Upper Assam, dated 25th January 1840.

"I am, rather surprised that, notwithstanding the notice this country has of late attracted to speculative minds, several events of importance should have occurred within the last few months, without a comment being passed on them in any of the public prints. An extensive, fertile, comparatively populous, and highly cultivated tract of country, the ~~Assam~~ territory, abounding in tea plants, &c. has been ~~recently~~ annexed to the Company's dominions, without a line having appeared in the Englishman on the subject. The station of Suddjah, a name that, though borne by a most remote spot, had become familiar to most people in Bengal as to be abandoned to the caprices of the Hurrimpootee, of which in a few more years it is likely to be come the bed, and the troops lately consigned there, viz. the Headquarters of the Assam Light Infantry Battalion and some Artillery, are now located on the opposite bank of the river, and some three miles lower down. The new station is designed Saikwah. Brigadier Littler has just completed his tour of the province, which extended as far as Suddjah, but though a visitation of this description is, from its rarity a memorable epoch to us, it may be a matter of little consequence to the generality of your readers. There is, however, one circumstance connected with the Brigadier's visit that I think ought to be given publicity to, and I shall feel obliged by your not using it.

"Byjnauth Singh, a Subadar of the Assam Light Infantry, had more than once received the thanks of Government for gallant and enterprising service done the state; and as a reward for his distinguished conduct, it was resolved in council, that he should be presented with a hand-some sword, mounted for the express purpose. Accordingly, advantage was taken of the visit of Brigadier Littler, to those wilds, to request him to present the Subadar with a magnificent scymetar on the part of Government, at the head of the regiment. The number of men with the Headquarters on the Brigadier's arrival, was unfortunately very small, but the fact of this costly token of his Government's approval of his conduct, being presented to him by that much esteemed and distinguished officer, considerably enhanced the value of the gift in the eyes of the old veteran for whom it was intended.

"Captain Hannay, with the headquarters of his regiment, is now employed in the vicinity of the Upper Dibong and Sagar rivers, in the difficult and harassing service of endeavouring to trace, hunt down, and capture the person of the Towah Gossain, the Ex chief of Suddjah, and principal confederator and leader of the attack on the Suhlyah cantonments this time last year, in which Colonel White was slain.

"The wiliness of the old chieftain, against whom the operations are being conducted, and the difficulties and intricacies of the mountainous, pathless, and almost unknown country through which the troops have to move, have as yet proved a bar to the success of the main object of Captain Hannay's expedition, which has otherwise been very successful. He has succeeded in capturing almost all the principal adherents of the Towah Gossain, who is now reduced to a retinue of six needy followers, besides losing the whole of his personal property. Almost all the arms, &c. of the insurgent Khamptees have fallen into Captain Hannay's hands, so that even should he be unsuccessful in capturing the chief, he has succeeded in depriving him of the means of ever again being troublesome.

"Of the insurgent Khamptees and Mishmess, upwards of 180 have been sent into Saikwah, men, women, and children, and I trust, that you will soon hear, that the Towah Gossain himself is amongst them."

THE HINDUN BRIDGE.—The bridge over the Hindun will speedily be completed. A suspension bridge has been determined upon, and the Military Board have given the necessary instructions at the Presidency, to proceed with the iron work without delay.

COONNAR—The following is an extract of a letter from Coonnar :

"There is no rain. The cold weather rain as usual, has been partial, and the rubies in some parts will be bad, in others good. The twenty years' settlement is going on swimmingly, and in a few years we shall see whether it produces any good effects. In my opinion the condition of the industrious agriculturists—Jats, Ahers, &c. will be much improved by the measure; but this quarter abounds with Mewattees, who are such a set of idle, drunken, quarrelsome, cattle stealing, villains, that nothing would ever do them any good. I firmly believe that if (for the sake of experiment) the whole jumma of a Mewatee village were rented for a term of year, the state of things would not be a bit better at the end of the period than it was at the beginning."

Native States.

VEROZEPOR.—A letter from Verozepore, dated 24th ultimo, says, "the grand convoy about to proceed into Affghanistan under the command of Brigadier Wallace, will probably move from thence in the first week in February. The troops composing the convoy will amount to about 9000 fighting men.

"The Force consists of the 2nd Regiment N. I., 6 depot Companies of Native Regiments, and drafts for 11 M's 13th Light Infantry, and drafts for the 1st European Regiment, and the mountain train for the service of his Majesty, Shah Soojah Ul Mouk, with upwards of 2000 remount horses, 21 lacks of rupees, with some 800 camels, with stores, &c., will accompany the troops, besides numerous private stores, merchandize &c.

"This is likely to be an arduous charge; but Government having handsomely conferred upon the Commandant the salary of a Brigadier of the second class, he will not, therefore, complain, whatever his officers and men may do."

JELLALABAD.—A letter from Jellalabad of the 12th instant states, that the Chief of Koonoor, who had already signed the treaty of allegiance to the Shah, wrote a most insulting letter to his Majesty, almost amounting to a defiance, telling him that as the Russians were advancing it was his intention to join them. Sir Willoughby Cotton has, however, ordered a force to proceed against the town (some 40 or 50 miles from Jellalabad,) which is to be commanded by Colonel Orchard, and is to consist of two flank companies of the European Regiment, Captain Abbot's Battery, a wing of the 37th N. I.; the Shah's 3d N. I. 700 of Captain Christie's Horse and an 18 pounder. They are five forts to be reduced, two of which pretend to be friendly, but this is doubtful. All those composing the force are in high glee at the idea of having something to do.

AFGHANISTAN.—CABUL.—The following is extracted from a letter from Cabul :

"An Armenian at Cabul has managed to produce an excellent brandy—dear of course, because a monopoly at present. In another year or two we ought to produce our own wines; and sparkling champagne should be superabundant. Such a country for grapes, and such grapes, I have never heard of, especially round about Charakir (or Kohistan). Fields and fields of the low stunted grape are to be seen, and as little attention is paid to the cultivation of them, as would be given to the field of the commonest vetch in England. The trees are planted in rows, about 3 feet apart from each other. channels of water are allowed to pass between the rows at proper seasons, and the trees are never more than 4 feet high. When in foliage, one tendril entwines with another, and the field is one mass of vine leaves, waiting only to be despoiled of its beauty, till the fruit is plucked, and the bullock, sheep, or donkey permitted to take their range, and feed to their hearts' content; the latter operation being the only pruning, apparently, to which the plant is subjected. Only imagine grapes were in season, and the Cabul market overstocked in August, and till within the last month some trees still bore fruits; and the grape is even now the commonest present brought preserved in its natural state, either in boxes, or rows of single seeds, separated by wool, and apart from each other, or in common earthen vessels in bunches.

"Among the men called soldiers of this part, almost all possess a musket, and most of them with flint locks, bearing the Company's mark; evidently the ravages of some annual committees for the survey of arms and accoutrements, deemed unserviceable. Here then is an instance of one of the many useless expenses incurred by Government; doubtless the barrels were condemned, and with them all the other materials, afterwards sold for a mere nothing—brought all the way to this country, and still doing good service, after a lapse of perhaps 20 or 30 years. I have observed many marked, as made in 1780, 1790, and 1800, and intervening years."

AFGHANISTAN.—JELLALABAD.—The following extract of a letter dated 'Camp Jellalabad, February 2d,' contains among other items, the painful news that Lieut. Collinson, who was severely wounded at Peshut, died on the 30th ultimo.

"He rents alone where his glory was won."

"Colonel Orchard's detachment are still in the neighbourhood of Peshut; letters from this camp were received yesterday evening. Several Chiefs had come in. Syud Roshan had gone further up the valley, where they expect to be sent after him. All hands have suffered much from wet and cold, and I regret to say, Lieutenant Collinson, of the 37th Regt. N. I., died of his wounds, either on the night of the 30th or morning of the 31st. He was a noble high spirited young officer, and is most universally regretted by every one.

We have all been trying to hut ourselves, but as fast as we build the rain knocks our walls down. Should we have anything more to do in this quarter, I will occasionally write you a line.

POOSHUT.—On the 11th of January, a party consisting of 100 Europeans, a wing of the 37th regiment of Natives Infantry, Captain Abbott and his three guns, with Shah Soojah's 3rd regiment of Infantry, Captain Christie's Cavalry and an 18 pounder, under the command of Colonel Orchard, marched to Koowar. They attacked the fort of Pooshut on 18th of January, but in consequence of the rainy state of the weather, the arrangements for blowing open the gate failed. After an unsuccessful effort to get in, and having suffered severely, the storming party were accordingly compelled to retreat; but the specimen they gave of gallant perseverance in attaining their object, seems to have impressed the garrison with the correct notion, that it would be the better, part of valor not to stand the result of a second trial, under circumstances more favourable for the assailing force, and so the place was evacuated in the course of the night. Our loss in killed and wounded is detailed as follows:

	killed—	wounded.
Europeans,	1	2
37th N. I.	8	10
3d Shah's,	10	23

among whom Lieutenant Collinson of the 37th is stated to have been severely wounded; and Lieutenant Hicks of the Europeans, slightly.

The following is another account of the affair.

"I lose no time in sending you the following, which, alas! proves that our arms are not always to be triumphant in the N. W. You will have heard of the expedition to Poonsoot under Colonel Orchard, composed of Christie's horse, Craigie's corps, half the 37th N. I. 80 Europeans and Abbott's 3 guns. They reached Poonsoot on the 16th; the Fort was reconnoitred, and the town occupied on the 17th at day light. On the 18th, Abbott opened on the outer wall and cut the gate out in about an hour, when Pigeon and Tytler, with a party under Ensign Pattullo, advanced to blow open the inner gate—2 bags only exploded, and without effect. By some accident, as Pigeon advanced through the bugler without orders sounded the advance, which the column obeyed, but finding this mistake, were obliged to get under cover of some ruin, while a second attempt was made to blow open the gates with powder from Abbott's cartridges, (the first was with the country powder) but with no better result than the first. A howitzer was then tried to be got across the ditch, but all failed, and at length the retreat was sounded, after having 19 men killed and 49 wounded, poor Collinson of the 37th N. I. it is feared, mortally, being shot through the arm and body—Hicks, of the European regiment wounded severely. Every man did his duty. The fort was evacuated during the night—eight horses were drowned in the river.

OPENING FOR BRITISH ENTERPRISE—Recent accounts from Herat, speak in sanguine terms of the favorable opening presented there for British enterprise. The goods most likely to meet with ready sale, are stated to be cloths, chintzes, spices, refined sugar, cutlery and a general assortment of hard-ware. As returns, an investment of fine Herat carpets (which can be procured there for Rs. 3 a 4 per square yard of 30 inches) is recommended; or for a small venture, bills on Bombay which might be procured from the Political Agent. The great drawback at present is the dangerous state of the roads;—in course of time it is to be hoped they will be perfectly safe, when it is expected that 25 per cent. would cover the expenses of an ordinary investment between the Indus and Herat. The road from Candahar to Herat, it is stated, continues open throughout the winter, while that from Cabul to Candahar, is shut, so that if goods were too late for the Cabul market, Herat might be tried. The road from Herat to Toorkistan also, it is stated, continued open, so that Herat would appear to be a preferable market to Cabul, particularly during the winter months.

BAMIAN—Letters have been received from Bamian, up to the 12th January, but they contain no intelligence of any importance, beyond that which refers to the march of the Russian force, which was stated early in the month, upon the authority of news from Bokhara, to have crossed the Jaxartes. A letter, subsequently received from Herat, on the 11th ultimo, mentioned, that the force had reached Khiva. The King of Bokhara refused assistance to the Khivans, except upon condition, that money should be coined at Khiva in his name; however, it appears, that the Orgunje man would not agree.

FEROZPORE.—Letter from Ferozpoore to the 5th instate, that the 2d Regiment No. 1. and the depots had joined camp close to cantonments, and were to move across the river on the 10th. Captain Nuthall had crossed in advance to prepare depots of grain. Captain Besant had arrived from Dera Ismael Khan, and was to proceed in commissariat charge of the Convoy, and Dr. Reid in political charge.

KERAKH.—Abdool Rhyman, and other Chief, who fled to Dehra Ismael Khan, when Major MacLaren's detachment was so well and successfully employed, in the Ghijee country, have just shown themselves in the Khybur Pass! They had, it would seem, written to the Ghiljee Tribes offering them money there, at the rate of thirty rupees per horseman, and twelve per foot soldier, but the Ghiljee in reply stated that they were very well satisfied with Shah Soojah's Government; and that the Sahib Loag were the best friends they had ever met with; as they got not only protection but justice from them.

CABOOL.—A letter dated Cabool 20th January, says, "our troops got beat back, of a pretty place named Koober. We have just heard that there were fifty killed and wounded, including two officers."

Doat Mahomed has been handsomely received at Bokhara, and a Government given to him.

Another letter says, "The Russians are advancing in force, in two columns; one on Kliwa and the Oxus; and another by Mushed, Herat, and Kandahar; and it is thought, will soon be within 400 miles of our advanced post."

Madras.

MUTINY ON BOARD OF THE MERMAID—The following is an extract of a letter respecting a mutiny on board of the Mermaid:

"On the evening of Christmas day, 1839, a few of the recruits solicited the Captain of the ship to be pleased to grant each of them, upon paying for it, a glass of spirit. This request was not complied with, he having on that day at the desire of Captain Neeve, commanding the Detachment, indulgently ordered to be served out 50 extra allowance of porter and tobacco, which has since been paid for out of their refreshment-money, a sum of five shillings allowed to each recruit by the Honorable Company for his use during the voyage.

"Between the hours of twelve and one o'clock on the morning of the 16th, after we had retired to rest, it was reported that the after hatches were broken open, and that some of the men had armed themselves. This upon enquiry was found to be the case, for as soon as we appeared below, they commenced a most unwarrantable attack, by throwing at us numberless broken bottles and other dangerous missiles, whereby we were ultimately obliged to have recourse to a more favorable position on the "poop," to carry which the mutineers, with boarding pikes and other weapons, made several violent and forcible attempts. These efforts however though continued with much vigour for a length of time, were totally ineffectual, but not without some injury being sustained on our side by Mr. Casey, the chief officer of the ship and two sailors, one of whom had his nose severally lacerated, the other his back almost broken. The former not only received a wound in the leg but narrowly escaped being stabbed.

"Notwithstanding this mutinous conduct on the part of the insurgents, we showed them the utmost forbearance and lenity, attributing their rebellious behaviour rather to intoxication from the effects of the wine they had stolen from the hold, than to any supposed ill-feeling they might have entertained towards their officers. We were induced, therefore, as far as lay in our power, to pacify them instead of acting offensively, which method of dealing we found to be the most salutary with men under the influence of liquor, and by this means we at length succeeded, and were enabled to get them quietly to their hammocks below.

" Having ascertained the names of all the ringleaders and their accomplices, amounting in number to fourteen, they were consigned by the commanding officer to the care of Captain Burt, for the purpose of being placed in irons, and kept under strict surveillance for the remainder of the voyage.

" The anxiety necessarily caused to those on board by this untoward event, can be more easily imagined than described; but our timely arrival at Madras this morning, the 24th instant, as I am rejoiced to say, terminated for the present all our fears, and with them I sincerely hope all such unthought of adventures for the future."

MUTINY ON BOARD OF THE MERMAID.—The following letter has been addressed to the editor of the Madras Speculator, by Mr. J. V. Dancy, the chief officer of the Mermaid:

" Having observed in your paper of the 25th inst., an account relative to the Mutiny on board the Mermaid and not wishing the Public to think that the exaggerated statement came from the Captain of the ship or any of his Officers, I trust you will give publicity to the following corrections.

In the first place the recruits never made an attempt to carry the poop. Its true we were pelted with missiles, but it is ridiculous to suppose any attempt of that nature would be made by twenty men against thirty armed. Again, the ringleaders were not placed in irons, altogether for breaking open the hatches or the assault, but it was in consequence of secret information given by other recruits on board, who had heard great deal of mutinous and piratical language, which induced us to adopt the decided measures we did. Again, the prisoners were not delivered over by Captain Neave. Capt. Sedgwick called them out one by one, and ordered them to surrender themselves, as Prisoners to Lieutenant Burt, who commanded a guard of the best disposed men for the purpose; he consigned them to me, and I had them placed in irons.

The wound in my leg your correspondent mentions, was of no trifling nature, that I scarce felt the slightest inconvenience from it. The only man seriously hurt was a seaman who had his nose broken.

I regret the paragraph in your paper, was of that nature, to call for a reply, but I feel it a duty I owe to myself and the officers of the ship, as the case is likely to come before the Public, to have the matter correctly stated."

CHOLERA.—Cholera has broken out with severity in the camp of the 6th Regt. L. C. Several troops have been carried off, as well as about thirty or forty camp followers, inclusive of men, women and children.

THE FETE CHAMPETRE.—On the 24th ultimo, the long talked of fair was held at the race course, and the crowd who went to witness so novel an exhibition of the frolics of the Europeans, was great beyond all expectation, such an immense assemblage of people having never been witnessed at this Presidency. The sports consisted of rifle shooting, pig chasing, greased pole climbing, sack racing et hoc genus omni, all of which highly delighted the assembled multitude.

ACCOUNTANT GENERALSHIP &c.—In consequence of the approaching departure of J. G. Turnbull, Esq., Mr. Crawford, Deputy-Accountant General, has been appointed to succeed Mr. Turnbull, and Mr. G. L. Prendergast, acting Superintendent of Police, has been appointed to succeed Mr. Crawford.

WRECK OF THE BRIG RICHARD BELL.—On the 8th of February, a launch and jolly boat arrived in Madras roads, with Captain T. Millman, the officers and crew late of the brig Richard Bell, viz. himself, the first and second mate, three Apprentices and seven seamen. The Richard Bell left South Shetland on the 4th of September, bound to Calcutta, and on the 17th ultimo, when she reached the parallel of the Great Nicobar, in 78 N., and 93, 30 East, she encountered a sudden and severe gale from S. E., which threw her upon beam ends and she did not right until every sail was blown from the yards, the fore top-mast and main top-gallant-mast carried away without a touch of sail by a heavy gust of wind, and at the same time boats and spars were torn away from bolts and lashings. The steering apparatus was completely disabled by the heavy sea which struck the vessel, whereby she became unmanageable, and the gale veering from West to N. W. with increasing violence, the brig was, in defiance of every effort to keep her to seaward, driven on a reef of rocks off the S. W. end of the Great Nicobar. At 7 A. M., the sea making a fair breach over her, the main mast was cut away; she then went over the reef into shoal water and within half an hour bilged and filled with water. Soon afterwards a number of natives came down and would have taken possession of the brig had not the Captain prepared to resist the attempt. The boats were then got over the side and a small supply of provisions and water were put on board them, with such other necessaries as could be readily obtained. In the evening the Captain and the crew took to their boats and remained at anchor near the brig during the night, to guard her from any attack on the part of the natives. On the evening of the 18th, the Richard Bell was a complete wreck, bulged on both sides, and the sea making a course through her, without any chance offering of saving any portion of her cargo. The natives now mustered a strong force, bidding defiance, and in their canoes they boarded and plundered her. Seeing there was no prospect of making an effectual resistance or of obtaining any further supplies, the Captain got the boats out to sea, and for some time attempted to proceed through the St. George's Channel, with the intention of proceeding to Moulmein. However, the current was strong against them and they bore away for this coast. The first land they made was about Covelong, on the 7th instant, where they fell in with a native vessel. Shakh Mughrobil Kurrakey, the captain, kindly and liberally supplied their wants, when at 11 A. M. on the 8th they reached Madras roadstead. Three boats were sent from the Master Attendant's Office and safely landed Captain Millman and his crew. The chief mate and one of the Seamen came on shore so exhausted and worn out with fatigue, that they were immediately sent to the Hospital, and the remainder of the crew found a comfortable asylum at the Sailor's Home.

THE MERMAID MUTINEERS.—The trial of these men has been brought to a close, and the sentence of the Court promulgated, which is solitary confinement to the convicted, viz. to six for a period of twelve months, to one for a period of nine months, and to other six for a period of five months each.

Bombay,

AGGRAVATED ASSAULT.—A most aggravated assault was recently committed on the person of Norjee Dorabjee, Editor of the Chabook, while passing in his buggy out of the fort at the new sally port, which has been opened in lieu of the Church gate. He was attacked by upwards of forty Parsees, who spared neither words nor blows in injuring him to the utmost of their power. He was pulled down from his conveyance, and completely overpowered by numbers, until one or two European gentlemen, who saw such a proceeding with proper indignation, interfered to prevent what might have been more serious consequences. As it was, notwithstanding being warned by a Persian gentleman, who from his high character ought to have had a good deal of influence over the assembled crowd, the assailants injured their victims very severely, and altogether behaved in a most disgraceful manner.

CORNET CHAPMAN.—Mention is made in an English paper, of the death, on the passage home, of Cornet Chapman, of the 9th Bengal Cavalry, who effected his escape from Fort St. George Barracks some months ago, while under arrest upon a charge of desertion from his regiment, and took his passage under a feigned name in a vessel bound for Liverpool.

WASAK.—Letters from the Persian Gulf mention, that a buggalow had been wrecked on its way from Muscat to Mocha, full of pilgrims, and chiefly from Lucknow; many of them people of rank. Owing to the great exertions of the officers of the European Regiment, who were for hours in the water encouraging some fishermen to swim off to the wreck with ropes and lines, the greater number were saved, as well as much of the property, among which was a splendid copy of the Koran, written by the fair hand of a Princess of Lucknow, and which was returned to its owner, an old lady of rank, who bestowed ten thousand benedictions on the officer who saved this precious volume for her.

THE URANIA.—The following is an extract of a letter from an officer on board the H. C. Brig Tigrit, dated Quoit Harbour, 31st December:—

"The Urania arrived at Quoit Harbour on the evening of the 9th instant, at 6 p. m. In breaking out the hold, we found her to be on fire in the fore hold, but after 4 hours hard work, in getting up the masses of machinery and funnels, we managed to extinguish it. The fire was occasioned by some packing and cotton stuff having spontaneously ignited nearly at the bottom of the vessel, and from all appearances, the ship must have been on fire sometime and the flames only kept under by the hatchmen being on. I consider the arrival of this vessel (the Tigrit) to have been the means of saving the Urania and her valuable cargo for had we not been on the spot, it was next to an impossibility for her crew to have got at it, and if the flames had not been thus providentially extinguished, no power on earth could have saved her. Surrounding the fire there were piles of deal boards, tallow, tar, spermaceti oil, and nearly every requisite to make a fireship. Lieutenants Lynch and Draper, Capt. Neaks and crews of both vessels, behaved in the most cool and determined manner, which reflects great credit on them. The son of the Sheikh of Quoit gave all the assistance to his power, and had all the buggalows in the place ready to save as much of the cargo as possible.

Burmah.

Private letters from Rangoon, to the 12th ult., state, that the rumour was that King Tharawaddie has been making visits to the dethroned monarch, and that the latter manifests a greater degree of mental sanity, than for some time he has been supposed to possess. It would seem that rumours of aggressive intentions against Burmah, by this Government, were spreading among the Burmese, and the latter adds, that when such rumours prevail, they are generally accompanied by conjectures and speculations upon the question, as to who is to be King.

One of the Government flats for the transport of troops in Arracan, on her way to Sandoway with thirty men on board, besides a crew of twenty, sprang a leak before she had proceeded ten miles on her route, off a village called, Sandoway, and was obliged to be detained until assistance could reach her from Akyab. A Special Com-missive was immediately sent out to repair upon her condition and to bring back the detachment. A leak was found between the planks, through which a bayonet was thrust, and moved backwards and forwards laterally to about the space of 16 inches. The ship had been stuffed up pro tem with old rags and wedding. The committee at once determined the fate of the boat and took all the moccas, bag and baggage, on board their own boats and landed them the next day at Akyab.

A letter from Rangoon, received by the last arrival, states, that every thing in these parts was precisely in the same condition as when Captain Macleod took his departure. Nothing had yet been heard of the reception of the popular Viceroy at Court, but the latter states, "We hear that the Prince of Prome sent three war-boats to meet him, whose slave he designates himself to be." Tharawaddie is said to be growing more unpopular every day—but not more malicious. We have done something, it appears, to awe him.

ARRACAN.—The following extract of a letter, from Arracan, gives the latest news from that quarter:—

"Notice has this day been current in the province, that a Burmese force of 1,500 men (muskets) are in a threatening position on our frontier at the Tuongoop pass, and I believe, from the source of our information, in the truth of the report as connected with the Myee affair, which has not yet been satisfactorily explained. This looks ominous of "grim visaged war," and without a Resident at the capital to note the doings of our mislaid neighbours, as a sudden concentration and attack, may at any time be made upon us, without our receiving timely notice. We do not consider that the Burmese would stand upon punctilio of declaring war according to the custom of European nations. No, the beacon of their advance would be our flaming villages, and the crowding of fugitives on our military stations.

"There is, however, little to be gained by conjecture, while the enemy is at our doors—action is your only, and should they venture to knock—verily they shall have their reward, and we be the ministers of their chastisement.

"News of the escape of ten convicts while working on the roads at Khyouk Phyoo, reached us a day or two since. It seems the man who commits others was absent somewhere in his district. But Colonel Harvey, commanding the station, immediately sent a guard of sepoys to the jail, and set all the police after the victors. Information reached us this dawn, that seven out of the ten had been nabbed, and four out of the seven paid with recompense of lead or steel, while hopes are entertained that the "abject rear" of three will, with the others, have another opportunity afforded them of mending their own, and the Company's ways. "The three patriotic advocates of liberty, who lately evaded the narrow confines of the moral prison house of Akyab, have not yet been persuaded to return, and work for the general weal, whereby it is sagely surmised, they pleasure rather in living on the goods, than for the good, of the public.

"The Mugh Golundaze are now so well practised at the guns, that the necessity for retaining a detachment of Hindoostanee golundaze, as aids and instructors, no longer exists, and this detachment, 7th company, 7th Battalion, now here will proceed either by the steamer, Ganges or the Amherst to the Presidency, on the return of one of these vessels to Calcutta. They may, therefore be expected to join Dum-Dum some time next month."

RANGOON.—A correspondent from Rangoon, whose letter is dated the 25th of January, says:

"On the 24th the Myo Woon went out in state, having in his retinue twelve carts loaded with handsome wives and concubines. The object seems to have been to make a peace-offering to the Thoongee, or priest, in the shape of a good dinner. While with the Myo Woon was absent from town, his parasite peons, entered by the back way into the residence of Captain Robson, to seize Captain Robson's only wife or concubine, who they beat and dragged by the hair of her head, because she lived with a foreigner. This act is a true symbol of the means to be used to expel foreigners out of this country, and a true index of the aggressive spirit and letter of the orders of Tharawaddie. On the next day, the wife was restored, on payment of about fifty rupees. At the same time, an Englishman (a Pilot) was flogged and put in the jail, for having proceeded down the river, without leave, to bring up the ship William Wilson.

"The new Kallah Woon, or chief over strangers, at the capital, is very severe on Persian or Mogul merchants, who, doubtless, endeavoured to excite Tharawaddie to attack us by way of embarrassing our movements in the N. W."

THE SALWEEN.—The inhabitants of the banks of the Salween, it is said, have no peace, and some of the little villages and cultivated grounds are left to desolate. Detachments from the Bileng Burmese force have taken up their quarters in the villages and other places on the opposite bank of the river, from whence at night they come in strong parties, using the most abusive language towards the people on this side, and threatening them with all manner of cruel treatment, stealing their paddy and driving off forcibly their buffaloes, thus depriving them of the means of cultivating their rice and other plantations. There are authentic accounts of more than a hundred buffaloes having been taken off by these subjects of King Tharawaddie from different villages, and crossed over the river into his territories. A buffalo is valued at least at 15 Rs. so the property in the way has been forcibly taken off to the amount of 1,500 Rs. to say nothing of the depredations perpetrated on other species of property, and the losses inevitably sustained in the deprivation of the means of cultivation. Our Government, we must say, is extremely remiss in its duty in defending these its subjects, and thus the latter keenly feel the gun-boats which have been despatched up the river for protecting our people, are objects rather of ridicule than fear to these military detachments from Bileng, and are not likely to prove effective, being manned with some ten or fifteen lascars carrying only muskets, and the boats wholly incapable of coming up the long and awfully propelled canoes of the Burmese.

ATTACK ON SHIMLAY.—It appears that the Burmese are meditating an attack on Shimlay, in retribution for the inroads made by the people of the latter province into the Burmese territories. His Majesty of Siam, had been extorting money, to a considerable amount from cock fighters and little fish-fighters, which operated as a check for some time upon these idle and vicious sports. Opium dealers have subjected to most vigorous treatment.

Egypt.

The following items are borrowed from Harker's Egyptian summary:

Alexandria, 26th Dec.—The French Steamer due yesterday came in this morning, but in consequence of some accident occurring to the Steamer on the Malta and Syria station, no mails from Europe came to hand by this opportunity. The great irregularities of the French Steamers on this station for the last three months and the consequent inconvenience to the merchants and residents in India here, from the frequent interruption of their correspondence, periodicals and publications not to mention the serious inconvenience sustained by Indian travellers, fifty of whom, a month ago, were detained thirty days in Egypt. These irregularities have caused several representations to be made to the French Government, pointing out the necessity of placing more sea-worthy and better appointed boats on the station between Marseille and Alexandria, and it is to be hoped, that a speedy amelioration will take place in this line of packets; if not, there is nothing left for it but to put the Great Eastern in motion, and thus terminate the perplexing delays now experienced by passengers, &c. &c., proceeding to India.

28th—The Danube Company's Steamer arrived from Constantinople and Smyrna, but brought no news of importance, further than the reading of the young Sultan's proclamation, entitled the "Hatte Sheriffe," in Smyrna, which was attended by the greatest joy and festivities by both Turks and Franks, and it is said that never did Smyrna, since its annals witness anything so grand and pleasing. There was a grand procession on the occasion, composed of great and small, young and old, and was graced by the presence of all the fair Turkish inhabitants of the city. Suffice it to say, that this first document from the hands of the young Sultan, was received with the unfeigned and enthusiastic joy of a blind folded people, wholly insensible to their present despicable and humbled position.

Mahomed Ali, of Egypt, entertained upwards of twelve hundred Turkish and Egyptian officers at a sumptuous dinner on board the Mahmoudie, of 130 guns, The Sultan's largest ship (but now in the keeping of Mahomed Ali). The entertainment was on the largest scale, and the table were covered with viands of the most refined and costly description. His Highness on going on board was received with a broadside from every ship in the harbour, both Turkish and Egyptian making in all sixty sail of shipping.

JAN. 1-7, 1840—Great interest has been excited amongst the British Residents in Egypt, in consequence of the news brought from Aden by the last steamer arrived at Suez on the 19th ult., stating that the Arabs had made an attack upon Aden. This excitement was much heightened by the arrival of a courier, stating that at the period of his departure, the Arabs, mustering 50,000 strong on the heights, were momentarily expected to make another descent. It is generally thought here that these hostilities on the part of the Arabs have been secretly favored by Mahomed Ali's Governor at Mocha, (young Ibrahim Pasha) who has been busily employed in poisoning the Arabs' minds against the British, and it is further asserted that Mahomed Ali's treasure-chest has been the propelling engine in this affair. However it may be, the receipt of this latter intelligence was followed by a lengthened interview between our Consul General and Mahomed Ali, who, in proof of his good faith, offered to cede the whole of Arabia to the Porte, and that he would withdraw his garrisons therefrom on its occupation by the Turkish troops. In further proof, he instantly despatched a messenger to his Governor at Mocha, to use his utmost endeavours to disperse the Arabs. We refrain giving our opinion on this subject until we see further, nor we do vouch for the veracity of the above statement.

Gen.—At midnight, Mr. Waghorn returned to Alexandria, after a perilous journey from Cairo, in which he accidentally fell overboard in a heavy gale of wind on the Nile, and had it not been for two of his Arab crew he states, he must have been drowned. The great Eastern Hotel in that city, was so opened on that day. It is sitting-up with great spirit under the auspices of Waghorn and Co.

We have to remark, and we beg most pointedly to remark it too, that Berenice mails of 28th November, from Bombay, arrived at Alexandria on the 19th, and remained there till the 23d Dec., although they ought to have left by H. M.'s S. Blazer, on the 20th. Sir John Lous, at Malte, who, it will be recollected, would not allow Mr. Waghorn's mails to go to Marseilles in July last by the same vessel, allowed the Commander on this occasion to wait; by this waiting, these mails, taking 13 days to England, instead of arriving there on the 2d January, will not now we think arrive on the 5th or 6th, too late to answer them by this opportunity.

14th.—IMPORTANT.—EXPECTED WAR IN EGYPT.—In Egypt every preparation for the last week at all points, has been made for its defence. Mahomet Ali states that if coercion be used towards him by England, which country, through its valuable servant, Colonel Hodges, has told him that the differences between him and the Porte shall be settled, and that he will no longer be permitted to put forward claims against Turkey as he has done.

It is rumoured here that the English fleet is coming to enforce obedience from Mahomed Ali to this and other demands.

On the other hand, Mahomet Ali says, he is determined to resist, that is, to do the best he can: how far he will adhere to that course when the crisis arrives, is very much to be doubted. In our opinion he will give in, but others here are not of the same way of thinking, and say he will hold out and fight to the last, even if Alexandria be in ruins, and the fleets of Egypt and Turkey destroyed. Preparation for defence is evident every where. This resolve by Mahomet Ali is occasioned by what was told him on the part of England. Austria has too, declared, that if England requires aid, 30,000 Austrians are ready to be landed near Alexandria, to act in concert with the English fleet.

THE NEW STEAMER VICTORIA.—The launch of the new Steamer Victoria, took place on the 23rd of January, amidst a large concourse of the principal inhabitants of Bombay, at the head of whom were the Honorable the Governor and family. The vessel was named by the younger Miss Carnac, and after the launch was over (and it was beautifully performed) Sir John Carnac read a short address to the builders, and presented each of them, Nowrojee, Carsettjee, and Ardaseer, with a pair of Cashmere shawls.

DEPUTY NATIVE SECRETARY TO GOVERNMENT.—The rumour that was in circulation some time ago, respecting the probable appointment of a deputy native secretary to government, is daily gaining additional circulation.

GATHERING AT BOMBAY.—On the 29th January a grand entertainment was given at Parell to all the beauty and fashion of the island. The hospitality of the Honourable the Governor was parietaken of by a very numerous assemblage, and there has seldom been a happier meeting of the Society of the place. The decorations of the gardens were beautiful and in the best possible taste.

DEATH OF AMER KHAN.—Amer Khan, the Nawab of Tonk is dead. This chieftain, as is well known, headed for some time a party of Pindharras, and after having successively engaged with the clan the service of Scindia, and the Nawab of Bhopal, he was at last employed by Jeshwant Rao Holkar as a lieutenant to aid him in his views of usurpation. It was in this situation, that he seems to have acquired his Jaghirs; and while he was the head of the regency appointed for the government of the Holkar state after Jeshwant Rao became insane, he found an opportunity of separating it from the dominions of his nominal Lord. About 1807 he entered the service of the Raja of Jeypoor, and took the prominent share in the war between that Chief and the Raja of Jodpoor for the hand of the princess of Oodepoor. He is said to have planned the subversion of the Nagpoyr dynasty in 1809, but his views were frustrated by the interposition of the British Government. He was at last taken under the British protection during the Pindharras war in 1817, on condition of reducing his army to a specified number and surrendering his artillery at a valuation; in return of which his Jaghirs were guaranteed to him in sovereignty. His territory yields about 8 or 9 lacs of rupees, and his military establishment amounts to 500 or 600 horses, besides the men employed in the collection of revenue and Police. An Amer Khan has left many sons, perhaps the eldest of them will inherit his Jaghirs, as it does not revert either to Holkar or to the British Government.

NEW STEAMER.—A new Steamer for the Ceylon Government, was on the 4th instant launched from the dock at Massagoong, and named the Seafork.

THE CAPTIVE CONVICTS.—The three convicts brought by the Tapee, did not belong to the gang which escaped from the Virginie none of whom have yet been caught. It appears that they landed in the Goa territory near Cape Ramue, and mixed freely among the inhabitants giving out that they had been cast away at sea. It appears also that they had been liberally profuse of the money plundered from the Virginie with the view of inducing persons to afford them shelter and facilitate their escape, which they were enabled to do from the length of time that elapsed before the authorities at Goa were apprised of the atrocity of the crimes they had committed. They have since been traced as far as the Nissim's territories, and hopes are yet entertained of their apprehension.

BREACH OF PROMISE OF MARRIAGE.—The case for breach of promise of marriage took place on the 11th of February, before Sir John Audry and Sir Henry Roper. The plaintiff, Miss Froude Johnstone, is a young and very interesting person; the defendant is a Mr. James A. Cumins. Altogether, it appears a case of great hardship, where the plaintiff was driven to court an investigation, more for the sake of clearing up imputations cast upon her character, than for the purpose of claiming damages,—imputations of which the lady was most fully and fairly cleared. The verdict for the plaintiff was 2,000 rupees.

CELON.

MR. CARR.—Mr. Carr was sworn in Senior Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court on the 1st of February, when the usual salute was fired from the Fort, on his temporary appointment to the Bench.

Persia.

SHIRAZ.—Letters from Bushire to 20th ultimo, mention that the ex-Governor, Sheik Hussein had commenced blockading the Port of Bushire, in retaliation for his late suppression by the court of Shiraz. It appears that he is possessed of only one middling sized bungalow with about 50 men—yet the Persian Government have no a vessel to send against him. He is accordingly inflicting considerable injury on the trade of the Port. The Sir Robert Compton had arrived at Bushire, also the H. O. S. Coala which was acting as Guard ship for the protection of British property.

China.

News from China to the 4th of January, has been received during the week.

The Commissioner had been pursuing his measures still further for the total exclusion of English trade; and an Edict has been published prohibiting the transshipment of British goods into any other foreign vessel for the purposes of importation into Canton, and ordaining that a bond be required from every such vessel entering the port, certifying that they do not contain any property transhipped from a British vessel, and consenting to the confiscation of ship and cargo should anything of the kind be discovered on board!—The High Commissioner anticipates no difficulty in detecting any attempts at fraud or concealment, and in putting this law immediately and effectually in force; but, the transshipping trade, nevertheless, was being carried on briskly. The smuggling trade was also carried on, on the coast, and opium, it is said, was realizing from 900 to 1,000 dols per chest. It appears that an Edict had been received from the Emperor, embodying the Imperial fat in regard to the entire exclusion of the English trade, and confirmatory of all Lin's measures in that and other respects. This decree is issued by the Emperor in pursuance of the Commissioner's own recommendation, to put a total stop to British intercourse—as announced in a chop issued by himself several weeks before. So far, therefore, from being under the displeasure of the Emperor, degraded several steps in his rank, and on the eve of being superseded, there is undoubted evidence of the Commissioner being still high in his imperial master's favour, receiving new honours at his hand, and likely to continue in the undisturbed possession of the same unlimited power that he was intrusted with, when he first appeared upon the scene! The following are the reasons said to be declared in the Imperial Edict for the stoppage of the British Trade for ever; namely; Captain Elliot's attack at Cowloon and murder there; Captain Elliot's attack at Chumpee, keeping outside all British vessels for the purpose of clandestinely dealing in Opium.—This edict is said to be pitched in a much higher and stronger tone than Lin's in regard to the English, and no representative authority is allowed to alter it,—so that no negotiations for the opening of the trade can be conducted by the Canton government, but must be referred to Peking.

Captain Elliot has made another feeble attempt to induce the Commissioner to authorise the continuance of our legal trade; assuring his Excellency that peace is the desire of his heart, that he feels anxiety and sorrow for "the state of complete confusion and disorder" matters have come to; and reminding him that for 200 years "England has enjoyed intercourse with the Heavenly Dynasty."—This is the only fact put forward by Capt. Elliot that the Commissioner admits to be true—and he shews very little mercy in his answer, to the Superintendent's professions of sincerity, and fixes the blame of all the confusion and disorder that has ensued upon that functionary himself. But Capt. Elliot courts humiliation, and nothing is more cool and self-possessed than the manner in which Lin pays him in the coin he seems to have opened his hand to receive.

The reports regarding the Commissioner's bad health, are, it seems, no better founded than those regarding his alleged degradation of rank, &c. He was seen by Capt. Grog of the Suede, and the surviving ship's company of that unfortunate vessel, who had been conveyed to Canton, in much too good health. He treated them to abundance of roasted pig and other savoury viands, and appeared cheerful and affable, and even condescended to laugh at being told of the reports that had been circulated about his being ill.

The Royal Saxon, Captain Towns, had again proceeded to the Bogue on her way to Whampoa. It appears that Captain Towns, who had previously been officially informed by Captain Elliot, that any attempt of his to enter the Bogue, would be forcibly prevented if necessary, by H. M. Ships, availed himself of the absence from Tungkoo of both the frigates, and proceeded to the Bogue which he safely entered on Sunday last. On the previous Thursday, Mr. Gribble, of the firm of Messrs. Gribble, Hughes and Co., wishing to send one of his establishments to Whampoa by this vessel, left the anchorage at Tungkoo in a smuggling boat, pulling about thirty oars, and on his return from the Royal Saxon, before day light on Friday morning, the boat was chased by a large mandarin-boat, pulling about sixty oars, and which having the advantage in swiftness over Mr. Gribble's boat, was rapidly nearing. In this dilemma, finding it impossible to reach the fleet at Tungkoo, the boat was run on shore, and the men saved themselves by escaping to the land, all with the exception of Mr. Gribble, who awaited the arrival of the mandarin boat, and who, on their attempting to seize his person, fired off his pistols at them, though fortunately, without effect. The mandarins then seized Mr. Gribble, and pulled away towing the abandoned smuggling boat astern. Soon after, by means of the China boatmen, intelligence of this event reached the shipping, and it was determined to give chase to the Mandarin. Sixteen boats were accordingly got ready with as little delay as possible, and started in pursuit, but after pulling about fifteen miles were not able to close with the chase, which got safe into port in a village called Nam tau of Lam aon. The English brigs Lyre and Harrier had also got under weigh to assist the boats, but, it being a dead calm were of course soon distanced by the boats, which returned to the shipping at 5 in the afternoon after a hard pull of about thirty miles. Despairing of recapturing Mr. Gribble, his partner addressed a petition to the Commissioner demanding his immediate release, and this was forwarded to Canton without loss of time. On the following day, it was discussed whether it might not be well to send a sort of embassy, demanding Mr. Gribble's release to Lam aon, but H. M. Ship Volage just then heaving in sight, it was thought advisable, to put the whole affair into Captain Smith's hands. H. M. Ships Volage and Hyacinth accompanied by the Psyche and cutter very shortly after proceeded to the Bogue, where a chop was delivered, demanding Mr. Gribble's immediate release within 5 days from the demand being made that time being we considered necessary to correspond with the Imperial Commissioner on the subject. It was also ascertained that Mr. Gribble had either arrived at or passed Chuenpee in a chair, and a letter from Canton stated that Howqua, on Mr. Hughes petition being handed to him for delivery to the authorities has declared that Mr. Gribble would be released immediately after arrival at Canton.

The first week of October the Portuguese barque Anno, owned by a merchant in Damaun, was seized by Captain Smith of H. B. M.'s frigate Volage, on an alleged irregularity in her papers, but really because the vessel was supposed to be engaged in the Opium-trade. On a reference to the Macao authorities, this barque's papers were declared regular, and in three days she was given up to the ship's agent.

On the 18th December this same barque Anno, was again seized by the Hyacinth, on the ground of not having a register.—On application to the Governor of Macao he informed the British Captain that the master of the Anno at the time of the second seizure was on shore for the express purpose of having an extension to his pass noted by him, the Governor, on the back of the ship's register, and which was then being done. On this the vessel was delivered up to the Governor, and by his Excellency handed over to the ship's agent.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE

Friday the 28th ultimo, was a proud day for Masonry in Bengal, and must have filled with heartfelt satisfaction the breasts of every brother present at the formal opening of the Provincial Grand Lodge, which took place at the Town Hall on that day. The spectacle which was there exhibited, was effecting in the extreme and, almost beyond the power of the pen to describe. There are many of the community, who can recollect the palmy day of masonry in Calcutta, when ten Lodges enrolled themselves under the provincial banner; whereas now there are but six. The same causes which affect all other human institutions has had, a baneful effect on Free Masonry here, — neglect. The want of any local Government in the shape of a Grand Lodge, has superinduced a degree of apathy, very detrimental to the true interests of the craft. This detriment, however, has been more in degree, than in kind, — for faint though the traces may be, the true land marks of the order have been carefully preserved by those who have, despite of all discouragements, maintained the repose and honor of the craft. The fault of this decadence in masonry is mainly to be attributed to the heed authorities in England, who knowing that Bengal had no Grand Master, have for a long time taken no steps to remedy the defect; nor indeed does it seem, that any steps could have been taken, had not some zealous and worthy brethren seeing the slough of despond in which the craft was fast sinking, strongly urged the matter on the attention of the grand lodge in England, through representations made on the spot, and indeed where alone they were likely to be effectual. The exertions of Brother Alexander Grant, aided by the Free Mason's Quarterly Review — a work never to be mentioned by Masons without gratitude to its worthy conductor — and the presence in England of other brothers, who took a strong interest in the matter, formed a concurrence of felicitous events, which resulted in the happy meeting which was witnessed on Friday last. The just claims of the masons of Bengal were duly acknowledged; the Grand Master Larkian retired from a chair, which he had worthily filled here, but the duties of which, it was impossible that he, at such a distance from the scene of his former labours, could perform, and the Grand Master of Masons honoured himself and craft in the selection of our esteemed fellow citizen, Dr. John Grant, — a name which is eulogium in itself. Of that gentleman it may safely be affirmed, that had search been made from one end of India to the other, there could be found none so fit and worthy in every way to fill the chair of the Grand Lodge, none to whom masons, as well as the world at large, more look up, and reverence, none under whom they would so readily, and cheerfully, so gratefully have rallied. In fact, much as masons have to rejoice that the Grand Lodge has been restored, they have a greater cause for gratulation that it has been re-established in Dr. Grant's person — and that he may long enjoy his elevation is the ardent wish of every mason.

The Grand Lodge assembled at six o'clock in ample form, and it was a goosly sight to see the display of purple, the pink, and though last not least — the blue aprons. The last indeed was most gratifying, as shewing the kindly feeling existing among the craft at large, towards the new authorities, and their readiness to join in the installation of Eastern masonry. The ceremony of the reinstallation was admirably gone through by brother Blaquiere, who gave the right Worshipful Master an affectionate and appropriate address, which went to the hearts of the brethren and in delivering which he was sensibly affected. The Rev. W. Master, on assuming the chair, among the plaudits of the brethren addressed, them in a manner which for bravery and effect sake, we will characterize as worthy of himself; and it was listened to with profound attention.

The R. W. M., adverted in strong terms to the unsolicited honor which had been conferred upon him, expressed his pleasure at being put into the chair by brother Blaquiere, who was his own friend and the father of masonry in India. He adverted to the cause of the decline of masonry, which he in part attributed to the non-observance of some of our wisest laws and established usages, and more especially to the laxity which prevailed in the admission of persons, who could do but little credit to the craft, and to the elevation to office of brethren not sufficiently qualified to rule, govern, and direct the lodge. In conclusion, he forcibly reminded all present, after adverting to some points in masonry, in respect to which errors had happened which required rectification, that the chief ornaments of masonry were rectitude of conduct and the practice of all the moral virtues that adorn mankind, which he strongly recommended to all present. The topic of a masonic hall, or place of meeting peculiarly adapted to one set apart for Free-masons, as well as the foundation of certain local charities were, alluded to as being contemplated, but as not being yet so definitively arranged as to be brought distinctly before the meeting.

After the address, the officers of the Grand Lodge were appointed and installed, according to due and ancient form, and the necessary business being transacted, the lodge was closed. The Brethren then proceeded to the banquet, which was spread by Brother Sponcer, with more than his usual liberality. They were marshalled by our respected and zealous Brother F. W. Birch, of the excellency of whose arrangements too much cannot be said, and the procession was closed by the deputy, the past, and the present Grand Master, preceded by their own and the lodge banners.

The banquet was sumptuous, and the meeting one continued scene of rational enjoyment, heightened by the prospect which it held forth of the success of masonry hereafter to be anticipated. It would be impossible to enumerate all the toasts, or to detail the speeches made on this occasion, but we will enumerate a few of the principal. The first four toasts were, the "Queen and the craft," "The Duke of Sussex, Grand Master of Masons," the "Grand Lodge of Bengal," and "All poor and distressed masons." The deputy Grand Master then rose and proposed the health of the Right Worshipful the Grand Master in nearly the following words.

"Brethren, I call on you to fill your glasses a bumper, and to drink it, if ever a bumper was drunk. I shall not detain you long because the subject does not require it, for it at once comes home to yourselves. The R. W. Master has set an example of brevity, and, in one of his speeches, has advised us to leave something to the imagination. I shall not ask you to do so, as we leave the personification, in the instance before us. Neither shall I make any eulogium on the person whose health I am about to propose, because, when you hear his name, his eulogy will be the spontaneous homage which will arise in every breast. It is, brethren, that combination of all that is excellent in private life, and all that is pre-eminent in masonry, our beloved R. W. Master John Grant. (Tremendous Applause.)

The R. W. M. Master returned thanks, in a most feeling speech, and concluded by proposing the health of Brother Robert Neave, the Deputy Grand Master, of whom he spoke in most handsome terms, as being an old friend, and a most zealous mason, in proof of which he had appointed brother Neave to be his deputy, and from which appointment he expected much good would result to the cause of masonry.

The next toast was the health of brother Blaquiere, the Past Grand Master, which was received with great enthusiasm by the brethren, and the R. W. Past Master expressed his thanks with his usual feeling and felicity.

The healths of the senior and junior Grand Wardens, proposed consecutively by the R. W. Master, met with the applause they so justly deserved. The V. W. in his address set forth the future shed upon the craft by the acceptance of office by persons whose station in society and private worth are so well established. The R. W. senior Warden returned thanks in a peculiarly elegant manner, depreciating his own merits and yet lauding the system of masonry and devoting himself to carrying out its principles. It may be added in this, as in all other cases, humility is the invariable companion of merit; and however light the worthy speaker might think of himself, every one present esteemed him worthy of the highest places. The R. W. Junior Warden expressed his thanks in a speech replete with humour, wherein the modestly set forth his exertion in the good cause, which, as all who have known him in other parts of India, as we have, most assuredly entitle him to the high rank he now holds in the Grand Lodge.

In the course of the evening the healths of all the other grand officers were duly remembered and honored, but among them stands distinguished, for the complimentary speech by which it was preceded on the part of the R. W. the Grand Master, and the applause by which it was received, the health of V. W. A. Grant, Grand Secretary. In this worthy Brother, as the speaker said, we owe much of the revived spirit which Masonry now exhibits, and more to which for the future we look forward, for he is the "main spring of the Grand Lodge." Thanks were returned by Brother A. Grant in a feeling and appropriate speech.

The Brethren too paid a just and willing tribute to the recollection of Dr. Robert F. Crucifix, whose name is now become as deservedly endeared to the craft on this side of the world, as in his own more immediate sphere of utility. What a proud satisfaction must it be to that worthy man and excellent Mason to know, that here in this distant land his name is on our lips: and his good deeds, living in our hearts, stir us up to imitate the noble example of devotion to the good cause, which he has shewn us.

The Deputy Grand Master, with a humorous allusion to the singular propriety of the appointments to the Grand Lodge, and the analogy which existed between their secular and their Masonic duties, proposed the health of W. Brother H. Torrens and the Grand Stewards, whose politeness and attention had contributed so much to the comfort and hilarity of the evening. To the activity and exertions of Bro. Torrens he particularly alluded, and the feeling of the whole meeting in accordance with these sentiments was evinced by the plaudits which resounded.

The R. W. G. Master, with his usual felicity, paid a proper compliment to his deacons, which was acknowledged by Brother Egerton, and to the rest of the officers of the Grand Lodge, on whose behalf Brother F. Blyth returned thanks.

The D. G. M. proposed the health of those Brethren of the Lodges, who had attended the Grand Lodge, and who, although they proved a component part of that G. Lodge, did not bear office in it. He recommended to their serious attention the charge which had been delivered by the R. W. G. Master, assuring them, on whom so much of the well being of the craft depended, that if they acted up to what they had heard, Masonry could not but flourish.

Several good songs, Masonic and otherwise, enlivened the meeting by W. Brothers Torrens, Linton, P. G. Organist, Couger and Drummond. But all things must have an end, and even this happy meeting on so glorious an occasion, fell under the same inevitable rule. At 11 o'clock the toast was given "happy to meet, sorry to part, and happy to meet again," and the Brethren separated with sentiments of universal satisfaction.

The above is but a faint outline of what took place, but it must suffice for a fuller detail of a meeting, where reporters could not exhibit their skill for fear of the "poker." If this happy reunion be in any way typical of the degree in which we are to look for the revivification of Masonry, we shall expect great results, and may the realization prove abundantly more fertile than our expectations. One hint only we will give as a note of preparation to all the brethren in India, whose hearts are right towards the good cause. Masons never must rest until they have a hall dedicated to Masonic purposes, nor until they have established in an efficient manner, the charities by which the craft is adorned and beautified. This subject has not escaped the vigilance of our respected Grand Master, and we await with anxiety the matured results of his deliberation.—Englishman, March 2.

PUBLIC LIBRARY.

The annual general meeting of the public Library was held on Friday last. The report furnished matter for congratulation—there has been an increased circulation of books—and an accession of subscribers: the former having amounted to upwards of twenty-two thousand volumes in one year—the latter numbering, with the previous, two hundred and nine. The cash receipts for the year came to Rs. 10,233-5-2—which sum has been appropriated to the purposes of the Library. The vested fund amounts to Rs. 4,273. Nothing has yet been done about a building for the Library, but there are grounds for hoping that a plan will soon be submitted to, and approved by Government, for erecting a large building in a suitable site. The union of the Library with other institutions under the same roof, continues a favorite project, but the sum of six thousand rupees more is necessary to enable the Curators of the Library to contribute a proper quota to the funds for such a purpose.—Englishman, March 2.

Proceedings of the Annual Meeting of the Members of the Calcutta Public Library, held on the 28th Feb.

C. W. SMITH, Esq., IN THE CHAIR.

Present.—W. P. Grant, Esq., W. Byrne, Dr. Colbyn, Capt. Marshall, J. W. Twentymann, T. P. Morrell, Esq., H. M. Parker, Esq., and Col. Dunlop.

Mr. W. P. Grant read the following reports of the Curators and the Librarian.

The Curators refer to the accompanying report from the Librarian, and the accounts upon the table for statement of the affairs of the Library during the last twelve months, and are glad to have to congratulate the friends of this Institution, on the proofs exhibited of the growing appreciation of its usefulness by the public at large.

The only matter connected with the Library, not embraced in the Librarian's report, which the Curators have to bring to the notice of the proprietors and subscribers, is the prospect of a building being soon erected, to which the books may be permanently transferred. Committees of the Agricultural Society, Metcalfe Testimonial, and Metcalfe Library Building fund have frequently met, along with the Curators, and have cordially joined together in a proposal to erect with the funds of all the four bodies whom they represent, a building, the ground-floor of which shall be devoted to the Agricultural Society, and the upper one to the Library. The funds applicable at present, amount to little short of Rs. 40,000, and the Curators fondly hope, that the small sum which will be required in addition to these funds to erect a building every way suitable to the purposes contemplated, may be raised among the well-wishers of this Institution. The vested fund at present amounts to above 4,000 Rs.—an addition of less than 6,000 Rs. would do all that is necessary and would leave the Library to derive the benefit of the best half of the building for payment of one-fourth of its actual cost.

The Curators were in hopes of being able to report to this meeting, that the Governor-General had actually given the sanction of Government to the building, being erected on public ground. This has not yet been given, but the Curators know that his Lordship approves highly of the junction of interests which has been effected, and of the purposes to which the building is to be devoted. They have no doubt of being soon able to state, that the plan of the building has been submitted to, and approved of by the Government, and a suitable site granted for it.

Dr. Strong's generosity in continuing to afford the use of the present excellent apartments gratuitously, to the Institution, prevents it from feeling immediately the want of a building of their own.

Library Rooms, 28th Feb. 1840.

To W. P. GRANT, Esq., H. M. PARKER, Esq., AND W. CARR, Esq.

Curators, Calcutta Public Library.

Gentlemen,—I have the honor to submit to you the annexed statement of the Receipts and Disbursements of the Library during the last year, and embrace this opportunity to observe, that the addition of another year to the age of the Institution has tended in no small degree to the augmentation of its popularity, and the extension of its usefulness. It is a source of sincere congratulation to observe that alike in respect to the accession of subscribers, to the receipt of monthly contributions, and to the circulation of books, it has made considerable progress—a circumstance which, gratifying as it is to those who are interested in its prosperity—can only be attributable to the increasing appreciation of its utility.

The Library now comprehends eighty Proprietors, nine of whom have died, and one hundred and thirty-eight subscribers.

The circulation of books during the last year was as follows.

	Sets.	Vols.
General Literature,	4233	7886
Prose works of Imagination ..	5391	12504
Periodicals,	1939	1939
	11563	22329

Giving an average monthly circulation of vols. 1861 nearly, while that of the year before last, though the greatest of all the preceding years, had reached only 1816 vols., which, averaged per month vols. 1393

The amount of subscriptions (taking what has been and what remains to be corrected) of the last year is, 2304 Co.'s Rs., averaging per month, 692 Rs., while the sum total of subscriptions of the year before last was, Rs. 5635 9-8 pie, giving an average monthly subscription of nearly 453 Rs.

It will be perceived from the annexed account that there is a balance of Rs. 1814 2 11 against the Library, supposing all demands were to be immediately met, but that it will not now take much time to make it up admits of little doubt—especially as I have observed that the monthly income of the Library increases more in summer than in winter, owing to their being more departures and greater activity of business in the latter season.

Since the last Annual Meeting, one hundred and seventy rupees have been contributed to the Vested Fund, and it now amounts to Co.'s Rs. 4273.—Englishman, March 13.

STEAM COMMUNICATION.

The following letter from Mr. Curtis, to the address of the late Sheriff of Calcutta, is published for general information.

London, 4th Jan. 1840.

To J. YOUNG, Esq., Sheriff of Calcutta.

SIR,—I had the honor of receiving your letter of the 11th October, enclosing a copy of the vote of thanks which had been agreed to at a Meeting of the Inhabitants of Calcutta, and the 5th October, in respect to my humble exertions in the questions of Steam Communication, and of the petition of the Inhabitants to the President of the Council of India, setting forth the great delays and irregularities attendant upon the present system of Communication. I feel deeply the flattering testimony which the Inhabitants of Calcutta have afforded, of their sense of the poor services which hitherto I have been able to render to the great cause in which I have embarked. I feel that that cause is not alone connected with the commercial, social, or official interests and conveniences of the Empire of India, in its connection with England; but that the highest questions of the amelioration and advancement in moral, intellectual, and industrial attainments of the millions of people under British authority, are involved in carrying into effect this great proposition. The time is gone by when any attempt to arrest the course of improvement can be successful; and it seems to me a monstrous assumption of authority, when a government pertinaciously resists every offer to do that in good faith, which it must feel its own incompetency to undertake with any certainty, I might say with any chance of success. I beg to assure you and the Meeting, that, deeply impressed as my mind is not only with the importance of the Company, which is now formed, and a prospectus of which has been this day forwarded to the Bengal New Steam Fund Committee, but also of its eminent success as a commercial enterprise, I shall with zeal, and as much activity as I am master of, continue to afford every assistance in my power to the Comprehensive. I have read, with all the interest the subject inspires, the detail of the grievances set forth in the petition, and I hope the East India Company may at length be disposed to entertain my proposal, but after the decided tone of their last communication to me, I have many fears. Mr. Larpent, in a recent publication, addressed, to the members of the East India and China Association, seems satisfied with the facilities offered at present by the convention between France and England. I allow myself to adduce a very recent instance of the admirable perfection which this notable convention has produced. The Mail of the 28th October, from India was, I suppose, too heavy to be brought on entire, and was, therefore, broken into two parts, one part arriving in England just 3 weeks before the other!—You see, therefore, that the vexations are not confined to your side of the water. I thank you very much personally, for the very kind and courteous manner, in which you have been kindly pleased to communicate the flattering impressions of the public Meeting towards myself.

I remain, Sir, your very faithful and obliged servant,
T. A. CURTIS.

Hurk., March 5]

The Steam Meeting on last Thursday evening, was attended by about two hundred persons. Several gentlemen were proposed, and all severally declined to take the chair, till, on the motion of Baboo Dewkanauth Tagore, seconded by Major Forbes, C. W. Smith, Esq., was elected Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN, opened the business of the day by reading the requisition publicly advertised, calling for a meeting. He also read a note from Sir Jasper Nicolls, in which Sir Jasper expresses his regret at being precluded from giving his attendance at the meeting, and at the same time requests his name to be put down for eight shares more in the Comprehensive Scheme, in addition to the two shares he already holds.

MR. GREENLAW then rose, and stated that, on receipt of the documents by the last Mail from Mr. Curtis, the Committee had met, and resolved to call a meeting of parties who had paid first instalment to Mr. Curtis's Company, and of others disposed to support him, for the purpose of taking the documents into consideration; and he was directed to prepare a report for presentation to the meeting. He had done so; but he was sorry to say, that he had been unable, from the pressure of official duties, to complete it till the day before yesterday; and as, on circulation, objections were raised which rendered it necessary to have it discussed in committee before it could be adopted as the report of the committee, and as time did not admit of that being done, what he had to read, could not be taken as the report of the committee, but merely as a draft of a report prepared by him in communication with the Chairman. Mr. Greenlaw then read as follows:—

The committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, in calling together parties who hold shares in Mr. Curtis's Company, and others who may be disposed to support him, for the purpose of taking into consideration the documents lately received from Mr. Curtis, and published in the Calcutta papers, consider it proper to offer a few remarks prior to the meeting proceeding to the object for which it has been called.

The time is at length arrived when, in the opinion of the committee, the public of Bengal and Madras is called upon to redeem the pledges so often, and so fervently given. It is true there are shades of difference between the scheme now proposed by Mr. Curtis and his coadjutors, and that which he originally endeavoured to carry into operation; but they are shades with which the public of the two chief Presidencies of India at least, have no occasion to be dissatisfied, for all that Madras and Bengal require, a speedy and complete line of Steam Communication, between Calcutta, Madras, Galle, Suva and London, is comprehended and provided for in the present prospectus.

The committee, therefore, trust that those gentlemen who have withdrawn their subscriptions, will, now that a prospectus is come out, renew them with a view to their early remittance as required by Mr. Curtis.

The committee here consider it proper to state the reason why they have complied with certain applications for a return of 1st instalment paid—first. It was so paid consequent on a Resolution, that it was expedient that a Company should be forthwith formed—and although this might, under the circumstances, fairly be taken in a somewhat extended sense, yet certainly it was at the time expected that the Company was then in the act of being formed in England; and the Committee desirous not to allow it to be said that they wished to exercise undue control over the funds, were induced, for this and other reasons which follow, to refund subscription when applied for; although so applied for on erroneous grounds.

[Mr. Greenlaw here observed, that this last sentence had been objected to, and he would have waived it, as at the time he wrote it he thought parties had specifically intimated their withdrawal to be occasioned by non-fulfilment of a condition, viz.,—that the authorities would make a grant; no one had specifically done so, and, therefore, the sentence was erroneous, but yet many appeared to consider the grant to have been a condition. Now this was so far from being the case, that the contrary was the fact. It was expressly because the Court of Directors refused to treat with Mr. Curtis until a company was formed that it was resolved in Calcutta, that such Company should be formed, and the instalment was paid to such Company. So that with respect to this point we stand precisely in the same situation with Mr. Curtis, as we did at the time of payment; with this additional claim on his part, namely, that he has now formed the company. Mr. Greenlaw then continued to read.]

Secondly, and chiefly, the payments were made on the understanding that Bombay was to be included. The communication from Mr. Curtis, however, received by the Mail, which arrived before the last, intimated that Bombay would be excluded, whence it became imperative on the committee, when the proper time should arrive, to appeal to every individual who had paid his first instalment, to know if he would continue it under the circumstances; and this the committee would have done, even if there had been no application to withdraw.

That time is now arrived, and the committee, after this Meeting is concluded, will make the necessary application; but it is proper they should observe, that by the present communication it appeared not to be the intention of Mr. Curtis wholly to abandon the Bombay Line; but, on the contrary, to bring it on in either of two cases, viz., the Bombay community, to whom he has written, uniting in the scheme by taking shares; or the authorities granting pecuniary support—of which, although he expresses fears, he is not without hopes, so that in point of fact, Mr. Curtis's present proposition may be taken as all but identical with that on which the Bengal public paid their first instalment; and, being so, the committee are of opinion that public faith demands that, what was so nobly begun, should be as nobly followed up; especially, as it necessarily must have had great effect in producing the present state of things at home.

The committee refer with confidence to the names of the gentlemen who have now associated themselves to bring out this great measure.

Headed by Mr. Curtis, the simple mention of whose name is quite sufficient—there next comes that of a gentleman not new to the consideration of the question. Mr. Perkins, the Deputy Chairman of the Board of Directors, was chairman of the Original Calcutta Committee in 1823, and records of his zeal and active exertions yet remain in existence with the Secretary of the old committee.

The direction, fourteen in number, exclusive of the chairs, comprises no less than six gentlemen who have passed a considerable portion of their lives in India; the remainder; with the exception of Major Head, whose former zeal and exertions are a guarantee for his future conduct, and of one gentleman connected with Egypt; are from among the East India Agency Houses in London; the Auditors are the Governor and the Deputy Governor of the Bank of England; and on the whole the committee are satisfied that the Board, so constituted, is entitled to the full confidence of the people of India; while the committee would further observe that, according to the terms of the Prospectus, the body of Directors and Auditors in themselves represent no less than 840 shares in the Company of the "Eastern Steam Navigation." Acting on this feeling, most of the members of the committee who hold shares will increase them; and they trust, now that Mr. Curtis has assumed a position to commence operations, that the same zeal and spirit which led to the original payment of the first instalment will be followed up by additional shares being taken and by the instalments being paid as required.

On this point Mr. Curtis requires, that 20 per cent. should be forthwith paid and remitted; that a further instalment of 20 per cent. be made in 30 days after the first, and a third of 10 per cent. 60 days after the second, it being only intended to call for half the amount at present.

The committee are disposed to allow the second amount of 20 per cent. to be made in two payments of ten per cent. each, by such parties as desire it. This will allow of the whole amount being remitted within the period required by Mr. Curtis, viz. 3 months, after which time, moreover, the share list in India will be closed to admit of the remainder being filled up at home. The committee, therefore, earnestly entreat all the friends of a perfect communication between the two countries, with as little delay as possible, to unite cordially in giving that support to Mr. Curtis and his associates, to which they are so well entitled, and on which it is evident they rely, as they have been justified in doing, by all our past proceedings.

Mr. Greenlaw then said, that he had no motion to make; but he had a resolution to communicate, which was that, as he considered every person who was favourable to a perfect intercommunication between England and India was bound to support Mr. Curtis, and that those who had been instrumental in inducing him to take his present position were more particularly so, he should double the number of the shares which he had been enabled to take at first, and present the four shares to the Company as a bonus.

Dwarkanath Tagore here asked Mr. Greenlaw, whether it was not always understood that remittance of first instalment to Mr. Curtis was dependant on the prospectus being approved.

Mr. Greenlaw replied, that the state of the case was that by the original Resolution, as prepared by himself, it was intended that the first instalment should be remitted on receipt of prospectus of whatever character. It might be, leaving parties to pay up the remaining instalments as they might or might not like the prospectus. He was induced to this by two motives. First, notwithstanding he had been charged with a desire to monopolise all management, with holding the people of Bengal in leading strings, and other imputations of similar disposition, he had never been at all influenced by any such considerations. On the contrary, in the present instance he desired to have no power to interfere with the character of the prospectus with a view to stop the remittance.

Secondly, he certainly did desire that the remittance, thus being made without reference to the merits of the prospectus, should become a noble proof of the disinterested spirit in which it had been paid.

There were, however, objections raised to this course and some talk was had of the prospectus being submitted to a public meeting when it should come out; but on Mr. Clarke's proposition the words "authorized to remit" on receipt of prospectus were inserted instead of "shall remit." Mr. Clarke observed, that public meeting was ill calculated to consider a prospectus in its detail, and that it would be much better left to the committee to determine whether the 1st instalment should be remitted.

Mr. Greenlaw, however, observed, that the question was irrelevant to the proceedings on hand. As the integrity of the 1st instalment had been broken by the refunds that had been made to certain parties; whence it would, under any circumstances, have been necessary for the committee to make an appeal to every individual as they are now about to do.

Mr. Turton stepped forward to make a few observations on the new prospectus of Mr. Curtis, received by the last overland mail, in respect to which he remarked, that there was a great portion of the prospectus with which he entirely concided; but there were other parts which Mr. Greenlaw termed "shades of difference" and in regarding to these "shades of difference," he begged to make a few observations. He did not agree with some points contained in the prospectus, and never could he support that himself which he could not conscientiously recommend to others. He said he was not hostile to Mr. Curtis or Mr. Greenlaw, but he differed in his views in reference to the prospectus, and his present object was only to direct the attention of the meeting to the objectionable points he alluded to. Mr. Turton also referred to some private letters received from England, by the same mail which brought out the prospectus, and these letters he said, considerably tended to confirm his views. He added that if the calculation of Mr. Curtis could be shown to be possible of success, he would be the first to relinquish his present views and join Mr. Curtis. But he was satisfied that the prospectus was hastily got up and that the hopes it held out were altogether false. He would take care not to mislead others, but would judge for himself, notwithstanding the great names which may be appended to the prospectus. Mr. Turton then proceeded to examine the numerical details of the prospectus, which he considered both defective and insufficient, not only in regard to the impracticability of the plan, but the unfairness of monopolising the whole profit, the entire management and patronage in England, while no less than one-third of the capital was to be raised in Calcutta. In respect to the latter point, he believed that the object was more to provide place than the great object of having a perfect Steam communication between India and England. He concluded by observing on the impropriety of persons and influential persons particularly, lending their names to, and thus inducing others to join a plan which must inevitably fail.

Mr. Greenlaw was unable to follow Mr. Turton through the whole course of his remarks. He had not expected the present course of proceeding, or he would have come better prepared. He considered it to be a meeting only of those who actually had shares in Mr. Curtis's company or who were desirous to support him. The whole course of Mr. Turton's speech, however, had been of a directly opposite tendency. From what he remembered of the details of the original prospectus, he believed that Mr. Turton was mainly right as to the expenditures, but in the matter of receipts he believed that £140 were the net sum receivable from each passenger; exclusive of the victualling on board the Steamers, and the expense of the passage across the isthmus. He could not speak decidedly on this point, but such was the impression on his mind.

He confessed, however, that all this was a matter of comparative indifference to him, if we were to wait till we could have a prospectus that would be approved by the Precursor Committee we might wait to all time. He took a far different view of the question from Mr. Turton. Unquestionably every man, before he gave his money to a public object, had a fair right to satisfy himself on all points connected with that object; but yet there were certain occasions when relaxation on this point was necessary if the object was one of importance, and if its attainment was subject to risk.

He considered the present object to be precisely of that character, which required confidence to be bestowed that the present proceedings of Mr. Curtis offered the best mode of attaining that object; and, therefore, he should not scrutinize the details, but placing confidence in the integrity and information of Mr. Curtis and his associates, he would support him. He believed that no scheme, whether confined to this side of the isthmus or carried throughout, could pay without the pecuniary aid of the authorities, that those authorities would be disposed rather to support the whole line than the partial one, and that the establishment of Mr. Curtis's company would lead to such support being given; he repeated, therefore, that he would support it.

Mr. Turton had objected to it radically on one ground. He had said that if it were in every other respect good, yet he would oppose it because it proposed to build the Steamers in England, and to deprive the Artizans of Calcutta from enjoying any portion of the work. He thought this rather a curious objection to come from Mr. Turton who if he was rightly informed, had strenuously opposed building the precursor here. Mr. Greenlaw observed that he always thought the Steamers might and ought to be built here, at least a portion, and it was not then too late to require it; but even on this point he would not insist, but leave the whole to Mr. Curtis. Capt. Barber had touched on the subject to him in his private communication, but, as he before observed, not expecting this discussion, he had not come prepared; but if he (Capt. Barber) had not expressly said that it was intended to build the future Steamers here, it was at least an open question.

Mr. Turton had quarrelled with Mr. Curtis, on the ground that he had reserved to himself all the patronage—and insisted that some portion of it should be vested in Calcutta. Mr. Greenlaw hardly knew what was meant by patronage, whether the appointments of commanders and officers, or the local committee. For the former, for his part, he was one of those who were glad to have no patronage; and for the latter, the India Committee were to be chosen by the subscribers on the spot. Mr. Turton had the more insisted on this, because 6,000 shares or nearly one-third of the capital, was expected to be raised in India. He did not know the grounds on which 6,000 shares had been appropriated to India; but he had been informed that 10,000 were suggested by Capt. Henderson, one of the appointed Agents of the Precursor Committee. However, although 6,000 shares had been so appropriated, it did not appear that Mr. Curtis could have much expectation of filling them; for he had limited the period of allotment of the 6,000 shares to three months after the arrival of the prospectus, when he would seek the remainder at home—a somewhat satisfactory proof that he did not despair of finding funds at home.

On the whole he considered, that the question was brought into a narrow compass, namely,—is Mr. Curtis deserving of the confidence and support of the Indian community? He believed him to be eminently so, and he would support him.

Mr. W. Prinsep next, after a few remarks on the imperfections of Mr. Curtis's prospectus, proposed the first resolution.

That this meeting expresses its great satisfaction at hearing of the formation of a Company in London, for the carrying out of a plan for Steam communication with India; but that, considering the very incomplete data which the prospectus now before the meeting presents,

Resolved, that the members of the comprehensive and Precursor committee now sitting, with power to add to their numbers, do form a joint committee, for the purpose of receiving and joining their serious consideration to the details of the plan which may be received from London, and for submitting their report on the same, at a public meeting of the inhabitants of Calcutta, to be duly convened.

Mr. Turton also was about to put a resolution to the meeting, but waived it on Mr. Prinsep's coming forward.

Mr. Parker.—I have but a very few words to say upon a subject that has been so frequently discussed as this now before us; but, I desire to say a few in explanation of my own course of proceeding after my friend Mr. Turton's able address; more especially, as I am most anxious, that in a case where each man must and ought to judge for himself, none should be influenced by my example if I were vain enough to assume such a possibility. If I were a thousand miles from Calcutta, and not already pledged to support what I conceive to be the best prospect of a complete and comfortable Steam communication between Great Britain and India—if, I say, I was a thousand miles from Calcutta, and saw a project for a Steam Line between Calcutta and Suez, headed by men like my honorable friend Mr. Turton, my honorable friend Mr. Grant and others, known to be at the head of the Precursor Scheme, men of high character, of known judgment, of known sagacity—keen enquirers and not likely to be misled themselves or to mislead others, I should at once join the scheme, on the faith of such men having recommended and embarked their own capital in it. If in the prospectus I found what I conceived to be miscalculations or matters for doubt, I should put them down to my own ignorance and not a whit the less on that account abstain from joining the precursor or comprehensive, or whatever it might be. I do not say that I would risk my entire fortune, by such unscrupulous reliance upon other men. I might not, perhaps, have the sincere devotedness of Mr. Greenlaw, who has a few minutes ago doubled his subscription, and converted it into a donation to the great cause. I might not indeed be inclined to risk any thing upon such security if the subject were not one of vast national utility, in promoting which I was content to risk a loss for the chance of an enormous public benefit if I won. But where the object is one of vital importance to the comforts and interests of a whole community, where by the scheme of a chartered Company I was secured against any loss beyond the amount paid upon my shares; then, I say, I would, under the guarantee of names like those I have adverted to, take the prospectus as accurate, on the faith of such excellent signatures, and cheerfully risk a reasonable sum, requiring no other security than such a guarantee that it would not be asked in vain. This, gentlemen, is the principle upon which I still follow Mr Curtis and his committee. I am satisfied, with the names attached to the prospectus. I am satisfied, that those gentlemen would not willingly mislead the public or involve themselves and others in loss. I am satisfied, that the acute mercantile world of England will not give their proportion of the capital, if not also satisfied that there is a chance of fair return. I am satisfied, that the scheme, if it succeeds, will be a more complete one, and more beneficial to India, than any other. I am satisfied, that if it does not succeed, my own loss (the chance of which I freely incur for a great public object) will not be more than I can put up with, nor ought any man who subscribes, and each must exercise his own judgment in subscribing, risk such a loss as would materially affect his fortunes. For these reasons, gentlemen, I turn a deaf ear to the 'charmer's' calculations, and comments on the miscalculations of others, delivered with an eloquence and persuasiveness with which he, and he alone, can invest such subjects, are poured forth upon my ear in vain.

It may be, I dare say it is, very foolish on my part, and I sincerely hope, that no one will be misled by my example who does not participate in my feelings on the subject; but I confide implicitly in those whom I conceive to have won and to deserve my confidence. Above all, I will take the risk, such confidence may involve; and adhere to the Comprehensive Scheme of Steam Communication under the management of Mr. Curtis and his Committee, because I think it promises better for India and for England than any other.

Mr. W. P. GRANT here came forward, and after animadverting somewhat severely on what had fallen from Mr. Parker, went on to decant on what he called "bubble speculators," who do not hesitate to lend their names to mislead others, and among this class he ranked Mr. Parker. Mr. Grant, however, thought that no public matter should be kept from examination, while, on the contrary, he was persuaded that every public investigation of a subject, tends to benefit it more than any thing else. He then, at considerable length, sided with Mr. Tutton in his views with regard to the prospectus, which he said was wrong in all its conclusions.

The Chairman embraced this opportunity to inform the meeting, that Mr. Gordon, of the Union Bank, had written to be put down for ten shares, and Mr. D. McFarlan for five shares, in addition to those they had already taken.

Mr. A. Beattie then seconded the resolution proposed by Mr. Pinsep, and observed, that while he was no advocate for blindly following any scheme or prospectus he still agreed with Mr. Parker, that confidence should be placed in the gentlemen at home. He, however, thought the prospectus of Mr. Curtis rather insufficient, and in order to get some public data where on to proceed for its revision, he, with much pleasure, seconded the motion made by Mr. Pinsep, to appoint a committee composed of gentlemen belonging both to the comprehensive and precursor parties.

Mr. Greenlaw observed, that of course in the appointment of committees to attain a certain object, it was essential that such appointment should have a reasonable chance of effecting that object. Now he apprehended that a committee, formed as proposed, so far from attaining the object sought, was calculated to do essential injury to the cause. Under any circumstances, he, however, for one, could not attend to the duties required to be done, his official occupations would wholly prevent it. If, however, the committee were appointed, he would be happy to afford any assistance in his power; but he objected altogether to the appointment of the committee on two grounds.

First.—It was altogether impossible to suppose that the Precursor committee could go fairly into the consideration of the merits of Mr. Curtis's proposition, seeing that they maintained principles directly adverse to those which influence Mr. Curtis. They insist on retaining the whole management of the communication in their own hands at Calcutta; and they peremptorily deny the necessity of any connecting Steamer on the other side. It is not in human nature, while they retain these principles, that they can go into the question of the merits of Mr. Curtis's proposition with that unbiassed disposition, or rather with that desire to find his proposition one that ought to be adopted by the people of India, which should influence parties appointed to such a duty.

2. Would the members of the precursor committee lay aside these principles for the occasion, not as admitting them to be erroneous, but out of deference to the wishes of the meeting? Would they, so laying them aside, undertake as gentlemen to sift the question in a fair spirit, to arrive at a just conclusion? Will they now say they will do it? No one offers himself to say that they will do so—but if they will do so then still see the consequence. You are to enter into communication with Mr. Curtis, that you cannot do till the next Mail goes—it will be two months from this date before he receives your communication, and two more before you get his reply. Are we to stand still during that time? and probably for a still further period for further rejoinders and replies? To him the measure appeared fraught with nothing but delay and loss of confidence in the measures in progress at home. We have been charged with doing nothing, and now when we are desirous of putting the final stone to the building, we are called upon to stop.

Mr. Greenlaw then resorted to the impracticability of the Members of the Precursor committee entering into a scrutiny of Mr. Curtis's prospectus, with such disinterested feelings as the case required—it was indeed too much to expect of them.

Mr. Greenlaw dwelt strongly and frequently on this point; and in conclusion said, that taking the proposition to be altogether injurious he would propose the following amendment, which was seconded by Major Forbes.

That this meeting do support Mr. Curtis, and request that the Calcutta committee will scrutinize the prospectus and suggest to Mr. Curtis such alterations and amendments, as may appear to them proper.

A desultory conversation here ensued, before the end of which the great bulk of the Meeting dispersed, and there remained no more than eighteen or twenty persons, when the resolution proposed by Mr. W. Pinsep, seconded by Mr. Beattie, and the amendment proposed on it by Mr. Greenlaw, were put to the meeting.

The show of hands on both sides numbered alike. The opposing parties then separated, and their votes being taken, were found to be nine against nine. Upon this, by general consent, the Chairman gave the casting vote in favor of Mr. Pinsep's resolution, which was accordingly carried.

Finally, thanks being returned to the chair, the meeting dissolved.—Hark., March 7.

At a Meeting of the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Company, held on the afternoon of the 7th instant, at the Town Hall, H. M. Parker, Esq., the Chairman, C. B. Greenlaw, Esq., the Secretary, Major Forbes, D. McFarlan, Esq., and Captain J. H. Johnstone, resigned their offices and seats, as Members of the Committee, in consequence of their inability to act on Mr. Pinsep's motion, which was carried at the Steam Meeting, held on the 5th instant.—Hark, Jan. 9.

The undersigned consider it to be proper to publish, for the information of their constituents, the reasons as below why they have respectively resigned their seats in the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund.

C. B. GREENLAW, Esq.

Secretary New Bengal Steam Fund Committee.

Dear Sir,—Considering the rejection of your amendment on Mr. W. Pinsep's motion at yesterday's meeting, to indicate a withdrawal of public confidence from the Committee, of the New Bengal Steam Fund, to which I have the honor to belong, I think it my duty to resign my seat in that Committee, and beg that you will have the goodness to record my resignation at your earliest convenience.

I remain, dear Sir, very sincerely yours,

MAJOR FORBES AND MR. MCFARLAN.

To C. B. GREENLAW, Esq.

Secy. to the New Bengal Steam Fund.

Sir,—The result of the meeting at the Tewa Hall, on Thursday last, having placed me, as a member of this committee, in a position in which I cannot give that cordial support, I am desirous of giving, to the general principle of the plan of efficient steam communication between Calcutta, Madras, Ceylon, and Britain, (in the first instance to Suez) partly developed in the prospectus recently received from Mr. Curtis, I have to request the favor of your communicating to the committee, and subscribers to the New Bengal Steam Fund, my resignation as a member of the committee.

I have &c.,

BY CAPT. JOHNSTON.

After the many sincere and strenuous endeavours fruitlessly made by the comprehensive committee to induce the precursor committee to join with them in such a line of conduct as should prevent a disunion of the public of India on the principle on which a steam communication between Great Britain and India shall be established:—After witnessing the extraordinary means resorted to by the precursor committee, to induce the withdrawal of subscription from the comprehensive scheme and the support of Mr. Curtis and to transfer them to their own Funds:—after the most satisfactory proof that the precursor principle of limiting their endeavours to the Indian side of Suez, and of entire independence of any Company concerned in the Mediterranean side of the Isthmus, will be rigidly adhered to by some of the most influential members of the precursor committee; and after having as a member of the comprehensive committee invited the exertions of Mr. Curtis and pledged myself to support him in the establishment of steam communication on the comprehensive plan, I feel that I shall depart from the pledge given to Mr. Curtis, if I continue longer a member of the comprehensive committee, shackled as this committee will be by the resolution carried yesterday, associating with the precursor committee whose principles are avowedly adverse to Mr. Curtis's plan, for the purpose of examining and reporting Mr. Curtis's prospectus.

Having every confidence in Mr. Curtis's judgment and integrity, and believing that this course, if persevered in, would be subversive of comprehensive interests, I consider it my duty most respectfully to tender my resignation as a member of the comprehensive committee, and I hereby most respectfully tender my resignation accordingly.

J. H. JOHNSTON.

March 7, 1840.

MEMORANDUM OF MR. GREENLAW.

In order that no misapprehension may arise hereafter as to the cause of my retiring from the committee, I consider it proper to place any reasons on record in writing.

At our last meeting the spirit of our deliberations was, that Mr. Curtis should be supported, to which end several members of the committee declared their intention to increase their shares; and I expressly stated, that, backed thereby, and by a demonstration of confidence in Mr. Curtis at the meeting, I would go, as I had done before, round Calcutta, and doubted not the result.

In that temper the report was ordered to be drawn up and in that temper it was drawn up; and that it would have received the sanction of a majority of the committee, there can be no doubt, for it had that of the chairman, of Mr. Elliot, and I conclude of Mr. Smith, inasmuch as without making objection—be added a paragraph, Mr. Beattie merely put "seen" on it.

Mr. Tutton's objections, however, rendered a meeting necessary, and there being no time for it, the report could not be presented at the meeting as the report of the committee; but I had a fair right to expect that it would be recognized as that of the majority of the committee by its members; but be that as it may, it contained the sentiments at least of the chairman and of myself.

The only corresponding response which the meeting could make, was a vote of confidence in Mr. Curtis, and a resolution to support him. Instead of this the following resolution was proposed by Mr. Pinsep:—

"Resolved, that the members of the comprehensive and precursor committees, now sitting, with power to add to their numbers, do form a joint committee, for the purpose of receiving and joining their serious consideration to the details of the plan which may be received from London; and for submitting their report on the same; at a public meeting of the inhabitants of Calcutta, to be duly convened."

To this Mr. Beattie succeeded in getting the following preliminary inserted; it being all, as I understood, he could prevail on Mr. Pinsep to adopt!

"That this meeting expresses its great satisfaction at hearing of the formation of a Company in London, for the carrying out of a plan for steam communication with India, but that, considering the very incomplete state, which the prospectus now before the meeting presents, &c."

This Resolution, it must be admitted, to say the least, conveys no confidence whatever in Mr. Curtis, but the contrary. It was, therefore, impossible that I could concur in it, I consequently proposed an amendment of confidence of that general nature which ought, in my opinion, to have included all parties at all disposed to support Mr. Curtis. The impression being negatived and the motion, expressive of no confidence whatever in Mr. Curtis, being seconded by Mr. Driffield, and carried by the casting vote of Mr. Smith, the objection is that the committee cannot, if they conform to the wishes expressed by the resolution of a meeting called by themselves, act in the spirit of their own last meeting, or that spirit alone in which I for one can act; and therefore I withdraw, not only because I cannot so act, but because I will not embarrass the proceedings of the committee in carrying out the resolution of the meeting. I request that some gentleman may be appointed to take charge of the office records. I shall present a final statement of the accounts as soon as the gentleman who has them in hand can get this done.

There are two points to which it is necessary, I should especially draw the attention of the committee. First, they have a paid agent in Captain Barber, whose salary has not been arranged; and next they are committed to make some remuneration, to Mr. Walne, in Egypt.

I lay before the committee the accompanying list—First—one of parties who have withdrawn and had paid their last instalment; 2d of parties applying on printed lists directing their amounts to be paid to Mr. Lomond, and a third of parties applying in their own writing.

List.	Parties.	Shares.
1st	13	584
2nd	17	53
3rd	5	16
	35	653
The total was 450 parties		2057 shares.

I ought to add, that I shall of course be happy, till some successor is appointed, to attend, as far as I can, to the wishes of the committee; but I hope an early appointment will take place.

Hurk. March 10.]

At a meeting of the United committees of the New Bengal Steam Fund, and of the precursor company.

Present, C. W. Smith, Esq., chairman—Messrs. C. Lyall; T. Turton; Dwarkanauth Tagore; R. Scott Thompson; W. P. Grant; C. E. Newcomen; James Cullen; James Colquhoun; W. Prinsep; A. Beattie, and John Allan.

Mr. C. W. Smith being called unanimously to the chair, stated in a few words, his great gratification at being invited to preside at a meeting that he considered to be so likely to overcome all existing difficulties, and to arrive at the great object in view of steam navigation between England and India, without recurrence of any kind to past proceedings, and that he trusted that the gentlemen here assembled would give their joint aid with a true spirit of union, and friendly feeling.

Mr. Wm. Prinsep being invited to act as secretary to this United committee

The following letter from Mr. G. J. Gordon, dated 9th March, was read by the chairman.

To the Members of the United Steam Navigation Committee.

Gentlemen,—Without questioning the existence of error in the calculations contained in Mr. Curtis's prospectus, it must be at least admitted that it proposes to carry out as far as possible, under existing circumstances, the views of the British public on this side of India, repeatedly expressed by word and deed on numerous occasions. I say, as far as possible, because it goes the whole length of effecting an easy and frequent communication by steam, between this side of India and England, but it does not immediately embrace Bombay nor rest on the careful support of the British and Indian Governments.

Differing thus far from the original plan contemplated by the subscribers to the new steam fund in important though confessedly not essential respects, there seems no inconsistency in requiring, as the condition of Indian support, such further modifications as may secure unanimity on this side of India, as well as amongst those parties in England who zealously concur in the most essential and vital part of the scheme, that of establishing regular steam packets on the line commencing at Calcutta and terminating at Suez.

Actuated by a desire for the early accomplishment of this paramount object, a considerable portion of the British community, despairing of the accomplishment of their wishes to the full extent originally contemplated, have some time ago combined to effect their purpose partially, and as a commencement, by subscribing towards the establishment of one packet to run upon the line in question, their ultimate object being like that of Mr. Curtis to have four steamers appropriated to that line.

They did not then, under all circumstances, nor do they now consider it necessary that provision should here be made for the conveyance of passengers or packets from Alexandria to England, an originally proposed, and it is only as I understand, in this respect, that there is any material difference between the plans of Mr. Turton and of Mr. Curtis.

Now, unless it be essential to the success of that part of Mr. Curtis's plan, which is embraced by Mr. Turton's, namely, the establishment of monthly packets from the Eastern side of India to Suez, that it should be extended so as to include the route from Alexandria to England, it does not seem unreasonable to ask, that so far as we are concerned, the exertions of Mr. Curtis and his friends should, in the first instance at least, be limited to the establishment of that line of communication which is, at present, totally unoccupied, leaving it open to a corresponding but distinct association in England to establish, if it thought proper, in friendly communication with the direction of the Indian line, another set of steamers for the conveyance of Indian packets and passengers from Alexandria to England. But, on the other hand, if the friends already addressed by Mr. Turton should, as well as Mr. Curtis, be of opinion that the requisite amount of assistance in the shape of subscriptions cannot be raised in England, unless on a project which embraces the whole line from Calcutta to England, if the establishment by the East Indian Steam Navigation Company of packets going direct from Alexandria to London, will insure a relaxation of the laws of Quarantine in their favor, if a charter cannot be obtained for a Company that does not embrace the whole line to England, and that to the support of such a project only can contributions from her majesty's and the hon'ble Company's governments be obtained, then and then only should the Indian subscribers be required to interest themselves in the establishment of the extended line.

In either case, from the nature of things, the exclusive management of the working of the steamers on this side of Suez, must rest with the Indian direction in Calcutta, where alone prompt measures can be taken to meet every emergency.

As to overights in the estimates of Mr. Curtis or trenchments in his calculation of the expenses of the management, the former, though they ought in justice to subscribers to be adverted to, cannot affect injuriously the success of the plan, and no doubt need be entertained that the expression of a wish to that effect will ensure every desirable regard to economy of management.

It must not be forgotten, however, that the services of an able and every way competent managing secretary, cannot be secured without a liberal salary, and that it is of the utmost importance that competent persons should be entrusted to superintend the builders in the construction of the steam vessels, and of others to examine every detail of the engines and boilers during their construction and erection.

I would accordingly suggest, that the United committee address Mr. Curtis on the one hand, and the public on the other, in the spirit of the foregoing remarks, trusting that the effect will be unanimity in the first instance, and gratifying success in the end.

Your obdt. servt.

G. J. Gordon.

March 9th, 1840.

It was then proposed by Mr. Beattie, and seconded by Mr. W. P. Grant, and resolved unanimously—

That it appears to this meeting, that the adoption of the views taken by Mr. Gordon in the paper now read, would be eminently calculated to bring about a union of all parties in the object of establishing an efficient steam communication between India and England.

It was then proposed by Mr. Allan, and seconded by Mr. Newcomen, and carried unanimously—

That without further waiting for information and details from Mr. Curtis, a general meeting, of all persons interested in the cause of steam communication with England, be convened on Saturday next, at ten o'clock, A. M., at the Town Hall, to form a committee in Calcutta, which may at once act on the spirit of the suggestions offered by Mr. Gordon, and give its support to those views, and that a letter to the address of Mr. Curtis, in accordance with them, be prepared and submitted to that meeting.

It was proposed by Mr. T. E. M. Turton, seconded by Bahoo Dwarkanauth Tagore, and carried unanimously—

That this meeting feels greatly indebted to Mr. Curtis, for the zeal and ability with which he has labored to establish an efficient steam communication between Great Britain and India, and tenders him and the other directors of the new company formed in London, their assurance of the grateful sense which this meeting entertains of their services.

It was proposed by Mr. T. E. M. Turton, and seconded by Mr. Allan—

That this meeting, strongly feeling, that it might never have been called into existence, and that the steam communication with Great Britain might have received a severe blow, but for the exertions of Mr. Beattie, and the conciliatory and healing voice of Mr. Smith, at the late meeting in the Town Hall, cannot separate without recording their sense of the obligations which those gentlemen have imposed upon all the friends of steam navigation with India.

Proposed by Mr. R. Scott Thomson, and seconded by Mr. Colquhoun—

That the following gentlemen be appointed a sub-committee, to draft the letter to Mr. Curtis, viz. Messrs.

Furton, W. P. Grant, C. W. Smith and Beattie, Mr. W. Prinsep, secretary.

(Signed) C. W. Smith, Chairman.

Hurk, March 11.]

Proceedings of a Meeting of Shareholders of the Comprehensive Scheme of Steam Communication,—proposed by Mr. Curtis—disposed to manifest their confidence in that Gentleman and his associates, by making an immediate remittance of 20 per cent. on the amount of their respective shares; and the remaining remittances to the extent in the whole of 50 per cent., at the periods required by the Chairman and Deputy Chairman of the Company, in their letter of the 4th January last, published in all the Calcutta papers; and also of friends to the Comprehensive Scheme who have not taken shares—held at the Town Hall, on Thursday, the 12th day of March, One thousand, Eight Hundred and Forty.

The Venerable the Archdeacon Dealtry in the chair.

Proposed by Mr. J. G. Gordon, seconded by Mr. McFarlan, and carried unanimously—

1.—That, while expressing to Mr. Curtis our warmest gratitude for his past exertions, and our entire confidence in his energy, prudence, and judgment, we point out to him what appears defective in the Prospectus, or has a tendency to vitiate its calculations.

Proposed by Mr. H. W. Parker, seconded by Major Forbes, and carried unanimously—

2.—That we express our reliance upon the honor and integrity of the Chairman, and Deputy Chairman, and Board of Directors, that if the calculations of the Prospectus are in their judgment irremediably vitiated by the corrections now made, the project will not be perverted in on its present footing.

Proposed by Capt. J. H. Johnston, seconded by Mr. C. B. Greenlaw, and carried unanimously—

3.—That we make our remittances and place our funds thus frankly in the hands of the Board of Directors, in the entire understanding and confidence, that according to previous intentions, the line between Calcutta, Madras Point de Galle and Suez, shall be completed in the first instance—each vessel being put on that line as she is ready.

Proposed by Capt. Harington, seconded by Colonel Dunlop, and carried unanimously—

4.—That we consider it inexpedient to start the Scheme with functionaries receiving high salaries either in India or in England; but that the fixed stipends should be on the most moderate scale, and the aggregate emolument of an office should be made to depend in some degree upon the profits of the concern.

Proposed by Col. McLeod, seconded by Col. Fiddes, and carried unanimously—

5.—That we understand ourselves to be advancing our funds to a Company assured of a charter.

Proposed by Major Irvine, C. B., seconded by Major Forbes, and carried unanimously—

6.—That we trust the first Steamer will be placed on the line between Calcutta and Suez, within eighteen months from the present date.

Proposed by Mr. Llewellyn, seconded by Mr. Robt. Campbell, and carried unanimously—

7.—That a Committee be appointed, consisting of the following gentlemen: The Venerable the Archdeacon; Mr. H. M. Parker; Mr. Greenlaw; Mr. McFarlan; Major Forbes, and Captain Johnston.

Mr. Greenlaw consents to act as secretary.

Proposed by Mr. Gurney, seconded by Mr. Wm. Forbes Gibbon, and carried unanimously.

8.—That if, in the judgment of the Venerable the Archdeacon and Mr. Parker, any Resolution shall be passed at the steam Meeting, convened for Saturday next, by the spirit of which the funds collected under the Resolutions now passed, can be remitted to Mr. Curtis by the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund; without prejudice to such Resolutions, the Committee now appointed be authorized to transfer them to the Committee of that fund, to be by that Committee remitted to Mr. Curtis.

The thanks of the Meeting were then given to the Venerable the Chairman, and the meeting dispersed.

T. DEATRY, Chairman.

Town Hall, Calcutta, March 12, 1840.

With reference to the above, Mr. Greenlaw requests that gentlemen, having paid 1st instalment of 10 per cent. on shares of rs. 500 each, who may be disposed to support Mr. Curtis under the above resolutions, will do him the favor to forward to him a letter to the Secretary to the committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, authorizing the transfer of such 1st instalment to the credit of "The East India Steam Navigation Company, established in London," handing to him at the same time a further payment of 10 per cent. to make up the 20 per cent. required by Mr. Curtis;—with of course 20 per cent. on any additional shares which they may be disposed to take, especially under the circumstances of the call being only for 50 per cent. on the shares taken.

Mr. Greenlaw, in like manner requests gentlemen not holding shares in Mr. Curtis's proposed Company, who may be desirous of doing so under the above Resolutions, to forward to him 20 per cent. on such number of shares as they may be disposed to take.

Mr. Greenlaw begs to remind Gentlemen desirous of supporting Mr. Curtis, under the above resolutions, that the Mail for England leaves on Monday next, whence the absolute necessity of no time being lost in sending the first instalment of 20 per cent.

March 12th, 1840.—HURKARU, March 13.]

This meeting took place in the Town Hall on Thursday last, at 4 p. m. On a motion of Mr. H. M. PARKER, seconded by Mr. J. G. GORDON, the VENERABLE the ARCHDEACON was called to the Chair.

Mr. Parker, after reading the notification under which the meeting was convened, spoke as follows:—

The paper which you have been so good as to permit me to read to you, embodies the sentiments of the friends who do me the honor to act with me on this occasion, and my own. Before placing it on the table for the consideration of the meeting, I would solicit the leave of the Venerable the Chairman, and of the meeting, to offer a few remarks.

We, that is the advocates of the comprehensive scheme of communication between Great Britain and India, have been accused of delay. It appears to me, that comparing small things with great, the Duke of Wellington might as well be accused of delay, because he did not attack the French position at Waterloo, until the aspect of affairs assured him that attack and victory were one. He advanced at the moment when to advance was to triumph. We would do the same, and His Grace's surprise would have been much about as great as my own is now, if, when he cried "Up guards and at them;" the guards had begged to enter into a few explanations and communications with the gallant 95th. on the right, and the veteran 37th. on their left, before they poured in one steady and triumphant rush upon the common foe.

Again, we are told, that we do harm by our concession from those who are not prepared, perhaps wisely and prudently, to push on now that the triumph of this long-fought battle seems within our grasp. I would ask, in the name of all that is reasonable, what harm? If we hang back, indeed, we might injure the cause; but, again, I ask, what earthly harm can we do by sending home our money to support it? We may, to be sure, lose our money—that is our look out; but, surely, we cannot injure the scheme which we desire to support. Is it meant to be said, that because we send our money, other people will not send theirs?—A way with such an idea—such a folly is impossible. I will not believe so ill of my fellow exiles. Yet, if we do not prevent others from giving that true and best test of a sincere wish for the success of the comprehensive scheme, what harm can our proceedings occasion in any quarter? We may be thought foolish, or hasty, or chivalric, or bad calculators; but with all this, it will not be easy to persuade any man in his senses, that by sending his money, he is injuring that scheme which he desires to support. Mr. Curtis and the Direction ask for our confidence,—we give it,—do we injure the cause by that? They expect our support and the 20 per cent. on our respective shares—we give them,—do we injure the cause by that? I do not speak of those who will not act with Mr. Curtis's direction, who will have no connection with an English Company, who will have no connection with Steamers in the Mediterranean; they may be, they probably are, both wiser and better men than myself; but I speak not of them, I speak of the parties who, up to a very recent period, have made the comprehensive their battle-shout—have cried up Mr. Curtis, as "their King, their Jove"—have pledged faith and fortune to support the principle of his scheme—have formed themselves into a company, and advanced monies, to enable him to present the Court of Directors with a "company already formed." What these parties can see injurious or objectionable in our proceedings, altogether surpasses my wit to understand. And here let me endeavour with all plainness, and, if I can, without one phrase that shall leave a doubt, to state the simple principle upon which myself and my friends are acting. In sending our money to Mr. Curtis and the London Board of Directors, we suggest—we do not stipulate. Are we wrong, or are we right? Are we wrong in placing confidence in the honor and business-like habits of some of the first merchants in London—in the integrity and prudence of men, whose names are highly and honorably connected with India? Above all, in that eminent individual, whose untiring zeal, whose unwearied assiduity, and uncompensated labours in our cause, have made us his debtors in an amount of gratitude, which deeds and not words most repay? (Cheers.) Gentlemen, your cheers tell me that I need not pause for a reply.

Gentlemen, this brings me to a point on which I would touch lightly and respectfully, but it must be touched upon. I think there is no impropriety, I am sure there is no ill-feeling on my part, in alluding to what is already before the public. I mean the meeting which is to take place in this Hall, on Saturday next. Now, gentlemen, I may do wrong to the recent amalgamation of Precursors and comprehensives. I may be, and I hope I am, a false prophet, or rather that I am over apprehensive in the matter; but I do I do apprehend that the meeting will end in nothing satisfactory, so far as our views are concerned. Let me intreat your patience while I again explain those views.

They are to make an immediate remittance of our money, (time being precious beyond measure in the present state of affairs) but also to point out to the London Direction, in the strongest terms, what appear errors of calculation in their prospectus, leaving it to their honor, judgment and sense, as men of business equally interested in the success of the undertaking with ourselves, to give such weight to the corrections as they may appear to deserve, and act accordingly. On the other hand I fear, I greatly fear,—for I have eyes that see and ears that hear,—that the meeting of Saturday will not agree to immediate remittances. Or if it does agree to immediate remittances, it will permit Mr. Curtis's direction to appropriate them to the common cause only under conditions—not suggestions, gentlemen, but stipulations, which the London direction may not think favorable to its success, or which they may not be able to comply with. I fervently hope and pray, that I may be mistaken in my anticipations, and that the meeting of Saturday next, will not only determine to forward their funds to England by the mail of the 16th; but forward them in the same frank and cordial spirit of confidence in, and reliance on, the judgment and good faith of the Home Direction, which I endeavoured to embody in the Resolutions I had the honor to read to you. If this result, which I sincerely venture to hope for, though I earnestly desire it, should follow the consultations of Saturday next, I then pledge my word, that there will not be a man in Calcutta more ready than myself,—and I am confident I may say as much for the friends who act with me,—to place my entire subscription for remittance in the hands of the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, as now constituted; to trust them in most unreserved manner, and to afford them all the aid and support in my power. With this declaration, I beg, Venerable Sir and Gentlemen, to place this paper on the table for the consideration of the meeting.

The Venerable Chairman then rose, and after alluding to the requisition which convened the meeting, explained his reason for attending on the present occasion, which, he said, was for the promotion of the cause of Steam Communication between England and India a cause closely connected with the interests and good of this country. He confessed that when the Precursor plan was first started, he was induced to join, as it appeared to favour the establishment of an immediate communication. When the Comprehensive Prospectus, however, as put forth by Mr. Curtis, was brought to his notice, he at once approved of it, and readily joined it. Mr. Curtis's Prospectus, it is true, contained some slight errors, but he was confident, that the bare suggestion of amendments would lead to their correction. He trusted, therefore, that the present meeting would be unanimous in the adoption of the resolutions which had been read by Mr. Parker, and not destroy the great and important object in view, by internal divisions. Considering the patience, perseverance and energy, with which Mr. Greenlaw has for so many years devoted himself to the Steam cause, he trusted, that gentlemen would even sacrifice their views a little in unanimously carrying out the object of the present meeting. The Venerable Chairman concluded by hoping, that all those present would attend on Saturday's meeting, when, he also hoped, the result would be the same as he expected it would be on the present occasion.

Mr. Greenlaw rose, and said that he had received several letters from parties willing to aid in the object of the meeting. Major Carter, from Barrackpore, had taken two shares, in addition to one previously taken; besides those he had before communicated from the former members of the committee; but he had much pleasure in reading the following letter from Futtyghur.

To C. B. GREENLAW, Esq.

Sery to the N. B. S. Fund, Calcutta.

Sir,—Having observed by the last overland mail, that Mr. Curtis, of London, has succeeded in forming the East India Steam Navigation Company, and being desirous of becoming a subscriber to the same, I have the pleasure to enclose you a draft on the Sub-Treasurer of Fort William, for the sum of Company's rupees two hundred (Co.'s Rs. 200) being the amount of the first instalment for two shares, viz. one for myself, and the other for Ishur Chunder Deb, head assistant in the Gun-Carriage Agency Office at this place, and to beg the favor of your enrolling us separately, as subscribers to the above Company.

Upon enquiry, I find, there is no person here duly authorized to receive subscriptions to the Company, which I am inclined to think will cause some inconvenience to those wishing to become subscribers, and would, therefore, suggest the propriety of an agent being appointed with the least possible delay.

Separate acknowledgements for the above subscriptions, will much oblige.

Sir, your, &c.

MOSES SUZARS, Conductor,

Gun Carriage Agency.

Futtyghur, March 4, 1840.

Thus, Mr. Curtis had at least a beginning in the Mofussil, a beginning of cordial union between a representative as well of the British as of the Native population. Mr. T. Hyde Gardiner being unable to attend the meeting, had written to pass his share to Mr. Curtis under his prospectus.

Mr. Greenlaw then adverted to what had fallen from Mr. Parker, expressive of his apprehension that the meeting of Saturday, might not be inclined to adopt the views contained in the requisition under which the meeting was then assembled; and said, that the previous afternoon Mr. Beattie had communicated, to him his intention of moving, at the meeting of Saturday, a resolution, to the effect that the subscriptions of parties who might signify their wishes to that purport, should be sent home to Mr. Curtis.

Mr. Greenlaw had that morning waited on Mr. Beattie, and expressed a wish to see the tenor of the proposed resolution, because, if it was of such a nature as to satisfy the minds of those with whom he acted, he was sure, that if Mr. Beattie would attend the meeting and read the Resolution there, and undertake to propose, it the meeting would readily adjourn. He stated to Mr. Beattie, that he was satisfied if the tenor of the motion went to remit the money forthwith to Mr. Curtis, with any suggestions or recommendations whatever, not from us, but from the United Steam committee, provided the adoption of those suggestions and recommendations was left to Mr. Curtis's honor and judgment, this meeting would at once adjourn. The consideration was not that the motion should be carried, but that it should be proposed by Mr. Beattie. Mr. Beattie was unable, without conferring with his friends to give any decided answer; and subsequently, the following letter and reply had passed between them.

My dear Greenlaw,—I have only been able to see a few of the friends of the United committee, who all feel with me, that at the meeting on Saturday, we must move a resolution to send home to Mr. Curtis the first instalment of all parties, whose assent can be obtained to remit, but the terms of the resolutions come to at that meeting, during the course of Saturday and early on Monday. But as I have not time to go to the meeting to-day, I cannot do more than state to you this.

The great feature of the junction being, as I understand, that both parties should go on, in free communication with each other, and with the earliest possible final junction of interests, in giving us the complete line from hence to Suez immediately, and the other eventually should it be found necessary.

Yours, &c.,

(Sd) ALAN BEATTIE.

March 12, 1840.

My dear Beattie,—I am sorry that we can have no specific ground on which to rely, that our funds shall be remitted to Mr. Curtis under such terms, as we consider consistent with our own honor and his merits. I think it right to put on paper what I proposed to you, viz. That the remittance should be made to Mr. Curtis with such representations and suggestions as the United committees might determine upon, leaving the adoption of such suggestions, &c. to the honor and judgment of Mr. Curtis.

Yours, &c.

(8d) C. B. GREENLAW.

Mr. Beattie replied, shortly, that he feared the claque could not be introduced; so he, Mr. Greenlaw, considered Mr. Parker's apprehension to be but too well founded.

Mr. Gordon said, that, like the Venerable Chairman, he felt it necessary to explain how he came to be present at that meeting; for he was not, and never had been a subscriber to the Comprehensive Scheme. Neither, however, had he been a subscriber to the Precursor Scheme, but he was earnestly desirous of witnessing the extension of Steam communication with England to this side of India. But, like the Venerable Chairman, he thought, the attainment of this object could best be secured, by uniting, and this conviction he testified by at once subscribing to Mr. Curtis's prospectus, and recommending at the same time, for the sake of uniting, that modification of it, which was necessary to effect the union so greatly desired. He was willing to sacrifice such part of the Scheme as was prima facie of secondary importance, in order to secure the rest; but on this one condition only, that, if eventually such portion of the plan should prove to be essential to the accomplishment of the other, then he trusted there would be no difference of opinion that the whole must be adopted. But time pressed, and he therefore concurred with his friend, Mr. Parker, and the other requisitionists, that whatever might be the result of the attempt to reconcile the views of different parties, it was imperiously necessary to be prepared to remit the funds of subscribers, by the packet about about to be despatched. He therefore cordially joined with those gentlemen in begging all present, who wished success to that which all considered the paramount object, to be ready with the requisite amount of their subscriptions for immediate remittance.

Mr. Gordon then proposed the first Resolution, which was seconded by Mr. D. McFarlan.

I—that, while expressing to Mr. Curtis our warmest gratitude for his past exertions, and our entire confidence in his care, prudence, and judgment, we point out to him what appears defective in the prospectus, or has a tendency to vitiate its calculations,

Major Forbes, referred to the difficulty of SATISFACTORILY EXAMINING estimates, of which the prospectus only stated the gross accounts; and, having noticed that the number of passengers calculated on at first was probably too great he observed that a much greater number might fairly (have been stated) had the estimate, as is not unusual in similar cases, referred to the number which will pass along the line when the completion of its arrangements has rendered it—which all parties look to it becoming—the great thoroughfare between the two countries; a period when he stated he regarded it far from improbable the traffic by it might be found ten times greater than it is at present, by comparatively circuitous, and most inconvenient, routes.

Noting the expediency of forwarding to Mr. Curtis whatever recommendations or suggestions might be offered in this country regarding estimates, he concluded by reading a few notes on the general principles, which appeared to him particularly worthy of attention, as concerned the examination of the undetailed statements as yet alone before us.

The object he had in view, in referring to those notes, he affirmed, was an anxious desire to promote that returning feeling of unity and concord, so necessary to obtaining liberal subscriptions, and, therefore obviously so essential to the success of the undertaking.

Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore remarked, that when he came into the room, Mr. Parker asked him, what business he had there; but since he was permitted to remain, he begged to say a few words. He said that from the beginning he had tried to effect a conciliation between the dissenting parties. When Mr. Parker went to the committee meeting of the Precursor party and proposed his resolutions, he was the person that seconded Mr. Parker. But whether their arguments were not strong enough, or from what other cause, they failed in their endeavours. He was, however, glad to find on the present occasion, that the object of the chairman was also cordialization. But he asked if it would not be better to postpone the meeting to Saturday next, when it was not unlikely, that the matter might be altogether settled by causing a union between the parties. There was but one intervening day, and he asked what could be done in one day only, and what would be the harm done in waiting during that short space of time. A few thousand rupees at most may be sent in that time to keep their honour, but that would not assist the great object in view. Much could not be done in one day, nor any great harm accrue by waiting one day; he therefore suggested the expediency of postponing the proceedings to Saturday. He concluded by expressing his earnest wish to see the original union restored.

Mr. Parker.—In replying to my friend Dwarkanath Tagore, I would again ask, what harm this meeting will do by acting in the spirit of the resolutions placed before it. He says wait till Saturday. I, as a Comprehensive from the beginning, have no hopes of what Saturday will bring forth; but, if the Overland Mail did not leave Calcutta till the 1st of next month, instead of the 16th of this, I would add my voice to my friend Dwarkanath's and say, wait till Saturday. But, gentlemen, I beseech you to consider in what a position, the friends of the Comprehensive Scheme and English Company, would be placed in, if the proceedings of Saturday were adverse to what we conceive the course of trust and confidence, which ought to be followed. Saturday is the 14th, Sunday is not a day for business, and Monday is the last safe day for the Mail; so that we should positively have either to meet again on Monday, too late to settle anything satisfactory or encouraging to the Home Committee, or let the Mail go away without one sign of that confidence which I hope we entertain in the Home Direction, and with nothing but dark news of dissent and want of concord, unrelieved by one gleam of hope for the friends who have served us so well and so truly at Home. On the other hand, if we do find the Resolutions of the Saturday's Meeting, conformable in spirit to those on the table, we are prepared to join in the measure's heart and hand. Surely then, the mere circumstance of our putting down our monies on the 12th instead of the 14th, cannot have all the distasteful effects which Dwarkanath Tagore apprehends. Let me take this opportunity of again stating, that we do not put down those monies without pointing out objections to the scheme, which men of business, like our friends in England, would be mailmen and idiots to slight, it were only for their own sakes, for each member of the committee, holds as many shares as a house of agency does here. We only do not pay them the ill complement of binding them down by stipulations and conditions, as if we thought the temptation to their honesty from the sight of our funds, would be so great, that mere suggestions would be insufficient to restrain their cupidity. As many as think there should be such a return for all that has been done for us, will be right to act accordingly; but I am not one so to think, and I feel confident that my friend Dwarkanauth, if he considered this subject dispassionately, and exercised his own good judgment, would think as I do.

Mr. Greenlaw could not understand on what principle was, that they could be called upon to stay their proceedings. He had already read a letter from Mr. Beattie, the gentleman who had mainly been the instrument of uniting the two committees, in which, not referring to his own sentiments alone, but after seeing "a few of the friends of the united committees," he declared they all felt that the funds should be remitted on resolutions to be come to at the meeting; but no hint whatever was given of the nature of the resolutions which would be proposed. He had hoped that a spirit of conciliation would have been evinced towards his proposal; but it appeared as if we were to yield all our very principles of action,—principles on which we have been proceeding throughout, without the slightest regard to what was due to our own characters, and, what was more essential, to what we considered necessary to the success of that which all sought, and for which we had been so long struggling.

For his own part he was on every account public and private, most anxious to be able to remit the subscriptions through the committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund. Such a course would, as far as support to Mr. Curtis was concerned, bring it to one focus; and, as regards himself personally, it would relieve him from (what he was conscious he should otherwise have to undertake) further occupation of his time, which he could ill-borrow, under existing circumstances on this subject, however near his heart it might be. He, then, had every motive which could influence man to desire to throw the further prosecution of the matter in the hands of the committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund; and to effect it, there was nothing he was not willing to sacrifice short of his own honor and Mr. Curtis's merits.

Mr. Greenlaw gave Dwarkanauth Tagore credit for the motives by which he was influenced, which doubtless were such as always influenced him in his public conduct, and such as always conferred honor on him. He gave him credit also for the manner in which he made his appeal, but it really was too much to come there and ask them to adjourn, and see what our friends on the other side would do for us on Saturday next. Such a proceeding would constitute our very names a by-word of folly. But, he thought that the spirit of Dwarkanauth's object might be obtained without any sacrifice of their own. Let us, said Mr. Greenlaw, proceed on our own way, and let us pass a resolution to the effect that, if, on Saturday next, a resolution shall be prepared, under which, in the judgment of certain gentlemen to be named, the funds obtained on the resolutions of the present meeting, can be remitted by the committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, without a sacrifice of the principles of their own resolutions, the Funds shall in that case be transferred to the committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, to be remitted to Mr. Curtis by them.

It appeared to him that this proceeding, while it would enable them to effect the object of their meeting, would leave the door open for unity of action as regards support to Mr. Curtis, unless on Saturday it was thought proper to close it.

Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore here enquired, if the original subscription was not conditional.

Captain Harrington observed that, as far as he could see, the only difference in the respective views of the two parties was, that while one wished to make suggestions merely, the other wanted to dictate and make conditions. And it would be a disgrace to the community of Calcutta, if they cannot agree where so slight a difference only exists.

Captain Johnston followed Mr. Parker.—He fully concurred with that gentleman in every thing he had said. It could serve no good end, and would be exceedingly ridiculous, with the resolution then before them, to adjourn a meeting convened purposely to discuss that resolution. He had the fullest confidence in the judgment, zeal, and integrity of Mr. Curtis and the gentlemen associated with him, and instead of waiting for whatever might be the resolution passed on Saturday next, they should advance the cause of Comprehensive Steam Navigation, by passing the resolution before them unanimously, and set an example which others ought to follow with a well supported, a fully supported, an unanimous resolution, to send their funds home forthwith to Mr. Curtis, to be at his disposal, unshackled by any condition save the suggestions that might follow.

The Archdeacon then remarked, that if the resolutions to be put to the meeting were good, let us be Precursors and let them be Comprehensive, and let us set an example, and join in carrying out the resolutions.

Captain Johnston said, the truth is there is a little jealousy entertained up on the subject of this resolution, which it is desired that we should postpone; it is no good a resolution, that my friend Dwarkanauth is most desirous it should originate with his committee, and he would fain deprive this meeting of the honor and credit of it; but as I have no mind to let such a good, unenviable resolution go out of our own hands, I will urge it again. Gentlemen, that we do now unanimously carry the resolution as it has been read, and without any amendment.

Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore's amendment for an adjournment to Saturday, seconded by Mr. Davis, was then about to be put, but was withdrawn, as he did not think it would be supported.

The first resolution was here put and carried.

Mr. Parker then moved the second resolution, which was seconded by Major Forbes and carried:

2.—That we express our reliance upon the honor and integrity of the Chairman, and Deputy-Chairman, and Board of Directors, that if the calculations of the prospectus are, in their judgment, irretrievably vitiated by the correction now made, the project will not be persevered in on its present footing.

Mr. Parker.—In presenting the resolution, said, now, gentlemen, does this resolution propose any thing more than the home direction has merited at our hands? Is there any folly or softness, to use an expressive term, in trusting such men as Mr. Curtis, Mr. Laikins, Mr. Little, Mr. Thiburn, Mr. Roberts, Mr. Harding and Mr. Bagshaw thus far? Does not every man of common sense feel satisfied, that though we only suggest and do not stipulate, yet those suggestions will, to the integrity and honor of such men, be as binding as the most iron conditions that were ever forged into a chain for the embarrassment of distant friends? But, gentlemen, you will ask what are our suggestions? What are the calculations to be placed before Mr. Curtis as a direction? I think I shall satisfy you on that head. I think I shall satisfy you, that it would be difficult to urge any stronger than those we would propose to send home from this meeting. I applied this morning to my friend, Mr. Turton, for a copy of his calculations, (those placed before a recent meeting,) by which he shewed that the London Prospectus could not stand. I told him that it was my intention to propose them to this meeting, as the objections to the London Scheme, which we would place before the Home Direction. Many of them are beyond doubt strongly put and are apparently well founded—and what then? If the London Board can find no remedy—if they had Mr. Turton's calculations, fatal to the Scheme, can we not trust them with the amount of our shares for a little month or two, lest they should swallow them up in pure avarice and the love of jubbery? For it resolves itself after all, the Huskari newspaper justly observed, into this, viz. a matter, if the worst comes to the worst, of remittance and re-remittance. If, after considering our objections, they can conscientiously, as men of honor and men of business, use our money in the great scheme, which so deeply interests us all, in Heaven's name trust them to do so; if they can not they will return it, and there's an end of the matter; but in the mean while, time, which is more precious at this juncture than gold—time, gentlemen, will be saved. Under any circumstances, however, I trust we could not have proceeded more fairly or more openly than to submit to this meeting, for adoption, the searching, and we may be assured not too favourable, analysis which Mr. Tutton has obligingly permitted me to use.

Capt. Harington here took the opportunity to observe, that it was not improbable that an increase of passengers on the other side, would follow, when over such Steamers as the British Queen was brought on the line. The greatest people of England might take passages for pleasure.

Capt. Johnston then proposed the third Resolution, which being seconded by Mr. Greenlaw, was carried:

3.—That we make our remittances and place our funds thus frankly in the hands of the Board of Directors to the entire understanding confidence, that according to previous intention, the line between Calcutta, Madras, Point de Galle and Suez, shall be completed in the first instance—each vessel being put on that line as she is ready.

After this resolution was put from the chair, Mr. Parker rose and observed, that it might be irregular, but he could not bring to the notice of the meeting, a letter which bore on the subject of the resolution. He would read it.

To C. B. GREENLAW Esq.

Secretary New Bengal Steam Fund.

Sir,—We, whose names are hereunto subscribed, being desirous of the earliest possible establishment of steam communication between this side of India and England, request the favor of your remitting to Messrs. Curtis and Larkins, Chairman and Deputy-Chairman of the "East India Steam Navigation Company," the first instalment of our respective subscriptions, according to the terms of their prospectus, and that you will be pleased to effect such remittance by the next overland packet.

We have the honor to be, Sir, your obt. servt.

J. G. GORDON.

Calcutta, 7th March, 1840.

The letter had the concurring signatures of Sir Jasper Nevill, Messrs. Parker and McFarlan, and Major Forbes, and Mr. Parker, proposed that it should be put round the table, which was done.

It was then proposed by Capt. Harington, seconded by Col. Dunlop, and carried:

4.—That we consider it inexpedient to start the scheme with functionaries receiving high salaries, either in India or in England; but that the fixed stipend should be on the most moderate scale, and the aggregate emolument of an office should be made to depend in some degree upon the profits of the concern.

Proposed by Col. McLeod, seconded by Col. Fiddes, and carried:

5.—That we understand ourselves to be advancing our funds to a company assured of a charter.

Proposed by Major Irvine seconded by Major Forbes, and carried:

6.—That we trust the first steamer will be placed on the line between Calcutta and Suez, within eighteen months from the present date.

Proposed by Mr. J. J. Llewellyn, seconded by Mr. Robt. Campbell, and carried:

That a committee be appointed, consisting of the following gentlemen: The venerable the archdeacon; Mr. H. M. Parker; Mr. Greenlaw, Mr. McFarlan, Major Forbes, and Captain Johnston.

Mr. Greenlaw then proposed the following resolution, after a few remarks to the same effect, as has already been given. Mr. William Forbes Gibbon seconded.

8.—That if, in the judgment of the Venerable the Archdeacon and Mr. Parker, any Resolution shall be passed at the steam meeting, convened for Saturday next, by the spirit of which the funds collected under the resolution, now passed, can be remitted to Mr. Curtis by the committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, without prejudice to such resolutions, the committee now appointed be authorized to transfer them to the committee of that fund, to be by that committee remitted to Mr. Curtis.

Thanks being then voted to the chairman, the meeting dispersed.—Hulk, March 14.

Pursuant to the requisition in the public papers, about a hundred and fifty gentlemen interested in steam matters, assembled in the Town Hall, on Saturday morning last, at 10 o'clock. On a motion of Mr. James Pattle, seconded by Mr. T. E. M. Tutton, the Venerable the Archdeacon took the chair.

The venerable chairman then rose, and addressed the meeting, saying, that he did not expect to have been present at the meeting, having all along been satisfied to be a silent, though anxious, spectator of the progress of steam matters. But the subject of a steam communication having arrived at an important crisis, he had been induced to attend the present meeting, when he hoped to find every gentleman yielding a little, and thus restoring union in the midst of the existing divisions. He hoped that none would impugn the motives of any, but considering the great object all have at heart, join unanimously in carrying out the object of the present meeting, and thus inspire confidence in England. An efficient steam communication between England and India, has now arrived, as it were, to the verge of completion, and he trusted from his heart, that instead of destroying this desired end by divisions, gentlemen would even make a little sacrifice for the attainment of it. For his own part, the venerable chairman would feel very thankful, if any thing he could do, would lead to a happy union of the contending parties, and the eventual attainment of the grand measure of steam communication.

Mr. W. Pinnep, in presenting to the meeting the report of the proceedings of the united committee, and the draft of a letter prepared by a sub-committee, to be addressed to Mr. Curtis, remarked that the chief object of the present meeting, was to reconcile the difficulties which caused divisions between them, and he hoped the result would prove satisfactory, by leading to unanimity. He then proceeded to read the proceedings of the united committee, including a letter from Mr. J. G. Gordon, and the resolutions passed by them, which he begged to submit to the meeting.

Mr. J. W. Cragg, then proposed the adoption of the report, which was seconded by Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore.

Mr. H. M. Parker, here begged to put one question to Mr. Cragg. If the approval of the report necessarily included the approval of Mr. Gordon's letter also?

Mr. Cragg replied, that he was in the hands of the meeting, and the question also was open to them.

Mr. J. Pante observed, that approving the proceedings would imply the approval of Mr. Gordon's letter also.

Mr. Prinsep here suggested, the first resolution being put, when—

Mr. D. Elliott remarked, that as the draft letter alluded to by Mr. Prinsep formed a part of the proceedings, he thought that the letter should also be read before the proceedings could be received by the meeting.

Mr. A. Beattie, however, differed from Mr. Elliott, and explained, that as the proceedings were the basis of the letter, they should be first passed before the letter could be put in.

Mr. Parker got up to say, that he was placed in a delicate situation, not having come to the meeting from his own free will, but having come as the representative of a large body of subscribers, who had subscribed on the condition not to bind Mr. Curtis to conditions, but merely to make suggestions to him. This was the situation in which he was placed before the meeting, and in order to determine this point as the representative of a large body of subscribers, he had but one only present to support him, namely his venerable friend the Archdeacon. He was bound to support the side of remitting in mercy to England with unlimited confidence in Mr. Curtis, and if any thing like want of confidence in Mr. Curtis was brought before the meeting he, for one, acting as he did, as the representative of a number of absent subscribers, could not give his vote in favor of it. Mr. Gordon's letter went to make conditions and not merely suggestions to Mr. Curtis, and he could not commit himself on the body of absent subscribers he represented, by giving his approval to it.

Mr. Turton replied to the preceding speaker, and in effect said, that it was not his intention to say any thing on the present occasion; but from what had fallen from Mr. Parker, he would put it to the meeting, if gentlemen opposing their own principles to the principles of others, were not preventing union, which was the chief object for which the present meeting had been called. All were in duty bound to make some concession. Others had conceded a great deal, and the large body of subscribers represented by Mr. Parker, should concede likewise, particularly when the subscription of only three different houses amount to the same as that of the large body of subscribers. If this large body of subscribers, however, were determined not to make conditions, he was certain that they were opposed to union also, and then, he was satisfied, the object of this meeting was not to cause a general union. Mr. Turton went on to say, that he could not acquiesce in the condition mentioned by Mr. Parker, of placing unlimited confidence in Mr. Curtis. He considered Mr. Parker's party as a third party, distinct from the Comprehensive and Precursor, and he designated them as the blind party, who had not come to the meeting for the object of union. But they had no business there. Let the blind, said Mr. Turton, go their way and grope in the dark, and not cause a confusion among those who have a different task to perform. There was no hope of bringing them over to join without large concessions, and they had better not have come, therefore, as the object of the meeting was union.

Mr. Turton then proceeded to allude to him, whom he called the peace-maker, who had not been pledged to any party and boasted that he was neither a comprehensive nor a precursor, and who, he remarked, had better have stayed away until union was restored. He spoke, he said, of Mr. Gordon, who had come to Mr. Turton, and professed to be unpledged; but he finds that he is come to the meeting with principles opposed to union. He referred to the letter of Mr. Gordon, addressed to Mr. Greenlaw, which he did not, however, object to; but he objected to Mr. Gordon's pretending to be indifferent. Mr. Turton was obliged to confess, that all this served to throw suspicion on that letter.

Mr. Turton again referred to placing unlimited confidence in Mr. Curtis; who, if he wanted the blind party to sail through America, they would consent to it, and talk about paying a visit to the city of New York. If we are to make suggestions, and suggestions only, to Mr. Curtis, then he is to drive all freedom and we all slavery. If this was the way, Mr. Turton proceeded, say the meeting was to commence, he thought there was not any use of proceeding further with the business. He concluded by proposing the following 1st—Proposed by Mr. Turton, seconded by Mr. Grant, and carried, That this meeting does distinctly and unquestionably adopt as the basis of future proceedings, the letter of Mr. J. G. Gordon, dated the 9th inst., addressed to the United steam committee, as containing the terms which ought to govern the union between the respective parties engaged in the promotion of steam navigation between England and India.

Mr. Parker here left the meeting, saying, that as one of the benighted he would make his exit, and Mr. Turton very courteously acted as chaperon, and led him, by the arm, as far as the door of the Hall.

Mr. J. G. Gordon then rose, and said, that he wished, that in justice to him, Mr. Parker had remained. He then, in explanation of what had been remarked by Mr. Turton, said, that he belonged to no party; he was not a Comprehensive nor a Precursor, but he was anxious for the establishment of an efficient steam communication between England and India, and therefore he was ready to adopt the plan best calculated for this end. But no plan, he thought, could carry out this plan without union. Mr. Turton had misapprehended the letter addressed to Mr. Greenlaw. In the course of its getting signatures, the difference between Comprehensive and Precursor was sufficiently understood, though all concurred in the subject of steam generally.

After offering a few further remarks on this head, Mr. Gordon went on to say, that he did not concur with Mr. Parker. He observed, that he did not consider those who attended on Thursday, had pledged themselves as to the form of applying to Mr. Curtis, whether to tell the terms under which they placed the funds in his hand, or merely to suggest to him. With the latter course, however, he did not agree. In remitting our funds to Mr. Curtis, we were not addressing him as a son of pomp, dressed in purple raiment, but in the ordinary course of business. We tell him in all civility and politeness, that on these terms we will give you our money, which if you do not agree to, we will not give it. And as to the suggestions, Mr. Parker and his party wish to make, are they not to be to Mr. Curtis's honor, and is not honor binding? But Mr. Curtis would much rather be definitely dictated to than not. Mr. Gordon went on to refer to Mr. Parker's resolutions and the resolutions of the united Committee, which being joined, would be concurred in by all, except perhaps Mr. Parker himself, and two or three others.

Mr. Gordon concluded by observing, that as the matter at present stood, it was, as one of the gentlemen said, on Thursday, a question simply of words.

The venerable chairman rose and explained, that he was not going blindly to work, but that he saw the exact position of Mr. Curtis. And all the contention was whether Mr. Curtis was to be free or bound. He had come to join in Mr. Parker's amendment, which he sincerely hoped all present would carry out.

Mr. D. Elliott suggested, that both the resolutions should be amended.

Some conversation here issued when—

Mr. W. P. Grant said, that instead of three speakers there should be one speaker at a time. He said he was one of the first supporters of the establishment of steam communication, and on the present occasion he wished nothing should be done, unless they all united. Their object, for assembling this-day, was not to flatter any parties, nor to applaud any parties, but to ascertain the exact difference that may exist, to find out what we are to give up, and how much we are not to give up.

The next point to which Mr. Grant directed the attention of the meeting, was Mr. Gordon's letter, which in recommending the adoption of, he never wished to pledge people to the precise words of it. This he thought would be more than reasonable. The pledge was not to the phraseology of Mr. Gordon's letter, but the spirit of it. If we only approve of the spirit of the letter, we should unite in it, join with it and adopt it. Mr. Grant concluded by saying, that he was anxious that all present would come to a distinct declaration as to Mr. Burton's resolution, whether they would unite in the adoption of Mr. Gordon's letter. If they will join, it is not necessary to abide by the exact wording of the letter, the expression wrong suggestion might be substituted for decided coalition. The meeting was not called to try the strength of parties, but to consider the best terms on which a union can be effected.

Some rather desultory talk followed, after which Captain Johnston requested that the requisition should be read once more, and after it had been read, he explained his reasons why he maintained that the money should be sent to Mr. Curtis unshackled. First, he was satisfied from his long experience in steam matters, that neither the comprehensive nor the precursor would by itself pay. Whatever had been subscribed, and whatever may yet be subscribed, would sink, unless government assistance was obtained. He felt persuaded that the assistance of government could be obtained, but they would afford support to the plan most comprehensive. Another reason for sending money unshackled to Mr. Curtis was, that unless the communication comprehended the other side of the isthmus, the advantage of British capital could not be got. And it was paramourly necessary to look to pecuniary advantages, before we give our capital. At present but few take any interest in the improvement of India, and some emolument must be held out in England, to ensure the assistance of English capital.

Mr. Pattle here rose, and after making a few observations on the party who are led by Mr. Parker, and who profess to place confidence in Mr. Curtis's honor, as well as his intellectual powers, went on to ask, if Mr. Curtis was not to be considered in the same light as agents generally—and how they could place unbounded confidence in him, when he was not acting singly but had other associates with him. He asked if any scheme in the world was ever entrusted to agents, with such unbounded confidence? For his own part, he was assured, that Mr. Curtis and his associates, so far from considering it disrespectful, would prefer receiving definitive instruction in regard to their future actions. Unbounded confidence, and honour, and all that, no doubt, sounds well, but are all only wordy nonsense. Mr. Parker's party may be so many Solomons and we fools, but if we give Mr. Curtis our confidence, let us give our instructions and point out our wishes with it.

Mr. Pattle concluded by saying, that it could never be done as Mr. Parker wished it.

Mr. Elliott here begged to suggest, that if they were to pledge themselves to a principle, they should first learn what those principles were, and as the draft letter was the result of the proceedings of the united committee, he said that letter should be read before the proceedings themselves could be adopted.

Mr. Beattie explained, that it would scarcely be in order to take Mr. Elliott's amendment, as the draft letter drawn up by the sub-committee had not been received, nor even submitted to the united committee.

Mr. Prinsep remarked, that the chief object of the United company was merely to conciliate all differences.

Major Forbes said, that Mr. Grant had explained the whole satisfactorily.

Mr. Burton explained, that Mr. Gordon's letter had been before the public for a whole week, thus allowing ample opportunity for considering and canvassing it. But the draft letter was only then publicly brought forward, and it could not be understood, unless Mr. Gordon's letter was taken as the basis of it. The draft would be put to the meeting afterwards, and then it could be repudiated or adopted, but Mr. Gordon's letter should be first received. The immediate question before the meeting, therefore, was, whether Mr. Gordon's letter was approved or not.

Mr. G. A. Bushby said, he would vote for Mr. Elliott's amendment, as opposed to Mr. Gordon's letter.

Mr. Grant remarked, that if Mr. Elliott's amendment were carried, they would all take up their hats and walk away.

Mr. Burton agreed with Mr. Grant.

Mr. C. W. Smith here begged to say a few words about the principle of honour. He said, that suppose he were to go to a tailor to make him a coat, and did not first give his measurement, the tailor would certainly take him to be a simpleton. Accordingly he thought, that the draft letter could not be considered, unless Mr. Gordon's letter, which formed the basis of it, were first received.

The Venerable chairman acquiesced with this opinion as reasonable.

Some further conversation took place, when Mr. Elliott withdrew the amendment he intended to propose, and the first resolution, proposed by Mr. Burton and seconded by Grant, was put and carried, with only one opposition.

Mr. Prinsep then read the draft letter addressed to Mr. Curtis, and drawn up by the sub-committee. The letter was as follows:—

LETTER TO MR. CURTIS ADOPTED AT THE MEETING.

TO T. A. CURTIS, ESQ., &c. &c. &c.

Sir.—On the part of the newly constituted committee, for all matters connected with steam communications between this country and Great Britain, I have the honor to transmit to you the results of a late meeting at the Town Hall as per margin, where, with a view to combine the good will and co-operation of all persons who were interested in this great object, it was resolved to refer past differences and present objections to a committee combining the several opinions held upon this important subject, which, though apparently hostile, were from the first entirely devoted to one and the same object, and whence it was confidently believed, would emanate such a plan for future proceedings as would satisfy the Indian public and yourself, and sink all difference and discordance in the one great and earnest desire to carry out the scheme, to which your much admired real and able services have been so long and arduously devoted.

The proceedings of this united committee comprising names already familiar to you, with others, that of them, selves are sufficient guarantee for future friendly, unanimity and zealous support, laid before you as per margin, and in pursuance of the second resolution of that committee, confirmed by the proceedings of a general meeting held at the Town Hall this morning, a copy of which is herewith handed to you as per margin, I have the honor to call your attention to those points which are considered with reference to the prospectus lately received from you, essential to the effective co-operation of all those who have given their subscription or their aid in any manner, or to whatever scheme, for the bringing about a direct steam communication between this country and England.

It is felt by all, that division can only be injurious and perhaps destructive to our long-desired hopes;—it has been unquestionably allowed that by unanimity and perseverance everything may be reasonably expected where, whatever plans may be finally adopted, they are in the hands of such a respected body as yourself and your colleagues;—with this as the prevailing sentiment of all connected with this subject, and without referring to the causes which led to those differences and separation of interests, which in fact have been those only of action and not of feeling, we proceed to lay before you the reasons why your present prospectus and plan for future proceedings must be subjected to considerable modification, and then to detail to you the basis upon which it is earnestly hoped you will be able to rest the constitution of the company you are forming in England, so as to secure its effective combination with that already formed here, under the style of the Eastern steam navigation company, really formed (as already advised you by the directors of that company in their letter of the 11th January 1840,) as well as to carry with it the active support of all India.

Your present plan comprises the immediate remittance of a large portion of the funds subscribed to the comprehensive scheme. But you will perhaps remember that the original subscription to this scheme had in view the entire comprehensive plan, including Bombay as well as the expectations that the British government and East India Company would contribute a large aid towards it. That only 10 per cent. was paid up upon the shares subscribed for, and that the continuance of the subscription was conditional to the plan to be proposed, and that the sanction of each subscriber must now, therefore, be procured, before remittances can be made, or further contributions be demanded. A large portion of the subscribers have already signified their consent, and a further part may reasonably be expected from those persons in or about Calcutta, before the departure of the present overland mail. It is thought that the prospectus you have now forwarded will not so entirely bear examination as to carry conviction to every mind as to the results held out, while more certain information is required as to the method of carrying out and working a plan that will depend so much upon good management as well in England as in India; still there are many whose confidence is so entirely and deservedly placed in yourself and the gentlemen connected with you in the London direction, that they will doubtless at once place their subscriptions at your control, if they will aid you in carrying out the great scheme you have projected, there are others who will more anxiously wait till they see the plan more fully developed. And to these must be added a very considerable portion of the original subscribers who have supposed that by immediate action in the devoting their subscriptions to the construction of one steamer of 1,500 tons, with less than 450 horse power, and the placing her as soon as possible upon the line from Bombay to Suez, they will most beneficially support the original intentions of all who have desired to open this direct communication by steam. This party is already in action, as their reference to yourself will have shown you—they cannot stop their progress, £10,000 have been already remitted by them to their agents and £5,000 more are going by the present mail, and very probably ere you receive this contract will have been completed for both vessels and engines.

Your scheme embraces the whole line of communication on the mediterranean side as well as that of the Red Sea.

It is the deliberate opinion, we believe, we may say, of all the subscribers in India, that their views and capital should be devoted to the sole object of completing this side of the connexion, namely, from Suez to the ports of India, and the crossing from Suez to Alexandria, particularly since they have found so little likelihood exists of getting any early support in the more comprehensive scheme from either Her Majesty's government or the East India Company.

There is likewise, I may add, a conviction of the necessity, that under any circumstances the constitution of whatever company may be formed for carrying out either the above views or those of your directors, should embrace the entire independence of the local management in India, and its selection and nomination of all the officers or assistants that may be considered requisite. This will be found in no way incompatible with the best interests of a joint stock company, working simultaneously in London and Calcutta, as may be seen from the result of similarly constituted societies now in active operation.

With these observations before you, I proceed to call your attention to that part of the late proceedings, which is accepted by all parties, as the grounds for your future guidance in carrying into effect the great object all are bent upon.

First.—That for the present, the line between Suez and Calcutta, which is totally unoccupied, should have all your attention, as it is sure of all the support of every friend to steam in India.

Second.—That the line between Alexandria and London be left to a separate, though corresponding association in England.

Third.—That only upon the following provisions will a very large portion of the Indian subscribers consent to interest themselves in the double or comprehensive plan, viz.

1st.—Should it be found that the requisite number or amount of subscriptions cannot be obtained in England, without accepting the complete line of communication on both sides.

2d.—Should it be found that a charter cannot otherwise be obtained.

3d.—Should it be found that no otherwise can the aid of H. M. Government and Court of Directors be obtained.

4th.—Nor the quarantine laws relaxed, and Fifthly.—That under any circumstances the entire arrangements for the management of India shall rest with the direction in Calcutta.

Whit these remarks before you, which the proceedings above referred to will shew you have been confirmed by all, I have only to add the earnest hope of the united body of contributors to steam communication, that you may be induced so far to modify your scheme, as to embrace their views and wishes. Your company may thus with facility be amalgamated with that already in operation here, and form one company, though under the operation of a double engagement. - It is considered that this has many advantages, but the first, the greatest, the paramount one is, that it will unite all in one common object, all will struggle together as friends to establish the great desideratum instead of pulling against each other, and perhaps defeating, certainly endangering the common object.

In the correspondence which is directed to yourself, as well as to their own agents in London, by the company formed here, namely, the Eastern navigation company, you will observe that if in your opinion jointly with that of their agents or committee in London, some decisive advantage, as described in Mr. Gordon's letter, and referred to in the above provisions, is to be attained by completing the comprehensive scheme, and which cannot otherwise be obtained, that company will not object to concede this important point. But they will require that such advantages shall be to their agents in London most clear, and apparent, before they will consent that their friends shall be embarked in any steam enterprise beyond Alexandria.

I have further merely to call your attention to that resolution of the meeting of this morning, which refers to the appropriation of the funds, which it is hoped will be a sufficient guidance for you in that respect.

I have the honor to be, Sir, yours sincerely,

WM. PRINCEP.

Provisional Secy. to the United Committee.

It was then proposed by Mr. G. A. Bushby and seconded by Mr. J. Pattle :

2d.—Proposed by Mr. Bushby, seconded by Mr. Pattle, and carried, That the draft letter now read be adopted by the Meeting.

The Venerable chairman here suggested some slight alterations to be made to the letter, but after a short conversation, the resolution was put and carried by a majority, there being only three against it.

Mr. Grant then enquired what was to be done in pursuance to the letter ?

Captain Johnston observed, that it would be acted upon according to the conditions of the chartered committee, as previously made.

Mr. Beattie got up, and proposed, the appointment of a committee, to carry out the objects of the letter.

This resolution originally elected Mr. Parker, chairman of the committee, Mr. Turton, deputy-chairman, and Mr. Princep, the secretary for the present, all a secretary with a suitable allowance, was entertained.

Mr. Turton said, he had no advantage to remain in the committee as the deputy-chairman, but would rather, that Mr. Parker kept the chair himself.

Major Forbes expressed his disinclination to belong to the committee,

Captain Johnston likewise was reluctant.

Mr. Turton also objected to the appointment of Mr. Princep, and the omission of Mr. Limond, as their secretary.

Mr. N. Alexander agreed with Mr. Turton on this point.

It was finally arranged, to make all into a committee, and accordingly Mr. Beattie's amended proposition, seconded by Mr. C. W. Smith, which was as follows, was put and carried unanimously :—

3d.—Proposed by Mr. Beattie, seconded by Mr.

Sixthly That the Committee now formed, made up of individuals representing the views of all parties here, in conformity with the fifth paragraph of the letter of Messrs. Curtis and Laing, addressed to Mr. Greenlaw, bearing date the 4th January last, which shall consist of the following gentlemen: Messrs. H. M. Parker, T. E. M. Fenton, J. Pattle, Major Forbes, Captain Johnston, Mr. C. B. Greenlaw, R. S. Thomson, Baboo Duttanath Tagore, Mr. Daniel Elliott, Baboo Ram Churn Sein, Mr. Stephen, J. A. Gordon, G. A. Bushby, G. Newcomen, J. Colquhoun, F. W. Ferguson, J. Collen, J. W. Craig, J. Allan, Baboo Motilal Seal, Mr. C. Lyall, N. P. Grant, and A. Beattie ; which Committee shall forthwith place themselves in direct correspondence with Mr. Curtis and his Board of Directors in London, in order to give effect to the foregoing Resolutions, and that they shall have power to appoint a Secretary and other officers, with suitable salaries, and that for the present Mr. Princep be requested to act as Secretary to the Committee.

Mr. Beattie then read the fourth resolution for the consideration of the meeting.

Mr. Turton, in reference to it, begged to enquire what would be done with the money, after it had reached home ! The letter made no provision for the disposal of this point. He, therefore, would suggest, that if Mr. Curtis failed to form a company at home, the money should be handed over to their agents. As the matter stood, they had done nothing, no instructions had been given, nor any stipulation made in regard to the disposal of the funds.

Mr. Turton, therefore, proposed an amendment to the fourth resolution as read by Mr. Beattie.

Mr. W. F. Ferguson also drew up an amendment to the same resolution, somewhat differing from that of Mr. Turton.

Considerable conversation on the subject took place, and it was ultimately agreed on all hands, that it would be but just that a certain period should be fixed upon, for the establishment of the plan at home. In case they succeeded, the precursor party should resign their funds, &c., to Mr. Curtis's company, and on the other hand, if they failed to mature a company within the stipulated period, in that case the monies should be all made over to the agents of the precursor party at home.

The fourth resolution accordingly being amended and proposed by Mr. W. F. Ferguson, and seconded by Mr. J. F. M. Reid, was put and carried unanimously.

4th.—Proposed by Mr. W. F. Ferguson, seconded by Mr. J. F. M. Reid, that the Secretary of the New Bengal Steam Fund, be requested to obtain the consent of as many subscribers to the conditional fund as possible during this day and Monday, to the remittance of the first instalment required by Mr. Curtis ; and, that the first instalment of the remaining subscribers, who cannot be communicated with before the departure of the first Overland Mail, and who may subsequently signify their consent, shall be remitted by the forthcoming Mail ; the remaining instalment to follow in due course, as prescribed in paragraph third of Mr. Curtis's letter of the 4th Jan. last. And further, that if within six months of the receipt of this, a Company be established by Mr. Curtis, on the terms and conditions specified in the letter agreed to by the Directors of the Eastern Steam Navigation Company, shall cause to be handed over to that company, the funds remitted on vessels and engine-building, Mr. Curtis's Company taking up the engagement of the E. S. N. Company, and, on the other hand, if Mr. Curtis should fail in establishing, or decline to establish, or join in a Company, such as is contemplated by this Meeting, in accordance with the suggestions and provisions of the letter of the United Committee, read and approved this day, that he shall then hand over the funds to the Agents of the E. S. N. Company in London.

Thanks being then voted to the venerable chairman for so ably presiding on the occasion, the meeting dispersed near one o'clock.—Hurk. March 16.

To WILLIAM PRINSEP, Esq.

Secretary to a Committee appointed at a Meeting at the Town Hall, on the 14th March 1840.

Dear Sir,—I request that you will do me the favour to withdraw my name, from the committee appointed at the meeting on Saturday last, for the reasons which at that meeting I professed my apprehension would be established, viz., that the Resolution then carried would not remove the objections of the committee of the previous Thursday, to join their funds with those of the precursor committee. At the meeting on Saturday, I stated my reasons for holding the path I do, and I will here, with your permission, repeat them.

1. From my experience in the expenses of Steam vessels, and after a careful consideration of the estimates that have been put forth, I am convinced that neither the 'comprehensive' nor the precursor scheme can be maintained, except with the aid of a large annual pecuniary grant from Government, and I believe that all the money expended in endeavours to establish either scheme, will be so much capital uselessly expended, if the Government aid be withheld; but most advantageously employed if it have the effect of at last winning the necessary support from Government.

2. I am most sanguine of the support required, being granted to an efficient and complete scheme when established. By efficient and complete, I mean a scheme comprehending a sufficient number of vessels to maintain a monthly communication, and extending throughout the whole line between Calcutta and an English port.

3. Such a scheme cannot be undertaken without the aid of British capital being subscribed, as the money here may be without a fair hope of profitable return. The least of the advantages that we Indians expect from the money we may thus cast upon the waters, is pecuniary profit, though, with the exception of our few relatives and friends in Britain, it is the only one that can be expected to operate with the mass of our countrymen.

4. By sending your money in aid of the complete scheme, which assures them present profit on their ships and machinery, and remuneration for their time and exertions, with other advantages in prospective, you give them a bonus to loosen their purse strings and exert their energies in your cause, without which they must remain inactive, I have limited my subscription to an amount that I am prepared to give in this way; and if every man in India, who cares for rapid communication with his relatives, whether by letter or in person, and if every man who beyond these enjoyments has a delight in contemplating the advantages that India and other Eastern nations must derive from such free intercourse, will give only to the same extent, the bonus will prove sufficient, and before two years have elapsed, Mr. Curtis may be in a position to claim the support, promised by the Court of Directors, to "any well devised scheme for extending the communication by steam to this side of India."

Sir, it is from the above consideration, that I hold fast by the committee who have sent their money to Mr. Curtis, unshackled by conditions, though accompanied with suggestions to which Mr. Curtis may attach what weight he may consider advisable.

When the precursor scheme was first published, I said await the next meeting of Parliament, and if Mr. Curtis has not by that time a scheme on foot I will join you. The next mail brought intimation of Mr. Curtis's scheme, and therefore I have not joined that of the precursor. Their scheme, I hoped, would at once have been withdrawn; it divided the public mind and fostered dissension, and I have no hesitation in declaring, that had the precursor scheme never been introduced, India had now been unanimous in support of the comprehensive Mr. Curtis's scheme, as advocated ably and indefatigably through a period of 17 years, by my friend, Mr. Greenlaw, who, at the moment when his exertions had brought matters to the present promising crisis, is requited for all his good services by the desertion, I will not say of India, for India will still support his measures, but by a great part of Calcutta, and, if not "by the nose," still led, or pushed along, by the go-a-head impetus, the flattering promises, or fearful threats of those who put in their sickle to a harvest (of fame and honor) that they have not sown.

I withdraw from the united committee, because as my friend Mr. Turlton says the reciprocity of that united committee appears to be all on one side. Before Mr. Curtis's prospectus appeared, the language of the comprehensive committee was "wait until June" and "then, if Mr. Curtis has not a company on foot, we shall become precursors." The precursor scheme was therefore to be supported by the comprehensive party, only if Mr. Curtis, to whom the latter stood pledged, should fail to establish a Company; but now that Mr. Curtis has established a company, instead of holding by their own principles or at least to the extent of making the comprehensive scheme the primary instead of the secondary consideration, they yield their ground to the precursors, falling into all their views and advocating all their principles—dictating to Mr. Curtis, "You must establish a Company between Calcutta and Suez, independent and unconnected with any Company North of the Isthmus of Suez, unbiassed and influenced by any interests save those of the Directors of the company in India. You must do this if it be practicable, and only on failing to accomplish this, and on no other terms whatsoever, and which endeavour to accomplish, and impracticability to carry out, must be made apparent and satisfactory to our (Precursor) Agent, you will be at liberty to pursue your own plans!!—Call you this backing of your Friends?"

Yours very obediently,

March 18, 1840.

J. H. JOHNSTON.

Hurkarn, March 20.

* Two conditions on which our money is sent home are those which form a part of Mr. Curtis's original scheme. The first is, that the Company shall be a Chartered Company.

The second.—That the line between Calcutta and Suez, shall be first completed.

† Our facetious great precursor, Mr. Turlton will reply, yes to be sure it is, it is backing them out—just what I want.

MEETING OF THE ASIATIC SOCIETY,

A Meeting of the Asiatic Society was held at their apartments last night—the Hon'ble Sir Ed. Ryan, President, in the Chair.

The proceedings of the last monthly meeting were read and confirmed, and the following gentlemen were ballotted for and elected Members of the Society, Messrs Jas Colquhoun, J. H. Swetnam, C. K. Hobson, T. C. Cadogan, R. H. Mahon, and M. Howard, the last as an Honorary Member. Professor Street, of Bishop's College, and Rajah Kunnath Roy, were proposed as Members.

Several works on various subjects had been presented from scientific and literary bodies, &c., since the last Meeting.

Major Ouseley of Sumbulpara, had sent a short notice of the mode adopted at Harakatta for washing gold dust.

Read a letter from Lieut. Abbott, dated Camp Peshawar, 15th January, accompanied by several warim specimens of coins, &c., which had been found in that part of the country.

The Secretary drew the attention of the Meeting to a curiosity which was on the table—a piece of the Nelson of the Royal George. It had been sent from Spithead by Mr. J. P. Parker, through Dr. Wallich. The fragment sent had been forced up at the recent explosion of the wreck, the wood is in beautiful preservation, and has one of the bolts through it also in good preservation.

Mr Fabin presented a sword-fish and hammer-headed shark which were on the table.

The question of the appointment of a Curator, was next brought before the meeting. In accordance with the resolutions of last Meeting, the Committee of Papers had framed a report, which had been submitted to Dr. McClelland, and Dr. McClelland had been again offered the situation on the terms agreed to at that meeting. Dr. McClelland's reply was read to the Meeting, and several gentlemen spoke on the subject, but as we think it would not be fair either to the Society or to Dr. McClelland to give a sketch of the speeches without also inserting the Committee of Papers' Report and the reply from Dr. McClelland, we abstain from saying anything further on the subject till we observe the papers alluded to published in the monthly proceedings of the Society in their own Magazine sufficient to say, that on the proposition of the Hon'ble W. W. Bird, Esq., seconded by Mr. Piddington, the report of the Committee of Papers, with only two dissentient voices, was confirmed.

The President then mentioned that there had been several applications for the Curatorship, and in consequence of Dr. McClelland having declined the situation, it was for the Meeting to determine the mode which should be adopted in the selection of the fittest person to the office; the better plan, he considered, would be, that the applications should be circulated through the Committee of Papers, and that they be requested to make their report upon the claims of the different candidates at the next Meeting. Should any difficulty be found in procuring a person in this country who shall have all the qualifications requisite—then, it will have to be considered if reference shall be made home for such a person.

It was, therefore, proposed by Mr. R. Walker, seconded by Mr. R. J. Eschschew—that the Committee of Papers be requested to consider the claims of candidates and submit their report thereon at the next Meeting.

The Secretary then begged the attention of the Meeting for a few minutes, to something which he doubted not would prove of greater interest than what had just been discussed. On the table was exhibited the very apparatus which had been used by Daguerre at Paris, in the obtaining and fixing of drawings from the Camera Obscura. The Secretary said that the process was very simple and yet very unintelligible, and then proceeded to explain the process through which the drawings are obliged to pass ere they reach a state of perfection. Several drawings were exhibited to the Meeting, of the Esplanade and other parts of Calcutta, which had been taken by him. In one part of one of the drawings, a black speck was observable to the naked eye, but with a microscope of great power it would be seen that the speck represented a kite which was at that moment perched on the building—and though so small, even the wings and tail of the bird could, with a lens, be easily distinguished, so minute and yet so true to life was the picture. The Secretary mentioned too, that this instrument had lately been used in Europe in the taking of miniature portraits—in which the exactness of the likenesses was most wonderful.

The meeting appeared highly delighted with this exhibition and adjourned at eleven o'clock, after voting a return of thanks for the various presentations, &c. the Meeting broke up.—Calcutta Courier, March 5.

THE BOMBAY BANK.

COMMUNICATED.—We are given to understand, that an answer has been received to the memorial inserted in our paper of the 4th instant, respecting the claims of certain individuals to be shareholders in the proposed Bank of Bombay, wherein the memorialists are informed that, having obtained their shares after the 25th of March 1838, and in contemplation of a private joint stock Bank rather than a Government chartered Bank, they have, as it seems to the president in council, been rightly excluded from the share list of the institution to be established by charter. The memorial is, however, to be transferred for further consideration to the Legislative Department.

In our columns of to-day, will be found another memorial of certain of the same individuals, which we are informed has been lately transmitted to the Supreme Government. The document certainly appears to throw a new and most favorable light upon the claims of the memorialists, and although beneath the 'Glimpses of the Moon' the principle of 'flat justice' admits, for the most part, of very partial application so that, in the ordinary course of human affairs, the most unquestionable rights of the few are frequently constrained to succumb before the interests of the many, the sentiment is nevertheless strong within the bosoms of mankind, that though they will not venture upon 'ruin calum' they generally feel sincere pleasure to find, that what they are inclined to consider, the fair and equitable, shall be carried into effect.

On reference to the memorial, it will be seen, that the memorialists rest their claims, principally, upon the unquestionable right of public bodies to pass resolutions by a majority of votes binding upon all their members; upon various resolutions thus passed at meetings of the Shareholders in the proposed chartered bank previous to the receipt of the letter of the Court of Directors authorising a chartered Bank; and upon a report of the chartered Bank committee, read to their constituents at a meeting held on the 2nd of October 1838, informing them that at their meeting of the 20th of March 1838, they had unanimously resolved to relinquish their claim, in any charter that might be obtained after that date, in favor of such of their body, with others, who resolved to establish a Bank without a charter.

The passage now printed in Italics, obtained the same distinction, in the authorized version of their proceedings, not long since published by the Bank committee, with the view of placing the Question then depending between the Bombay community and the Bengal Government, in its true light. It is strongly in favor of the Memorialists, and should their memorial, like its predecessor, be submitted, as it no doubt will, to the Legislative Council, they may feel confident, that authority will pause ere it proceed, by an ex post facto law, to deprive them of what they may perhaps justly consider, their legal rights.—Bombay Courier, Feb. 18.

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA IN COUNCIL.

The Humble Memorial of the undersigned Shareholders in the proposed Bank of Bombay.

SHEWETH,—That on the 11th of January 1837, a meeting of the existing body of Proprietors of the then proposed Chartered Bank, was held at Bombay, and that at the conclusion of the said meeting, the parties there present, agreed to support a Joint Stock Bank, in the event of the charter granted by the Bombay Government not being confirmed by the home authorities.

That at another meeting held at Bombay by public Advertisement on the 2d of February following, a prospectus for a Joint Stock Bank, was approved and adopted, and it was resolved "that the same gentlemen forming the provisional committee of the Chartered Bank, should act as the committee of the Joint Stock Bank, and that applications for shares in the said Joint Stock Bank would be received and registered at the office of Messrs Skinner and Co. of Bombay, until further notice."

That on such last mentioned resolution being publicly notified, your memorialists applied for and obtained shares in the said Joint Stock Bank; and paid up the deposits required from them.

That on the 20th of March 1838, at another meeting of the Proprietors of the proposed "Chartered Bank of Bombay, it was resolved, that if a Charter were not received in Bombay duly sanctioned by the Honorable Court on or before the 1st day of October then next, all further right, title, and claim whatsoever, to participate in such charter, or in the Bank thereby contemplated, should be considered to have ceased and determined at such last mentioned date;" and in order "to facilitate the payment of the deposit required for the shares taken in the Joint Stock Bank by Proprietors of Shares in the proposed Charter Bank, it was resolved, that the Treasurer should be authorized to comply with such directions as the Committee might give them, for the transfer to the Joint Stock Bank, of such amount of Deposits, as subscribers might apply to the Committee to be so transferred, for the shares they might possess in the said Joint Stock Bank."

That pursuant to such last mentioned resolutions, the respective Proprietors of Shares in the said proposed Chartered Bank, (with the exception only of about sixty separate individuals) authorized the transfer to the Joint Stock Bank, to the full extent of the same parties therein, of the Deposits made by them on account of their shares in the chartered Bank.

That the said last mentioned meeting afterwards resolved itself into a meeting of Proprietors of the Joint Stock Bank, when it was resolved "to take immediate steps for the establishment of a Joint Stock Bank at Bombay, to be designated "The Bank of Bombay," and that "provided no decisive answer was obtained from the Home Authorities, relative to a charter, on or before the 1st of October then next, that the Bank should then be opened for business, or as soon thereafter as the requisite arrangements might render practicable; but that, nevertheless, every effort should be made to procure a charter, and, for that purpose, that the Committee in London should be solicited to continue their valuable exertions towards effecting that object."

That on the 2nd of October 1838, no intelligence having been received in Bombay that the establishment of a chartered Bank had been authorized by the Honorable the Court of Directors, another meeting of the proposed Chartered Bank Proprietors, was held, when a report of the Committee was read, wherein it was stated amongst other things, that the Proprietors of the said Chartered Bank had, at their last meeting above mentioned, unanimously resolved to limit "the period for the continuance of all existing obligations to the 1st of October 1838, and thus to relinquish their claims to any charter that might be obtained after that date, in favor of such of their body with others who resolved to establish a Bank without a Charter."

That immediately after the said meeting, the Chartered Bank Proprietors there present, again resolved themselves into a meeting of Joint Stock Proprietors, and resolved (amongst other things) that, in accordance "with the 2nd Resolution of the 20th March last, the Bank of Bombay (to be under a trust deed) is declared to be established from this day's date, viz. 2d October, 1838."

That no intelligence of the Honorable the Court of Directors having authorized a chartered Bank, was received in Bombay until the month of December 1838, and that under the circumstances above mentioned your memorialists became and at the receipt of such intelligence in fact were, members of the only existing body of Bank Proprietors in Bombay.

That your memorialists have reason to believe, that the report of the proposed Chartered Bank Committee, above referred to, cannot have been brought to the notice of His Honor in Council at Calcutta, for after that Committee had thus clearly expressed in their report to their constituents, the nature of the resolutions they had passed, and after that report had been circulated and acquiesced in by the Proprietors at large, your memorialists cannot conceive it possible that His Honor in Council, with full knowledge of what had passed, should come to the conclusion* that the two resolutions passed unanimously on the 20th of March and 2d of October 1838, were a virtual and actual dissolution of that body, without transfer of their rights to any other body; and your memorialists respectfully submit, that although as stated in Mr. Secretary Reid's letter to the Committee of the 22d January last, your memorialists had been "connected only with the Joint Stock Bank, and had not in fact been applicants for shares in the chartered Bank before the 1st February 1837," the rights of the proposed chartered Bank Proprietors were thereby wholly transferred to your memorialists, and such of the Chartered Bank Proprietors as joined your memorialists in their resolution to establish a Bank without a Charter.

Letter from the Secretary of the Government of India, dated, 6th November 1839.

That your memorialists beg leave respectfully to insist upon the right originally possessed by the Proprietors of the proposed Chartered Bank of Bombay, in common with all associations of men united for a common and lawful purpose, to pass resolutions by a majority of votes binding upon all their members, and your memorialists feel convinced that had their claims and the grounds on which they rest, been specially made known to the Honorable the Court of Directors, as they would certainly have been had their rejection been contemplated by your memorialists, the Honorable Court, in their Dispatch of the 10th of May last, would undoubtedly have recommended an amicable arrangement of their claims, in common with, at least, if not in preference, to those of the original shareholders of the proposed chartered Bank, who separated from the Joint Stock Bank.

That your memorialists have, however, no desire (provided for) to obtain those advantages, to which they humbly deem themselves legally entitled, at the expense even of those who, by refusing to join the Joint Stock Bank, might perhaps be justly considered to have forfeited their rights; but that your memorialists humbly conceive they are entitled to expect that the resolutions passed unanimously on the 20th of March and 2nd of October 1838, and the explicit assurance they received at the meeting of the 2nd of October 1838, that they as well as those of the Joint Stock Proprietors who had been Proprietors of shares in the Original Chartered Bank, should be entitled to the benefit of any Charter that might be subsequently obtained, should be literally fulfilled.

Your memorialists, therefore, humbly pray, that your Excellency in Council will be pleased again to take the case of your memorialists under consideration, and that upon a review of all the circumstances above set forth, and having due regard to the fact that your memorialists have not only long since paid up their deposits, but for many months past, on the faith of their acknowledged rights, kept large sums of money undisturbed in order that they might be prepared to pay up the capital amount of their shares, you will be pleased to direct that such arrangements may be made as in your excellency in council shall seem meet, in order that the just claims of your memorialists may be satisfied, and that your memorialists may be admitted shareholders of as many shares in the Bank of Bombay, as they held in the proposed Joint Stock Bank.

And your memorialists will ever pray,

(Signed) _____

Shareholders of the proposed Bank of Bombay.

THE ASSAM TEA COMPANY.

At the First General Half Yearly Meeting of the Shareholders of the Assam Tea Company—Present, Messrs. J. Pattle, J. Becker, J. Colquhoun, Dwarkanath Tagore, A. de H. Larpent, G. F. Remfrey, H. Chapman, W. Prinsep, R. J. Lattery, H. Burkinyoung, C. Burkinyoung, S. Smith, A. D. MacLeod, and Prononocoomar Tagore.

J. Pattle, Esq., in the Chair.

The accounts and correspondence were laid on the table, and after reading the unbinned report of the Directors, of the proceedings of the Company, since its establishment, the following resolutions were proposed and carried.

Proposed by the Chairman, seconded by Mr. Smith, and Resolved.—That the report just read be approved, and printed for circulation among Proprietors—and that the recommendation of the Directors for the election of Messrs. Larpent, H. Holroyd, Prononocoomar Tagore, Henry Chapman and James Cullen, to complete their number, be confirmed.

Proposed by Mr. Larpent, seconded by Mr. Colquhoun and Resolved.—That the thanks of the Shareholders be given to Mr. William Prinsep for his valuable services, rendered gratuitously as Provisional Secretary during the past half year.

Proposed by Mr. W. Prinsep, seconded by Mr. Remfrey and Resolved.—That the Shareholders assembled having understood that the Agricultural Society having applied to Government through the Tea Committee, for a considerable portion of the produce of the past season, do now request the Directors will apply in like manner for some packages of each description of Mr. Bruce's next despatch.

Proposed by Mr. Colquhoun, seconded by Prononocoomar Tagore, Esq., and Resolved.—That the Directors address a letter to the Governor-General in Council, expressive of their thankfulness for the important aid now afforded the object of the Association.

Proposed by Mr. Lattery, seconded by Mr. H. Burkinyoung and Resolved.—That the thanks of the Meeting are due to Captain Jenkins and his Assistants, Captain Veitch and Captain Brodie, and also to Major Davidson, for the warm interest they have taken in the prosperity of this Association.

Mr. W. Prinsep having stated to the Meeting, that great difficulty had frequently occurred in collecting a sufficient number of Directors to make a quorum for the conduct of business and that in many public bodies where important business was to be conducted, a system of fines for attendance and fines for non-attendance had been found wholesome in practice, he proposed and Mr. A. D. MacLeod seconded—

That the payment of one gold mohur to each Director, for attendance in Committee, and the fine of a similar sum for non-attendance, is ordered and confirmed. Carried unanimously.

Mr. H. Chapman then proposed, that the thanks of this Meeting be offered to Mr. Pattle for his able conduct in the chair. Mr. H. Burkinyoung having seconded this proposition, it was carried unanimously, and the Meeting separated.

The following is the report :

FIRST HALF YEAR'S REPORT.

Upon the proceedings of the Bengal Branch Assam Company, established 1st June, 1839.

Amidst difficulties and obstacles of every possible description, and without that assistance and encouragement, which a great company formed expressly to give effect to an enterprise most important to Great Britain, and most advantageous to this country, had a right to expect from this Government, and the Court of Directors, the committee of direction of the Assam Company have still the gratification to lay before the Shareholders a very encouraging and satisfactory statement of the progress made during the past six months in the creating of establishments in Upper Assam, and preparing means and locations for the future manufacture of Tea especially, but without limiting their views to that article of produce alone.

1. Before going into the details of these arrangements, it is necessary in the first place, to notice that the December Mail has brought replies from the Home Committee to the despatches from hence of June last, fully and unequivocally confirming the conjunction therein advised, upon the terms demanded from hence, by which the two proprietary bodies of Calcutta and London, have become one and the same association.

2. In compliance with the resolution of the last General Meeting here, and with the wishes of the Shareholders in England, a draft of a deed of Co-partnership, was prepared and submitted to Government on the 21st August 1839, last, with a prayer that it be embodied into an Act of incorporation, such as have been granted already by this Government to the Bonded Warehouse Association. The assent of this Government has been signified, and the papers have been forwarded to England for the confirmation of the Court of Directors; orders having been lately received that an act of incorporation should here be given, which has not first received the sanction of that body. A draft of a deed something similar, prepared by the London Company's Solicitor, had been received, and Mr. Collier, the Solicitor of the Company in Calcutta, having proceeded to England in the Maidstone, has been requested to put himself in communication with the Committee in London, for the purpose of amalgamating the two deeds, so as to embrace all that is necessary to perfect the double administration, necessary for the purposes of this Association.

3. Notwithstanding the public pledges given by the Court of Directors, published in the proceedings before Parliament, and again by the authority of this Government here, in the proceedings of the Agricultural Society, and upon the faith of which this great enterprise was undertaken, we have as yet received no satisfactory reply to the application made for the transfer of the experimental means and gardens, which are still kept up by Government, and which, from the circumstance of a fresh arrival of artificers and means from China, it seems probable, will be increased. In reply to our first application for this transfer, upon the grounds that our Company was in a position to work out the experiment, which had now been proved successful, to any extent, we were informed that none of these means could be given to us, and in reply to our further demand for grants of waste land, whereupon to increase the cultivation, we were informed that we might take up locations for our Superintendents and Surgeons, for the purpose of looking about and examining the capabilities of the country, but that no grants of land whatever could be allowed to us until the Rules and Regulations for settling these provinces were divulged, and which would fix the terms upon which such grants would be given. The grounds upon which the order of Government was passed, were the fears of giving to our Company powers and privileges that would amount to an injurious monopoly of the Tea cultivation in Assam. Those Rules and Regulations have not yet been completed, but the publication of Mr. Bruce's report having proved the fallacy of such grounds, by showing that the extent of the tracts of the wild tea exceeds greatly the quantity of land even which our large capital could bring into cultivation. The authorities in Upper Assam have, under authority of Government, relaxed their restrictions and permitted us to take up several positions, where tea plants have been found, upon the understanding that when cleared and surveyed, our Company will have the first option of receiving positive grants of such locations, as soon as these authorities have orders to give them. As regards the Government experimental establishments, with its means of manipulation, there has been no relaxation in the refusal to our Company of all assistance (therefrom). Mr. Bruce has stated his willingness to take service with us, as soon as permitted to retire; but in the present position of the Government tea manufactory, and the apparent wish of the higher authorities in England, to retain and to increase its produce, it is difficult to say, whether it is likely to be of any assistance to our company, or, on the contrary, to be placed in most powerful and injurious competition with us. The London Committee have strongly memorialized the Court of Directors and the India Board, and our Committee is likewise before the Governor-General's Council, with a remonstrance of a similar nature, pointing the original pledge of encouragement to any parties prepared to carry out in a proper manner, the experiment begun, by this Government disavowing totally all wish for monopoly, and showing the serious injury, which the withholding of the means they possess, and failing a competition against us, must inevitably create. We are not without hopes that our case will have a fairer consideration than it appears to have received up to this date, and that at least a considerable portion, if not the whole, of the advantages now possessed by Government, will be accorded to our Company, since we have pledged ourselves in such case to give to Government, when required, all the information which they could derive from the continuance of their own small factory, as well as to deliver a fixed number of seedlings from our nurseries, in full proportion to the number we might thus become possessed of.

We now proceed to report upon the assets and expenditure.

The Directors finding from Mr. Secretary Pridmore's correspondence, that the amount paid up in England was £5 per share, an immediate call has been made for thirty rupees per share from the Bengal shareholders in addition to the twenty already paid, and it is now in course of liquidation. This contribution upon 10 000 shares, places at the disposal of the directors about five lacs of rupees, and even with the heavy establishment it is requisite to support, at starting so great an enterprise, they do not expect that it will be necessary to make another call upon the proprietors, during the whole of the following year.

The amount collected in Calcutta will be Co.'s Rs. 1,00,000 2 6

The amount as yet received from England, less charges, 1,90,280 0 0

The accounts the Calcutta Branch are now submitted, showing a total expenditure divided into the separate heads, as per annexed statement. For explanation of this large expenditure, the committee of direction lays before the shareholders the following report upon their proceedings in Upper Assam.

Mr. J. W. Masters, who was sent up by the late Mr. Cockerell, to make enquiries for the London company, has been appointed superintendent of the company's locations in the Nazira division, upon the river Dikho, and has by his zeal, activity, and undaunted perseverance, under circumstances of much privation and difficulty, proved himself to be worthy the confidence of the company in every respect. He arrived in Assam in the month of June, and visited Luckimpore, Jaepore, Rungpore, and Nisira, during the depths of the rains, and greatest height of the inundation, thus enabling him to form the best judgment upon the positions he has been subsequently enabled to take up. His doing so was greatly retarded by the difficulties noticed above, the authorities in Assam not feeling themselves authorized to permit any approach on the part of our Company, to the Tea Baras already found by Mr. Bruce. The first meeting of the Assam Company at Nazira, was not subsequently found until November, when Mr. Masters forwarded the annexed sketch of its position. He has then erected the several huts and storehouses, and has begun the reception of the people and supplies sent up to him. This station is well situated upon the Dikho river, opposite to the Old Fort of Gurgang, and is the foundation, comprising about 400 acres, and to the immediate neighbourhood of a considerable population. The great Duodun Hills, or highness, going from Nazira to Gurgang, runs continuously on the western side of the Grant.

The next position, also, was at the mouth of the river Dikho, where it was necessary to place an assistant with a canoe to erect huts, store-houses, and a place for the reception of people, stores, and grain, the Dikho not being navigable during the dry season for any thing but a small canoe, formed out of a hollow tree. Mr. Alexander's progress there has been highly spoken of by Capt. Jenkins, and when the bridge, that surrounds this station, have been repaired and completed, it is hoped that even during the season of inundation, this station may become a valuable one for the above purposes, as well as from the capabilities it possesses for an extensive rice cultivation.

The next object of Mr. Masters was to penetrate the jungles, surrounding Nazira, in search of Tea plants, the report of Mr. Bruce having placed 13 bari in its immediate neighbourhood. In this search he came upon a small place covered only with grass, in which was an excellent font of sweet water, about 100 by 500 feet square, in as good order as if only recently dug.

The place is called Ligri Pokuri, and the distance from Nazira being only four miles, it was thought to offer advantages for another excellent position; an assistant has accordingly been placed there with coolies, to prepare buildings and commence clearance of jungles in the direction of the Tea bari, and already Mr. Masters has reported having come upon 6 different patches of Tea jungle, and though rather small in extent, the fact of one of this Tea trees being upwards of 30 feet high, establishes the fitness of the soil for the cultivation. Mr. Masters is availing himself of all the seed he can collect, to increase the importance of this position.

The arrival of other assistants, enabled our superintendent to send off people to take possession of the bari at the foot of the Gabroo Hills, and a sketch has just been received of the survey of the location by our own officer.

Mr. Owen, which is here denoted, comprising 330 acres; but it is supposed that this area may be extended up the side of the hills to the west. It is bounded by a fine rice cultivation, and labor is to be had here with comparative facility, an advantage of no mean importance.

Nazira will thus form the Sudder station of the gardens, which will be established without delay in every position, where the soil will admit of it from Gurgang Part up to Charido on the north side of the Dikho. It is proposed to establish an extensive bari at Gurgang, where the old Fort, will probably be made available to us, and where, from its position, the central point of most of the great branch roads, it is expected that the natives from all the neighbouring districts will soon congregate when grain, salt and manufactures are placed therein whenever. By a system of barter the tea leaves and other valuable productions of the country, it is hoped to establish a valuable business to the Nazira station, and the services of Mankarum, the Instructions have been given to Mr. Masters, to place people both at the Dikho end and on the Dikho Dikho, to collect it wherever found, so as to form people in different places by the time it will be required for the company's steamers. There is little doubt of its abounding in many parts of Upper Assam, but whether its position or quality is suitable or not for the purposes of the company, it is to be ascertained.

In addition to the above locations, orders have been given for preparing, immediately, houses and bari at Nazira, Jijora, and on the Thugri Nallah, and that the Chinese laborers already sent up, and another way to Assam, may, as soon as possible, be made available for the carrying of the tea leaves to the Matak country, and for the manufacture of the leaves now to be found there, or to be collected from the neighboring districts, and we have lately been told to expect that some of the native chiefs will enter into contracts to deliver the produce of their provinces for the consideration of a monthly salary to themselves, and the value of the tea, delivered by weight. This will make these places of establishment, and lead more rapidly to the extension of the cultivation among the natives than by any measures of our own, and become a most important auxiliary to our own establishment in Assam.

At the mouth of the Dikho river, where Capt. Vetch has lately formed a new station, we have placed an assistant with some coolies, to form a depot, that will hereafter be in a position to reap all the advantages that may exist on the northern border of the Matak country, having a fine river for purposes of traffic in small boats.

With these commanding positions, properly applied with means, we do not hesitate to assure the shareholders, that we shall soon be able to develop the resources of the country in a manner that will yield a handsome return for the capital embarked, and where great obstacles exist, and every thing has to be begun in a country so entirely new as Upper Assam, no discouragement should be felt if these returns are protracted for a year or two. In the cultivation of Tea, Mr. Bruce has shown in his valuable report, that it is necessary to burn and destroy the bari, as they now exist, to secure the increase of more healthy plants, and in greater abundance, and that in the third year a crop of leaves may be gathered from them. Coffee plantations in like manner, cannot be expected to yield a profitable return in less than four years. Sugar, Hemp, Flax and other articles, more rapid in their growth, will soon, we trust, be turned to account, as Mr. Masters has reported the soil, peculiarly well adapted to them all. But one of the first objects must naturally be the cultivation of grain, of various kinds for our own people, and the establishment of a farm of supplies in each division, that we may not, as at present, be obliged to send them up from bari, and from Rubna and Rungpore. For the first year, or so, a portion of our establishment must thus be employed, and the produce of the soil of Upper Assam is so splendid in its returns, according to Mr. Masters's observations, that this branch will soon pay its own expenses.

One of the greatest difficulties and sources of heaviness and expense, has been the means of transport to Upper Assam. The boatmen of Bengal could scarcely be induced, even for any consideration, to proceed up the Brahmaputra, higher than Gowahatee, and the obstacles of stream wind and banks affording no tracking ground, make this a matter of no surprise, when combined with the atrocities practised up to a very late period, by the wild tribes above, upon all strangers coming among them and the unhealthiness of the stream generally. The greatest difficulty has been found in the transport of our people, our stores and materials, and it has been found absolutely necessary to construct

Boats. boats adapted for this trade. Twelve of these are in hand, of various sizes, and one flat boat 60 feet long, with a deck and coppered hold, has been despatched on trial with grain and stores. She draws but little water, is coppered, and will afford the best protection for a Tea cargo eventually. To overcome this important difficulty, the London committee has concurred with the wishes of our own, and with the aid of Captain Henderson, and a sub-committee, there appointed for the purpose, have entered into contract with Messrs. P. & Co., for an Iron

Iron Steam Boat. boat, and Messrs. P. & Co., for a 100 horse power engine, to be placed in her. She will be constructed, as to draw less than 2 feet, and to afford sufficient place for stores and cargo, so as to avoid the necessity of being followed by a flat, and thus make her voyage in less time, and at a less expense of coals. We have little doubt that the boat will find profitable employ upon the river when not running for the Assam Company. In addition to this boat and engine, a steam engine Saw Mill has been ordered, for the preparation of Tea

Saw Mill. boxes and other general purposes, to be erected at our station. Both are expected to reach this country in about 10 months. By the "Vernon" and "Walmer Castle," a quantity of prepared sheet metal has been received Metal Sheet. for lining the Tea boxes, at a much cheaper rate than by the present process. A model has been received from London, to guide the workmen of this country to the simple method of putting this metal together. It has been proposed to the London committee to adopt our own size and weight of box, instead of those used in China, say the bazar standard of 82 lbs. for our whole or half chest, since our Tea will soon have a character of its own, and why not therefore our packages.

The annexed list of establishment in Assam, will best show what gentlemen we have placed under Mr. Masters, and where and how it is proposed to employ them, and it will be found that they will soon have, all of them, full occupation in their several vocations. Mr. Bruce's two assistants, Mr. Grove and Mr. Duffield, both well versed in the art of tea-making, have joined us, and will be placed so as to bring the produce of our locations into the earliest perfection possible.

With the assistance of the following gentlemen, who were taken into the service as second assistants for this special purpose, we have set up a considerable gang of laborers and settlers, at the monthly pay of 3-8 to 4, and artificers of different descriptions, at from 8 to 16.

Mr. Vaughan from Howrah, ... 681 } Labourers and Settlers.
24 Artificers.
Mr. Swedland (since discharged) } Labourers.
from Bowsing, ... 14 }

Mr. Reeves (since dead) from Chit- } Labourers.
tagong, ... 85 }
25 Artificers.
Mr. Busch (not on the service) } Labourers.
from Rungpo, ... 194 }
Mr. Rhadant from Dacca, no advice Hillmen.
Mr. Stewart from Cholanagore 632 Dungers.

In addition to these we engaged in Calcutta, several Chinese, who offered themselves, viz., as Tea makers, 18 at 45 pr. mth.

Chinese Labourers. " Carpenters, 4 at 45 "
& " Apprentices, 18 at 20 "

We also adopted the recommendation of Dr. Lumqua, and sent a very respectable Chinese merchant, who had resided in Assam, to seek for volunteer laborers in Penang and Singapore, and especially for men, who knew something of cultivation, and manufacture of Tea. He sent us from Penang, altogether 216 able bodied laborers engaged at 16 pr month

Total about 500 for 3 years, and has just returned to Calcutta from Singapore with 245 more Chinese laborers, on the same terms; but he was not successful in finding any experienced artisans. These men are, however, all ready to place themselves as apprentices under the Tea makers now in Assam, and as Chinese will always more readily teach their countrymen than the natives of the country, we shall in a short time have a considerable body of Tea artisans at the command of our superintendent, and we are informed by our correspondents at Singapore and Bangkok, that they have every hope of procuring for us, through their Chinese friends, some regularly-bred artisans from the Chinese Tea provinces, though they cannot be available for the present season.

With reference also to the proximity of the Chinese province of Yunnan, in which much fine Tea is manufactured, we have procured, through the kind intervention of Capt. Gordon, the political agent at Munnepore, permission from the Burmese authorities to send a Chinese messenger straight across their country to Bamoo Meeco, which is a large mart in direct communication with the frontier town of the province of Yunnan. We have sent up to Munnepore a few small boxes of trade, such as silks, muslins, beads, cutlery, and small ornaments of the value of about 60 rupees 1,162 for our messenger, who was procured for us by Lumqua at 40 pr month, and who speaks Burmese and Portuguese as well as Chinese, to carry with him, and he has instructions to endeavour to establish a regular communication, if possible, so that Chinese artisans may find their way across with facility, from Yunnan, through the Burmese territory, into Assam. If once they are allowed to come freely, we shall probably have a yearly supply of men just fitted for our purpose. The importance of this communication was considered by our committee, as well worth the small expense to be incurred in gaining it, but if disapproved by the shareholders, generally, there is time now even to stop the mission, as our messenger has not yet reached Munnepore.

In addition to this endeavour to procure artificers, we have also written to Macao, to Hankok, and to Singapore, and replies have been received stating, that our correspondents are in great hopes of succeeding in finding some experienced artificers in each description of Tea, in box-making, packing, &c., &c., and that they hope to send them round so as to be in time for the season 1841.

With regard to the extent that the cultivation of Tea can be carried to, we have been informed by the authorities of Upper Assam, that they considered the capital necessary for this purpose to be 300 per acre, consequently, that our company might be allowed grants to the extent of 30,000 acres, as the equivalent of our capital, and it is stated at the same time, that there is room for at least six such companies as our own. The shareholders will consequently feel an apprehension upon this head, and it is, we think, fully confirmed, by Mr. Bruce's own report.

Since writing the foregoing, which gives a faithful report of all proceedings up to the 1st January 1840, the Directors considered that their task should be unfinished if they did not add to their report the important circumstance, which has taken place subsequently to the proceedings of the past half year, and for this reason not introduced into the body of the above report.

Immediately upon Lord Auckland's return to the Presidency, a deputation of the Directors waited upon his Lordship, with a memorial, stating the position of the Company in Assam, particularly as regards the difficulties expected in its progress for the want of means of manipulation, and of Mr. Bruce's experience to put our workmen in the right course, and the probable consequences of injury to the prospects of the company, as well as to the working of the government experimental factory, from the pollution of the Chinese laborers belonging to each establishment, as also from the competition which could exist for native labor and produce. His Lordship appeared to be fully conversant with the difficulties with which our enterprise was beset, and freely allowed that its importance deserved every encouragement at the hands of government, and he dismissed the deputation with the assurance that he would not lose a day in laying before his council a resolution that should give to our company all the assistance that we required, compatible with the present position of the province lately ceded to Upper Assam, and with the determination of Government to retain their experimental factory at Jaipore, as a school for apprentices, open to all parties, who they hereafter desire to prosecute the same objects, and as a nursery for the propagation of the best tea plants to be collected; but this will be on a limited scale, as to offer no obstacle whatever in the way of competition, but, on the contrary, be of much advantage from the increased number of native artisans, who will be available to us hereafter from this school.

The orders from Government are as follow:—

1. That the Assam company be allowed to form such a settlement south of the Orders of Govr. Bruce Dehing river, as may be sufficient only for the residence of their workmen and laborers, and, if necessary, for the growth of grain for their support. That this settlement be either at the spot at the confluence of the Tingri with the Bootee Dehing, or at some other point, which may be found convenient by the agents of the company, and may be approved by Captain Vetch.

2. That the agents of the company, be allowed to collect and purchase Tea leaves in the Mattock country, either to the North or South of the Tingri river, as may be determined, in the same manner as has been done by the agents of Government, the local officers being specially charged to see that the rights of individuals or of communities, are not injured by their proceedings.

3. That it be at once settled that the company is eventually to have the option before other parties, of receiving within a certain circuit of their place of first settlement (say of 5, 8 or 10 miles) a tract of land in the Mattock country, when the political condition of that territory may admit of it, within defined limits, and suited to the extent of their capital and means, on such conditions may be prescribed by the government, such tract to belong to them for their exclusive use and occupation.

4. That 2-3rd of the government present establishment for the cultivation of Tea, be made over on their consenting, after a full explanation to them of all circumstances, to the terms prescribed to the Assam company, the local authorities being directed to modify this general rule as they may find to be requisite for ensuring to the government a complete and efficient experimental establishment, though upon a limited scale. One half of the portion of the establishment to be transferred to the Company will be reclaimable by the Government at any time within five years, on a three months previous notice, and for a longer term, say 10 years, all processes of cultivation and manufacture within the Company's limits, shall be fully open to the examination of any parties deputed by the Government. The transfer of the manufacturers and workmen brought from China, to be made with their assent, upon the understanding that the Company will adopt every beneficial condition made with these persons, and upon their assenting to the change, will reimburse the Government for the expense incurred in procuring and transporting them to Assam, on a statement to be rendered to the Company from the accounts of the Tea Committee. The Company also to pay the value of any stock or materials received by them from the Agents, on the part of the Government.

5. That the expense of the portion, about 1-3rd of the establishment, to be retained by the Government for the prosecution of experimental Tea cultivation and manufacture, be in future confined to an amount not greatly exceeding 1,000 rupees per annum.

6. That the division of the Nurseries and Tea Bazaar between the Government and the Tea Company, be left to the local Officers, who, after consulting Mr. Bruce, will determine the particular Nurseries which it may be most convenient for all parties that Government should retain, as well as the particular trades to which its operations should be restricted.

7. That Mr. Bruce be made over on his own consent to the Company, and that Mr. Duffield be appointed Superintendent of the Government reserved establishment, on a salary of 200 rupees per month for the present. The transfer of Mr. Bruce's services will be made, on the condition that for a certain period, say 3 years, Mr. Bruce's advice and instruction shall remain fully available to the Government for the guidance of its establishment in all processes of the manufacture with which they may be imperfectly acquainted. The services of Dr. Lamour, who receives as Chinese manager and interpreter, a salary of 400 rupees per month from the Government, will also be made over to the Assam Company, on their engaging to fulfil the terms on which the Government engaged his services.

8. That the growth of Peppy on the lands granted to the Tea Company or other grantees in Assam, be entirely prohibited.

In pursuance of these orders, an arrangement has been made, in the presumption that Mr. Bruce will now accept the terms offered to him by our Company, for cancelling Mr. Duffield's covenant, and giving up his services to Government for the conduct of their establishment at Jaipore.

The Chinese artisans procured by Dr. Gutzlaff, and lately arrived from Macao for the Government concern, have joined our Company, upon the payment of their passage-money and expenses to Assam, and have just been despatched in fast boats, in the hope of reaching Assam in time for the second crop of May next. With means now at our command, and the great addition of hampire placed at the disposal of Mr. Bruce, the Directors may now safely congratulate the Shareholders upon the certainty of having at last a fair portion of the produce of the coming season, as the commencement of their returns for the outlays incurred.

No question any longer exists, as to the estimation Quantity of Tea. This tea is held in by the brokers and dealers of London, for, by the closest analysis, the leaf has been found to contain every property that constitutes fine Tea in the fullest degree, and the experience of the manipulators has already so much improved the preparation and packing of the different qualities from fine young Hyson down to Pouchong, that when the last year's produce of the Government establishment, amounting to above 195 chests, reaches England, its character will place it fully on a par, if not above, the same descriptions of the direct importations from China.

It is the painful duty of the Directors to report the loss by death, during the past half year, of their Chairman, the late Mr. R. H. Cockerell. Mr. Theodore Dickens was chosen Chairman in his stead. In addition to this vacancy in the direction, the resignations of Major Becher, and W. R. Young, Esq., have been accepted, these gentlemen feeling it incompatible with their position in the Government service, to take any active part in the management of this association to complete the effective number of the Committee, Mr. A. De H. Carpenter, Mr. H. Holroyd and Baboo Pronono Omar Tagore, have given their valuable assistance to the Directors as Honorary Members, and their names are now recommended to the Proprietors for confirmation. Mr. J. Becher, also retires from the direction, being on the eve of departure for England; his partner, Mr. Henry Chapman, having qualified himself by the purchase of 25 shares, is also recommended for election in his room. Baboo Muttu Lall Seal being unable to afford time for weekly attendance at the Committee, likewise tenders his resignation, and Mr. Joe. Cullen is recommended for election in his stead.

The Directors give their report by stating, that the Junction of the London and Calcutta Companies, having now been fully confirmed, Mr. William Becher has closed his arduous labors as Provisional Secretary, and handed over the books, papers, and vouchers to Mr. Francis Robert Hampton, who has been formally elected, from among nine candidates, Secretary to the Directors, upon a salary of 500 rupees per mensem, with a residence and office, taken by the Company, at the rent of 250 rupees per month, at No. 3, Somerset Place.

INDIGO PLANTERS' MEETING.

GENERAL COMMITTEE, MARCH 5, 1840.

Present.—C. Dearn, Chairman; W. F. Gibbon, K. R. Mackenzie, T. P. Marrell, G. F. Remfy, J. S. B. Scott, J. Storm, G. Vint, and R. Watson.

Read the following report by the Sub-Committee, to which the matter had been referred:—

"Instead of the formation of a Charity, we are of opinion that it would be more useful to establish a Provident Fund, confined to members; and we would shortly suggest.

"That the shares be 500 Rs. each, for the benefit of Widows and Orphans; but Bachelors permitted to dispose of their interest by will, and dying intestate and childless, the shares to lapse unto the fund.

"The amount of the share to be paid on the demise of the Subscriber; or at the option of the Treasurer, an equivalent annuity may be substituted.

"The rate of subscription to be at once regulated by the age of the party at the commencement of his subscription, it being expected that much lower rates of premium will suffice than prevail in the existing Insurance Institutions of Calcutta.

"The subscriptions to be payable quarterly, and any person neglecting for two successive quarters to pay up his subscriptions, shall thereby forfeit all interest in the fund.

"Surpluses to be applicable to special purposes of charity, sanctioned by a general meeting."

Read also these Rules for the management of a Charity Fund, submitted by Mr. Richards:

1st. The Managing Committee shall be composed of all donors of one thousand rupees in one sum, all subscribers of one hundred rupees per annum, and the members of the General Committee of the Indigo Planters' Association.

2d. The principle of distribution of all funds to be divided, unless provided for by subsequent Rules, shall be decided by the Managing Committee of their fund.

3d. All proceedings and accounts of the Managing Committee, shall be recorded, and be open to inspection of all persons, donors and subscribers to the said fund.

4th. No person shall be considered as a subscriber, unless he subscribes for the current year.

5th. Until otherwise authorised by a resolution at a quarterly meeting of the Indigo Planters' Association, no relief shall be afforded to parties, other than those who have been connected with the planting interest of the Bengal and Agra presidencies.

6th. It shall be the duty of the Managing Committee, to furnish a report of the proceedings of the past year, to be read at the annual meeting of the Indigo Planters' Association.

7th. All Planters and others connected with the planting interests of Bengal and Agra, shall be requested to refer any case of distress capable of being relieved by Rule 6, to the Managing Committee through their Secretary.

8th. It is expedient to lay by all donations and a quarter part of the annual income of the funds, for a reserve fund, until such time as it be decided at the annual meeting of the Indigo Planters' Association, that a sufficient fund has been accumulated.

9th. No relief shall be afforded the first year of the existence of this fund, which shall date from the presentation of Messrs. Dunlop and Co's donation, and it shall be the duty of the Managing Committee only to appropriate the second year three-fourths of annual subscriptions and accumulations of interest received during the first twelve months.

10th. The above rule shall not prevent the Managing Committee from receiving any donations intended to be for the relief of any specific case or cases during this or any other year, and paying over the same to the parties for whom they may be intended.

11th. With reference to the foregoing rules, it shall be in the power of the Indigo Planters' Association, either at an Annual or Quarterly Meeting, or by a majority of votes upon circulation, to distribute a part of the reserved fund to any case of distress, upon recommendation of the Managing Committee.

12th. Should from unforeseen circumstances, the sums given for relief not amount to three-fourths of the annual divisible income of fund, (according to Rule 6,) the Managing Committee shall be empowered to distribute such surplus for charitable purposes, as may seem to them most desirable.

13th. The Managing Committee shall be empowered to make rules for their own guidance, in the distribution of any funds, which, according to the preceding rules, may be applicable for distribution.

In conclusion, Mr. Richards proposed that, in sending this sketch of rules to the Planters generally, the general committee should suggest, that a small sum annually per chest or maund, subscribed by the various members of the Planter's Association to the charitable fund, would soon place the Managing Committee in such a position, as would enable them to afford efficient aid in every case of distress that they might be called upon to relieve.

The sentiments of the members of the Association will be taken on the preceding plans.

Read a letter from Mr. Agnew, enquiring whether or not Moonseef's have jurisdiction in cases of breach of contract for Indigo plant between Englishmen and Natives; and an opinion given by Mr. Imlach, pleader in the Sudder, that Moonseef's do not possess such jurisdiction.

Mr. Imlach took the occasion of this reference to him, to offer to the committee fund professional aid gratuitously for the present year; which liberal offer is accepted with acknowledgments.

A donation of 100 Rs. has been received from Mr. Marcus, for the general purposes of the Association; and one of 16 Rs. from Mr. Agnew, towards a Charitable Fund.

Passed 17 bills for advertisements Co's Rs. 69 10-0, 1 for printing Co's Rs. 80, 1 for table Co's Rs. 67, and 12 chairs Co's Rs. 48, 1 for punks Co's Rs. 53, 1 for establishment for February Co's Rs. 36, and one for binding books Co's Rs. 2.

MEETING OF THE BENGAL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

MARCH 12TH, 1840.

JOHN ALLAN, Vice President, in the Chair.

Having perused the Prospectus of the Steam Company proposed to be established by Mr. Curtis in London, and the recent Proceedings of the United Committees of the New Bengal Steam Fund and of the Eastern Steam Navigation Company, the following Resolution were passed unanimously:

On the motion of Mr. Beattie, seconded by Mr. Cragg,—That the thanks of the Chamber be tendered to Mr. Curtis for his zeal and public spirit, evinced on behalf of India, in his exertions to establish a regular Steam Communication between all parts of India and England; and the Chamber expresses its reliance on his further aid, and that of his associates, in carrying out the wishes of the public on this side of India, in that part of the Comprehensive plan, the completion of which is most urgently required, namely, the establishment of monthly Steam Packets between Calcutta, Madras, Ceylon and Suez.

On the motion of Mr. Darris seconded by Mr. Cullen,—That, in the full persuasion that it is of material importance to the success of that portion of the scheme in which this Chamber is principally interested, that the spirit of the wishes expressed by the United Steam Committee should be acceded to, the Chamber earnestly recommends to Mr. Curtis, and the gentlemen associated with him, the adoption of the plan indicated in the Resolutions of that committee.

On the motion of Mr. Gordon, seconded by Mr. Newcomen,—That this Chamber, looking forward to the near and certain accomplishment of the great public object in question, desire to record their opinion, that, to the late Secretary of the Steam Fund Committee, Mr. Charles Beckett Greenlaw, India and England are deeply indebted for the zeal and vigor with which he has so long and so ably kept public attention awake to the importance of extending the benefits of Steam Communication to this side of India; and as a small acknowledgment of gratitude for such services, resolve, that the members of the Chamber invite the public in general, to unite with them in subscribing for a handsome Service of Plate, to be presented to Mr. Greenlaw.

On the motion of Mr. Prinsep, seconded by Mr. Church,—That the invitation shall go forward to the Public, headed with a subscription of 100 gold, mohurs from the members of the Chamber.

THE SAILORS' HOME.

The second Annual Meeting of this institution, was held at the premises in Police Ghat, on the 12th instant. There was a large attendance on the occasion, and Sir John Peter Grant was called to the chair.

The Honorary Secretary, Mr. Grant, then read the report for the past year, including the statements connected with the pecuniary condition of the Home. After the reading of the report, Mr. Wight moved, and Mr. Pope seconded,

That the report should be adopted and published. But the resolution was interrupted by the Rev. Mr. J. Atkins, coming forward and delivering the following address:—

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen,—Before this Meeting be requested to adopt the report which the Secretary has read, and the preceding speakers' motion has been moved and seconded, I beg permission to offer upon it a few observations. This indulgence, Sir, is craved, because, in my opinion, the present is a crisis in the history of this institution; for if, as I think, it will be no difficult task to shew, that the Society is based on unphilosophical and unscriptural principles, and that the working of them, has not merely prevented many beneficial results, but, in addition, has inflicted much positive evil, it then will be imperative on this assembly to reorganize the institution, or to vote for its immediate dissolution. As, however, I believe, that several members of the Committee of Management, entertain erroneous opinions, in regard to the nature and objects of a Sailors' Home, and also, that a large number of the subscribers, are unacquainted with the real character of this Society, I respectfully, solicit the attention of this audience, while briefly I glance at topics, for the information both of Committee and Subscribers. And, Sir, in the execution of my task, the first remark I beg to make is, on the necessity which existed, and which, in many parts, still exists, for the establishment of Sailors' Homes. This necessity arose from the depraved, and servile condition of British seamen, who were the helpless victims of the crimping system, a system which impoverished, brutalized, and enslaved the seamen; injured to a considerable degree the shipping interest, and inflicted upon society in every part, serious evils. Influenced by the seductive acts of crimps, thousands of comparatively honest and virtuous sailors, have, in foreign parts, by desertion, broken their engagements, or through improper conduct, obtained their discharge where, after having been robbed of both money and clothes, enervated by dissipation, and diseased by the commission of crime, they either have been recruited, deeply involved in debt and almost destitute of clothing, or have remained to increase the number of the pests of human society. It is unnecessary for me to detail how that abominable system has affected the shipping interests, because commanders of vessels, and mercantile gentlemen, have a vivid recollection of it, through its pernicious influence on their affairs. Nor am I required to speak of its effects on society, or to shew how it has injured the British character, and obscured the glory of Christianity. The stigma, on the name and religion of Britain, exist in every foreign port, and the impressions made by them have been so deep and permanent, that in the estimation of some it is problematical, whose influence has been more potent, British seamen to curse the Heathen, or Christian missionaries to bless them.

These few remarks, Sir, it appeared desirable to make on the necessity for the establishment of Sailors' Homes. My next observation is, on the objects contemplated by the founders of these institutions. As the crimping system has consumed the pecuniary resources, and impaired both the physical and moral energies of the seaman, and it has retarded the progress of commerce, inflicted injuries on society, and has made on foreigners, and Pagans, a false impression of the character and religion of Britain, the founders of Sailors' Homes, resolved, by all legitimate means, to exterminate that diabolical system. It has been observed, that through its influence three distinct classes, which include the seamen, the shipping community, and society in general, have been injured. To the latter two classes the existing evils assumed an alarming aspect, and by an united effort they resolved to grapple with it, till its extinction should be effected; but, the former class, through the wretched victims of the crimps, continued, and, in many cases, still continue, their willing slaves. By the united efforts, therefore, of merchants, and Christian philanthropists, asylums have been provided for destitute seamen, and the comforts of a Home, for those who have been legally discharged, and who possessed the means to pay for their support, to prevent them from being defrauded of their money depositories, have been opened for the reception of their wages, till they should return to sea; and an Agency has been established to procure them berths, and, in cases of necessity, to cash their advance notes. The British seamen, though naturally distinguished for generosity and courage, become powerless, except for evil, under the crimping system; hence, on the establishment of Homes, they required protection from their enemies, and their own affairs, to be superintended with a paternal solicitude. So far, indeed, as they possess the ability and inclination ashore, to protect themselves from injury, and procure rational enjoyment, they were, and still continue to be, children, and as such, by their friends, they should be treated. In this respect they were viewed by the enlightened founders of the London Sailors' Home, and in consistency with these views, the institution was established, and has been conducted; and, therefore, the London Home, stands pre-eminent among all kindred establishments. Whenever, indeed, by the conductors of Homes, seamen have been treated as men, and not as children, their benevolent efforts, to a considerable extent, have proved abortive. From the preceding remarks, Sir, I am naturally led to examine the principles of the Calcutta Sailors' Home, and to ascertain the amount of success which has resulted from the operations of the Society. Omitting, for the present, details of minor importance, I beg, Sir, to direct the attention of this assembly to three particulars of paramount interest. The first of them is, that the Home is a house licensed for the retailing of ardent spirits—and to enjoy this unenviable privilege, there have been paid from the funds of the institution, during the last year, 380 rupees; and in order to possess that Punch-house distinction, your late Superintending Secretary, though a Christian Minister, was a licensed publican. It is admitted, that laws have been enacted, to diminish the evils inseparable from the existence of the bar; but they never have been enforced, by some members of the Committee, the bar has been regarded a legitimate and an important source of revenue, and, therefore, they have exerted their influence to increase the sale of spirits, and, I can assure this meeting, without the fear of contradiction, that my efforts to lessen the evil, have been thwarted by indirect means. In order to form a correct opinion of the extent of the pernicious influence of the bar, I beg to mention, in round numbers, the quantity of spirits, wines and beer, that has been consumed on the establishment during the preceding year. They are as follow:—brandy 150 dozens, gin 14 dozens, wine 90 dozens, beer and porter 300 dozens. The cost price of these was about 2,600 rupees, and from the sale of them, there have been realized about 3,000 rupees; from which statement, it appears, that a profit has been obtained from the bar, after deducting the amount for licence, of upwards of 600 rupees. This justifies the conduct of those Members of Committee, who represent the bar to be a lawful source of revenue. But, Sir, the enquiry may naturally be proposed what sacrifices have been made to secure this profitable return. In answer to which, I observe, that you have degraded the character of the Home, to a level, in this respect, to a common Punch-house; the peace of the establishment has been broken by night, as well as by day, by drunkenness, profane swearing and fighting; many both of men and officers, have acquired the habit of drinking, and through an extravagant expenditure at the bar, a loss has been sustained in the boarding department, equal to the gain from the bar. The second particular, which I wish briefly to notice, is the regulations in regard to deposits. The language of the prospectus is this, the committee are desirous of inducing the men to deposit their earnings with the Superintending Secretary during their stay in Calcutta. There is, however, no law, to make the depositing of money, a condition of admission into the Home, and even when deposits have been made, the Secretary possesses no power to hold them till the owners of them shall be re-shipped. It is, therefore, desirable to ascertain how the deposit system has worked. By urgent solicitation, I received deposits, during the twelve months which I superintended the establishment, to the amount of 15,500 rupees, and refunded to the men on leaving the Home, the small sum of 450 rupees, leaving the large balance of more than 15,000 rupees, which sum was spent during a short residence in Calcutta. This amount of deposits was made by 340 men and officers, which were about two-thirds of the number admitted into the Home during the year. As many of these persons, in addition to the money received in Calcutta for past services, obtained from their next employer, on being re-shipped, an advance of from fifty to sixty rupees, they could not have spent from their deposits for board and clothing, more than 5,000 rupees, by which reasoning from the yearly deposits, there remains a balance of 10,000 rupees, most of which has been spent, in excesses and debauchery. No inconsiderable number of the inmates who possessed money, have habitually spent daily, from one to ten rupees. And what has been the result? The laws of the institution have been broken with impunity; for though a rule of the Home enjoins that the outer gate be locked at ten o'clock, and that the lights be extinguished by half past ten, at which time the residents are expected to retire to rest; yet, habitually, out of the men who have money to spend, not more than one half comply with this regulation. The durwan, for a faithful discharge of the duty, has been frequently beaten, and, on some occasions, his life has been endangered; the gate has been broken open by violence, the walls have been scaled; and the repose of your Secretary has been interrupted, not unfrequently three times in the week, and often twice or thrice during the night. At midnight, and at one and two in the morning, it has been no uncommon occurrence for the residents to return from Punch-houses, and, if possible, from more polluting places, in a state of intoxication. These, favored by the darkness of the night, have, by scaling the walls, entered the house, and by language the most obscene, have disturbed the peaceable inmates of the establishment. Here, however, I may observe, few are long peaceable, who possess the income of obtaining unlawful gratifications. So intimate has been the connection between crimps and the inmates of the Home, that by the latter upwards of twenty robberies have been committed on the establishment, during the preceding year, for to procure the pleasures, which, for money or property, are to be purchased in the bazar. Sailors have robbed their ship-mates of their clothes, while asleep, and have broken open chests during the night, and have taken the contents of them to their seducers in the bazar. So general, indeed, became the latter practice, that at my suggestion, a godown has been appropriated, to secure the property of the seamen, from the nightly plunder of their fellows. Many enter the Home on account of the cheapness and good quality of the board, and because of the facility and small expense of having their advance notes cashed, who spend most of their time and money, at Punch-houses, and are entirely devoted to the interests of crimps. One of this fraternity, indeed, a few months ago, who entered the Home, and whom I discharged from the premises, with an oath, told me, that he gained by seamen more than we did, and, Sir, I doubt not, that his assertion was true. The friends of seamen, to promote their interests, incur a large expense; crimps and prostitutes reap the pecuniary advantages. Though, however, Sir, this is an impartial statement of the case, yet, the Home was established under very auspicious circumstances. The Government lent its influence, and gave its assistance, by granting the use of a house, worth 500 rupees per mensem; captains, merchants, and the public, hailed the establishment of it with delight, and united their energies to rescue seamen, from the tyranny of crimps. During each of the last two years, there have been received for the support of the Home, by subscriptions and donation, upwards of 6,000 rupees, and during the last year, one half of this sum was given by houses of Agency. If, therefore, the value of the rent of the house, be added to the amount of subscriptions and donations, there will be produced the sum of 12,000 rupees, which exceeds only by 2,000, what has been spent, in brutal and sinful indulgences. This abuse, however, of the munificent kindness, of both the Government and public, is limited to the profligate expenditure of deposits; but as now, it devolves upon me, to notice the subject of advance-notes, the sphere of vicious operation will be extended, and as a consequence, instead of 10,000 rupees, having been taken by residents of the Home during the past year, to purchase unlawful pleasures, and to enrich crimps and their dependents, the amount will be increased to at least 15,000 rupees. But, Sir, on a topic so important, I will not confine myself to assertions, and, therefore, shall endeavour to prove them by a brief statement of facts. In the preceding year, about 520 men and officers were received on the establishment, and within the same time 450 advance-notes were cashed to the amount of 14,000 rupees. If then, from the number admitted, there be deducted 30, who have been expelled for dishonesty, drunkenness, or theft, there will remain 490; and the difference between these and the 450 whose advance-notes have been cashed, is 40 only. Though, therefore, 320 men out of 520 deposited cash to the amount of 15,500 rupees, yet only 40 men returned to sea during the year, without having received an advance of wages. When, however, I calculate only 5,000 out of 14,000 rupees derived from advance notes, to have been consumed, in the procuring of debasing gratifications, I mention a sum considerably under the amount, because not a few of the men who received an advance, having from their deposits delayed their boarding expenses, took one or two month's wages to indulge, for a few days, in excess. But, Sir, hitherto I have merely noticed some of the evils which have resulted from the advance-note system, and, therefore, solicit the attention of this audience to some other particulars of it. No small number of men, who having entered the Home destitute of money, were sober and well-behaved before they obtained a berth, but no sooner had they settled their accounts, and received the balance of their advance, than a great change was effected in their general conduct. Then they felt their independence, set at defiance the rules of the Home, and left it to revel in a Punch-house. The interval between the time of paying men the balance of advance to the sailing of the vessels, always has been to me a period of great anxiety, because I was apprehensive lest disorders should occur, for not unfrequently they have been brought several times from the bazar, put on board, and ultimately coerced. Many times there have been excited within me, the most painful emotions when captains have informed me that the men they shipped from the Home, had not fulfilled their engagement; and, especially, when they added, that the expectations they had formed of the establishment, had been disappointed. The injuries inflicted by the advance-system in seamen, captains, and the Home, were so serious and numerous, that during the last six months of my superintendence, I, on my own responsibility, fixed the amount. It has been my practice to ascertain the real wants of men, to defray their expenses, and to purchase suitable clothing, and in accordance with their necessities, to regulate their amount of advance. Much additional trouble this has given, but in general I have rescued the operation of the captains, and, as I believe, it is to be my public duty, I persevered, and often when two months' advance has been demanded, I have reduced it to one month; and, in some cases, where it was not required, have refused to give any advance; yet, with these precautions, the losses of the Home in the advance-note department have been nearly 900 rupees. These losses have been sustained through the desertion of about thirty men, and in some cases the money has been refunded to the agents, in others the deficiency has been supplied by the shipping of extra men: The Home has lost the confidence of captains, and in their applications to it for seamen, they are influenced more by necessity than inclination. Several lately informed me, that their crews have given them more trouble, during the stay in the port of Calcutta, than on any former visit to it. Since the establishment of the Home, there has prevailed among seamen, a desire to be discharged, and to procure the means of coming ashore for a month or two. Many, through their insubordinate conduct, have forfeited their wages and have been committed to prison, and not a few of these have ultimately become residents of the Home; for though the law prohibits the admission of undischarged men, while the vessels to which they belong, remain in port, yet, your Secretary possesses no authority, to prevent their admission, after the vessels have proceeded to sea. And what is the consequence? Such men, in revenge for the loss they have sustained, by a desperate attempt to break a legal engagement, resolve to desert from the next ship, from which they shall obtain an advance. But, Sir, by this time I presume, some members present, are ready to say, if this is the real state of the Home, dissolve the Society immediately. To which I reply, give it another trial. The present plan was only an experiment, and it has failed entirely to accomplish the legitimate objects contemplated by the friends of seamen; and, therefore, in my opinion, a strong case has been made out to render it imperative on the members of the society, without delay, to reorganize the Institution. At then, through the bar, the reputation of the Home has been tarnished, and your Secretary degraded, as through its influence many of its residents have acquired habits of intemperance, and have contracted debts; and as it has produced general insubordination, and serious quarrels, fighting and robbery, annihilate it by a vote of unanimity. Further, as the facilities of obtaining a daily supply from the deposits, make men dissatisfied in the service of their commanders, and urge them, by unlawful means, to obtain a discharge; as they furnish them, while inmates of the Home, with the means of gratifying for weeks, and sometimes for months, their vicious propensities, and increases rather than diminishes, the potency of the crimping system, make the depositing of money a condition of admission into the Home, and place all deposits under the controul of the executive authorities. Moreover, as the general practice of cashing notes is inimical to sailors, captains, and the institution, tempting the men to contract unnecessary debts, and then to desert their vessels; often causing to captains great inconvenience and frequent delays, and giving anxiety to every conscientious Secretary, and inflicting much pecuniary loss on the Home, refuse henceforth, to cash notes except in cases of absolute necessity.

I implore you to appoint a new Committee. On this subject, however, I propose to enlarge, when it shall be before the attention of the Meeting. Before, therefore, I sit down, I beg permission, Sir, to move as an amendment the following Resolutions:—

That the bar be abolished. That the depositing of earnings be a condition of admission into the Home. That advance-notes be not cashed, except in cases of absolute necessity, and that to carry these Resolutions into effect, a new Committee be appointed. With these imperfect remarks, on a subject of vital importance, I thank the Meeting for their indulgence, and I shall feel obliged to some Gentlemen to second my Resolutions.

Mr. Atkins's resolutions, however, were not seconded by any gentlemen present.

Sir JOHN PETER GRANT then rose and observed, that he did not consider the resolution put forth by the last speaker, could be passed without due examination of the points to which they referred. For a proper sitting and investigating of the subject, therefore, he would suggest the appointment of a Select Committee. Sir John likewise adverted to the two chief points advanced by Mr. Atkins, namely, the bar and the subject of deposits. He admitted, that too free and too frequent an access to the bar, was certainly conducive to inebriety and its concomitants, but he considered a moderate use of spirits not at all objectionable. It was manifestly absurd to have seamen and deny them the use of liquor altogether, unless, perhaps, it was intended to proceed on the principle of a Temperance Society and, on this head, the learned chairman made a few facetious remarks, about some temperance-society folks bawling spirits, and indulging themselves with wine as a reasonable substitute. In reference to the other point, regarding deposits, he also considered, that too much money being given would lead seamen to evil. On the whole, he believed, that not the use, but the abuse, of these things, should be put a stop to.

Mr. Charles Dearn next rose and briefly remarked on the points under discussion. Under any circumstance he was assured, that if the residents of the Home were to knock about in the bazars, more wine would be consumed than that consumed in the Home. He then alluded to the regulations of the institution, that no seamen should be admitted, while in a state of intoxication, and that no more than two glasses per diem should be allowed to each man. In regard to these rules, he observed, that to the circumstance of the men being permitted to infringe them, was to be attributed the evils, noticed by Mr. Atkins. And with reference to the deposits, he remarked, that he was positive that if a seaman was asked to give up all his money, he would give none, but would go and spend the whole in the bazar.

Mr. Atkins here got up to say, that it would be impossible for a Secretary to preserve order, or insist on the observance of the regulations, so long as spirits continued to be sold in the bar. He also repeated that he was prepared to substantiate every one of his assertions. He concluded by expressing his acquiescence to the appointment of a Select Committee, into which, however, he proposed, that no one belonging to the present committee should be admitted, and that, in justice to himself, he should be included.

Mr. Henry Chapman observed, that it could not be supposed that the gentlemen present took a part in the business from any party feeling, but it was a work of charity, and every thing, therefore, should be examined and reported upon in quietness and harmony.

After a little conversation—It was finally proposed, by Sir John Peter Grant, seconded by Mr. Henry Chapman, and unanimously carried, that a Select Committee, consisting of Messrs. Chapman, Porteus and Wight, should be formed to investigate and report on the subjects discussed at the Meeting.

The first resolution for the adoption of the Secretaries' report was about to be put, when Mr. Atkins again opposed it, on the score, that since a Select Committee had been formed for investigation, and his own report (for such he considered the statement which he had brought to the notice of the meeting to be) had been in some degrees recognised; he therefore argued, that the Secretaries' report should remain in abeyance till the report of the Select Committee was made.

Mr. Boss, in reply, remarked, that the Secretaries' report, containing as it did, merely statistical accounts, had nothing to do with the subject, for the investigation of which the select Committee had been formed.

Mr. Chapman here observed, that if the report contained only statistical accounts, it was not sufficiently full to be published. He, however, proposed, the adjournment of the Meeting till the select committee had drawn up their report. This was seconded by Mr. J. W. Alexander, and carried.

Sir John Peter Grant, at this stage of the proceedings vacated the chair, which was filled by Mr. Chapman.

Mr. Atkins again remarked, that he had not taken the committee by surprise, having previously intimated to them his intention of opposing the report in the manner he had done, and he here read the correspondence on the subject.

Mr. Chapman then proposed, that the present committee should continue till the next General Meeting.

Mr. Atkins, however, objected to the passing of this resolution, because he considered several of the members who belong to the committee, were ineligible for the office, three or four of them not having paid their subscriptions for a whole year. Besides, the committee were always divided, and at hostility among themselves on almost every subject before them. As an example he was going to say, that one party some time ago insisted on the practice of having prayers regularly in the homes when, he had heard, Captain Vint expressed himself in profane terms on the subject; and spoke about the Minister being thrown into the river.

Mr. Atkins was here called to order.

Mr. Boaz remarked, that Mr. Atkins's intention was to involve the committee into trouble.

Upon this a very exciting, though desultory, conversation followed, pending which the Meeting abruptly dissolved.

The two honorary Secretaries and the ex-Secretary, however, still remained in the room, and between the latter and one of the former, namely, the Rev. Mr. Atkins and the Rev. Mr. Boaz, sundry recriminating compliments were exchanged. Rev. Atkins said, he would "meet" Rev. Boss any where, and Rev. Boaz sneered at Rev. Atkins, and enquired "for what?" and then applied a not very enviable epithet to him. Further altercation and recrimination took place, between these Rev. gentlemen, which we do not think it necessary to report, and with this clerical exhibition the business of the day terminated.—Herk, March 13.

COTTON CULTIVATION.

ON THE COTTON OF GUZERAT.

It affords us sincere pleasure to witness the increasing interest every day evinced in the improvement of our cotton staple. We have been favored with the copy of a pamphlet—entitled "remarks and observations on the cotton of Guzerat" by Mr. Vaupeil of this place, who has had favorable opportunities of becoming practically acquainted with the subject, from his intimate knowledge of the native character and language, and having resided seventeen years in the province of Guzerat, during ten of which he was engaged in the cotton trade. Mr. Vaupeil has had the work lithographed at his own expense, and extensively circulated amongst the mercantile community, and others who may be supposed to take an interest in the subject.

It contains a mass of highly interesting and useful information on the two grand divisions of the cotton plant, the one producing black seed and long fine silky staple, the other green seed, with shorter, thicker and more woolly staple; then follows a minute description of the different varieties of these divisions—the qualities of soil—the mode of picking—of cleaning and the most approved methods in use among the millmen of adulterating the cotton—the expenses incurred in its transmission to Bombay—suggestions for improving the cultivation—besides a variety of other useful and interesting matter.

We are precluded by want of space from quoting largely from the work. The following remarks on the difficulties—though by no means insurmountable—of inducing the natives to deviate from the old established usages of their forefathers, are valuable:—

"It is pretty evident that of late years the quality of the Northern produce has deteriorated considerably, more particularly in respect of cleanliness, which may be an additional reason why it has lost that character it once maintained in the Bombay market. The agents employed between the grower and exporter are generally banians, who, to the Eastward of the Gulf of Cambay, are termed Wakarnahs. These people are a kind of middlemen or forrestalliers, who make the necessary advances to the ryots to enable them to cultivate their fields, and become responsible to the collector of government share of the produce on condition of having the refusal of receiving all the cotton in seed (rapas) they may cultivate, either at the market rate or at a rate previously agreed upon: it is these people who find their interest in adulterating the cotton previous to disposing of it to the exporter. If they could by any means be persuaded or compelled to relinquish such iniquitous practices, they would materially contribute to the preparation of the article in a clean, marketable state, and consequently improve its quality in this respect, but until it can be made their interest to do so, it is not probable they will otherwise attend to any suggestion which may be offered for the attainment of so desirable a result.

The cultivator has, generally speaking, no immediate inducement to render the produce of his fields unfit for the market, for as in most cases he disposes of the cotton in seed, in the state in which it is gathered, from that moment his concern about it ceases, and it rests with the purchaser or middleman to prepare it for the exporter. If the patells of each village, particularly those who are in easy circumstances, could be induced to prepare all the cotton grown in their own village and give due attention to its preparation, a considerable degree of improvement in quality might be expected to follow, and while they derived a reasonable compensation for their trouble, they would essentially contribute to the production of a superior article, enhance its character and value, and confer a lasting benefit on the country; they would at the same time exclude the banians from interference in its preparation, and consequently put it out of their power to deteriorate the quality of the produce. But so much it is feared cannot be expected from the native character; unaided by European skill and capital, their dread of innovation in whatever form, added to their apathetic indifference to improvement, present an insuperable bar to any reforms or deviations from the customs of their forefathers.

Another forcible reason which presents itself, if more were wanting, to render the improvement of Indian cotton a matter of great importance, is to enable it to compete with and rival the American Cottons in the British market. The staple is generally approved of, and the Surats have been reckoned equal to the Georgias; this is a material—the chief obstacle to its successful competition with those from America is the difference in cleaning, and that, it must be admitted, is a very formidable point to overcome. From a superficial view of the subject it might appear a matter of easy accomplishment, but experience shews the reverse. It is well known there is nothing so difficult to manage, as the introduction of novelty or change in the customs, or usages of the natives, and they allow this feeling to descend undiminished from questions of religion and caste down to their ordinary avocations. This was once put to the test by an endeavour to substitute a pecuniary compensation for gathering, to the established one of payment in kind, and notwithstanding nearly double the value of the cotton that fell to the share of each gatherer was tendered in money to induce them to put it in a particular way, their reply was “there was only one way of picking or of compensation that they either understood or would attend to:” this however is to be expected, and repeated disappointments looked for. Nor should they be permitted to discourage those whose efforts might be attended with no success in the first, second or third attempt; a steady perseverance, in a determinate plan, the great object and ultimate benefit of which to the country and community at large being constantly kept in view, has every likelihood of attaining the wished for result.”

The following remarks are well worthy of attention:—

“Under intelligent European superintendence, the ryots, if duly encouraged and gradually and imperceptibly led on step by step from one improvement to another, by patient and persevering efforts, and a disposition manifested to remove and obviate, instead of creating or making difficulties, ultimate success might with certainty be looked for.”

“The first and most obvious course that suggests itself, for the government to encourage the establishment of villages on all waste lands, by holding out every encouragement to native cultivators, and to enjoin that 2-3rds or 3-4ths of such lands shall be laid out in cotton cultivation, by offering suitable rewards for those who produce the best and cleanest samples and by making some reduction in the ordinary land tax, which, generally speaking, amounts to one half of the village contributions, so as not to place the ryot so much in the power of the lower grades of tax-gatherers, who are employed to estimate the crops, and assess them, without reference to any fixed standard or rule, seems absolutely necessary.

The nature of the climate, and difference of constitution of Europeans, will not admit of their risking much exposure to the sun or personal labour in the preparation of cotton, and in forming expensive establishments for the introduction of improvements. The apathy and determined adherence to ancient custom of the natives, together with their great abhorrence of innovation of any kind, may in some degree account for the difficulties hitherto met with in the way of ameliorating experiments.—Although ample room exists in Guzerat for introducing improved methods of cultivating, gathering and cleaning the cotton, still these, experience teaches, can only be effected gradually and by persons of skill and enterprise, determined to carry them through in spite of all obstacles and impediments; yet with a due regard to native prejudices and a conciliatory and persuasive demeanor, to win them over from their inveterate habits of opposition to new measures.”

A correspondent after calling attention to the importance of improving the cotton cultivation, offers the following suggestions, with which we for the present take leave of the subject—first remarking that the thanks of the public are eminently due to Mr. Vaupell for the public spirit evinced by him in so disinterestedly placing before them the highly interesting and valuable information embodied in what our correspondent justly terms his “luminous essay:”—

“There can be little doubt that the natives of India can with difficulty be made to assist themselves; they are shackled with prejudices which invariably engender apathy, indifference, and idleness, and unless Government were to take the lead they would shrink at the very appearance of innovation; but once shewn the way, and after they have experienced tangible proof of the superiority of the system, then (and not till then) will they not be found wanting to “put their shoulders to the wheel.” To expect private enterprise to anticipate Government in carrying out so vast an object, is to expect too much; but from the well known intrepidity of the British and Parsee merchants of Bombay, their indirect aid might be safely calculated upon. But the result of such a system as that pointed out by Mr. V., in his luminous essay, can need no extraneous recommendation, it will be the harbinger of its own superiority, and soon become an object of imitation and improvement.

A twelve month or two, or at most three, at an outlay of perhaps £1,000, or £1,500 per annum (a trifle compared with the advantages which must result therefrom) would at once prove that the cotton of British India is fully as good as any from America, and the E. I. Government would begin to find that it can be made to compete in the British market, with the best Americans, a result of the most paramount importance to both Great Britain and British India. Government might in the first instance, invite the services of Europeans or intelligent East Indians, inured to the climate of Guzerat, and who not only understood the language but the usages also of the natives of the country, and who would be prepared to make every allowance for the prejudices and cases of the people amongst whom they were called upon to sojourn, in order to carry out this grand system of commercial prosperity, which must ere long tend to the moral and intellectual amelioration of the natives of India.”

IMPROVEMENT OF COTTON CULTIVATION. Merit Rewarded.

We have great pleasure in publishing the following account from a native correspondent, of a Durbar held on the 15th instant, at Broach, on the occasion of a mark of honor being conferred by Government on Merwanjee Hormujee, Esq., an estimable Parsee gentleman, whose successful efforts in improving the cotton cultivation in Guzerat are so well known, and been so highly appreciated:

To the Editor of the Bombay Times.

Sir,—Being desirous to communicate for the information of the Public, but more especially of the mercantile community, a short account of a Durbar, or levee, lately held on the occasion of presenting a “Sir pao” to a Parsee gentleman by a European Government officer at Broach, I embrace this opportunity to beg that you will be good enough to allow me to do so through the medium of your valuable Commercial Journal, at the same time feeling assured that, at a crisis like this, when the question as to extension and improvement of the Cotton Cultivation has engaged the increased attention both of the government and the Public, it will afford no small degree of interest to learn the result of a Durbar thus held on no common occasion. The Durbar alluded to was held on the 15th instant, by one of the advocates and promoters of the welfare and prosperity of India, Mr. J. H. Pelly, senior, of the civil service, the collector of continental Customs and Excise, for the purpose of investing a highly respectable and enterprising Parsee gentleman, named Merwanjee Hormusjee (late native commercial agent) with a pair of shawls, authorized to be bestowed on him by the government, as an additional mark of the sense entertained of his energetic and spirited exertions in improving and extending cotton cultivation; nor must I omit to add, this very individual, at no remote period, received a similarly distinguished mark of honor from the hands of the late governor, Lord Clare, at Bombay. In short, to speak of the Durbar itself it was a splendid scene, and indeed I may say, second only to that held on the late occasion of Mr. Mill's departure from Broach in 1832. Crowded it was to the number of about 4 or 500 of the principal inhabitants of the Town of Broach such as the Desaees, Muzmoodars, Wazirdars, Quazee, Shroffs, Parsee Shettis, the cotton Traders and Brokers as well as Government servants holding respectable situations, namely the Duffers, Moonis, Manludars, &c., &c. At half past 10 A. M. Merwanjee was received by the assembly with great honor, and the chief and most attractive feature of the Durbar was the manner in which Mr. Pelly, as a Government Functionary, explained in the native language the object of the Durbar. He began with noticing the high and estimable character borne by Merwanjee Hormusjee, both in public and private life, and alluded in the first instance, to his important services in the Sea Customs department at Lannah, whilst many years ago, holding the responsible situation of an Inspector, and the suppression by him of frauds long in existence there, by introducing checks calculated to defeat them; the result that followed being a large augmentation of the Customs Revenue, and secondly, his services in the late commercial residency were brought forward whilst filling the office of so high a trust as that of native Agent, the reforms introduced and the economy enforced by him and the salutary checks imposed by him against frauds previously practised to the greatest detriment of the Cotton Trade, and which he kept in force up to the cessation of the Company's Trade, occasioned by the new Charter, were commented on. His enterprize however, Mr. Pelly said, did not end with the department, for he continued to endeavour to advance the improvement of cotton, and his exertions in a private capacity were not less conspicuous, he having incurred a considerable outlay in the erection of lofty and commodious warehouses and screws at Broach, an undertaking encouraged by the grant of the Umzud Baug free of rent by the Court of Directors, and he thus laid a solid foundation for promoting and encouraging the improvement of cotton. The first cotton he prepared in this establishment, almost equalled the best uplands American in the Liverpool market; these effects were followed by repeated commendations from the Bombay authorities, and in particular by Lord Auckland in his minute on a despatch from the Court of Directors, dated 14th August 1839—nor did Mr. Pelly omit to praise him for his private liberality towards the poor and distressed around him, and for his affording accommodation to the public at large, by exciting Durumallas and other places, for example, that under the very eye of the assembly just completed by Merwanjee on the flank of the Nurbudla. Mr. Pelly then drew the attention of the audience to the views the Government entertain regarding the improvement and extension of cotton cultivation, and pointed out the disadvantage to which Indian cotton is exposed in England, owing to the want of care in picking and preparing it for market, in a clear state, free from those adulterations which render it inferior to foreign cotton. He then mentioned to the assembly the stimulus likely to be afforded by Government in the way of rewards, bounties, &c. to be held out for superior cotton, requesting them to reflect on the advantages of exertion, both to themselves and India generally. To all this Mr. Pelly displayed great zeal and interest, and his language was most encouraging to the individual who was the occasion of this durbar. So soon as the speech terminated, Mr. Pelly rose and presented the valuable pair of shawls to the gentleman for whom they were designed, and what to some might be still more interesting at the time, was, the emphatical manner in which the "chopdars, or mace bearers in waiting," did their part by lustily hawling out "Neecha roshum," and soon a solemnity observed by the Eastern monarchs, and one which the British chobdars, therefore, emulate and imitate. This had scarcely passed over when Merwanjee stood up and pronounced himself undeserving of so high a distinction. He said, though he had the prosperity of the trade at his heart, still his exertions were inadequate to the object. He then accepted the "Kbelut" with deep gratitude to the authorities bestowing it. Mr. Pelly afterwards again rose and presented to the circle immediately around him, nose-gays, ottur, rose water and paunsooparee. The durbar adjourned at 12 at noon, and then to complete the honor on the part of the assembly towards Merwanjee, they attended him to his residence in the Dutch factory, where they were regaled with nose-gays, rose water, paunsooparee, &c. in return for the compliment paid him by their visit.

In conclusion, Mr. Editor, let me beg that you will excuse the trouble I have been giving you. I would have given you a somewhat longer account, but I have avoided doing so, fearing you may think even this too long, and in the hope that this imperfect account of the durbar may not be unacceptable to some of your readers,

I remain, Mr. Editor, your most obdt. servt,

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA.

A General Meeting was held at the Society's Room Town Hall, on Wednesday, the 11th March 1840.

The Hon'ble Sir Edward Ryan, President, in the Chair.

(FIFTEEN MEMBERS PRESENT.)

The proceedings of the last General Meeting and of the Special Meeting held on the 19th February, were submitted and confirmed.

MEMBERS ELECTED.

The gentleman proposed at the February Meeting, were elected members of the Society, viz.

Messrs Wm. Quinton, Geo. Henderson, James Davidson, F. Williams, H. Astell, and R. H. Rattray—Capt. E. P. Nisbet,—Major J. R. Ouseley,—Honours Hurroauth Roy and Rangopaul Ghose,—Messrs F. C. Cadogan, A. De H. Larpent, Edward Whyte, Matthew Herring and C. C. Fussell,

FOR ELECTION.

The names of the following gentlemen were read as candidates for election.

Dr. Dunsell, of Clenchowah Factory, Pohna—proposed by Mr. Chas. DeVerneux, seconded by Dr. Spry.

Forbes Scott Brown, Esq., of Penang, proposed by Dr. Wallich, seconded by Dr. Spry.

Alex. Stuart Brown, Esq., of Penang, proposed by Dr. Wallich—seconded by Dr. Spry.

C. E. Newcomen, Esq., (Firm of Cockerell and Co.)—proposed by Mr. W. E. Feigunson,—seconded by the Secretary.

F. R. Hampton, Esq., Secretary to the Assam Tea Company—proposed by Dr. Spry,—seconded by Dr. Wallich.

Adam Scott Glanville, Esq., (Firm of Gillanders, Arbuthnot and Co.)—proposed by Dr. Spry, seconded by Dr. Wallich.

Thos. Hugon, Esq., proposed by Mr. Piddington,—seconded by Dr. Spry.

APPROPRIATION OF THE SUM OF 10,000 RUPEES FOR THE PURPOSES OF A BUILDING.

The Hon'ble the President adverting to the motion of which he gave notice at the last meeting, begged to recall to the recollection of the meeting the acquiescence which had been accorded by the Society at a former Meeting, to assign a portion of the fixed Assets to the purpose of a Building for the accommodation of the Society, and he now begged to propose that the sum of 10,000 rupees should be passed for this purpose.

The Right Hon'ble the Governor of Bengal had not as yet returned an answer to the letter which had been addressed by the Society with reference to the grant of a piece of ground, but he (the President) believed he might state that a suitable site would be granted although the locality of Bank Square might not be the one assigned. The motion was then put and carried unanimously.

PRESENTATIONS TO THE SOCIETY.

A memoir on the proposed improvements in Indian Cotton,—by Henry Piddington,—presented by the Author.

MUSEUM.

1. Plant, stem, flower, and bark of the paper plant of Nepal, called in the language of the country Daircon or Daircon, (even being for a tree) from the hills about Darjeeling. Presented by Dr. Pearson Civil Surgeon at Darjeeling.

Dr. Spry in submitting this specimen to the Meeting mentioned that a full description of this plant which is the Daphne Canadina of Lawreux and D. Odorata of Thunberg, has been fully described by Dr. Wallich in the 13th volume of the Asiatic Researches, and is the identical plant whence the almost impervious paper of Nepal, (the particulars of which by Mr. Hodgson and Dr. Campbell are to be found recorded in the 5th volume of the transactions of the Society) is prepared. The flower is full of odour and much resembles the Jessamine in smell. A sketch of the plant or Nepal paper is to be found in Dr. Wallich's description. For its fibre too, the plant would seem to be well worthy attention.

2. Seeds and cones of various kinds from the hills about Darjeeling.

Dr. Pearson, who forwards these, as a contribution from the Darjeeling Plantation Society, mentions, that there are at least three if not four sorts of Oak at Darjeeling, one an immense tree affording a dark mottled timber, in appearance much like the English heart of oak, from 40 to 60 feet long, and 6 or 7 in diameter, or even larger still. One sort is what is called *phulant in Nepal, and is said to resemble the "she oak" in Australia. It grows to 40 or 50 feet long, but Dr. Pearson has not seen any that is more than 2½ or 3 feet at most in diameter. The wood is close grained, reddish, brown in colour and mottled; and exceedingly tough, though, easily split. It makes excellent tool handles, superior indeed to ash itself, and would, Dr. Pearson considers, be valuable for gun carriages, for although it splits readily yet it is a tough, strong wood, and does not fly in splinters, besides warping less and being less affected by the weather than any wood with which Dr. Pearson is acquainted.

Some of the seeds forwarded are reported by Dr. Pearson to afford flowers of a delicious fragrance, one resembles a myrtle—a second a cherry—a third a chestnut—a fourth a large tree having a broad leaf and most beautiful flowers, which hang in clusters, and vary in shades of colour from deep crimson to light scarlet. A fifth are the seeds of a large tall and very beautiful tree, having a leaf and wood, which is very like the holly; and a sixth is the Geelah.† Dr. Pearson further stated that the consignment of plants sent by the society to the Darjeeling Garden reached for the most part safe and in tolerable good order. A second supply of vines, current, apple, and pear trees, from the Cape, sent up by Mr. Bruce, reached in such excellent condition, that Dr. Pearson is anxious to give the particulars of packing. It appears the plants were packed in a long tin case with a quantity of reddish earth around them quite wet, so much so that at first view Dr. Pearson thought them rotten, but on examination found all to be alive and some to be budding. Some plants, sent from America, which were packed amidst dry moss without earth and in tin cases, reached in a dead state. The Darjeeling garden is getting on better, Mr. Pearson states, than could be expected. English potatoes and hive bees are much wanted at Darjeeling.

3. Specimen of ginger, cotton, and wild yam, produced in the neighbourhood of Darjeeling and collected in the valleys by the Lepchas, presented by Dr. Pearson, who mentions in his note that the yam plant is a creeper having a leaf much like a pawn leaf, but twice the size, at the root of which the yam is found at a depth of from three to four or five and even six feet. It is quite uncultivated, even self-sown, yet of a flavour and whiteness far surpassing that of the plains—some specimens are however of a pinkish purple hue. Dr. Campbell and Lieutenant Montgomery, from whom these particulars were obtained by Dr. Pearson, saw the plant growing in abundance on a recent expedition, which they have been making. In the Lepcha language the plant is called "Bookh," in Purbutnah "Turool," and in Bhooteah "Kew."

The ginger was pronounced to be a very superior article and well worthy of attention. The cotton is indifferent.

4. Tea from the Tipperah Hills.

Mr. Watt, who forwards the leaves, states, that while on a tour in the Tipperah hills last month, (February) his party came on large tracts of trees from which the leaves were taken, and considering it to be the Tea plant, a quantity of the leaves were taken into camp and prepared in a rough way, by roasting in a fry pan and infused in boiling water. The result was, considering the hasty manner in which the article was got up, the infusion had really a very agreeable flavour of ordinary tea.

The examination of the leaf excited much curiosity among the Members present, from the circumstance of such an abundant supply of tea being found so near home as the Tipperah Hills, and although it was difficult from the leaf merely to pronounce whether it belonged to the genus "thea" or "camelia," yet in point of importance the distinction was not likely to prove of great consideration. The fact of the specimen sent imparting the flavor of ordinary tea, shows how closely allied these two ge-

6. Fourteen specimens of wool from various quarters of the globe. Submitted by Mr. Robert Smith.

7. China Aster plants in full bloom. Exhibited by Dr. Spry.

These plants were raised from seed furnished by Colonel Smyth of the 3d Cavalry, when at Caubul. The flowers vary in color. Some are white, others purple, and one plant is giving double flowers of a delicate peach blossom in color.

8. Coffee, Hemp and seeds of the Arnette and Sapan trees. Presented by Dr. Strong.

Dr. Strong designs the Bakhum* or Sapan seeds for distribution among Members as it forms a prickly good hedge and is a valuable wood for its dye. The coffee was grown by Dr. Strong at Rassapuglah, and was dried as recommended by the London brokers, without sun, and has not the marks and blemishes, the sample formerly sent to London by Dr. Strong had, which had been dried upon a masonry floor and in the sun which causes the berry to crack—dries it too much and in fact spoils it for taste and sale.

9. Fleeces of four sheep that obtained prizes at the last Cattle Exhibition. No 1, an imported Merino Ram—No 2, a Merino Ram Lamb bred in 1839. No 3, a Merino Ewe Lamb bred in 1839. No 4, a half-bred Ewe Lamb by a Merino Ram and Patna Ewe in 1839.—Presented by Mr. Gibbon.

10. Six mounds of the Mauritius "pois noire," or black bean, from the society's nursery.

11. A bag of the "pois noire" direct from the Mauritius.

Mr. Hugon, who forwards this present, states, that on the island of Mauritius these beans are sown in the old cane fields and by the thick covering they afford the fertility of the soil is restored in two or three years. It is of hardy growth, and hardly requires any care. The bean affords a cheap and good nourishment for cattle.

It was also stated at the meeting that these beans when young afford an excellent dish for the dinner table, and in Hindoostan is an admirable substitute for the broad bean of Europe.

12. A sample of cotton from the third generation of acclimated Peruvian plants.—Presented by Mr. W. C. Hurry.

Mr. Hurry states, that he has no doubt that any quantity required could be grown in Bengal. The plants are remarkably large and woody, and bear well.†

13. The leaves, flower and fruit of the purple fruited "Granadilla," described in part XVI of the Encyclopedia of Gardening, p. 983.—Presented by Major Wood.

14. A machine for separating cotton from the seed. This machine was made as an improvement on the Guzerat Churka. It has been invented by Mr. John Potter of Manchester, and differs from the machine lately sent out to India as the invention of Mr. Holdsworth of Glasgow. Any number of them can be set in motion by an adequate moving power, a bullock could turn 20 or 30 of them. That shown to the Society is one of several lately imported into Calcutta. Exhibited by — Potter, Esq.

15. A sample of Black Pepper from a garden at Barrapore, about 16 miles from Calcutta. Presented by Mr. Homfray—This pepper is very good of its kind, and the plant whence it is obtained, grows luxuriously at Barrapore, where it appears, it was introduced some years ago by a gentleman from the eastward. The tree yields abundantly and grows without requiring any husbandry. Mr. Homfray will readily furnish cuttings to any one desirous of obtaining them.

IMPROVEMENT OF INDIAN WOOLS.

The first paper which engaged the attention of the meeting, was one on the interesting subject of Indian wools, from the pen of Mr. Robert Smith, who also has forwarded samples, thirteen in number, in illustration of his subject.

Mr. Smith, during a recent visit to England, directed his attention to the subject of the wool trade in general, particularly with the view of ascertaining the proper steps to be taken in the improvement of our Indian wools; and Mr. Smith thinks, that the result of his experience may not prove uninteresting to the members of the society, who may be engaged in the growth of this rising staple of our Asiatic territories. For much of the practical information contained in Mr. Smith's communication, he is indebted to his brother, who is of the firm of J. T. Simes and Co., wool brokers, London, aided by personal observation of the wool stapleries in the South of Ireland.

The first step to be taken by the Indian wool grower will consist in selecting from the various breeds of Asiatic sheep, one which, crossed by Australian or Cape Merino blood, promises best to realize the expectations which are entertained of an amelioration in the quality of Indian wools. Without venturing a decided opinion on a point of so much importance, where all has yet to stand the test of experience, Mr. Smith thinks, after careful consideration, that we must look to the Punjab and Khorassan as the localities from which to procure Ewes; as it is from those quarters that the principal part of the wool known in the home market as "East Indian," at present proceeds;—and which, though intrinsically of an inferior quality, is much superior to the wool produced in other parts of the East. The Rams, as before mentioned, should be of New South Wales, or Cape Stock; bearing in mind, that the surest method of establishing a valuable fleece in India, is not to commence by breeding "hns" but by gradually breeding "upward" from a coarse stock to a finer, until the best commercial standard is obtained, of which the climate is susceptible. But as this part of the subject is scarcely within the intention of his paper,—Mr. Smith must refer those who are desirous of obtaining particulars respecting the various races of sheep, their breeding and management, to a volume in the Library of useful knowledge for 1837, entitled "sheep, their breeds, management and diseases," which contains very copious and correct information on all points connected with this topic.

A comparison of the specimens of wools, submitted by Mr. S. from different quarters of the world, will enable a ready judgment to be formed of the essentials, in which the superiority of the one over the other consists. The doughy elastic feel, fineness, softness and spiral fibre of the German Merino, Sydney superior, Sydney average, Spanish Merino, Van Dieman's Land English Merino—compared with the in-elastic, coarse, hairy and straight composition of the Mogadore,—Russian "Zigai," East India superior; Peruvian, Smyrna, East India average, Russian "Donkoi,"—and English wether, sufficiently indicate the difference. Yet this is principally the result of cultivation; since the specimen of English wether was taken from a South Down wether in England, and can be matched from almost any Patna bred sheep pasturing on the maiden of Calcutta. Yet, inferior as the latter specimens seem, they are in demand for blanketings, carpets, druggists, and all low goods, when, as is frequently the case, English

Wool is at a full price; though at all other times they could not command a ready market. Respecting East India wool, the following remarks of an eminent wool broker may be quoted:-

"The wool is applicable to the manufacture of blankets, padding, and all articles where weight is required. As at present imported, it has more the appearance of wool shaven as hair, then shorn as wool; but proves in manufacture better than it looks. Although not positively improved in quality; it has improved of late in public estimation, coming to hand, whiter, better assorted, and got up; and at its relative value is currently saleable. The last quotations are,- soft and kind (relatively)..... 10 to 11 per lb.

Superior white, free from grey hair, d. d.
Fair quality, and fair in other respects. 8 to 9 "
Inferior,—mixed with yellow, or gray. 6 to 7 "
Grey and low..... 4½ to 5 "

From the prices paid, with the costs and charges, it is said not to leave a profit, and from the remarks made, it is evident, it must be improved in quality, before it can assume a firmer place in the home market."

When the improvement which has been effected in Australian wools is taken into consideration, the suggestion naturally presents itself, whether the same result may not be produced in India, possessing as it does so many varieties of indigenous sheep with a choice of climates, and the advantage of procuring within an easy distance, the male stock which is to lay the foundation of improvement. Without judicious selection of climate, the most careful breeding will avail little. The Cape commenced long before the Australian Colonies,—but with every precaution, the South African wool affects an unkindly handle, which is attributed to the nature of the soil and climate.

The remarkable improvement in the Australian wools is not to be safely tested by comparing them with those of Germany. In the latter country, wool is grown as an exotic, in-door production, the sheep being carefully housed during a great part of the year, and the rapid decline in the fineness and every other property in which the excellence of German wool consists, is so great when the least neglect or undue exposure to the weather has been suffered to take place,—that by one year's bad management the produce of a flock is often deteriorated to the extent of 25 per cent.

Not paying attention to this difference of system, the earlier wool growers in Australia, attempted to raise wool, which should compete with the finer produce of Germany, and failed; and even had they succeeded, would only have had a fleece weighing 1½ lb. at 3 = 4s. 6d. They now have a less costly but more marketable staple, averaging 4½ lb. at 2s. = 9s., and not unfrequently 5 to 6 lb per fleece; but it took some years to retrieve the error that had been committed at the outset.

That the following is the relative standing of the different kinds of wool sold in England:

1. { Saxon.
- { Silesian.
2. Odessa Merino,—produce of flocks imported into Russia.
3. Australian.
4. { Spanish } Merino.
- { Cape. }
5. { English } Merino.

6. English improved cross breeds.
7. Zigni,—called the original Macedonian breed.
8. Italian cross breeds.

The following wools are washed on the sheep's back, and contain a large percentage of grease or yolk:

Saxon and Silesian, Australian, English, Italian, and Peruvian.

The following being washed after shearing are white and dry:

Spanish, Odessa, and Russian, of all kinds.

The prices in the London market are principally regulated.

As to the finer kinds by the result of the German wool fairs in the month of June.

Of Spanish, Odessa, and the middling descriptions, by the sales of Australian wool in June and July.

Of all by the English clip.

The small proportion which the whole amount of imported foreign and colonial wool bears to the English clip may be estimated from the annexed statement.

The annual produce of the United Kingdom is one million twenty thousand packs of 240 lbs. each.

In 1838 the importations were as follows:

German.....	79,390 bales
Spanish.....	8,577 "
Australian.....	32,210 "
Sundries.....	61,675 "

181,772

The importation of Australian Wools was in 1814, 32,000 lbs. In 1838, 32,000 bales of 250 lbs each.

The progressive increase in the importation of E. I. wools has been as follows:

1835.....	1500 bales
1836.....	3400 "
1837.....	5600 "
1838.....	6117 "

Bombay has taken the lead in this new speculation, and it is known, that more than one house in Liverpool is engaged in plans for extending operations in that quarter. It may not be uninteresting to learn, that the late Ruler of Lahore, Runjeet Sing, not long ago, forwarded a quantity of Shawl wool for sale. It was, however, so indifferently got up, and so full of "kemp" or short hairs, as to be unsaleable for any thing near the price put on it.

Much valuable information for growers and shippers is contained in the following Circular addressed by Messrs. J. T. Simes and Co., to Australian constituents, and the remarks are equally applicable to India.

It cannot fail to afford gratification and encouragement to the Australian Wool growers, to learn that the produce of their flocks is at this time in very high and deserved repute in England. This reputation arises chiefly from the peculiar softness of the cloth, and other fabrics made from these wools, it is therefore very desirable that the growers should exert themselves to combine the highest possible degree of fineness, with the softness of handle, making it a rule to breed from Rams of the finest wool, and purest race they can obtain; purity of blood being the great essential towards producing wool of that uniform fineness of fibre, elasticity and closeness of staple, which alone can enable the manufacturer to make a cloth small on the face as well as soft to the touch.

Defect in breeding has undoubtedly much to do with the coarseness of the hair of a great portion of the wool grown in Australia. To this general failing some choice flocks in each Colony are decidedly exceptions, and it is only by carefully attending to purity of blood, in the selection of the Rams, that the inferior flocks can be brought to the same degree of perfection; and that perfection when arrived at, can only be maintained by constant attention to fresh crossing with pure blood.

Though it is highly necessary to the perfection of the fleece that its fibres should be acted upon by the air, it is also strongly recommended that fine wool flocks should be kept under sheds every night, their constitutions being unable to sustain the effect of the cold nights, and heavy dews, which commonly succeed the hottest day, from which transition they must be carefully guarded: care should therefore be taken to provide a constant succession of clean litter in the sheep stalls, that the full effect of perspiration on the fibre may not be interfered with, by the fleece being loaded at the extremities with an accumulation of filth of any sort.

It is of great importance that the fleece should be well washed, that the wool may be brought to market with as bright a color as possible; every convenience, and a plentiful supply of pure water, should therefore be provided: a running stream being most desirable.

The preferable mode of washing, is that which is performed before shearing, according to the German manner. Some growers have tried the plan of washing after the fleeces have been shorn and sorted; and as it is supposed, have used tepid water, following the French and Spanish method; but this has been approved of by the buyers generally, and particularly by those who buy for combing purposes.

The breaking of the fleece and washing after shearing, gives the wool more the appearance of Spanish than of German wool, and consequently reduces it to a lower standard of comparison. It is well known, that the sheep of those German flocks that are best washed are after that operation driven into some shed strewn with clean litter, or penned up with hurdles on clean grass, that the utmost care is taken to prevent their exposure to dirt or whatever else might tend to sully their whiteness, and that they are not shorn until a sufficient degree of moisture is deposited in the fleece by perspiration, to impart a soft handle to the wool. It may here be added, that it is very important, if possible, to prevent the sheep from filling their fleeces with grass seeds, broken leaves, and other extraneous substances which cannot be removed in the operation of washing, and which are productive of labor and expence in every process of manufacturing; in some cases indeed rendering wools almost unsaleable. It may here be observed, that so conscious are the Spaniards of the superiority of the German mode of washing and assorting, that they are making every effort to introduce it.

In order to assimilate the Australian wool as much as possible with the German in preparing it for market, the fleeces should not be broken, but merely divested of the greasy and stained locks, and so assorted or arranged that each package may contain fleeces of the same character as to color, length of staple, fineness of hair and general quality.

If the washing has been performed at the same time and place, and with an equal degree of care, the color is likely to be uniform and it will then only be necessary to attend to the sorting of the fleeces as to length, fineness and general quality: but if a large Grower has flocks and different breeds, and fed on different soils, care should be taken that the fleeces be separated first as to color, and then again as to length, fineness, &c.

The fleeces being assorted as already suggested, should be spread one upon another, the neck of the second fleece being laid upon the tail of the first, and so alternately to the extent of eight to ten fleeces, according to their size and weight. When so spread, the two sides should be folded towards the middle then rolled together, beginning at each end and meeting in the center, and the roll or bundle so formed, held together by a slight packthread.

The baggage should be of a close, firm and tough nature. The material hitherto most generally used, has been sail canvas, which very ill resists bad weather on a long voyage, and when received here even in favourable condition, is so dry and crisp that it will tear like paper. A thicker, twisted, more flexible and tough material would be preferable. The size and form of the package may be in length about nine feet, and width four feet, sewed upon the two long sides, and at one end,—the other end being left open, and the sheet so formed, being suspended with the open end upwards, to receive the bundles made up as before directed, which are to be put in one at a time, one of the flat sides of the roll or bundle being put downwards, and so on in succession, being well trod down until sufficiently filled for the mouth to be closed. This is the German mode of packing, but it is doubtful whether smaller packages of the dimensions that have been hitherto sent from the two colonies, may not be more convenient for so long a voyage.

The operation of screwing should be discontinued, where it has been practised; as the pressure by the screws and remaining compressed during the voyage, occasions the wool to be cake and matted together in a manner that is highly prejudicial to its appearance on arrival. The practice also of winding up each fleece separately, and twisting a portion into a ball, is productive in a minor degree, of the same prejudicial effect, and it is to avoid this, that the making German bundles of eight or ten fleeces, is suggested.

It is very desirable that the wools should be shipped and sent away from both Colonies, if possible, in all the month of January, so as to arrive in England in June.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE EAST INDIA AND CHINA ASSOCIATION.

The Association, in returning thanks for the several numbers of the Society's proceedings which were forwarded, desires to state how much that body appreciates the desire of the Agricultural Society of India to make it acquainted with the progress and improvement of the agriculture of India in which it takes a lively interest and always feels it to be its wish to promote. Such an interest is taken by the association that it desires all the former numbers of the Society's proceedings may be sent, and that the Society may be convinced how strenuously the committee of the association, has advocated the subjects of East India Rum and Tobacco, a copy of the papers the committee has addressed to the Government is sent, and the committee trusts, that the ensuing session of parliament will not pass by without equalization in the duties being effected.

The papers on the subject of the growth of cotton which the society sent to the Association, are deemed by the committee to be very valuable, and the committee express a hope, that the several trials will lead to that success which will eventually make the Manchester Locomotive in a great measure independent of America.

Extract of letter addressed to the Right Hon'ble C. P. Thompson, President of the Board of Trade, London 19th April, 1839.

"The committee of the East India and China Association beg leave, again most respectfully to bring under your consideration, the difference in the duty charged upon spirits and Tobacco, the produce of the East and West Indies, and they feel a conviction that the present Session of Parliament will not be allowed to pass without provision being made by law to put them on an equal footing, because it has been admitted in the instance of sugar and coffee that it is not a just system of taxation for the produce of the British Empire to be charged with higher duties than those of another."

PROMISE OF SEEDS FROM THE INDIA HOUSE.

The last overland has brought a letter from Professor Royle, to the address of Dr. Wallich, in which the former refers to an application which was made to him for a supply of seeds in accordance to the announcement made by the Court of Directors in their despatch to the Right Hon'ble the Governor General on the 13th of February last year.

Extract. "I have had a letter from Dr. Spry applying for seeds. I have mentioned the subject to the authorities at the India House, and I have obtained permission to send seeds to the Agricultural Society."

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE MEMBERS OF THE BENGAL BRANCH SOCIETY.

The next communication which was submitted was the Report from Mr. Herklotts, the secretary of the Branch Society at Berhampore, of the result of the meeting held for the exhibition of Horticultural prizes.

The meeting was held at the house of the President of the Branch Society, F. W. Russell, Esq., Civil and Sessions Judge of Moorshedabad, and there were present on the occasion Messrs. T. A. Lushington, C. Smelt, J. Alexander, Revil, Mr. Patterson, Major Norton, Lieut. Goldie, Baboo Kissenchunder Chowdry, Ramanaut Majumdar, J. D. Herklotts, Esq., and several visitors.

The native gardeners with their several baskets of vegetable, were introduced to the meeting, and the President selected the Revd. Mr. Paterson, Major Norton and Lieutenant Sismore to be the umpires.

The first prize was won by Mr. Russell's gardener, for the best supply of peas, curly cabbages, Brussels sprouts, crowned cabbage, capsicums, celery, leeks and French beans.

The second prize to Mr. Elliott's gardener, for the best citron, knole knole, Jerusalem artichokes, Windsor beans, tomato and peas.

The third prize to Mr. Herklotts's gardener, for the best brinjals, carrots, endive, sweet potatoes, love apples, turnips, cross beans, plantains, oranges, gooseberries, (country) and French beans.

The society's garden produced the best cauliflowers, cabbages, country carrots, beet roots, lettuces, turnips, and radishes.

Three medals were awarded and the sum of fifty rupees in money. It was also resolved that a second meeting should be held in February* at the president's house, when three other silver medals, the expense of which Baboo Takoor Doss Mookenjee had generously offered to bear, should be awarded.

* The particulars of this has not yet reached the Parent Society.

HORTICULTURAL EXHIBITION AT HOOGHLY.

The report of Dr. Esdaile, Secretary of the Branch Society at Hooghly, of the result of the second Annual Horticultural Exhibition held at Hooghly, for prizes on Saturday the 1st ultimo, was next submitted. The two silver medals allowed by the parent society and the sum of thirty-four rupees, were awarded to competitors: and Dr. Esdaile mentions, what he feels assured the Parent institution will be glad to learn, namely, that the number of Exhibitions this year greatly exceeded that of last: On the first occasion, only three or four native gardeners came forward whereas, on the last show the number exceeded 50,

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL EXHIBITION AT AZIMGHUR.

Mr. H. C. Tucker, the Officiating Collector of the Azimghur District and Secretary of the Branch Society here, communicates the particulars of the exhibition held at the station of Azimghur, to compete for prizes, amounting to the sum of 300 rupees, which he had set apart as a donation from himself, to encourage the people of his district to exertion.

Mr. Tucker, in his interesting communication, states that the Annual Meeting for the Parent Society's prizes and his own, came off the 9th January, in the presence of the respectable Landholders both Europeans and Natives of the district.

The competition among the growers of the Otaheite sugar cane was very spirited, there being no fewer than twenty competitors.

A silver medal and 50 rupees were won by Mr. R. Nicholson, whose ten heaviest canes weighed seventy lbs. At the meeting Mr. Nicholson stated, that he had during the present year sold seed cane, the produce of one bighah of land for 500 rupees, an announcement which created a great sensation among the Landholders present at the meeting. Mr. Nicholson also exhibited ratoonings of the 2d and 3rd year, which to appearance, were hardly inferior to the first year's growth. "The effect" adds Mr. Tucker, "in favor of the cane was immense, and there is little doubt that it will soon be extensively spread throughout the district."

A subscription is in progress for rewards for the best agricultural productions of next year. The successful competitors for the Parent society's medals are Messrs. Nicholson of Maharaigunge and Gilbert D'Rozario of Azimghur.

BOOKS FROM ENGLAND.

The receipt of two letters from Captain Grindlay furnishes the intelligence of the despatch of a small consignment of books for the use of the society, which had been written for. Captain Grindlay desires that a selection of one of the parcels may be made and presented to the society in his name, as a sincere well wisher to the prosperity of the institution, and on all occasions Captain Grindlay states he shall give due attention to the wishes of the society, and obtain such proceedings and reports of the home public bodies, as will be given in exchange for those of the society. Captain Grindlay further, states that he will lose no opportunity of giving publicity to the views and movements of the Agricultural society of India, which he thinks destined to assist in the birth of a new Era for India.

STATE OF HORTICULTURE AT MORADABAD.

Major Sleeman in a long and interesting letter with which he has favored the Special Cotton committee, on the subject on which they were engaged, mentions incidentally that about thirty-five years ago Mr. Laycenter introduced into his garden at Moradabad, a Bombay graft, and that now Bombay mango-trees are spread over the whole station, giving double value to estates in the estimation both of Natives and Europeans; and that nobler fruit is not to be found in the world, or delicious and wholesome. Thousands of grafts are now ready, Major Sleeman adds, to be carried over the country. Every garden has them for any one that will take them, and every gardener understands the art and is spreading it. The apples and pears, which have been introduced are utterly useless. The peach trees are also bad. In the city at Aloradabad, very fine cauliflowers can be purchased at one pice a piece—four for an anna and so on. The bazar is full of them, so of turnips, radishes, &c., but good carrots are rare.

BLACK PEPPER IN BANGAL.

An extract of a letter from Mr. Dearman, Deputy Collector at Dacca, was next submitted, in which the gentleman mentions that the black pepper grows not only in the Dacca district but in the adjoining district of Tipperah, and that he has himself met with it there in several villages growing very luxuriantly and bearing plentifully. It is planted at the foot betel and mango trees, and attaches itself to them in the same way as ivy does to trees at home.

For all the foregoing presents and communications the thanks of the meeting were awarded.

SUPREME COURT.

FEBRUARY 27, 1840.

QUEEN V. JAGGUTHDOOLAH SING.

The Clerk of the Crown read the indictment to the prisoner, when he pleaded "not guilty."

The Advocate-General then addressed the jury to the following effect:—The learned speaker commenced by adverting to the charge against the prisoner, which was for receiving a Company's paper to the amount of 12,000 rupees, knowing it to have been stolen. He then proceeded in his address, and detailed to the jury, that in July 1836, at the time when robberies of notes were prevalent, Kistomungul Bysack, who carried on business with his brother, Manick Chunder Bysack, in Calcutta, sent a letter to the latter. That the letter was delivered at the Dacca Post Office, but which did not arrive. That the packet into which this letter containing the notes, was put, had thirty-three letters; but that thirty-two only arrived in Calcutta, and the one, in which the note was enclosed, was the thirty-third one, which was missing. That the packet was duly sealed before despatch. That it arrived at the Calcutta Post Office at half past five in the evening. That then it was sealed. That before its being opened the following morning, the seal appeared unbroken, but that the letter was still missing; and from the circumstance, that letters containing notes, at that time used to be marked with red ink on the envelope, connected with the above circumstances, the conclusion seems natural, that the letter must have been abstracted from the packet intermediately to its arrival, and its being opened. The learned counsel then went on to advert to these papers being valuable security, which he said, would appear on two grounds: first, that if the stealing of them be felony, then receiving them must also constitute a felony; and, secondly, that were not the note a valuable security, the company would not require security for granting a duplicate for it; the object of which is, evidently, to indemnify themselves in case of the original turning up. In respect to the evidence, the Advocate General passed on to say, that it would be the duty of the jury, first of all to consider, whether the notes were stolen or not. It would transpire by the depositions, that thirty-three letters were put into the Dacca Post Office, thirty-two of which arrived, and one was not forthcoming; and this was the only one containing valuable enclosures, and consequently, the only one marked with red ink on the envelope. These circumstances will be proved, and from them the only conclusion would be, that the notes were stolen. The next point that would require to be proved against the prisoner was, his guilty knowledge, and this could be inferred from these circumstances: That the prisoner had three Company's papers only, one for 12,000 rupees, and the other two for 11,000 rupees together; all three of which papers, astonishing to say, were either lost or stolen. The paper for 12,000 rupees was found in a box, in the prisoner's house, which box, it will be proved, did belong to him, and which he still denies to belong to him. Now, why should he deny the ownership of the box? but for his guilty knowledge, that the paper it contained, was a stolen one. Furthermore, it will be proved by his own nephew, that the note was purchased by the prisoner for only fifty rupees; and, how could this be accounted for, but by the fact, that it was stolen, that the prisoner had run the risk of fifty rupees to possess it, knowing it to be such. This is an additional circumstance to prove the guilty knowledge of the prisoner. But there is another circumstance still to show this point. The prisoner is not an extremely rich man, so as to account for his keeping the interest in arrears for four years, as was the case with this note. On the contrary, these were the only papers he possessed, and how probable it is, that he should allow the interest all along to remain in arrears, unless it be for his guilty knowledge, that they were stolen. Again, two of the three notes, to the amount of 11,000 rupees, were given in trust for a note on hand of 10,000 rupees, from a mere pauper. Under all these circumstances, the learned counsel concluded, that there would be ample proof to show the guilty knowledge of the prisoner.

The following witnesses were then called for the prosecution:—

Kistomungul Bysack, examined by Mr. Clarke.—I am a merchant and a shroff. My brother Manickchund Bysack, is a partner with me in business, as well as my father, Ram Sirdar. In July, 1836, I resided at Dacca, at which time I had some Company's papers in my possession, of which the one shown to me belonged. I had it in July, 1836, and my father and brother owned it with me. In July I despatched by dāk two papers, one in my own name and one in that of my brother. This one was in my name. I got a receipt from the Post Office for them, and two drafts also with them. It was a blank receipt, dated the 23rd July. This is it, written in Bengallee (the interpreter here read it) by Rajkinto Bysack, and stamped at the Post Office. It was sent to the Post Office by my servant, Ramruten Dutt. I have been in the constant habit of sending letters to the Post Office, and the receipts always return with a Post Office stamp, similar to this mark. This Company's paper shown to me, is one of the two I enclosed on that occasion, which I did not see after that time till only eight or nine days ago, at the Police Office. After the despatch of the papers in consequence of some information, I made enquiry about them of the Post Master, at Dacca. In consequence of my application an investigation followed. Manickchund Bysack was in Calcutta at the time I despatched the papers at Dacca. Since the despatch I never saw the other Company's papers, nor the envelope in which they were contained. The envelope was addressed to Manickchund Bysack. All the endorsements in the name of Kistomungul Bysack are in my hand writing, but the last endorsements in the name of Rajnarain Mittra, is not in my writing, nor do I know whose writing it is. The whole of that on this paper is in my hand writing, and the superscription also.

Cross-examined by Mr. Prinsep.—This last endorsement on the note was there, at the time of despatch, as also the English writing. I did not go personally to the Post Office. I have been residing at Dacca, and my brother usually resides in Calcutta, having only once gone home about a year ago. I generally sign myself free Kistomungul Bysack. I got a paper in lieu of this Company's paper about eight or nine months after the loss of the original.

Ramlochin Dutt, examined by the Advocate-General, —I am in the service of the last witness and his father. In July, 1836, I received a letter from the last witness to be put into the post. I read Bengallee a little. This was the receipt I took with the letter to the post, where he stamped it bears, was put on. The letter was sealed with sealing wax when Kistomungul gave it to me; and, in the same state, I received it. I delivered it to the Post Office, paying postage on three sicca weight.

By Mr. Leith.—I can read Bengallee, and this receipt is dated.—(here he read the receipt). I delivered the letter to the Mohurrir of the Post Office, whose name I have since learnt, is Ram Churn Dhar. I uniformly carried letters to the Post Office for my master, which happened every three, four, or five days. I do not recollect the year, month, or date, when I took that letter.

By the Court.—There was an impression of a seal, on the sealing wax, with which the letter was sealed.

Callinmuth Banerjee, examined by Mr. Clarke.—I got employed in the Dacca Post Office in 1835, and was there in July 1836. This chullan is signed by me, and written by another writer of the Post Office, named oosim Ally. It is customary for me to compare the letters together with the chullan before being finally packed, and the chullan I sign. On the occasion in question, to the best of my belief, all the letters in that chullan, were correct. There were thirty-three letters full post paid, which were all packed up in my presence, as well as in the presence of every body, connected with the packing. Including the thirty-three full post-paid, there were others not paid, making in all fifty-nine letters. Subsequently, a communication was made from the Post Office here to the Post Office there. Kistomungul also complained to the Post Office to the same effect, about a letter being missing. In consequence, an investigation took place, which related to the despatch under this chullan. The missing letter was never found.

By Mr. Prinsep.—At the time of the packing there were three mohurras and six or seven pawns. Previous to my entering the Post Office, a letter had been lost in its despatch from Calcutta. This letter was afterwards lost, as also a watch; which last was detected at Sylhet. The packet was sealed and despatched in my presence with all the letters.

By the Court.—The letters are altogether counted three times. (The witness here detailed the process of packing the despatch.) The packet was sealed, on that day, with sealing wax and the Post Office seal, in my presence.

Ramchurn Dhar, examined by Mr. Clarke.—I was employed in the Dacca Post Office in July 1836. I know this chullan, it is in the writing of Cossinuth, and signed by the dawk moonshee. My duty at the Dacca Post Office was, to receive letters for despatch, which I would register and count. From the circumstance of Kistomungul Bysack having lodged a complaint relative to a letter, I remember of his having sent a letter for despatch, which was delivered at the Post Office. The complaint was made about eight days after the delivery of the letter. I cannot tell if an official communication from the Calcutta to the Dacca Post Office was made before or after Kistomungul's complaint. The letter was not found afterwards. After registering that letter with others, I delivered them to the dawk moonshee. I delivered thirty-three paid letters, and fifty nine altogether. I saw that chullan at the time. The name of the dawk moonshee is Kalinath. The usual manner of granting receipts is by making a stamp.

By Mr. Leith.—I kept a regular register of the letters in which every letter received is to be found entered. This circumstance happened four years ago; before and after which, I received hundreds of letters. I recollect about the letter from having seen it entered in the chullan, as well as from great enquiry having taken place relative to it. I referred to the registry for it, and even before I had it in recollection.

Francis Xavier Hendriques, examined by Mr. Clarke.—I am a delivering clerk of the General Post Office, in which employment I was in July 1836. This chullan I know, and according to it fifty nine letters ought to have been received, but only fifty eight arrived. The missing letter was a full post paid letter. There ought to have been thirty-three post paid letters, of which only thirty-two arrived. The jemadar and myself counted the letters. The bail, or paper packet was opened by me at half after six in the morning. I examined the wax cloth and seal of the packet before opening it. The packet arrived at half past five in the evening, and during that time to the time I opened it, it was in charge of the jemadar Fuzzel Ally, who has since been discharged, on what account I do not exactly know. Fuzzel Ally was acquainted with the manner in which packets are made up. I do not know to whom the missing letter was addressed. On finding the letter missing, I reported the circumstance to Mr. Moore, the Deputy Post Master. I am not aware if any communication was made to the Dacca Post Office; but it is the practice to make communications in such cases. The chullan only contains the number of letters despatched in the country Post Office. When a letter is missing, a list of the letters with names and address is made.

Manickchand Bysack, by Mr. Clarke.—I am brother to Kistomungul Bysack, and son to Ram Sunder Bysack. These four endorsements in this Company's paper are in my brother's writing. The paper I saw before it was lost, having sent it from here myself. In July 1836, I did not receive this paper from my brother. I did apply for a duplicate to this paper, at the Government Council Office. I got a duplicate of this paper and a duplicate of another paper of 10,000 rupees, which was in my name, though not without first giving securities to the Company's attorney. After the loss of the paper, I did not see it till the 12th or 13th of last Aghsan in the Calcutta Police Office.

Mr. McCann of the Police, was then sworn, and the principal portion of his evidence was, that under warrant he went to the house of the prisoner, and on going there, he found the note in the box.

David McFarlan, examined by Mr. Clarke.—I am the Chief Magistrate of Calcutta. I investigated this case and took the examination of the prisoner, which I did correctly.

Robert Haberley, examined by Mr. Clarke.—I act as interpreter to the Chief Magistrate. I explained the deposition of the prisoner correctly.

Gopal Chunder Ghose, examined by Mr. Clarke.—The prisoner is my maternal uncle, with whom I am at present on friendly terms. I know this box, which I have seen in my uncle's house from two or three years. My uncle won this box in a lottery, which was drawn in Mr. Cantor's house, where the prisoner was employed. It was two or three months in the house of Koor Kistomungul Roy, and since with the prisoner. I saw this paper in Koor Kistomungul's house. My uncle gave it to me to put it by. I heard from my uncle, that he had got the paper from Prannauth Bomerjee. Poon before last, it was in my custody. He told me, he had given fifty rupees for the paper.

By Mr. Leith.—I have been employed by the Company for the last twenty-six or twenty-seven days, the time when I was first brought as a witness in this case. I was formerly a resident in the prisoner's house till I was brought to give evidence. Previously I was altogether supported by the prisoner. Since I was brought to give evidence, I have been living with the thanadar. Kisto Sunder Hazra and Comlacanath Paul took me away and made me write a letter stating, that if I gave evidence I would be supported by the Company. This was last Sunday. I was taken hold of by Comlacanath and carried to the jail, and made to write to the address of my uncle at their dictation. I was taken to the apartment of the prisoner, where were present Comlacanath, Kisto Sunder and the prisoner. At the gate of the jail I saw sentries and peons. I arrived there at four o'clock. I saw a great many other persons. I did not write that letter in any house or any place in Calcutta. This is the letter. In regard to this matter I deposed in the police one day according to the instruction of the prisoner, and again according to what I thought to be the truth. I gave different statements; one of which was false. I don't know the calling of Prannauth Bomerjee, I do not know where he is. For about a year now, I have not seen him. The last time I saw him, was, about four years ago.

James Smith, examined by the Advocate-General.—I know the prisoner at the bar, from about the year 1834. I went to England in February 1828 and returned in February 1829. In May last, I renewed my acquaintanceship with the prisoner, and continued intimate with him up to the time of our imprisonment. These Company's papers I received from the prisoner. This is the note of hand, written by me for 10,000 rupees, given to the prisoner in favor of Gopal Chunder Ghose, and in consideration of two Company's papers.

By himself.—And on account of an understanding of my entering into co-partnership with the prisoner as pawn-brokers and commission agents.

By the Advocate General.—From the general appearance of this paper for 12,000 rupees, it is the same, I was in treaty to purchase from him. I have very frequently seen that box. I never had one like it, and it never belonged to me. The prisoner has a demand against me of thirteen rupees.

Mr. Prinsep here got up to cross-examine this witness, when immense risibility was excited throughout the Court-room, while Mr. James Smith, nearly drowned within the compass of the witness-box, was scraping and howling, nodding and winking, and embracing every opportunity, of saying a word for the case and two for himself, and his pawn-breaking, and commission agency business, and various other interesting items connected with the affluence, respectability and liberality of the said James Smith.

The pith and marrow of his circumlocutory deposition (very rapidly delivered) are as follow:—That on his return from England, his pockets were at a discount, which uncomfortable circumstance induced him to borrow thirteen rupees from the prisoner; or, no doubt, he should not, in all probability, have put himself under obligations to Juggutdoolub. That he had no boxes in the house of the prisoner; but had a few articles of a different kind, which were not boxes. That he was frequently in the house of the prisoner till late hours at night—frequently, indeed, to 9, 10 and 11 o'clock; but, indeed, never did he take up his lodging all night, as this of course, would not be proper. That he occupied a house in Doggattallah, though the name of the landlord of the house did not, at the time of speaking, "rebound" to his memory. That when he was in England he was by no means a poor gentleman, not by any manner of means, as would appear from his acquaintanceship with the Marquis of Hastings; and, in fact, but for the unfortunate demise of his poor friend, Thomas Cutlar Ferguson, he might have been a little more successful in his views. And this would show, how far he passed himself off as a poor gentleman from India. But his wonted extensive liberality itself would testify to the contrary. That he was acquainted with the late Mr. Ravenscroft, who, he heard, had been murdered. He remembered the occasion of his murder; but never did his conscience accuse him of the cause of that murder, with a view to evade certain demands. That he was a trifle in the debt of Mr. Laurie, and had deposited the two Company's papers with him, intending to draw upon them from time to time as circumstances required. That he would not say how he was enabled to come out in the Zenobia. [But the Court informing Mr. Smith, that he was bound to answer the question he said] That no subscription was raised for his passage out, but that he had entered into a settlement with Captain Owen. It was no business of the counsel if he paid his passage or not, enough it was to the purpose, that proper arrangements had been made on that head. That at present he had not his property in Calcutta; though even here he was not destitute of property, as he had a great deal of property at Serampore, and enough to ensure him the means of moving in that respectable sphere of life to which he belonged. Moreover he said, for the special information of the counsel, that he was as much a gentleman as himself (Mr. Prinsep) and had property to enable him to maintain that rank. Besides the expectations he had of soon setting up in business in a genteel way he expected somewhere about 50,000 Rs. in advance from the prisoner, to open his Pawn-broking and Commission Agency establishment; and though that prisoner had abused his confidence and disappointed him, he still expected to obtain Indigo factory and a talook from Rogouath Gosain, of Serampore, by purchase, and that he was at present negotiating matters to that effect. That he would not set up in business with any sum below fifty thousand, though he might be induced to do it out of condescension only. That his benevolence and liberality were well known, and he believed there was not a European in Calcutta of the middle and lower classes, who has not tasted of the sweet milk of his liberality, though the police officers have not been especially lucky in this experience. That he has not had an opportunity of coming to final arrangements, in regard to some property he expects from the East India Company. That he would not debase himself to satisfy the idle curiosity of the Counsel, in enlightening him further, with regard to his possessions or expectations. [But again being pressed by the Court he went on] That besides what he has already stated, he has his out-standings, namely, his debts. That he would not mention his debtors to the counsel, but being urged by the Court, he would say, that were he to receive his rights, he would come in from the Indian Government only, to the exceedingly insignificant sum of twenty lacs! That besides this the counsel should not know one debtor more; but being again pressed to answer, he would only mention, that the dancing master—he meant Dupuis—owed him; yes, seriously, the dancing master owed him 280 Rs. for which sum, however, it being so paltry, he held no note of hand. In this strain the witness kept on for a considerable time such to the amusement of all present, ever-and-anon, talking about his Indigo factory and talook, and Pawn-broking and Commission Agency establishment; after which, he was told to stand down.

The next witnesses called was Mr. Oxborough, of the Treasury, whose important part of whose evidence was that a duplicate had been granted for the note, which formed the subject of the trial, in consequence of the original being said to have been stolen.

Three other witnesses were called to identify the box, as the one the prisoner had won in a lottery, which however they failed in doing.

The depositions, as taken before the Chief Magistrate, were then read by the Clerk of the Crown, together with other papers, connected with the case, about some of which, however, some technical discussion took place between the contending counsel.

At seven o'clock Mr. Prinsep, counsel for the defence, got up, and in a long speech, dilating on the features of the case with great eloquence, which took up above a full hour, addressed the jury. The principal points the counsel urged were as follow.

That the chief points the jury would require to be satisfied of, before giving in a verdict against the prisoner was, first, that the note had been stolen, and next, that Juggutdoolub had received it, knowing it to be stolen. The first point the counsel for the prosecution had failed in establishing. They had attempted to show that a letter was sealed and put into the Dacca Post Office; that the despatch for that day was duly and carefully packed; that the packet arrived at the Calcutta Post Office, and was found to be unbroken, but that on opening it, a letter was missing. This was all that was shown. It might be that the letter was lost or missing, but this was not for the jury to consider, it was for the jury to be satisfied that it had been stolen. The only witness that said anything regarding this point was, Mr. Oxborough; but it was from hear-why only, that he even could tell it was stolen. It was only an alleged theft of the originals, on which the duplicates had been granted. Under these and other circumstances, which the learned counsel brought forward, he contended that it was not proved that the note had been stolen. On the other point respecting the guilty knowledge of the prisoner, Mr. Prinsep also dwelt largely, adverting to the respectability of his client and the responsible position he held, and various other circumstances, enough to fill a couple of columns.

The Court then at considerable length charged the jury, who at 10 o'clock returned a verdict of "Not Guilty."—Hurkaru, March 2.

MONDAY, MARCH 2.

SECOND TERM OF 1840.

This day being the first day of term, their Lordships took their seats in Court at the usual hour. No business was taken except uncontested motions.

THE QUEEN V. RAJAH RAJNARAIN ROY.

Mr. Prinsep applied for the liberation of the defendant upon bail. He hoped their Lordships would take into consideration the circumstance that the defendant had now suffered imprisonment for nearly six weeks. It was no fault of his that the interrogatories which had been exhibited, were not answered long ago.

The Court, however, refused to let the defendant out on bail until the interrogatories had been answered.

Refused.

J. HILLS V. C. BURY.

Mr. Morton mentioned this case in which an application had been made to Mr. Justice Seton in Chambers, to allow the plaint to be amended after plea pleaded. The amendment required was simply the substitution of the word "and" for the word "or." The learned judge had referred the case to the full Court, as he doubted whether the application was not the same in substance as a motion made in this cause last term to amend the plaint and the replication, the latter part of which only was granted by the court. It was now submitted that the 9th Plea Rule vested the court with much more extensive powers of amendment than the substitution of one simple word for another, and that this application was in no way prejudiced by the previous one, because in one case a general amendment in the other a specific and limited amendment was asked for.

Mr. Leith submitted that the two applications were virtually the same, and that the 9th Plea Rule did not apply.

The court were of this opinion, and refused the motion.

Refused.—Hurk, March 3.

MARCH 4.

This morning the Court was more than usually crowded, and the constables were more than ordinarily impudent, in consequence of the trial for murder of the two sons of Rajah Buddinath Roy. No less than four barristers appeared for the defence, and the case took up the whole day, till nearly seven o'clock in the evening, when, to the disappointment of the supporters of the Eastern Star, and the satisfaction of all those who heard the slight evidence for the prosecution, the investigation terminated in the honorable acquittal of the young Rajahs. A full report of the case will be given to-morrow.—Hurk, March 5.

MARCH 4.

TRIAL OF RAJKISEN ROY AND KALIKISEN ROY FOR MURDER.

The court was unusually crowded this morning, to witness the trial of the two sons of Rajah Buddinath Roy on the heinous charge of murder. The prisoners were placed in the bar, and being arraigned, pleaded "not guilty." Mr. Clarke and Mr. Sandes appeared for the prosecution, Messrs. Prinsep and Barwell on behalf of the prisoner Kalikisen, and Messrs. Leith and Mr. Morton for the other prisoner, Rajkisen.

Mr. Clarke then opened the case for the prosecution in a very appropriate address, comprehending the chief features of it. The learned Counsel began by adverting to the importance of the case, important alike to the prisoners and the public. He also alluded to the responsibility of the jury, on whose verdict depended the life of the prisoners. He then detailed the leading particulars of the case, which in effect were as follows: That on the night of the 12th December last, while a chowkedar was going his round in the vicinity of Raja Buddinath's house, he heard a noise proceeding from the house. That upon this he ran to the gate of the Raja's premises, which he found open and a sentry posted at it. That near the sentry on duty, he saw a man sitting apparently in a state of intoxication. That the prisoners, afterwards, came down to the spot where the deceased was sitting. That Golam Naib, also a little while after, came to the Raja's house. That Rajkisen was seen to fetch three slaps to the man, who upon that said, don't slap me. That the man being asked who had brought him there he replied that Mohun Sing had brought him. That afterwards Kalikisen took him by the hair of his head. That Rajkisen again gave him a blow with a stick. That these circumstances would be proved by the evidence that would be produced, and that it would appear that four blows only had been inflicted on the deceased. That the police people proposed to institute an enquiry in regard to the man, but that they were told to go out, when however they heard no further noise within the Raja's premises. The learned Counsel concluded by observing, that all possible information would be produced; that the evidence taken before the Coroner would be brought forward, in addition to that taken before the Chief Magistrate; and that Dr. Grant, the Apothecary General, had also been subpoenaed for his opinion in regard to the evidence of the Police surgeon, by whom the body was examined.

The following evidences for the prosecution were then taken.

Mr. R. J. Rose, officiating Superintendent of works and conservancy, who had made out a plan of the premises of Rajah Buddinath Roy, was examined by Mr. Sandes regarding the height of the terrace and the situation of the different apartments, &c.

Cross-examined by Mr. Leith. A lane runs to the East of the stables, and there is an open court between the latter and the house; a person could not proceed from the flat roof to any other part of the house. From the terrace which I have already described, there is another passage leading into the Court yard, I have alluded to. The stairs lead to the passage marked F. F. It is a steep flight of brick stairs, which leads from the terrace to the Thakoor Dullaun. The breadth of the steps is narrow; the pink coloured spots on the map, represent the pillars in the Thakoor Dullaun. There is a ledge round the bottom of the plinth.

By the Court.—On the two sides of the court, the house is only one story high, height of the rail is shown by the transverse section. There were no rooms pointed out to me, as appropriated for the prisoners.

Salabut Khan examined by Mr. Clarke.—I am a Naib attached to the Jorah Baugan thanah, and was on duty at 3 o'clock in the morning, and of that day I was going my round accompanied by Hurra and Hingun chowkedars, and on approaching towards the house of Rajah Buddhuath Ray, I heard a great noise proceeding from it, calling out that a thief had been caught. I was near the premises when I heard the noise, and the gate was open. I went up and saw a party on duty there. There was a great number of persons near the gate and in particular, I noticed a man sitting down, who appeared to be in a state of confusion. I was unacquainted with the prisoners then—I was on that night for the first time. The man who was sitting was struck two or three thumps by some person from the crowd, whom I could not distinguish. About a quarter of four I had got to the gate, the prisoners came there. I am not positive whether the man was struck previously to, or after their coming. I did not see the prisoners do any thing. A person took hold of the man by the hair of the head, and drew him into the compound. There was a great confusion, and I cannot say whether the prisoners were there or not. I also saw a person strike the man with a stick, about the thickness of my wrist, and a foot in length. I do not know who struck him, as there was a great crowd at the time.

The witness was here warned by the Court to speak the truth.

I wanted to take the man into custody but I was told by the prisoner that he was a thief, and after it had been enquired whether he had any companions or not, he would be made over to my charge. I then went out in the street, the gate remained open. The two chowkedars who came along with me did not go in, but remained outside. I know Golaum Ruzza, he came there after me, and was within the premises when the man was drawn by the hair of his head and struck. I did not lose sight of the man after he had been drawn in the manner already described, as it was at a distance of about two or three cubits. When I went out, I could not see into the premises. The man when drawn by the hair of the head, went very slowly, he appeared to be in a very weak state. I stood outside about a quarter of an hour, and then returned to the thanah and informed the thanadar of the circumstance. I did not ask a second time for the man, as the people were looking about inside, and there was much confusion.

At six o'clock in the morning I saw the man again, but found him dead. The body was placed in a godown opposite the Rajah's premises, and one of the chowkedars of my thanah named Wooseer Khan was sitting near it. The body was a little after removed to the Police hospital, and I pointed it out to Dr. Maxton. I had been examined regarding this case, before the Coroner, and subsequently by the Chief Magistrate.

Cross examined by Mr. Prinsep.—I did not remain to take charge of the man, because there was no complaint, and I had no witnesses, nor did I see the prisoners use any violence towards him. None of the Police people wanted, and the gate remained open all the time.

By Mr. Morton.—There was a light at the gate. When I was outside I heard no cries or shouting. I saw people on the terrace, where there were lights also. This was before day-break. There was no mourning.

The Susteetollah thanah is near the Rajah's house, little to the southward of it. I could have obtained assistance from there if I wanted.

Golaum Ruzza, examined by Mr. Sandes.—I am a Naib attached to the Susteetollah thanah. I was so on the 12th December last. I was on duty, and on my round about 3 o'clock in the morning of that day, I heard a noise proceeding from the direction of the Rajah's house. I approached it, and distinctly heard of a thief having been caught. I went up to the gate, and saw about 25 or 30 persons inside, but near it, I perceived a man sitting down—I did not see the prisoners then, but afterwards. I enquired of the man where he came from, and how he had come there. He spoke in a low and feeble voice, and replied, that a person of the name of Mohun Sing had kept him sitting there since 8 o'clock in the evening. On hearing this, the prisoners enquired of their servants, and were told that there was no person in the house of that name. I remained there a few minutes. The man was reclining against the knee of another man who was sitting down, and had hold of him by the hair of the head. I did not know who the person was. The prisoners told me to go away for the present, and they would make enquiries into the matter, and then send for me. I did not hear the prisoners put any questions to the man while I was there. Before I left the place, I saw a person take hold of the man by the hair of the head, and another strike him with a stick about half three quarters of a cubit in length. I cannot say who they were; but the prisoners were in the crowd. The man was sitting when he was taken hold of by the hair of the head, and struck. I went to my thanah and informed the thanadar of what occurred, he replied that it was not in his division. The man appeared to be under the influence of liquor, and quite weak. The words uttered by him were spoken in a very low tone, he did not have any complaint. When I saw him struck, I did not see any thing, as it was only a slight blow. I know Sir about Khan. I saw him at the gate, he had got there before me. I again saw the man at the Police hospital, he was dead, and had been dissected. I was examined before by the Coroner and the Chief Magistrate, my depositions were signed, and the contrary must have been explained to me. I do not recollect it.

Cross examined by Mr. Barwell.—While I was outside I did not see any search made, from my thanah I saw lights on the terrace.

John Maxton examined by Mr. Clarke.—I am Physician-Surgeon of Calcutta. On the 13th of December I examined the body of a person at the Police hospital, pointed out to me by Salabut Khan. The only external marks were a contused wound on the left shoulder, the right shoulder and right hand swollen. On opening the head I found a considerable effusion of blood serum between the scalp and the skull. This is different from an effusion of the brain. The membranes were natural, with the exception of two chronic tubercles. These are swellings quite distinct from accident, and must have been growing for some time. In my opinion they were of long standing. On opening the chest, I found the third, fourth, fifth, seventh and eighth ribs of the right side fractured, as also the sixth and eighth on the left side, the lungs natural, the pericardium adhering to the heart all round. The liver and spleen considerably enlarged, the latter soft in its texture, and ruptured in two places, the stomach and intestines natural; the bladder distended with urine. There was a slight effusion of coagulated blood in the abdomen, but no what had taken place in the spleen, none of the other organs being ruptured. It is probable that the effusion of blood in the abdomen arose from a kick. None were ruptured except those connected with the spleen. The skin on the left shoulder appeared rubbed off about the size of half a rupee, but it did not appear to have been occasioned by a blow, the other shoulder was swollen. I saw no external appearance on the head that led me to believe that it had been injured.

I scarcely think it possible that the effusion of blood and serum between the scalp and the skull, could have been caused by a blow without some external appearance. If a blow were struck by a strong man with the bottom of his fist, it might cause the effusion without any external marks. There is no external mark where the ribs are fractured; I scarcely think it possible that the ribs could have been fractured by blows without having external marks. The fracture could not have been caused by a man pressing on the body with his knees, as they would have left marks, neither by the feet, as they also would have left marks. I saw no external mark on the body which could lead me to believe that the person had been beaten. With the exception of that swelling on the right shoulder and right hand, I consider it quite possible that independent of the external injuries, all the other severe injuries could have been produced without violent beating. It is my opinion that the fracture of the ribs, and the rupture of the spleen caused the man's death. I could not detect any other injury, to warrant me to say that his death was caused by violent beating. The effusion of blood and serum between the scalp and skull, was not in that state as to occasion death. It is very hard for me to answer how long a person might live after receiving the injuries already described, all depends upon the constitution; one man might survive two days and another perhaps only a few hours. It is possible that a man might be capable of walking about a hundred feet or more after having received those injuries, and it is very probable that he might be able to descend a flight of stairs of fourteen or fifteen steps. I should scarcely think he could sit up, and he might or might not be able to reply to two or three questions.

Cross examined by Mr. Prinsep.—I have seen the prisoners of the Raja Budinanth Roy. It is quite possible that those injuries might be occasioned by a fall. I heard the evidence of Mr. Rose regarding the inner court. I think a fall from the upper story might cause all those appearances without any other violence. I would not say that it was impossible, that he could pass the inner to the outer court as described.

By Mr. Leith.—If a person were beat with violence by a stick like that described by the two witnesses, I should certainly have discovered marks on the body. The enlargement of the spleen showed that the organ was in a diseased state, the rupture of which and the fracture of the ribs, caused the man's death.

Re examined by Mr. Clarke.—It is possible that a man might walk such a distance as described after such a fall; there certainly are exceptions. One man might do it, and another might die on the spot. If a man fell from the height described by Mr. Rose, insensibility might or might not be produced as we have some extraordinary cases upon record. An effusion between the scalp and skull would not produce insensibility at that stage, and if the effusion were added to the other injuries, even then I do not believe insensibility would be produced.

Dr. J. Grant examined by Mr. Clarke.—I am a Surgeon in the Company's service, and am Apothecary General. I have heard the evidence given by the last witness. I was perfectly ignorant of the case before. I do not think the evidence of Dr. Maxton complete, and before I give my opinion, I would like to put to him one or two questions. The Court had no objection, and Dr. Grant put the following questions Dr. Maxton.

Q. Upon what part of the brain had the effusion of blood and serum taken place?

A. On the upper part of the head.

Q. What was the extent of the effusion?

A. About half the breadth of one's hand.

The examination continued.—I think this effusion might have been occasioned by a blow from a strong man, or by pulling the hair violently. If a person were enveloped in clothes and struck with a heavy bludgeon, it is possible that it would not leave any external marks. It is possible that if a man were trampled or kicked upon, marks would be left, and if the man were drunk, it would have aggravated the external appearance. It is difficult for me to answer whether a man, after falling from the height described, would be capable of walking. I should expect under ordinary circumstances a concussion of the brain and spinal marrow would take place. In all cases of rupture, and enlargement of the spleen, I should expect immediate nausea and faintness, which would also tend to prevent the man walking immediately after the accident. I have merely asserted what I conceive would take place under ordinary circumstances. I do not say that this would have happened in this case. If the fracture of the ribs did not injure any organ of importance, a man might walk. I think it possible that in that state, he could descend a staircase of 14 or 15 feet height, but would have a difficulty in doing it. I do not attach much importance to the effusion of blood between the scalp and skull, a man could walk after receiving that injury. A man could not immediately after having received the injuries already described, be capable of answering two or three questions, he might be able to do so some time after. It depends upon the constitution how long a man might live after receiving them. I should have expected that he would have lived longer than what has been described, and my reason for stating this is, that according to the statement of Dr. Maxton the effusion of blood from the rupture of the spleen, appears to have been but small.

Cross examined by Mr. Prinsep.—I think the rupture of the spleen is the most dangerous. It would not of itself cause insensibility, but nausea and faintness. It might be caused from concussion of the brain. It does not signify on what part a man might fall for a concussion of the brain to take place. If he fell from a height, there must have been some degree of insensibility; if his fall had been broken, the object that broke the fall might have occasioned great injury in itself, it might cause broken ribs.

By Mr. Morton.—If the man had fallen from a height of 14 feet, there would have been a concussion of the brain and the spinal marrow. He might have fallen from that height without occasioning any insensibility.

Re-examined by Mr. Clarke.—If the fall had been broken, and produced the broken ribs, it might or might not be attended with external marks. In all instances of a fall there is a concussion of the brains and spinal marrow.

By the Court. The fall must have caused temporary insensibility, it is impossible for me to say how long it lasted, all depends upon the constitution perhaps 5, 10, or 15 minutes.

Woojee Khan being sworn, was examined by Mr. Sandis.—I am a chokedyar attached to the Jorah Bagan Thubnah. I know the house of Raja Budinanth Roy. I went there on the morning of the 12th December last. A man came to the Thannah at about six o'clock, and told the Thannadar that the Raja wanted him. By the desire of the Thannadar, I went along with him to the house. I saw a man lying dead in the compound, and the prisoners ordered the body to be removed from the premises. Their people took it to a godown opposite. The Thannadar desired me to remain with the corps. After the lapse of nearly an hour, Captain Birch, Superintendent of Police, came. He ordered Salabut Khan and a chokedyar to take away the body to the Police Hospital.

Rambukh Sing being examined by Mr. Clarke, said, — I had a brother named Ram Dyal Sing, who is dead. I have not seen him for the last three months. The last time I saw him was at the latter end of the month of Aughraun. From these clothes and silver armlets produced, which I recognize to be his, I think he has been murdered by the sons of Rajah Buddinath Roy. My brother was employed by a woman named Hurro. He was in her service up to the time I missed him.

Hurro Raur being sworn and examined by Mr. Clarke, said, — I had a durwan named Ram Dyal Sing. He left my house in the month of Aughraun, about eight o'clock in the evening. He said he was going to eat, but he never returned, and I have not seen him since. I cannot recognize the clothes he used to wear.

Rondh Sing being examined by Mr. Sandes, said, — I am a durwan in the service of Stichunder Baboo. I knew Ram Dyal Sing what he was in the service of Hurro, he used to come and take his meal with me. I did not see him for four or five days, and I was afterwards told that he was dead. I would recognize his clothes if I were to see them. These clothes produced were his, also the silver armlets. He had them on the last time I saw him.

Frederick William Birch, being examined by Mr. Clarke, said, I am Superintendent of the Calcutta Police. On the morning of the 12th December last, I received intimation of the man's death from Rajah Buddinath Roy, the father of the prisoners personally, in consequence of which and also at his request, I proceeded with him to his house, it was about half past 6 o'clock. On arriving there, I saw the body lying in a garden on the opposite side of the road. I was told by the prisoners that the man had died inside of the Rajbarry. I examined the body but not very minutely, and the impression on my mind was, that the deceased died from drinking. I did not hear when he died, but as the joints and body were not stiff, I think it must have been a little before I went there. There was a report brought to me about 3 o'clock in the morning. Nothing was then said about the man's death, consequent on which I requested the thanadar to enquire more particularly into the case. It was Rajah Buddinath Roy that first informed me of the man's death.

Cross examined by Mr. Pinsep — I have known the prisoners for two and a half or three years, and I did not perceive the least agitation in their manners, on the contrary they afforded me every information.

Sonatin being examined by Mr. Sandes said, I am a pyke in the employ of Rajah Buddinath Roy. I was on duty three or four days before the end of Aughraun. After 3 o'clock in the morning I heard the noise of something falling from the interior, the females occupied that part of the house, I awoke Cossee and Lalla Khanamah, and cautioned Shukram the sentry at the gate. It was a dark night, I went round and searched, and afterwards saw a man near the gate. He was groaning and I asked him who he was. He did not answer but kept groaning. I do not know from where he fell. On enquiring, the sentry told me, that the man came staggering from the interior. I then went back to my duty. I was examined at the police, but how long after the occurrence I do not recollect.

Cross-examined by Mr. Barwell — I was on the road outside when I first heard the noise of the fall. My duty is to go round the house. When I heard the noise I gave notice to the sentry at the gate, after awaking Cossee and Lallah.

Cossee being examined by Mr. Clarke said, — I am a khansamah in the employ of Rajah Kelly Kissen Roy. On the morning of the 12th December last, Lalla and myself were asleep when Sonatin came and awoke us. We got up and searched about, and then went up to the terrace to know what had fallen. I did not hear the noise of the fall distinctly. Rajkissen Baboo asked us what we were about. We told him and recommenced the search. The havildar named Bhubany Sing, called out that a man had been stopped at the gate. We came down and found a thief lying on the north side of the Rowuck. Rajkissen who had followed us, requested us to see, if the man were shamming. I endeavoured to make him sit up, but he could not speak and the Baboo told us to place him upon the Rowuck, and then desired the havildar to get a mace palankern, and ordered us to search the house and see if there was any one else in it. We went towards the hma edpartment, and looked about but found no one, we then came down and informed the Baboo who was sitting in the verandah; a little while after Rajah Buddinath Roy arrived from his garden at Cosipore. It was about gun fire. He was not in the house. The Rajah gave orders to go and call the thanadar, but before he could come, the man expired.

Cross-examined by Mr. Barwell. When I first saw the man he was unable to rise. I did not hear him speak up to the time of his death. The whole house was disturbed on this man's falling. When the alarm was given no strangers from outside came in.

By Mr. Leath. Lallah and myself first looked down in the verandah, and then went up on the terrace. The verandah is used by the females of the house. Previous to my going to the inner compound where the man was lying, none of the prisoners had got there, they but came immediately after me. I was present, and saw no person strike the deceased nor pull him by the hair. I tried to make him sit up, but he fell back. He had a head of hair.

Lallah being examined by Mr. Sandes said, I am a khansamah in the service of Rajah Rajkissen Roy. About 3 o'clock in the morning of the 12th December, Sonatin called out to me and I awoke, that something had fallen. I was not asleep at that time, and heard the noise also. We went out in the verandah and searched, and then proceeded on the terrace. The havildar called out, and we went down, and saw a man near the gate lying down about seven cubits from the sentry. Rajkissen Baboo requested us to go and search if there was any body else.

The rest of his witness evidence was to the same effect as that of the last.

Cross examined by Mr. Pinsep. When we placed the deceased on the Rowuck, about four or five persons were present, and there was no violence used towards him. When the prisoners ordered us to go and make a search, they likewise went and searched on the upper floor.

Ram Sebuck being sworn, was examined by Mr. Clarke. He said, I am a sepoy in the employ of Rajah Buddinath Roy. On the night of the 12th December, I was on duty at the gate. At about 3 o'clock in the morning, Sonatin, who was keeping watch on the outside, told me to be vigilant, as something had fallen inside. A little while after, I saw a man come staggering along. I challenged him, and asked him who he was, but he gave me no answer. I repeated my challenge, and he replied in a very low and weak voice, that he was a bearer, and then fell on the ground. I called out to the havildar, and pointed out the man to him. Neither of the prisoners came down then, they did so afterwards. A short time after I was relieved, and went to sleep. The deceased was alive then. I got up at 7 o'clock and did not see him again.

The Court at this time observed to the jury, that there were three more witnesses and if they thought it necessary to proceed further with the case, they would be called and examined, but if they thought that a case had not been made out against the prisoners, they are at liberty to return a verdict accordingly.

The jury replied, that the evidences adduced were not sufficient to establish the charge preferred against the prisoners, and they were unanimous, and prepared to return their verdict.

They accordingly returned a verdict of not guilty.

Mr. Clarke said, that after the examination of the two first witnesses, he was satisfied that a case had not been made out against the prisoners, but as so much has been said about the case, he thought it his duty still to proceed with it.

Mr. Phipps remarked, that it was well that his learned friend had done so, as the prisoners now may leave the Court without the least imputation on their character.

The Court then addressed the prisoners as follows :

You are now discharged of the crime preferred against you, and it cannot but be satisfactory to your relatives and yourself. It is better that the trial has taken place. Our law sets the greatest in the same equality with the lowest. In a case of this kind, it is the duty of the Magistrate to cause it to be investigated, and then to send it before a jury, and has been the case, and the result has been satisfactory. When the two first witnesses had been examined, I thought it was impossible to make out a case against you. On the other hand, it was not fair to bring all the witnesses before whom the preliminary examination was held. You may now go, in the opinion of the jury and every person, perfectly free from all imputation of not only malice but cruelty.

I would recommend to you, that if a case of the like kind happens on any future occasion, to call the officers of the police, and deliver up the offenders to them. It were better if you had followed the step that your father had adopted, — you would not then have been subjected to this trial. I have nothing further to say than that you are discharged. — Hark, March 9.

SATURDAY, MARCH 7, 1840.

THE QUEEN ON THE PROSECUTION OF SHAK FEMAMUDDEN
V. PEER ALLY.

This trial, which was a prosecution for perjury in an answer to a bill in Equity, occupied the Court for three days, and was only concluded to-day at a late hour.

Mr. Lenth and Mr. Morton conducted the prosecution, and the Advocate-General and Mr. Clarke the defence.

The Equity suit was instituted by Shakh Femamuddeen and others, large Commission-ary contractors, at Calcutta, against the defendant, for an account of the profits of the business in Calcutta, carried on by him (as the bill alleged) as the Gomastah of the complainants. The bill charged that in 1821, the complainants entered into a contract with the Commissionary in Calcutta, to supply provisions to the troops, and that up to the year 1829, the contract had been conducted first by one Azimuddeen, a member of their co-partnership, and afterwards by one Shakh Foraub, another co-partner, and that in the year 1829 the defendant Peer Ally, was sent down from Calcutta to manage the business as Gomastah in Calcutta, upon 50 rupees a month wages. The bill further charged, that very large profits had been made by the defendant, and that he had accounted for a very small proportion, and that he had now accumulated property to the amount of nearly two lacs, although he had been some years ago a cooly, and afterwards a chup-rassee, and subsequently in other menial capacities, at a low rate of wages.

The defendant, Peer Ally, by his answer, admitted, that he had carried on the Commissionary business in Calcutta since 1829, and made profits, but he claimed the business as Principal, and he wholly denied that he ever was the Gomastah, or paid servant, of the co-partnership or any of the members of it.

Upon this answer, the indictment, containing a great number of assignments of perjury, was preferred by the prosecutors.

A great many witnesses were called on behalf of the prosecution. Some of the officers of the Commissionary were subpoenaed and examined.

The Advocate General made a long and able address to the Jury, but called no witnesses for the defence.

The Jury deliberated for two hours, and at eight o'clock returned a verdict of Not guilty.

There is one case of the present Sessions remaining, and one on the Traverse Board.

It is understood, that a motion will be made in Rajah Rajnarain Roy's case on Monday. — Hark, March 9.

TUESDAY, MARCH 10, 1840.

(Before Sir J. P. Grant.)

THE QUEEN ON THE PROSECUTION OF J. H. PETERS V. C.,
READ AND E. READ.

Mr. Morton stated the case to the Jury. This was a prosecution for two assaults committed upon the prosecutor on the 23d and 24th November, by the defendants, who were husband and wife. In April last, the prosecutor and defendants took a house in Calcutta jointly, and lived upon good terms until November. In that month the defendant wished to get rid of the prosecutor, as a joint-tenant, and they mentioned a complaint against him at the Police office, charging him with being a trespasser, but the complaint was dismissed. On the evening of the 23d, when the prosecutor returned to the house, he found the gate barred, and upon obtaining with difficulty an entrance into the house, the defendants commenced a violent assault upon him. Upon the following morning, the prosecutor returned to the house to fetch his child, which had been left there during the night, intending to quit the house voluntarily; and the defendant Read, again repeated the assault with great violence. The prosecutor was very severely injured, and unable to attend to business for several days. Both assaults appeared to have been gross and unprovoked outrages.

Several witnesses were called for the prosecution. It was sworn that Read, (who was a Sheriff's Officer), struck the prisoner violently with his fists, and dragged him by the throat down a flight of stairs on the first occasion, and that on the second occasion he kicked and maltreated him so severely that he was insensible for a time. The witnesses stated, that Mrs. Read brought a sick of her own accord, at the first assault, and that the prosecutor with it. The clothes worn by the prisoner were produced, and appeared to have been saturated with blood.

Mr. Leith addressed the Jury for the defence, and urged that it appeared from the prosecutor's own evidence, that the defendant had only acted in defence of his own home, which he contended the prosecutor was a trespasser in entering. He commented upon the improbability of such an assault having been committed, without some provocation.

No witnesses were called for the defence.

Mr. Justice Grant, in summing up, observed, with regard to the defendant, Mrs. Read, that it was for the Jury to say whether she committed the assault (if they found the fact) under the control of her husband, or independently of him. If the former, they were bound to acquit her, but if the latter she was liable to the consequences.

The Jury returned a verdict of guilty against Mr. C. Read, and acquitted Mrs. E. Read, his wife. The trial occupied the whole day.

Mr. Leith applied to postpone the judgment, that he might have an opportunity of putting in affidavits in mitigation, and he hoped the Court would allow the defendant to be at large in the meanwhile upon the same bail.

Grant, Justice.—Let the defendant be brought up the day after to-morrow, but he must be committed in the meanwhile.—Herald, March 11.

• WEDNESDAY, MARCH 11.

(Before Sir F. Ryan, Sir J. P. Grant, and Sir H. W. Wilson.

LEITCH V. LEITH, AND THE OTHER CAUSES.

Sir F. Ryan, C. J. said, with reference to the above causes, that the Court could not at present make the decree, which was asked for. Before making the decree, it was the only necessary to ascertain who could be for the benefit of the infants. The Master's Report had certainly found that it would be for their benefit to hold to carry into effect the compromise between Mr. E. K. Hume, and Mr. Stephen the elder, and this Report had been confirmed; but the order confirming it had been made sub oleatone, and without the Court having the facts before them. Now the question depended upon the nature and tenure of the real estate, for by the terms of the will, the infants might be entitled to the whole upon one contingency. (His Lordship then referred to the clause in the will of Mrs. Marjiam Hume, relating to the real property.) Another question arises as to the after born children, whose title depends altogether upon the question of the nature of the estate; at present the Court is disposed to make a decree that an account be taken of the personal property, and of the debts, legacies and outstanding, and that the Master do enquire and report whether any part of the Company's paper was reduced into possession in the lifetime of the testatrix. There must be an inquiry as to the title, tenure and nature of the real estate, and until this is ascertained, we reserve the questions arising upon the will and the compromise.

The Advocate General said, that Mr. Home had acted upon the compromise already, and had paid a large sum (of which the infants had had the benefit) upon the faith of the Master's report being confirmed.

Some discussion then took place among the Counsel for the different parties in the cause.

Sir F. Ryan.—Perhaps the most convenient course will be for the Court to hand to the Registrar the minutes of the proposed decree, and then Counsel can be furnished with copies, and the Court will hear any arguments they may have to urge.

W. GRAYES V. PHAWNSSEN DAUGHTER.

Mr. Morton moved, that final judgment be signed and that execution do issue in cause in which a verdict had been obtained last term. The Prothonotary declined to sign judgment, because the counsel for the defendant had mentioned the case to the Court, and announced his intention to move for a new trial. From the minute, however, it appeared that this was moved on the four days, and the application therefore was too late. The defendant's counsel, in making the application, had misinformed the learned Judge, who was presiding, (Mr. Justice Grant) that he had forgotten to make the motion within the four days, but that he had been instructed in the course of the fourth day. Now, it was questionable, whether the Court had any discretion at all in the matter, the limited time having expired, because it was laid down in Archbold, that a new trial could not be moved for out of the four days even upon the consent of the parties. But, at all events, there was nothing to tie up the proceedings and prevent execution from issuing. Nothing but a rule nisi could stop the proceedings, and non constat that the rule would be granted after all.

Sir F. Ryan, C. J.—This has in effect been disposed of already. We are clearly of opinion that the Court has a discretion in extending the time granted, and allowing the motion for a new trial to be made, under special circumstances, out of the four days. This discretion has been exercised in the present case by the presiding Judge Mr. Justice Grant, who allowed the new trial motion to be mentioned as of prior day.

Mr. Morton begged to explain, that he moved not to satisfy Mr. Justice Grant's order that the execution should issue notwithstanding, on the ground, that there was nothing to tie up the proceedings.

The Court said, that the motion was refused.

Talk nothing.

PHAWNSSEN DAUGHTER V. WILLIAM STORM.

Mr. Sandes opened the proceedings.

The Advocate General stated the case.—His action was brought to recover a sum of Rs. 1,229 in the hand of Mr. Storm as stakeholder. In April last, this sum was deposited in the hands of Mr. Storm by the plaintiff, pending a compromise which was then a foot between the plaintiff and Mr. William Greaves, but which compromise ultimately went off. Mr. Greaves had brought his action against the present plaintiff, and recovered his whole claim, not giving credit for the sum in Mr. Storm's hands. Under these circumstances, it was submitted, the present plaintiff, the depositor of the sum, was entitled to recover it in an action for money had and received.

In evidence it appeared, that the sum in question had been deposited with the defendant pending the action of Greaves v. Prannkissen Bhanghee. This action was afterwards tried and Mr. Storm was a witness. His deposition was now put in. From the deposition it appeared, that the money was received on account of Mr. Greaves, but he was not to get it, in which certain letter had been written to the Bank of Bengal by Prannkissen, to take off the intervention upon certain notes stopped by him at the Bank, and alleged to have been lost.

Mr. Leith, (with whom was Mr. Morton) for the defence.—The plaintiff must be satisfied for upon his own evidence it appears, that the money was received to the use not of plaintiff but of Mr. Greaves.

The Advocate-General.—It is immaterial upon whose account the money was originally received, if the use has subsequently resulted to the depositor. If a stakeholder receives money from A. for the purpose of a compromise which afterwards fails, A. may recover the money back from him. In the present case, if this money were to be considered the money of Mr. Greaves, he might recover so much in excess of his real due, but he has already obtained a verdict for the full amount of his claim, without crediting this sum, which is alleged to have been paid on his account.

Mr. Leith in reply.—But by no means appears before the Court. Besides, even if it did, although the verdict may be taken for the whole amount, execution may be sued out for a portion only. There is nothing whatever to show that the compromise spoken of in Mr. Storm's deposition has gone off, or that it is before the Court, in fact, that the money was originally received by the defendant from the plaintiff on account not of the latter, but of a third party, and it does not seem that any contingency has happened upon the happening of which the money was to be refunded to the plaintiff as the depositor.

Sir Edward Ryan.—At present we will give a verdict for the plaintiff, with liberty to the defendant to move to enter a non-suit. In the mean time the motion in the case of Greaves v. Bhanghee will have been disposed of, and we shall then be enabled to do substantial justice between the parties.

Verdict accordingly.

CONNELLAUL TACOUR V. DEFRONAUT DUTT.

This was an action upon a promissory note. The defendant had pleaded that he did not make the note, but no one appeared at the trial to support the plea.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Leith appeared for the plaintiff.

Verdict for plaintiff.

Contested motions will be taken to-morrow. A considerable number are standing over, but on account of the suspension of Term business by the unusual length of the Sessions.

On Tuesday, the several prisoners convicted during the Sessions received their sentence respectively as follows.—

The native women convicted of child stealing, was sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment in the House of Correction.

Goherdhone, who was found guilty of manslaughter, was sentenced to two months' confinement in the common jail.

The four Jews convicted of assault and outrageous conduct in the house of a French Jew named Simon Atokeah, were sentenced to twelve months' confinement in the Common Jail. — Herald, March 12.

THURSDAY, MARCH 12.

MONDAY, 1868

The Advocate-General moved to make a rule absolute that the taxing officer should review the taxation of two allocations for costs.

Mr. Morton took a preliminary objection that the motion was unclear. The costs had actually been paid, a rule for an attachment for non-payment having first been granted, and made absolute upon return. If the application were to be entertained now, it would lead to the utmost confusion and inconvenience, and it was difficult to see how the Court had power to enforce any order now, if made, as then summary process on over the costs was made as soon as the costs were actually paid. They could only be recovered back in an action for money had and received.

The Advocate-General said that this was the first preliminary which the party had had of moving to the Court to review the taxation. Cause had been shown against the rule for an attachment upon the ground that certain items had been improperly allowed, and the Court then refused to enter upon the question, because they considered it no answer to the motion for an attachment.

The late and present taxing officers, Mr. W. H. Smolett and Mr. Vaughan, were sent for by the Court, and the practice of the taxing office was inquired into. As it did not appear from the practice, that the party necessarily had notice of the items allowed, before the placard was served upon him, the Court overruled the preliminary objection.

Mr. Morton then shewed cause upon the motion. There were three objections raised, first, as to the allowance of a brief fee to counsel upon attendance before a Judge in Chambers to strike out two counts in the plaint under Rule; secondly, as to the costs of setting down the demurrer, which was set down by the party demurring after it had been sent down by the other side; and lastly, as to the allowance of certain costs, after the party had been admitted to sue in forma pauperis.

The Advocate-General waived all but the first, and he contended that the allowance of counsel was clearly unnecessary where the application was to strike out two of the common counts; though he admitted that difficult questions upon the point might be raised, when the attendance of counsel would be very proper.

The court said, that there was no doubt difficult questions might be raised with reference to the striking out of counts and pleas, and in such cases the attendance of counsel would be proper; but the present did not appear to be such a case, and the item had been improperly allowed. It must, therefore, be referred back to the taxing officer.

Mr. Morton consented in order to save expense, that the item should be struck out of the allocatur at once with out referring it back to the Officer, and that the amount should be repaid.

Order accordingly.

MUNNAIOLI BABU V. SITIYANAM BAROO, AND THE OTHER CAUSES.

This was an application to set aside for irregularity, all the proceedings in the above causes, since August 1835, on the grounds that no process to compel the answer of the present defendant had been issued out, and that interrogatories had nevertheless been exhibited and witnesses examined, as if the cause had been at issue.

It appeared that the original defendant died in February 1835, and that a bill of revivor and supplement was thereon filed against his widow (the present defendant) and his mother and daughter, as his heiresses. The mother and daughter put in their answers, but the widow (who appeared by the same attorney) never answered, and no process of contempt was issued against her. Interrogatories were exhibited and witnesses examined on behalf of the complainant and also of the mother and daughter, both of which latter had died since any further proceeding were taken in the cause. There was a question whether the bill of 1835 was anything more than a mere bill of revivor as against the present defendant.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Morton shewed cause.—The bill of 1835 was a supplemental bill as against the mother and daughter of the original defendant but a bill of revivor only against the widow, who is the present defendant. There is no irregularity in the suit as it stands, at present. It is only necessary for us to revive against the present defendant, which we shall do in due course. Even if there was irregularity, the length of time elapsed since the evidence of constructive notice, would amount to a waiver.

The Advocate-General contra.—The bill of 1835 contained supplemental matter as against the present defendant as well as against the others, and it is impossible that the evidence of witnesses whom we have had no opportunity of cross-examining, can be read against us. As far as we are concerned, the cause is not even at issue.

Per Curiam.—According to your argument, the proceedings are a mere nullity, and the motion to set them aside is unnecessary! What is to prevent the defendant from filing her answer to-morrow?

The Advocate-General.—By filing her answer, she would waive the irregularity, which no act of hers has yet waived. Where irregular proceedings have been taken, though they should even be in effect a nullity, the opposite party has a right to come in and apply to set them aside, because if he acquiesces, he may be barred.

The Court took time to consider upon the questions raised.

Cur. adv. vult.

CROWN SIDE.

THE QUEEN V. RAJAH RAJNAHAIN ROY.

Mr. Prinsep moved to expunge certain of the interrogatories which had been exhibited touching the alleged contempt of the defendant for want of a sufficient return to the writ of habeas corpus to bring up the body of Sreenauth Roy.

Some discussion took place with reference to the practice. It appeared that in Rex v. Barber, Strange's reports, and in a case in the reports, tempore Lord Hardwicke, similar motions had been made in the court of King's Bench.

The Court acquiesced and thought that the motions were regular.

Mr. Prinsep, Mr. Leith, and Mr. Morton were then heard on behalf of the Rajah, who had demurred to eight out of the thirteen interrogatories, and answered the rest (only in number). The objections to the interrogatories demurred to, were, first, that they were irrelevant to the question of the contempt, and, secondly, that they tended to criminate the party interrogated. There could be no doubt that the party was not bound to answer matters which did not relate to, or were only remotely connected with, the alleged contempt, and it was equally clear that he was not bound to answer in matters, prior to the alleged contempt, criminatorum of himself. Now part of the interrogatories related to matters which occurred before the writ of habeas corpus was even issued so that it was difficult to conceive how these matters could have reference to the contempt which consisted in disobedience to the writ. Again, some of the interrogatories demurred to, related to the original taking of the body, and thus too necessarily referred to prior matters. Lastly, there were questions as to the mode in which Sreenauth Roy was treated when he was first seized, and these questions gratuitously suggested that tortures had been inflicted and gross ill-treatment adopted while Sreenauth Roy was in the Rajah's custody. Such matters, (if the fact were so), had nothing to do with the contempt, and might be made the foundation of other and different proceedings. The object clearly was to entrap the Rajah into admissions which might be used as evidence against him in other proceedings, and unduly to influence the court and induce them to award a heavier punishment for the contempt.

Advocate-General and Mr. Clarke contra.—The interrogatories which relate to prior matters, may be perfectly relevant and proper. The return to the writ of habeas corpus in the present case, was founded upon the alleged want of jurisdiction, and we are at liberty to inquire into any matters which are evidence of the fact that the Raja was subject to the jurisdiction, and that his being a person amenable to the jurisdiction, was within his own knowledge at the time. Then with respect to the question of the original caption, and the cause, we are clearly entitled to answers upon those points, inasmuch as the writ itself requires a return of the time and cause of the first taking, and no return has been made here. The treatment Sreenauth Roy experienced is important, as a collateral circumstance, and tending to mitigate or aggravate the contempt.

Sir E. Ryan, C. J.—The only question for our present consideration is, whether these interrogatories which have been demurred to, are to be suppressed or not. Upon the arguments on the return, we decided, not that the party was in contempt, but that there was such evidence before the court as to warrant us in committing him to answer interrogatories touching the supposed contempt. We are quite clear that the party is not bound to answer to matters cumulative of him, and not bearing on the contempt; but he is bound to answer as to the original taking and the cause, and all matters which may be evidence of the nature and degree of the alleged contempt. We allow, therefore, the objections to the interrogatories which relate to the mode of treatment pursued towards Sreenanth Roy, which embrace the 8th, the greater part of the 9th, and the whole of the 10th interrogatories. These interrogatories, therefore, must be suppressed, and it must be referred back to the Clerk of the Crown office.

Order accordingly.

THE QUEEN V. C. READ.

Mr. Leith put in affidavits of good character, on behalf of the prisoner, who had been convicted of a serious assault upon Mr. J. H. Peters.

The Court, in consideration of the good character borne by the prisoner, passed a lenient sentence, fining him 100 rupees, and ordering him to be imprisoned until the fine should be paid.

Order accordingly.—Hurkaru, March 13.

FRIDAY, MARCH 13.

MUNNALOIL BABOO L. SITTANAH BABOO, AND THE OTHER CAUSES.

In this case a motion was made yesterday to set aside the proceedings for irregularity. It was incorrectly stated in yesterday's report, that the answer of the infant had been put in. Lutchmun Bibee alone answered. The bill certainly was in effect a bill of revivor and supplement against all three.

Sir E. Ryan, C. J.—We think that this application cannot be granted. The bill certainly prays an answer from all the three (then) defendants, and the evidence on the interrogatories could not have been read against the two defendants, who did not put in their answer. But the suit was regular, as far as it went, and the interrogatories could not have been suppressed as against Lutchmun Bibee; so that the evidence might equally be read against the present defendant as her representative, though not in her individual capacity. The suit might have become irregular if it went on. As to the application for permission to file the answer, there is no necessity for it whatever, because the defendant is not in contempt, and indeed the foundation of the motion is that no process of contempt ever issued against her.

Order discharged.

IN EQUITY.

CHAUND BEEBEE AND OTHERS V. OWEN JOHN FYLAS.

The Advocate-General, and Mr. Leith, moved upon notice for an order to stay all proceedings in the suit, until certain costs incurred in other proceedings (an ejectment at law being one) had been paid, and until security had been given for costs. The learned counsel moved upon voluminous affidavits, in which it was stated that the defendant and his family had been ⁱⁿ—but a question the property in question for 40 years, ^{Mr. Elliott, which ap-} been harassed for some time past with ^{standing}, but while he in this Court and in the ^{had been} ^{in which} ^{facta done} had been incurred. The affidavits further state, ^{that} no intelligence could be obtained of where the parties resided, and it was doubted whether they were not fictitious persons altogether. Upon the objection being applied to, he had stated that he did not know the (female) complainants personally, and could not point out their place of abode. The learned counsel cited a late case in Keene's reports, where security of costs had been ordered to be given under circumstances nearly similar.

Mr. Morton opposed the application.—There was no authority whatever for applying to stay proceedings in equity until costs at law had been paid. The first part of the motion had at least the advantage of novelty!

The Court said, that the learned Counsel might confine himself to the latter part of the application. If the facts stated in the defendants' affidavits were true, there was strong prima facie reason, especially in this country, for ordering security to be given. There was no affidavit of the complainants' attorney denying that he had stated his inability to point out his own clients.

Mr. Morton.—Because the fact is so. The attorney cannot be personally acquainted with his own clients when they are as in the present case, pydah females. We have the affidavit of the native manager, who is nearly related to the complainants, and who is the only person to make affidavit in the matter. He states that the complainants reside in Calcutta, and are well known there. If this is false, let the defendant indict him, but, in the mean time, the last affidavit is to be believed. With the exception of one or two special cases, and those two of very recent date, the courts of law and equity have never required a plaintiff to give security for costs, except where he is residing abroad, where the process of the Court cannot reach him.

The Court said, that they should require the facts to be brought more fully before them, and that the solicitor for the complainants must make affidavit of all the matters in his knowledge. For this purpose the motion must stand over until Thursday next.

Stand over for further affidavits.

DOE ON THE DEMISE OF AMBER KHAN V. MEER ISPAHANEE.

The Advocate General moved for a new trial in this ejectment, in which a verdict for the defendant was found last sitting. The main question related to the validity of a deed executed by a Mahomedan lady, and alleged by the plaintiff to have been executed by her in her last illness, and therefore good for one third only. The Court at the trial found the fact to be that it was not executed in her last illness, though only a few weeks before her death. The chief testimony on this point was, that of a native Doctor, who swore that in his opinion the fatal illness commenced only immediately before her death. The learned counsel had now the affidavits of three European medical gentlemen, who stated that in their judgment (upon reading the depositions) the fatal illness must have been the result of the prior illness, and virtually a continuance of it.

The Court refused the application. New trials were rarely granted in ejectment where the verdict was for the defendant. There was nothing to prevent the lessor of the plaintiff from bringing a new ejectment.

Rule refused.

of the common law questions upon the assistance of counsel. General moved, on several grounds, for the assessment of damages (assessed at Co.'s Rs. 1000) to be set aside, and the damages to be assessed.

The court was set down for trial on the 17th of inquiry for Saturday, while Monday was the last day of term. Secondly, the verdict recovered varied materially from the particulars of demand. Thirdly, there was no evidence given that the defendant was subject to the jurisdiction. Lastly, the learned counsel relied on an affidavit which went into the whole case, and went to show that there was a substantial defence to the greater part of the demand.

The Court overruled all the points. With respect to the first, though Sunday was a dies non, so far that it was of course not a working day, it was still to be counted as a day in the term, and setting down a cause therefore for Saturday, when Monday was the last day of term, was no infringement of the rule that it could not be set down for the last two days. Secondly, the particulars were no part of the record, and were not before the Court upon assessment of damages, though upon a trial they are annexed to the record by special rule of Court. Besides, upon referring to the particulars, no variance appeared. Thirdly, proof of jurisdiction was unnecessary, except in ex parte actions, and in defended actions, where notice to contest the jurisdiction was given at the time of filing the plea. Lastly, there appeared nothing in the affidavit of the defendant, (taking it in conjunction with the evidence produced at the trial) to induce the Court to entertain this motion.

Rule refused.

R. BAGGICHSE V. W. STORM.

Mr. Leith moved for a rule to set aside the verdict in this case, tried on last Tuesday (see Hurkaru of Wednesday,) pursuant to the liberty reserved.

The Advocate General suggested that, as the Court had intimated at the trial, that upon the motions in this and the preceding case coming on, they would endeavour to give substantial justice to all parties, it would save expence to drop this motion, and if his client's costs in this cause were paid, he would consent to the sum in Mr. Storm's hands being paid over to Mr. Greaves, the plaintiff in the former action, in part liquidation of the amount for which he had recovered judgment.

Mr. Morton on the part of Mr. Greaves, consented of the arrangement and agreed, that Mr. Storm's costs should be paid, but he could not consent that his client should pay Prawnkeeun Baggichse's costs of this action.

No arrangement however was come to, the present plaintiff insisting upon his right to his costs in the present action.

The Court refused the rule, as they considered that though the money was originally paid on account of Greaves, his subsequent repudiation of the contract made it money paid to the use of the plaintiff, the present deponent.

Rule refused.—Bengal Hurkaru, March 14.

Monday, March 16.

This being the "latest safe day" for Overland letters, no contested motions were taken, and the Court at an early hour, their Lordships and the Bar being all anxious to write home.

Hurkaru, March 17.

Tuesday, March 17.

SEAR ARSENAM BANYOO, S. MOONHIES, DOO AGLY AND OTHERS.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Morton were heard in support of a motion upon notice for discharging the order for taking the bill pro confesso, upon payment of costs, and for leave to file the plea to the jurisdiction of one of the defendants, and the answers of the rest. This motion was made upon the ground of an affidavit explaining the delay, by shewing that the party was awaiting the decision of the Court in a case nearly similar, where a question of jurisdiction was raised upon demurrer. This case was Bissaur Roy v. Rumsutton Bonnerjee, in which the decision of the Court was postponed for several days after the argument. The affidavit in the present motion certainly did not shew that the costs of contempt were either paid or tendered according to the strict words of the Eq. Rule 26, but as the order asked for was only for leave to clear the contempt and file the plea and answers upon payment of costs, the rule would be substantially complied with if the order were at once granted, because the payment of costs being made thereby a condition precedent, it would not be available until the costs were actually paid. There could be no question that under special circumstances the Court had full power to abate the rigour of their own rules and orders, especially where the practice had been contrary.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith contra, contended that the Court had no power whatever to alter or modify their own printed rules to suit particular cases. According to the Equity Rule 26, the costs must be paid or tendered before a contempt proceeded to a commission of rebellion could be set aside, and a plea filed. Even if a contrary practice had grown up the Court were bound by the rule, as soon as the question upon its construction was raised.

Sir E. Ryan, C. J. According to the strict construction of the 29th Eq. rule, the terms have not been complied with, as far as concerns the application for leave to file the plea. But there is nothing in the argument that the Court have no power to modify their own rules according to the circumstances of particular cases. It is done every day, both on the plea and on the equity side of the Court, terms being imposed according to our discretion. We shall allow this application upon the payment of all costs, except the costs of delivering the briefs upon setting down the cause for hearing ex parte, and except the costs of the present application.

Order accordingly.—Hurk, March 18.

Tuesday, March 17.

RANSABUCK MULLICK V. DEBOUZA AND OTHERS.

The plaint was in assumpsit, and set forth that certain opium of the plaintiff of the value of Co. Rs. 80,000 was to be consigned to Messrs. Gemmell and Co., the agents of the defendants in China, to be there sold and the proceeds remitted to the plaintiff in Syce, dollars or government bills, and that the defendants in consideration of 2½ per cent. commission, to be paid out of the proceeds, granted the safe returns of the proceeds of the said consignment. The plaint further stated, that the opium arrived in China, and was received by Gemmell and Co., who disposed of it to one Charles Elliott, and that no returns of the proceeds had been made in Syce dollars or bills, but that certain opium had been retained at the plaintiff which he refused to accept.

The fourth plea to this plaint was an elaborate special plea, setting forth that Gemmell and Co. were British subjects at Canton, and that the said Charles Elliott was Superintendent of the British trade there, and vested by Act of Parliament with certain extensive powers and authorities over British subjects in China, with reference to such trade—that the said Charles Elliott, in the exercise of his said powers, published a certain "proclamation" (which was set out) demanding the surrender of all British-owned opium at Canton, and that Gemmell and Co. accordingly surrendered the opium in question, the same being at the time at Canton, and within the terms of the proclamation, as they were thereby prevented from performing their contract to guarantee the returns of the proceeds in dollars or bills.

Replication, that Gemmell and Co., were not bound to obey the said proclamation or to surrender the opium.

Special demurrer, showing for cause, that the replication tendered no issue of fact but traversed matter of law, and that it, moreover, appeared upon the face of the plea that Gemmell and Co. were bound to surrender the opium.

Mr. Leith and Mr. Morton for the demurrer.—It is laid down in numerous authorities, that matter of law cannot be traversed. The question whether the defendants were bound to surrender is a mere question of law arising upon the face of the plea, and the replication is nothing more than an informal general demurrer. If this issue had gone before a Jury, there would have been no question for them to try, for it is not their province to determine whether a legal inference is or is not correctly drawn from admitted facts. If any of the facts are disputed, the replication should have denied the facts themselves, not the alleged result.

The court were clear that the replication was bad, and directed the learned Counsel to argue the plea.

Mr. Leith and Mr. Morton.—The plea shows, that Mr. Elliott had full powers to issue the proclamation, by virtue of the Act 5 and 6 Will. IV., and Gemmell and Co. were bound to obey as British subjects, as much as if it had been a proclamation by Her Majesty herself. The general rule, no doubt, is, that where a party has expressly and unconditionally bound herself to perform a certain act, it is no excuse that the act of a third party has prevented it or even rendered it physically impossible. Medeiros v. Hill, 8 Bingham, Cooling v. Higgins 1 Campb. 451. It therefore, in the present case, the defence had been that the Chinese Government had seized and confiscated the opium, it might well have been doubted whether this would have furnished any excuse in law. But if the performance of the contract be prevented by an act of the British Government, the defendant stands excused. In Hubbard v. Tontang, 3 Bos. and Poll. 301, Lord Alvanley, C. J. says, "Where the policy of the state intervenes and prevents the performance of the contract, the party will be excused." And in Atkinson v. Ritchie, 10 East, 585, Lord Ellenborough thus lays down the law. "Neither can it be questioned, that if from a change in the political relations and circumstances of this country, with subsistence to a contract lawful at the time of making, such contract becomes incapable of being carried into effect without derogating from the clear public duty which a British subject owes to the sovereign and the state of which he is a member, the non-performance is not only excusable but matter of peremptory duty and obligation."

Per Curiam.—That is quite certain—but a question arises how far the proclamation of Mr. Elliott, which appeared to have been issued voluntarily, but while he was in personal duress, could have been binding. Could his acts, under such circumstances, be deemed acts done by the authority which he possessed as superintendent, under the statute referred to?

Mr. Leith and Mr. Morton.—The duress could not have deprived him of the powers and authorities vested in him; nor does it appear that he ever afterwards repudiated what he had done. There is no authority for such an application of the law of duress. It would indeed be a dangerous doctrine to hold that every man called upon to obey the mandate of a public functionary and representative of his own Government, was first to inquire whether such mandate was so far coerced by the acts of a foreign Government as to dispense with obedience! Who is to be the arbiter of this? The question might be raised in almost every instance, for every public order of a foreign ambassador or other such functionary, may have reference to some proceeding or other of the foreign Government, and thus the question of moral coercion in a greater or less degree may always be raised. But the sole question is whether British subjects were not bound to obey such a proclamation, purporting to be under the authority given to Mr. Elliott, and whether they are not excused in such obedience. There seems to be no sort of analogy between this case, and the case of a private individual doing some act while under personal duress.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Clarke contra.—The replication is good and the plea bad. As to the replication, it does not traverse a mere matter of law, but a mixed question of law and fact. Such a traverse is perfectly good according to the authorities. Then the plea is clearly defective in substance for the reason pointed out by the Court. The involuntary act of the Superintendent while in personal duress, was a nullity. The Proclamation was in effect the act of the Chinese Government, and defendants' guarantee extended to indemnify the plaintiff against acts of the Chinese, though not of the British Government.

The learned Counsel were stopped by the Court.

Mr. Leith was heard in reply.

Sir E. Ryan C. J.—This is special demurrer to a replication. We are satisfied, that the application is bad and that the demurrer to it must be allowed, because it clearly denies no matter of fact, but traverses only what is matter of law arising on admitted fact. But we are of opinion that the plea is substantially defective, and discloses no sufficient answer to the action. Upon the face of the plea it appears, and it is recited in the "proclamation," that the Superintendent, Mr. Elliott, was acting, while under personal duress, and we are of opinion that under such circumstances his act had no binding power. There must, therefore, be judgment for the plaintiff on this issue.

Demurrer allowed to replication, but judgment for plaintiff on the plea.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 18,

RANDPHONE NUNDNY V. BOOKLOLL MRSFR.

This was a demurrer to a replication on the ground of departure.

The plaint was in assumpsit, and set forth that the defendants contracted to deliver certain goods within a specified period, and that if they should be wet at the time of their arrival, they should be dried. Brought, that defendant refused to deliver according to the terms of the contract.

Plea, that, within the limited time, defendant tendered the goods, and plaintiff refused to accept them.

Replication, that the goods when tendered were wet, and not dried according to the terms of the contract.

Mr. Prinsep, for the demurrer.—The breach in the plea is the non delivery, while the replication admits a delivery, but tenders a new issue, namely, that the goods were not dried. If this were to be allowed, new and different matter might be tendered in every successive pleading, and issue would never be joined at all. If the plaintiff intended to complain that the breach was the refusal to dry, he ought to have assigned that breach in his plea. The two agreements are substantive and distinct agreements, and after assigning the non-performance of one only in his first pleading, the plaintiff is not to waive that and assign the breach of another in his subsequent pleading. Hence it does not appear by whom the goods were to be dried, or at what time. It may be that they were to be dried by the plaintiff himself, and after, not before, delivery. Either there is a departure in the replication or an uncertainty in the plea. The rule of pleading is that every ambiguity is to be construed most unfavourably for the party pleading.

Mr. Morton, contra.—The fallacy of my learned friend's ingenious argument consists in considering the breach assigned in the plea to be non delivery in fact. The breach assigned is the refusal to deliver according to the terms of the contract, which may be supported by proof either, that there was no tender at all, or a tender of goods different from the contract. The replication therefore, fortifies and supports the plea, for it shows how the goods were not according to the contract. In the plea the breach is general; in the replication specific, but obviously included in the former. The plaintiff is not bound to develop his whole case in detail at once. With respect to the alleged ambiguity in the plea, that is a ground of special demurrer, and is cured by pleading over. The rule that an ambiguous expression is to be construed unfavourably for the party pleading is confined to the case where there is no clue furnished to solve it; but here the publication itself furnishes the clue, and does away with the ambiguity entirely. The two pleadings must be taken together, and the Court will construe it magis ut valent quam ut perant. The clause in the plea is admitted to be capable of two constructions, of which the replication has adopted one;—will the Court adopt the other, for the purpose of creating the very repugnancy which constitutes the objection raised?

Mr. Prinsep replied.

The Court were of opinion, that there was a departure and that the demurrer must be allowed. The replication in effect set up a different contract, and assigned a different breach. The plaintiff might have leave to amend.

Demurrer allowed, with leave to amend.—HURKARU. March 19.

THURSDAY, MARCH 19.

IN THE MATTER OF UDDITHANAIN SAIN.

Mr. Bernall moved for a commission of lunacy. The motion and affidavits were entitled "in equity." The learned Counsel contended that it was the practice in this Court to move it in equity, and that in England it was moved in chancery.

The Court were of opinion, that the motion and affidavits ought to be in lunacy, and not entitled on either side of the Court.

THE GRAN V. NARAIN NARAIN ROY.

The report of the Clerk of the Crown was brought up and read this morning. The Clerk of the Crown reported that the defendant had answered all the interrogatories exhibited (except those to which demurrers had been allowed) and that he had not cleared his supposed contempt.

The Court fixed to-morrow for this case, and the defendant will then be brought up by habes corpus.

CHANDU BEEBEN AND OTHERS V. OWEN JOHN KYLE.

In this case a motion was made last Monday, and stood over for further affidavits. The motion was, that all proceedings should be stayed in the equity suit until certain costs (not incurred in this suit) had been paid, and until security for costs should be given. (See Hurkaru of Friday.)

Mr. Morton now produced the affidavits of the attorney and one of his writers, who stated all that they knew concerning the whereabouts of their clients. The affidavits certainly went chiefly upon hearsay, and this most necessarily be the case where the complainants were native pardah women. It was impossible the attorney should be acquainted with them personally, and he could only make the usual inquiries and act upon the best information which he was able to obtain. Security for costs could not be ordered in the present case, unless the Court were prepared to establish a precedent for making for security in all cases where pardah females were plaintiffs. The first part of this motion was merely experimental.

The Advocate-General (with whom was Mr. Leith) contra, contended, that the affidavits were satisfactory. The attorney, perhaps, could only speak from information, and not from personal knowledge; but he might at all events swear to his own belief, which had not been done. There were one or two instances even in England, where Courts of Equity had ordered security for cost to be given, although the party was not out of the jurisdiction and much stronger reasons prevailed in this country.

The Court said, that with reference to so much of the application as related to the security for costs, they should make the order absolute, fixing the amount at one thousand rupees. The rule as to requiring security from plaintiffs, was not applicable, with the same strictness which prevailed in England, to cases here especially in the instance of parties who were Pardah women, against whom it was as difficult to execute the process of the Court. The affidavits might have been much more satisfactory than they were, and this was the ground upon which the Court ordered security. The first part of the application had been already disposed of, and each party must pay their own costs of the present application.

Order accordingly.

JOGGUTHUNDER MOOKERJEE AND THREE OTHERS V. NARAIN MOOKERJEE, &c.

This was a rule to shew cause why a judgment entered up, on a warrant of attorney, should not be set aside on the ground of irregularity. There were two objections; first, that the bond was in the name of fitz obligees, (the four plaintiffs and Benjamin Preston) while the warrant and judgment were only in the names and the four.

Secondly, that it did not sufficiently appear by the jurisdiction clause in the plaint, that the defendants were subject to the jurisdiction of the court.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Leith showed cause. At the utmost the first objection shows only an irregularity, and the defendants have waived it both by the length of time elapsed (three years) and by taking steps in the same. But there is nothing at all in the objection itself for the judgment duly follows the warrant, and the bond is not part of the record. As to the jurisdiction, there is a sufficient admission of it. Judgment by confession is a stronger admission than judgment by default, and where judgment is signed by default, proof of jurisdiction is unnecessary.

The Advocate General and Mr. Clarke contra. The error is not a mere irregularity;—it makes the judgment a nullity. Where there are several obligors in a bond, and the action is brought in the name of some only, and judgment is recovered, such judgment may be set aside by writ of error. It is error apparent on the face of the record, for it appears by the plaint that there were five obligees.

The Court took time to consider.

Cur. adv. vult.

CANTON V. SUGGLEDODDAB SING.

This was a motion to justify bail, the defendant being in custody.

The Advocate-General opposed the justification, and objected to the form of the notice. The notice was that the bails had been put in and it gave six days' notice of justification. According to the 19th Bail Rule, where the defendant is in custody, he is to give six days' notice of putting in bail.

Mr. Nott contra, admitted that the words of the rule were so, but contended that the practice had always been the other way. The object of the rule clearly was that six days' notice altogether should be given and such notice had in fact been given here.

The court considered the notice irregular according to the terms of the Rule.—Hurd. March 20.

FRIDAY, MARCH 20.

CHAUND BIKER V. OWEN JOHN ELIAS.

Sir E. Ryan, C. J. With reference to this case, which was urged yesterday, observed, that the Court thought it would be convenient and proper to refer it to the Registrar to settle the amount to be required as security for costs. The Registrar, especially in this Court, was best able to judge of the amount necessary in each case.

Order accordingly.

THE QUEEN V. RAJAH RAJNARAIN ROY.

The Advocate-General moved for judgment, against the defendant.

Mr. Prinsep proposed to put in an affidavit in mitigation.

The court said, that as far as the contempt was concerned, they could only proceed upon the report of the clerk of the Crown, (which was to be taken as a conviction and not, traversable) and the answers to the interrogatories such answers being annexed to the report. The affidavit would be received if it only went to mitigation and not to denial.

Mr. Prinsep. That it certainly was in mitigation only for the fact of the contempt was not pretended to be, denied.

The court, however, would not put in, but voluntarily withheld in order to prevent the other side from having the reply.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Clarke were then heard for the prosecution. They contended that the answers to the interrogatories were in many respects inconsistent and evasive, and that upon the face of them the contempt of Court was greatly aggravated. Instead of bringing in the body of Sreenauth Roy, as soon as the return to the writ was declared insufficient, the defendant detained him for several days, and to the present hour it appeared he had not been since heard of. By an answer to one of the interrogatories it came out, that the defendant had advertised his house in Calcutta to be let several months ago, and the learned Counsel argued that the purpose of this clearly was to remove himself from the jurisdiction of the Court, and that the perpetration of the outrage was probably even then contemplated.

Mr. Prinsep, Mr. Leith, and Mr. Morton were heard in mitigation. They contended, that the contempt stood as it did originally after the return had been held insufficient, and that the supposed circumstances of aggravation were negatived upon the face of the answers to the interrogatories. The real contempt after all was the insufficient return only, and if the case had stood there above, the degree of contempt would have been quite trivial, for it was founded upon an error of law, and the return was made by the advice of counsel. But the defendant no doubt ought to have produced the body when the writ was declared insufficient. It appeared, however, that Sreenauth Roy was afterwards detained but a short time, and then sent to the house of a friend (Auchon Day) by his own desire. The non-appearance of the man to the present time was explainable in two ways, and the more probable story was that he was kept back by the prosecutors themselves for the purposes of this prosecution. The defendant had already suffered two months' imprisonment, and it was hoped the Court would consider this a sufficient punishment for the contempt incurred.

Some discussion arose, concerning the right to reply.

The Court said that where there were no affidavits in mitigation, the defendant's Counsel were first heard and then the Counsel for the prosecution. If there were affidavits, the Counsel for the prosecution were first heard upon them, and then the defendant's Counsel; but in neither case was there a reply.

Their Lordships deliberated for some time as to the judgment to be awarded.

Ryan, C. J., addressing Rajah Rajnarin Roy, said. It is necessary that I should now pronounce the judgment of the Court. From the first there could be little doubt of the fact of the contempt having been committed, and your answers to the interrogatories have been confirmatory of it. There can be no doubt, nor is it attempted to be denied by yourself, that the original taking and detention were without a shadow of legal excuse. Your defence was the alleged want of jurisdiction in the Court. This return we overruled, and it was then your duty immediately to have brought in the body of Sreenauth Roy according to the exigency of the writ. The Court taking into consideration the long period of imprisonment which you have already suffered, are not disposed to subject you to further imprisonment; and their sentence is that you do pay a fine of one thousand rupees to the Queen.

The fine was paid immediately, and the defendant was there-upon discharged from custody.

Order accordingly.

SHEPHERD V. SHEPHERD & ANOTHER.

This was an action of assumpsit upon the common money count. No one appeared for the defence.

The Advocate General and Mr. Leith for the plaintiff.

Verdict for plaintiff. — Hurk. March, 21.

MONDAY, MARCH 23.

The Court sat this morning at eleven o'clock as usual, and some contested motions were heard, but none of any interest, and their Lordships rose at an early hour.

There is a common-law cause for trial to-morrow. The equity board will be taken afterwards. — Hurkaru, March 24.

(From a Correspondent.)

We were in Court on Thursday last, when we heard Mr. Turtan say something to the bench about fixing a time to hear in Chambers the application he had to make, and concerning which he had spoken to them before; when the Chief Justice stated, that Mr. Richard Vaughan, the taxer of costs, had some important business to attend to—and therefore they could not fix a time until next week. This excited our curiosity, and led us to make enquiries amongst the solicitors, and we find that in consequence of the taxer of costs having struck out of their bills, various charges which have been hitherto invariably allowed them under their table of fees, upon a plea, and we believe an untenable and unjustifiable plea, that such charges are not allowed in England, the solicitors have filed the objection to such a mode of taxation, and have regularly given notice, and delivered briefs to counsel to bring the question before the Court. This then is the question so standing over, and it does seem to us surprising, that it should be made a hole and corner affair. It appears that the business, which now engrosses the time of the taxer of costs, is the examining and altering tables of fees preferred by the solicitors, and delivered to the Chief Justice more than three years ago. We shall watch this proceeding although it is to take place at Chambers, for we find the solicitors complain bitterly of the treatment they have received, and we believe they have been very harshly used. We are unable at present to enter into particulars, because having lodged their complaint, the solicitors will not now give us information; but we shall be able to obtain it when their case is heard, and we think, the matter is of very great importance to the public, so many of whom are or may be clients. — Englishman, March 23.

TUESDAY, MARCH 24.

PLEA SIDE.

RUTTON MONEY DOSSER V. NEELRUTTON HOLDAR.

This was an action upon a promissory note. The plaintiff had a verdict.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Leith for the plaintiff.

The Advocate General and Mr. Nutt for the defence.

Verdict for plaintiff.

IN EQUITY.

WOOMACHURN DOSS V. ROSSMONEY DOMES, &c.

In this case the bill was filed in 1837 for an account and partition of the alleged joint and personal real estate. The property involved in the suit is estimated at about forty lakhs. Voluminous evidence has been taken for the complainants and defendants.

The only real question in dispute being the alleged jointure in estate, the Court suggested that an issue or issues at law should be directed at once to try the fact. In a case of this nature, the Court could not undertake to decide upon expressly contradictory evidence, on paper.

The Counsel for the defendants, however, strongly objected to an issue being directed without going fully into the case.

Mr. Prinsep, the leading counsel for the complainants, accordingly opened the case at considerable length.

The evidence for the complainants was then read, and occupied the Court until a late hour, when their Lordships adjourned the further hearing until to-morrow.

Adjourned. — Hurkaru, March 25.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 25.

WOOMACHURN DOSS VERSUS ROSSMONEY DOMES.

The hearing of this Equity cause was continued this-morning.

Certain exhibits were proposed to be put in, by the complainant and proved vide ante at the hearing. This was objected to on the ground of the order being irregular, it not having been served until yesterday morning, whereas the rule was that it should be served on the opposite party two clear days before the hearing.

Sir F. Ryan, C. J., said, that the order certainly was not regular, but if the objection was pressed the Court would postpone the further hearing in order to give time duly to serve the order. The Court was not disposed to exclude the exhibits altogether from an irregularity in the service of the order.

The objection being thereupon waived, the exhibits (three letters) were proved vide ante, and put in and read. This closed the complainant's case.

Mr. Morton was then heard upon the evidence for the complainants, and addressed the Court for about two hours.

A question arose whether Mr. Sanders, who appeared for a party, who was a defendant on the record, but in reality in the same interest as the complainants, was to be heard next or after the case for the defendants had been opened.

Sir E. Ryan said, that the Counsel of a defendant in the same interest with the complainants, must certainly be heard before the case for the defendants had been opened. He was in effect one of the complainant's Counsel, and he was not entitled to a reply to the arguments for the defendants.

Mr. Sanders was then heard on behalf one of the defendants on the record, Banneymadub.

The Advocate General, the leading Counsel for the defendants, had partly opened their case, when the Court rose.

The further hearing will be resumed to-morrow.

Adjourned. — Hurk. March, 26.

THURSDAY, MARCH 26.

WOMACHURN DOSS V. ROSEMARY DOSS.

The Advocate-General for the defendants resumed his address this morning, and concluded about two o'clock.

The evidence for the defendants was then put in.

A question arose whether parts of the complainant's answer to the cross-bill could be read for the defendants without making the whole of the answer evidence. It was contended that the cases having been set down for hearing on the original bill only, and not on the cross bill, the answer in the cross cause could only be used as an exhibit, and as it was nothing more than an answer to a bill of discovery.

The Court were of the opinion, and said, that parts of the answer could not be read without making the whole evidence.

About five o'clock the Court adjourned, the cause not having been nearly concluded.

IN THE MATTER OF NUNDORAM SING.

The Advocate-General said, that in this matter in which a writ of habeas corpus had been granted, directed to Mr. C. Steer, Magistrate of Nuddesh, the return was to have been made to-morrow, but he hoped the Court would enlarge the return, and it might perhaps be taken by consent on some day in the sittings as of the term. He believed his learned friend, who had moved for the writ, was aware that the man, Nundoram Sing, (a Sheriff's bailiff) had been enlarged since the coming of the writ, and there could be less objection now to delay. The day after to-morrow was the last day of the term.

Mr. Morton said, that he certainly believed Nundoram Sing had been discharged from custody, and was now at large. He understood that a receipt for the body had been demanded at the Sheriff's Office, but declined to be given, and that the bailiff had then been set at liberty. He would make no objection to the return being enlarged to a day in the sittings, and taken as of the term, but it seemed questionable whether it could be done even upon consent.

Sir E. Ryan, C. J., said, that a writ issued by a Judge in vacation, might be made returnable before the full Court in term, but his Lordship doubted whether the return of a writ issued and returnable in term, could be enlarged to a day in the vacation. The Court would consider the point. The return might be enlarged by consent to the first day of next term at all events.

The Advocate-General offered to send to his learned friend a draft of the intended return. A fair copy had been sent up to Mr. Steer to be signed by him, and had not yet been received back.—Hulk, March 27

FRIDAY, MARCH 27.

WOMACHURN DOSS V. ROSEMARY DOSS.

This case was continued this morning (the fourth day.)

Mr. Clarke, Mr. Leith and Mr. Darwell followed for the defendants.

Mr. Nott appeared for certain infant defendants.

A vast number exhibits having been put in on behalf of the defendants, the Court postponed the further hearing until Monday, in order to give the learned Counsel, Mr. Prinsep, time to look into them, and prepare his reply.

Adjourned to Monday.—Hulk, March 28.

SATURDAY, MARCH 29.

ANUNDNARAIN MOONERJEE V. RAMNARAIN MOONERJEE.

This was a rule nisi to set aside a judgment upon a bond and warrant, for irregularity. (See former report in the Hulk.)

Sir E. Ryan, C. J.—We are of opinion that there is no irregularity on the face of the judgment, because the terms of the warrant of attorney are strictly followed in entering up the judgment. Independently of this, a question might arise, even if the warrant had been in the names of the ses (the obligees to the bond), whether the omission of the name of Benjamin Preston, the Cryer of the Court, as one of the cognizees, in entering up the judgment, would have vitiated it, because it appears that he was a mere trustee not beneficially interested, and made a party merely for the purpose of giving jurisdiction. In equity, it has been held over and over again, that when the Cryer of the Court is made party to a deed for the mere purpose of jurisdiction, he is not a necessary party to a suit. But we do not decide the point on the plea side.

Rule discharged.

PATRICK V. ANUNDMOHUN KHAN.

This was a special demurrer to a replication.

The Plea was on a special contract for salt accepting certain salt, of which it was averred that weight was to be taken on board a certain ship in the river Hooghly, and delivery made to the defendant.

Plea, that by the Custom of Calcutta, where such a contract is made and no place of delivery is specified in the contract, the delivery is to be taken at one of two particular Ghauts, to wit Sulkea Ghaut or the Custom House Ghaut.

Replication, that the plaintiff was not bound by the said custom to deliver the salt at either of the said ghauts, and that the same was deliverable on board of the said ship, according to the terms in the plea mentioned.

Demurrer, on the ground of uncertainty and departure and that no proper issue was tendered.

Mr. Leith for the demurrer. It is not shewn by the plea that the contract was to deliver the salt on board ship, for the weighing may be made at one place and the delivery at another. Besides, even if the delivery was to be on board the ship, this is not incompatible with taking delivery at a particular ghaut. The substantial objection is, that the plea shows no place of delivery, and the replication attempts to supply one. The very same objection in principle was taken and allowed in the case of Ramdhane Nundy v. Sooklall Musser, argued in Court a few days ago.

Mr. Prinsep contra.—Whether the replication be bad or not the plea is clearly bad, for it does not confess and avoid. The breach in the plea is the non-acceptance of the goods of which delivery was tendered on board the ship lying at anchor in the river Hooghly, and where, according to the terms of the contract, delivery was clearly to be taken. The plea in effect denies the contract as laid, and relies upon a custom which is applicable not to the contract stated in the plea, but to the different contract set up by the plea.

Ryan, C. J.—Then you might have demurred to the plea.

Mr. Prinsep.—The objection is equally available now. It is often a question of policy in pleading whether a party shall demur himself or drive his opponent to demur.

Sir E. Ryan, C. J. said, the Court were of opinion, that the replication was bad, and that plea was bad also. The replication offered no material or proper issue, and the plea was not in confession and avoidance, but in denial, according to the construction which the Court put upon the contract stated in the plaint, because they were of opinion, that the place of delivery sufficiently appeared on the face of the plaint. Under the circumstances each party must pay his own costs, and each might have leave to amend.

Order accordingly.

This was the last day of Term.

The Court fixed Tuesday for hearing counsel upon certain important questions concerning Taxation of Costs lately raised.—Harkara, March 30.

MONDAY, MARCH 30.

SITTINGS AFTER SECOND TERM OF 1840.

WOONACHURN DOSS V. ROSSMUNY DOSS.

PRINSEP DAY.

Mr. Prinsep addressed the court this morning in reply, at considerable length and with great ability.

The Court requested to be furnished with the briefs of counsel, containing the pleadings and evidence on both sides.

Stands over.—Hark. March 31.

INSOLVENT COURT.

MARCH 7. 1840.

(Before Sir U. W. Seton.)

IN THE MATTER OF RICHARD EDWARDS.

The assignee asked the insolvent whether he had advanced his attorney any costs, or did any person do so on his account; to both of those questions he replied in the negative, and there being no opposition, he was discharged.

IN THE MATTER OF FRANCIS FAVIER.

The assignee put the same question to the insolvent regarding the advance of costs to his attorney. He said that he had advanced the sum of 86 rupees. On being asked why it had not been entered in the schedule, he stated, that he had done so subsequent to the filing of the petition.

After swearing to the truth of his deposition, he was discharged.

In the above cases, Henry Perie, the messenger, was asked by the Court, whether he had served the notices on the creditors and explained their contents to them. He replied, that they had been served; but that not being sufficiently acquainted with the Bengallee language, as as to be able to explain to them the contents, he took a person with him, who did so. The Court observed, that if that person would swear to the truth of it, it would be sufficient.

IN THE MATTER OF JAMES JACOBS.

Previous to this case being called on, Mr. Clarke, who is for the opposition, spoke to the Commissioner of his inability to attend, being engaged in the perjury case, at the Supreme Court, consequent on which the case was postponed till the 4th of April, being the next Court day.

Mr. Stretwell stated, that if there was any opposition to be made to the additional schedule, already filed, he begged the Court would mention the grounds, as it would save the insolvent from being remanded again. His imprisonment has, he said, been already protracted to a great length, and he and his family have in consequence been very much embarrassed in circumstances. The Court referred the insolvent's attorney, to Mr. Barwell, for any information he required.

The assignee told the Court, that the grounds had already been mentioned to the insolvent. The insolvent stated, that the assignee wanted him to enter some silver plate in his schedule, of which he had not the least knowledge. He could not, therefore, do it, and if the Court were to remand him as often as it thought proper, he could not throw more light on the subject.

IN THE MATTER OF LIEUTENANT-COLONEL ANDREW HARVEY.

In this case Mr. Clarke was to have shewn cause against the order now passed at the last Court day, but consequent on his absence, it was adjourned to the next Court day.

IN THE MATTER OF PETER POSTER.

The case was postponed till the next Court day.

IN THE MATTER OF MANUK MALCOLM MANUK.

This case stands over till the next Court day, on account of the absence of Mr. Clarke.

IN THE MATTER OF WILLIAM HENRY GILBERT.

This case was put off for the same reason.

IN THE MATTER OF JAMES BLACK.

Adjourned on the same grounds.

IN THE MATTER OF RAJESORE SEN.

Postponed on the same account.

IN THE MATTER OF MOBIN CHUNDER GHOSH.

Put off as above.

The following dividends were declared. The estate of William Fairlie Clarke and others, 2: Company's Rupees on 100 Sicca rupees.

John Palmer and others, 1 Company's rupee on 100 Sicca rupees.

Henry Alexander Elliott, 10 Company's rupees on 100 ditto.

Thomas Philpot, 22 Company's rupees on 100 ditto.

This day was fixed for Michael Schlatter to declare a dividend, but the insolvent could not to do so in consequence of not having received his accounts. His attorney stated that he had expected the accounts by the last overland mail, but had been disappointed; when the accounts arrive he would declare a dividend, as the money was all ready to enable him to do so, —Harkara, March 9.

MISCELLANEA.

Calcutta

ATTARY.—Mr. Samuel Palmer, who has lately been appointed the Commissioner of Attary, was on Friday last relieved from his duty as Secretary to the Board of Customs, Salt and Opium, by Mr. Torrens, his successor, and is shortly expected to proceed upon a circuit to the interior, to investigate various points in the Attary Department. A new batch of Deputy Collectors is shortly to be created for the Attary Department. There are to be three grades, namely, the 1st at 300 Rs. the 2nd at 250 Rs., and the 3rd at 150 Rs. each, per month.

KNOWN.—Mr. J. N. Vaghart, on his way from Chinsurah on the 6th instant, between the hours of nine and ten, fell over board while standing on deck, by a sudden roll of his boat, near Cosmopolis. Efforts were made to save him, but in vain.

DEATH FROM DRUNKENNESS.—A young European named John Johnstone, was on the 7th instant, found drowned in the well of a house in Coolcotoollah, into which he had fallen in a state of drunkenness.

MURDER.—Reports have been published, during the month, of five children being murdered for the sake of some silver ornaments that were on their persons and of one man having killed his brother through jealousy, and of another having assassinated his sweet heart, because she would not become his mistress.

CONSTRUCTING.—The works at Dordjeling progress rapidly. The whole of the northern wing, table d'hôte, and part of the southern wing of the hotel, armed in, the floors of the western rooms of the former wing, and the whole of this building, and the private residences, are in a state of great forwardness. The road too, cut in several places in the solid rock, has been finished from Pookbarren to Kuteangary.

CHANGES IN THE GOVERNMENT.—Mr. Robertson took charge of his office, as Lieutenant Governor of the North Western Provinces, at Allahabad, on the 4th instant, and Mr. Henry Shoby Prinscep was on the 11th instant, sworn in as Third Ordinary Member of Council, under the usual salute from the ramparts of Fort William.

THE STEAMER.—The number of letters taken by the Steamer on the 29th of February, was so large as 17,069 an evident proof of the increasing advantage in which is taken of the overland Communication between this country and England.

IRON STEAMERS.—The Court of Directors have ordered the shipment to this port, of six more iron steamers similar in size and power to those at present out here, for the navigation of the river to Allahabad. Two of the vessels with their machinery, &c., complete, have already arrived, and are being put together as speedily as possible at Kidderpore—the remainder are also shortly expected.

THE GAILLARDON.—The Gaillardon, is reported to be on shore nineteen miles to the southward of False Point, and in want of assistance.

After several efforts to get off, the Gaillardon in one of which two boats were destroyed, and Mr. Hall of the pilot service lost his life in attempting to save some of her cargo, all hopes have now been given up of ever getting her afloat, and the captain and the remainder of her crew, were coming up in the Pilot despatch vessel.

The hull of the Gaillardon was, on the 12th instant sold by Messrs. Jenkins, Low and Co., for the sum of thirteen hundred rupees.

There was no other ship reported. So little is known of the Government's movements and operations in regard to the Chinese Expedition, that any little information with reference to it must be acceptable. We therefore subjoin the names of the vessels which have been chartered for a period of three months certain, and are being daily despatched to the China Seas, with others, &c. to be added to the following number, two vessels, the John Adam and Rutledge Cowages, have already been sent off. The names of the vessels yet to go are:—The Atalvia, Captain Clarke; the Broomer, Captain Gillem, the Distance, Captain Egypt, the Edenburgh, Captain McDougall, the Elizabeth Anstie, Captain Lytler, the Erased, Captain Hill; the Indian Oak, Captain Rayne; the Mahomed Shaw, Captain Ovanstone, the Marion, Captain Pope, the Medusa, Captain Purdie, the Rohmanau Nacods, the Seymour, Captain Morton, and the Victoria, Captain Potter, making in all, inclusive of the two already despatched, a complement of fourteen hulls.

WILL OF THE SHIP RICHMOND.—The hull of the ship Richmond, of 700 tons new measurement, was sold on the 14th instant, at Howrah, by Messrs. Mackenzie, Lyall and Co., to a native, for the sum of 4,600 rupees. This vessel was built in America in 1835.

SANS SOUCI.—Mrs. Francis was fortunate in procuring a bumper house for her benefit; Lord Auckland and the Mirae Eden, attended by a large party, were present on the occasion, and although Naval Engagements was played for the fifth time at the Sans Souci, the audience seemed to be highly delighted with the last performance, the Government-House party, seemingly, not relishing it the least of any of the spectators. The characters in the piece, were admirably sustained, with a degree of spirit quite unprecedented and one continued roll of laughter, resounded through the theatre, almost from the raising of the curtain until it fell, the titers, we thought, considerably predominating. The part of Dennis, was performed by a real Irishman this time, and there was no mistake in the character.

The Maid and the Magpie, was rendered additionally attractive by the bow scenery, the opening and last scenes being highly admired and the prospective effect in so small an arena as the Sans Souci, was truly surprising. Martin and Annette, were really well played, and the Magpie was beautifully managed. We congratulate Mrs. Francis on her success, and wish the Sans Souci prosperity. We understand, that there is to be only one more performance at the Sans Souci this season, for the benefit of the deserving Secretary, which, sans doute, will be crowdedly attended.

J. J. DAVIS.—John James Davis, of Theatre Royal, Sydney, whilom reporter to the Englishman newspaper office, and subsequently pleader in the Court of Requests has made his bow to the Indian Public.

About a fortnight ago, he told several persons that he was going on the salt water lakes on a shooting excursion. On Day after day passed, and still he did not return. His clients waited a few days more, and yet there was no sign of him; they then began to suspect that some foul trick had been practised upon them. To be explicit, they came to the conclusion that the conveyancer had conveyed himself away. These suspicions were subsequently confirmed, when several cases that he had to conduct at the Court of Requests, when called on were one by one consumed. Three or four days ago several of his clients called at Mountain's hotel, where he resided, and ransacked his papers for their bills. We understand that the amount he collected and conveyed away is between 3 and 4,000 rupees. The poorer class of his clients, are the greatest sufferers, as they not only have lost what was actually due to them, but who the ends of their suits. It appears that Davis took passage on board of a vessel proceeding down, and we are credibly informed that a letter has been received in town from him, by a friend of his, requesting him to apologise to his clients for his sudden departure, which was unavoidable. He said that he was bound to England, and that as soon as he reached that country, which would be in six months, he would write to them, and remit the monies he had collected on their account.

MR. STEER.—Mr. D. C. Smyth has been appointed a Commissioner, for the trial of certain charges preferred against Mr. C. W. Steer, senior, of the Civil Service, formerly Commissioner of the Baulseah division. The prosecution is a Government one, and its management has been entrusted to Mr. M. A. Bignall.

FREE MASONRY.—Free masonry in Bengal, is likely to be restored shortly, to its former flourishing state. Doctor John Grant was, on the 28th instant, duly installed Provincial Grand Master, and appointed the under-mentioned brethren officers of the Grand Lodge.

MR. PATTON IN PETTICOATS.—The disorderly characters, whom Mr. Patton succeeded in capturing, by disguising himself in petticoats, have been sentenced, four to six months' imprisonment, and a fine of one hundred rupees each, in default of payment to three months' more; and three to three months' imprisonment, in the jail of the 24 Pargannas.

MORTALITY AT BARASAT.—Great mortality is caused in the town of Barasat, from cholera.

THE ORATORIOS.—A fresh opposition has been started to Mr. Linton's advertised Oratorios; but in this instance the opposing parties, have proceeded with more judgment and in better taste. They have published a pamphlet, in which they have endeavored to show, by argument, that these oratorios are very naughty things; but we don't think that they have been very successful—they won't take much by the notion.

EXAMINATION OF THE ORIENTAL SEMINARY.—The annual examination of this institution, was held at the Town Hall yesterday morning, in the presence of Sir Edward Ryan, supported by Dr. Grant and Professor D. L. Richardson, together with the Rev. Messrs. Mackey, Ewart and Bosz. There were many respectable native gentlemen also present, and among others Rajas Kalikesen and Narendro Krishna Bahadoors.

This was the tenth annual public examination of the Seminary, and the youth did really stand the test with credit to their teachers and to themselves.

The students of the first class study Milton, Shakespeare, Byron and Young; History, Blair's Rhetoric, Say's Political Economy, Paley's Moral Philosophy, Chemistry, Geometry, &c. In nearly all these branches they were questioned, and if we may judge from the satisfaction, expressed by Sir Edward Ryan, their improvement comes up to the highest expectations of every promoter of higher education. The examination occupied the best portion of the day in the courts of which several recitations were given with considerable propriety.

Baboo Gourmohan Addy, the proprietor of the Seminary, deserves the success he has attained, and he has our best wishes for its continuance and increase.

MAJOR HAWKINS.—Major Hawkins is to accompany the China expedition, in control of the commissariat, and is to have the rank of a Deputy-Commissary-General, and liberal allowances.

NEW MODES OF MAKING OATHS.—The long wished-for boon, has at last been granted by the Supreme Government to the Native inhabitants of this country, in reference to the mode of making an oath in a Court of Justice. It was heretofore the practice that the Hindoos should swear by the Ganges' water, and the Mussulmans upon their Koran, but this custom, though a long established one, was nevertheless quite repugnant to the feelings and religious persuasions of the people. Government, having attentively watched the working of the system in question, for a considerable period, has at last perceived and recognized the expediency of substituting a mode of making oaths in public Courts, to which no objection either on the score of caste, creed or conscience can be offered. "I solemnly affirm, in the presence of Almighty God, that what I shall state shall be truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth," is a mode of solemn declaration, which will exercise a more salutary influence on every mind, that has the slightest regard for truth, equity and conscience, than the mere administration of an oath through the channel of the Gunga Water or the Koran.

ON DUTY.—On duty, that Mr. Dickens, the present Equity and Ecclesiastical Registrar of the Supreme Court, signified to the Judges his intention of resigning his office. It is said that the Registrarship, upon the resignation of Mr. Dickens, will be given to Mr. H. Holroyd, who at present holds the offices of Prothonotary and Clerk of the Crown, and that Mr. Holroyd will be succeeded in his present appointment by Mr. W. H. Smoult. The Registrarship is the only office in the Court which is now paid by fees, all the rest having fixed salaries attached to them. This appointment is considered worth 6 or 8,000 rupees per annum. The salary of the Prothonotary is 3,000 per month. It is said that Mr. W. P. Grant, the Master in Equity, has declined the Registrarship.

THE INDIAN FREE SCHOOL AND BABOO NOBINCHUNDER SING.—The subscriptions for the establishment and defraying the expenditures, of the Indian Free School, have got on well. Baboo Nobinchunder Sing, in whose neighbourhood the school is to be established, has not subscribed any thing as yet; but it is said, that on the proposal being made, the Baboo had very generously offered to make a donation of a house for the use of the institution.

A NEW SCHOOL AT CHITPORE.—An English school was, about two months since, established at Chitpoore. It is called "the Union School" and has already about one hundred boys for daily attendance, divided into five classes.

THE UNION BALL.—The "Union Ball," on the night of the 9th instant, went off with great éclat, and to the entire satisfaction of the invitees and the invited, the former, including the members of the Union Club, and the latter, all Calcutta and his wife.

MAJOR WILSON.—Major Wilson of the 68th Regt. N. I., has been appointed Paymaster to the expedition proceeding to China.

CHRIST'S CHURCH.—On the 9th instant, a Hindoo convert, of the name of Rumsack Pauli, married a country woman of his, at Christ's Church, in Wellesley square. The Reverend Krishna Mohuna Banerjee, the clergyman of the church, officiated as priest in tying the conjugal gal knot. This is the first time that a marriage has been performed at Christ's Church:

DEPUTY SHERIFF.—Mr. George Henderson, has been appointed Deputy Sheriff of Calcutta, vice Balthie deceased.

MR. DAVID HARRIS.—Mr. David Harris, has been appointed to the Commission of the Court of Requests reddered vacant by the departure of Mr. Macleod.

MR. HALLIDAY.—It is said, that the Governor-General is about to appoint a Junior Secretary to the Government and that Mr. Halliday is selected for the office.

ADDITIONAL JUDICIAL OFFICERS.—On the 14th inst. that two additional Judges will be appointed in the Sudder to bring up arrears.

CIVIL SERVICE ANNUITIES.—It is said, that there is reason to expect that the nine annuities prayed for by the Civil Service, in their memorial of April, 1838, will not be granted this season, but that in lieu, sanction will be given to a contingency for the ensuing year, of the six annuities at quarter premium, to wit, at 25,000 Rs. instead of 50,000 Rs.

THE WEEKLY EXAMINER AND LITERARY REGISTER.—This paper has at last been issued, from the Commercial Advertiser Press, and promises well. The mechanical department of the double number, uttered on the 14th instant, is rather defective, but this will be amended in the succeeding numbers.

CHOLERA.—That dreadful plague, the cholera, which has been rapidly depopulating Orissa and the lower part of Bengal, for some time past, is now committing dreadful havoc in Calcutta and its neighbourhood. The number of other woe's than Hindus, that fall victims to this fearful malady, is not known; but the amount of deaths among the Hindus, must be very great, as we have observed several wreaths of the smoke of Hindu cremation, rising from each of the many burning-ghats daily.

DACOTS, &c.—This month too, the commission of several dacoities has been reported, and in one instance, a whole gang of the robbers, was captured in the neighbourhood of Dum-Dum, in attempting to rob the house of a Brahmin. In Calcutta, the "long-fingered gentry" have been very industrious. On one occasion, they managed to get under the foundation of a house in Government Place, by means of a public sewer, and, cutting a hole in the floor, took away articles of millinery, to a large amount, the property of a Miss Bennett, who has just come out to India as a milliner.

NEW DISPENSARY.—Baboo Dwarkanauth Gopta, one of the ex-students of the Medical College, in conjunction with Baboo Goury Sunkar Mitter, who is attached to the College still as a pupil, has at last opened the Dispensary, which had been contemplated by them for some time. They have just received a supply of English medicines, through Messrs. Cockerell and Co., by the Windsor, and intend charging much less for the drugs than is done by the other dispensaries in Calcutta, so as to enable the natives, whose means are limited, to obtain English medicines.

MR. BACON'S STUD.—On the 13th instant, Mr. Bacon's splendid stud was brought to the hammer, by Messrs. Hickey and Co. The manions Picaroon and Clarion were the only ones, of note, purchased, the former at rs. 3,000, the latter at 3,300. They have gone to Mr. Allright's stable. An actual bid was made for Frodo of 4,000, but those who had charge of him evidently attempted "to run him up;" this failed, and he was offered to the actual bidder, for the sum he was knocked down for, viz. 4,500. The offer was very properly refused. Corriantone was bought in for 6,000! and Samlick for 1,900!

MAIL LOST.—The Mail which left this City for Bombay on the 19th of February, was carried off from the dock surveys by robbers between Jaulnah and Karooja.

STEAM NAVIGATION.—The out and out Curtis Steam Subscribers, amount to 230 shares, out of which 63, are new, exclusive of Mr. George's donation of first call of 50 per cent., on four shares, equal to 1,000 rs.

POLICE ARRANGEMENTS.—On the 16th instant, the arrangement talked of, consequent upon the departure on leave from Calcutta, of Mr. Macleod, had settled. There are to be three divisions instead of five. First it to extend from Chitpore to Colodolish, second from Colodolish to Dhurrumtolla, and the third from Dhurrumtolla to Birjettullah. Mr. O'Hanlon is to be the Magistrate of the 1st Division; Mr. Robinson of 2d, and Mr. Blaquiere of the 3d. This arrangement is to take effect from the 23rd inst.

THE REV. W. H. PEARCE.—That much-esteemed gentleman, the Reverend W. H. Pearce, is no more. The immediate cause of his death was Cholera, by which he was attacked about 9 or 10 o'clock in the morning of Thursday the 17th, and which ended his days on earth about 9 o'clock the same evening. The community have lost, in Mr. Pearce, a most worthy and sincere Christian.

THE REV. MR. WITHERS.—Professor Withers, of Bishop's College, fractured his thigh very severely a few days since, by a fall from his horse. The Reverend gentleman is gradually recovering.

RAJA RAJNAHAI ROY.—Raja Rajnarain Roy was on the 20th instant brought up in Court, and discharged from custody, upon payment of a fine of one thousand rupees, in addition to the two months imprisonment already undergone. It is said by some parties, that Sreenauth Roy, the Editor of the Bhaskur, is actually in durance still, and mysterious stories are told of the gloomy donjon keep, of which he is supposed to be a denizen at Andool, but the general belief is; that he has been at large long ago, and that it is he and his friends who have been playing the tyrant of late.

A MARVELLOUS SURGICAL OPERATION.—Dr. O'Shaughnessy, Dr. Stewart and Hitchens, recently performed a rather difficult operation on a young lady, about seventeen years of age. She was good looking, but was unfortunately born defective, she was hare-lipped and the opening was nearly one inch long. Her parents wishing to remedy the defect, consulted an eminent professional person, who told them that the attempt would be attended with serious and perhaps fatal consequences; she would, he said, get a lock-jaw, and it was better to leave her alone. A short time after Dr. Stewart happened to see her at a seminary, where he was medical adviser, he spoke to the school mistress and said, that if he were allowed, he would remedy the defect. The lady wrote to the parents of the young lady on the subject, and they very willingly availed themselves of the offer; a day was fixed for the operation, and Dr. Stewart called at their house in company with Drs. O'Shaughnessy and Hitchens and told the parents that the operation would perhaps be attended with pain, but, nevertheless, there was no great danger, and that she would after forty-eight hours, be free from all danger.

Dr. O'Shaughnessy took the most active part, and went through the operation admirably. The young lady is now quite well, and appears quite another person.

GOVERNMENT DOCKS.—It is said, that Government purpose to extend their present Docks adjoining the Kidderpore Docking Company's premises, and to run a road from the bridge over the newly purchased ground to the cross-road from the Dock Gates to the Kidderpore Bridge—thus cutting off the angle made by the two roads at present in existence.

SILK.—The produce of cocoons is not so good as usual in the District of Baulla, and consequently the March Band of Silk is not expected to be a favourable one.

THE CHINA EXPEDITION.—It appears from General orders, that spirits will not be issued as rations to the European troops, but in lieu thereof each man will receive a compensation of 3 rupees 2 annas per mensem—the Canteen system will be established on board, but no man will be allowed to purchase a greater quantity of spirits than two drams a day.

The European Commissioned Officers are to have four months' advance of pay and allowances and the troops two months.

THE JURY LIST.—By the order of the Chief Magistrate, an analysis of the Jury List has been drawn up. According to this analysis the aggregate number of names of those serving on the Grand Jury, is one hundred and eighty, and those on the Petty Jury, seven hundred and forty-six; and the different classes of persons are as follow:

Grand Jury.—Government servants, ten; Merchants, one hundred and twenty-four; Zemindars, fifteen; Baniyas, twenty-seven, and Miscellaneous, that is, Editors, &c. four.

Petty Jury.—Government servants two hundred and eighty-one; Merchants' Clerks, one hundred and nine; Tradesmen, Mechanics, &c. one hundred and sixty; Tradesmen's Assistants, seventy-two; Native writers, one hundred and twenty-two, and Baniyas two. Making altogether, including both Grand and Petty Jurors, a total of nine hundred and twenty-six persons, who, session after session, devote a great portion of their precious time and talents, all for justice sake, on behalf of the Queen.

ASSAULT.—Three seamen, named Walsh, Whalan and Rayner, were convicted of an assault on Archibald Brown and Charles Yarnold, the Chief and Second Officers of the Windermere. Walsh was fined ten rupees, and Rayner and Whalan one hundred rupees each, and ordered to be imprisoned for two months, in default of payment.

SUICIDE.—Mr. Chopin, an assistant in the Office of the Judicial Department, committed suicide on the 24th instant, by taking laudanum. Domestic squabbles, it is said, drove him to perpetrate this rash act.

THE CAMPODIANS.—This gallant regiment embarked for China on the 24th instant, in admirable condition.

HINDU COMPOSITION, &c.—Lord Auckland has given the students of the Hindu College, a well chosen subject, on which to compose an essay. The best essay will gain a handsome prize. The subject is, Moral Courage.—The Committee of Public Instruction have just obtained from Government a very large addition to the sum hitherto devoted to the cause of education, and great changes and improvements are about to take place in many of the Colleges and Schools under their superintendence.

MAJOR GENERAL FAITHFUL.—Major-General Faithful, of the Artillery, died on the 25th instant, of a spasmodic affection.

THE MASQUERADE.—The Masquerade given to the Misses Eden on the 26th instant, was a brilliant affair.—It is small praise to say that the arrangements were super-exquisite, and it at some hundreds of very excellent people were highly delighted with the entertainment. Masquerade certainly it was not, for there were but a few straggling apologies for masks, and their owner-seemed longing to get rid of them. Fancy dresses, however, were abundant; some of them were superb, others fantastic, and the rest amusingly ridiculous.

H. M. P.'s Bear and the Boslaw. was as well acted as it could possibly have been, and more we cannot easily say for it. Grave judges and graver members of Council were in ecstasies, and the sides of the magnate of the land were shaken to very exhaustion. It would be difficult to say who played the best or who laughed most at the players.

A capital incarnation of the Grand Comprehensive made its appearance somewhat late in the evening—a moving mass of something or other like a windmill with a chimney out of it. The figure made its way in the first instance to the Precursor, but the Precursor would have nothing to say to it. We heard somebody proposing to pitch him, bodily, into the plate light out for subscriptions; but the suggestion was not acted upon, and the Comprehensive made off.

THE VOLUNTEERS.—The native populace have been crying out during the week, against the outrageous conduct of the regiment. The accounts of the plunder and ravages committed by these daring men, in Halligunge and other places, have spread throughout the town, disseminating a general panic among the native shop keepers. On Thursday morning an uncommon stir occurred in the neighbourhoods of How Bazar and Short's Bazar, in consequence of a report that two or three hundred of the volunteers were out and coming to that part of the town with the intention of a general scramble, it being the persuasion of the natives that the conduct of the sepoy has been sanctioned by Comprehensive hookum.

With this fear, every shop was closed and every door secured, while mobs of natives collected about the street in anxious expectation of every moment seeing the approach of the lawless band. It is true, the event did not justify the rumour, but had the volunteer sepoys really come, and the report proved true, what would have been the consequence? The Police force would have been inadequate to suppress the riot or capture a body of a couple of hundred rioters, and are military assistance could be obtained much mischief, and even bloodshed must have ensued.

PERSONALITIES OF THE PRESS.—During the month, the Englishman, in consequence of Mr. G. W. Johnson, the Editor of the Courier, and ex-Editor of the Englishman, having published what he, in common with many other individuals, considered to be the principles on which the Englishman is conducted, has been attacked in a most violent manner by the Editor of the Englishman, who represents Mr. Johnson to be an ignorant plagiarist. This is a rather queer statement at this time, when Mr. Stoeckeler himself exonerated Mr. Johnson from the charge of plagiarism, preferred against him by the Courier and Hurkaru, and even went so far as to state, that if there was any plagiarism committed, it rested with him, Mr. Stoeckeler, as the following brief history of the affair, copied from the columns of the Hurkaru will show. We leave Mr. Stoeckeler to reconcile the discrepancy of his two statements of the affair, as best he may.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF A LARGE PLAGIARISM.

The Englishman, in his paper of the 7th of May, inserted Mr. Johnson's long plagiarism from the Spectator. On the evening of the same day, (the 7th) the Courier exposed the plagiarism. On the 8th, (the next morning) the Englishman, in an editorial column, asserts most positively, that the supposed plagiarism was "a mistake of the compositor"—"a mistake of the printing office"—further expounds of the impossibility of such mistake as given in the Courier of the evening of that day (the 8th) and in the Hurkaru of the morning of the 9th. On the same day, after seeing the Hurkaru's editorial, to which he refers, the Editor of the Englishman, writes a letter to the Courier, in his own name, asserting that the omission of the inverted commas, and the use of editorial instead of extract type, were the printer's mistake, and that the interpolations, which made the article read like an original one, were his own, and not Mr. Johnson's. On the morning of the 10th, he alludes again to the "utterly unmentioned" charge of plagiarism, and once more on the morning of the 11th.

Thus, on the morning of the 8th day, after the charge brought against his colleague, of a gross plagiarism, he continues to relieve him of the odium, by throwing it on the Printer!

On the 23d of March 1840, nearly eleven months after the appearance of the plagiarism, and in consequence of an attack in the Courier upon the Englishman, the Editor, Mr. Johnson, is publicly reminded by the Editor of the Englishman, that he, Mr. Johnson, was by him dismissed from his employment, on account of a "stinky plagiarism!"

In the Englishman of to-day, the 27th instant, the Editor has the following note in reply to Mr. Johnson, who had asserted that the Englishman himself had cleared him of the charge:—

"Impudence.—The Englishman did not show that Mr. Johnson was innocent. The Proprietor tried to do so for the honor of the paper, and because he could not believe so contemptible an offence had really been committed by Mr. Johnson; but the evidence of the Head Printer, which it was thought proper afterwards to take, and the studied silence of Mr. Johnson; when the Harkara and Courier invited him publicly to declare his innocence of the theft, left no doubt on the Proprietor's mind, that the piracy had been deliberately committed. He then resolved on Mr. Johnson's dismissal sans retour."

How was it that the evidence of the Printer was not taken, when for five days, and longer, the Englishman threw the whole blame on him?

NEW POLICE ARRANGEMENTS.—In consequence of the departure of Mr. McMahon for England, it has been settled, not to have a person for his locum tenens, but to apportion out the business of his division between the other three Division Magistrates. Consequent on this change, Mr. Robison will come in for 200 Rs., in addition to what he at present gets. How the onus pertaining to Mr. McMahon's division, are to be farmed out, is not stated.

CALCUTTA DOCKING ASSOCIATION.—The Calcutta Docking Association declared a dividend of ten per cent., at the 25th of February.

Mofussil.

MERRUT.—The Bishop of Calcutta arrived in Meerut on Saturday the 23d and was received with the honors due to His Lordship's rank, by a salute of 17 guns.

Lieutenant Colonel Warren's Detachment, with the State Prisoner, Hajee Khan, Khakkur, embarked on board their boats, on the 27th ultimo, at Ghurmuckeesur Ghaut, and dropped down the Ganges, in progress to Chunar, on the morning of the 1st instant.

DELHI.—The following is the decision of Government on the case of Post Office Smugglers:

A. U. C. PLANDIN, Esq.
Collector Gout, customs, Agra.

Sir,—I have the honor to annex a copy of a communication received this day from the Superintendent, Post Office Department.

I am, Sir, your obedient Servant.

H. B. DALZIELL.

Agra Post Office, Feb. 28, 1840.

To THE POST MASTER, Agra:

Sir,—Adverting to the unlawful acts committed by the Custom House Officers at Delhi, in seizing the public baggage on the road, I have the honor to inform you, that Government has strictly prohibited a repetition of such proceedings, and I subjoin for your information and guidance, a copy of the orders just issued on the subject, by the Hon'ble the Lieut-Governor of the N. W. Provinces.

I have, &c.

(Signed) J. RANKEN,
Supt. P. O. Dept. N. W. P.

Camp Shahabad, Feb. 27, 1840.

Extract of a Letter from the Officiating Secretary to the Hon'ble the Lieut Governor, N. W. Provinces, to the Secretary of the Sudder Board of Revenue, in the Superintending Revenue Department, dated the 27th February, 1840.

Para. 3. The Board are requested to desire the strictest attention on the part of the Custom Officers, to the principles laid down in Mr. Officiating Secretary Davidson's letter, regarding the seizure of parcels in transit through the Post Office, the detention of the bhangles en route, being a procedure His Honor cannot approve.

True Extract.

Offg Secy to the Govt N. W. P.

SONA.—The court martial on Gunner Steel, was held on the 12th, and occupied but a couple of hours. The prisoner in his defence disclaimed all ill-feeling in selecting Lieutenant Conran as the object of the outrage he had committed, and dwelt at some length on his esteem and popularity, with which Lieut. C. was regarded by the men under his command. The offence was committed with the view of leading to the prisoner's transportation.

SUNVA.—The following is an extract of a letter from Punjab, dated 22d March. "A party of about 250 Chinese labourers, in the employ of the Assam Tea Company, in charge of three European assistants, arrived here this morning about 6 A. M. Immediately after their fleet had "luggedown," a large body of Chinamen with sticks in their hands, entered the bazar and began to attack and plunder the "Bunneahs." The Magistrate accompanied by the police force of the station was soon at the scene of action, and the Chinamen were speedily disarmed and placed on board their boats, which were ordered over to the other side of the river. Before the arrival of the Magistrate, one man who was defending his property, was murdered near the ghaut where they landed, by the Chinese, and another young man was so very much maltreated, that his life is stated to be in imminent danger. At the request of the people of the town, who had been robbed, the magistrate proceeded in person to search the boats of the Chinese, and it is said, that a considerable quantity of different kinds of property which had been plundered has been discovered in concealment in the boats. The magistrate and his assistant were employed during the whole day in searching the boats, and in enquiring into this unfortunate occurrence, which has caused considerable alarm and excitement in the neighbourhood. The result has been that about 50 of the Chinese, who were recognised as active participants in the various outrages which have been perpetrated, have been committed to jail on the charges brought against them."

Native States.

AFGHANISTAN.—Letters from the Grand Convey, destined for Afghanistan state, that it crossed the Itavee, 12 coes from Lahore, on the 19th February, in the following order:—

Drafts of Her Majesty's 13th Light Infantry.

Draft of the 1st European regiment.

The 2d regiment N. I.

Treasure, and Ammunition, about 500 camel-loads, followed by the depot Companies of native regiments in Afghanistan, and the mountain train.

The troops (about 2,000) were all in high spirits.

The number of camels proceeding with the Convey do not fall short of 2,000, and perhaps twice that number of camp followers.

Letters from Jellahabad state, that the detachment sent to Koomah and Pushoot, was suffering dreadfully from cold and want of supplies, and the camp followers were dying daily, as it has rained, and snowed, without intermission; while the North Easterly winds have been piercingly severe.

A small party guarded by 10 Affghans, was sent out by an officer with supplies, but was attacked by 60 men.

The Affghans fled immediately. One of them was killed on the spot, and one of the coolies dreadfully cut with a tulwar.

The roads are represented as infested with robbers. Capt. Fraser, 2d Light Cavalry was sent to escort ammunition and Commissariat supplies, and was afterwards joined by Captain Ponsonby of the same corps; during their march, the marauders threatened them three times, but finding our party prepared to give them a warm reception, they moved off.

It is difficult to say, when the detachment will return, but it is not expected at Jellahabad much before the end of this month.

A recent letter from Afghanistan mentions, that 20 men of the Queen's 13th Light Infantry had died, at Cabul, in the short space of seven weeks—while but seven men of the Company's European Regiment at Jellahabad, had died during a period of four months.

Dost Mohammed and his son, who had been residing under surveillance at Bokhara, had, in consequence of an attempt to escape, been seized and made close prisoners by the King, who is disposed to treat with our Government for the surrender of his prisoner. Of this disposition our Government will, of course, lose no time in taking advantage, for with the Ex-King of Cabool at large, the object of their Affghan Expedition must to a great extent be incomplete and unsatisfactory. This change of feeling on the part of the King of Bokhara towards our Government, is ascribed to the Russian movement on Khiva, and their very probable subsequent advance to Bokhara, where a number of Russians are held in slavery. The King is very apprehensive of their approach, and has, it appears, opened negotiations with us. Lieutenant Abbott of the Artillery, is already on his way to Bokhara to put the ordnance and defences of that city in a serviceable state. This is "a check" to the last Russian move.

Shah Sonjah has offered a defection in the person of Sadut Ally, who had fled to join the standard of a Khyber Chief. Captain Conolly immediately gave chase, but Sadut having had six hours start, it is not supposed the Captain will come up with him. The Shah was actively raising fresh troops, for the defence of his new king.

A letter from Bamean, dated February 8th, mentions, that Dhost Mahomed, as has already been stated, met with something very different from the hospitable reception, which he expected at the Court of Bokhara. His sons attempted to escape, but were brought back, and all his followers have been sent to Kooloom. They are, it is said, in a miserable condition for want of the common means of support. Jubber-Khan is reported to be about to make overtures to the British on behalf of his brother. This is somewhat late in the day. The following Extract relating to the climate of the confines of Afghanistan, will be interesting to the majority of our readers.

"We have had very inclement weather lately; since the 13th ultimo, the valley has been under snow, and between the 18th and 5th no dawks came in—the hills being blocked up. Lately the thermometer, a little after sunrise, has stood at ten degrees below zero, and that too not outside, but after being brought in-door for exhibition. We have been here four months, and, at a moderate calculation, have 6 more before us; three of them winter or cold—making 7 months of winter—a terrible proportion out of the twelve. This is what people are pleased to call, a good climate; it is a very fine climate—rather too fine, I think—indeed so fine, that the poor Hindustanees die off tolerably fast. A man of the infantry was frozen to death the other day on the way out to Abrobat. He complained of cold and sat down by the road side; when his absence was remarked a party was sent back to look for him and he was found a rigid corpse! The cold is certainly intense. I never felt any thing like it in England. It freezes throughout the 24 hours in our rooms—yet we have often fine sunny days, a bright sun but a biting air. Then the reflection and glare from the sun and snow are almost insufferable. We have spirits—(principally Cabul spirits)—to help us out—and in the absence of any thing better they are acceptable—we are looking forward with no little anxiety. The Sheik Ali Hazareah road, which leads from Cabul to this by way of Shiber is said never to be blocked up by snow. Sir A. Burnes sent three cosais by this road, but we have seen nothing of them, although it is more than a fortnight since they left Cabul. I fear they have been destroyed—vastly unpleasant his, as the packets contain nine days, Calcutta. Dawk. All idea of a Turanian campaign seems to be vanishing—even the politicals are almost silent about it."

HERAT.—A letter from Herat, dated 14th January, mentions, that the last report that had reached them regarding the movement of the Russians on Khiva, is, but the advancing force, not more than six thousand strong, was still forty five or fifty marches from Khiva, and that the Cholera had broken out with violence in the Russian Camp. It is believed there, that the Russians will not reach Khiva this year. There is an Envoy from Khiva at present in Herat, and he seems to be confident of the truth of the above.

The inhabitants of Herat, who had fled about the time of the late siege, are returning, and trade is reviving. Confidence is somewhat restored; and it is again under cultivation in the valley, and bazars crowded, so that all looks well.

The Grand Convoy crossed the Jhelum on the 6th instant, but in consequence of the heavy rains, which had fallen a day or so before, were obliged to go much higher up than usual to obtain a fording place, every one, however, got over safely and the whole body had marched for Rhotas.

It is rumoured that the Khyburries are assembling in great numbers and making preparations for a foray upon the treasure; and so much has this rumour gained ground that it is feared the 27th and 48th, under command of General Sale, have been ordered to move down to Peshawar to assist in bringing up the treasure. It is not unlikely that they will make attempts upon the party until they are aware of its strength.

The Convoy is in excellent health and spirits, and the climate and scenery are described in rapturous terms by some of our friends.

LAHORE.—Little news can be got from the Punjab, for the greatest secrecy is preserved; but it is confidently reported, that the Court of Lahore has thrown every obstacle in its power to the entry of the Grand Convoy for Afghanistan into that country; and it was with no little difficulty that Mr. Clerk carried his point. The growing jealousy evinced by the sirdars more than the ruler himself, will no doubt soon break out, especially as the flame is fanned by the heir to the throne, who burns with anxiety to measure the strength of his nation with the British arms. As the position of the Sikhs must in a short time, to all appearances assume that so lately occupied by Dost Mahomed with much greater power of inflicting injury to the British interests, few doubts can be entertained that a campaign in the Punjab must be the result, and the complete annihilation of all imperial states on our North Western frontier the consequence.

RAJPOOTANA.—A private letter from Jhansi, dated 11th March, states, "On the 8th instant, the Bundel and Legion marched from this at the request of the Governor-General's Agent, to attack a strong body of Phakoor, who had taken up their position in a fort, about 25 miles from this, called Jingee. Yesterday morning, the Legion, commanded by Capt Wm. F. Featoun, came up with the enemy, who had taken up in entrenched position outside the fort, and about sun an action began, the enemy suffering severely, but carrying along with them their dead and wounded. The Legion had six sepoy killed and 23 severely wounded, and a gun corporal wounded. The enemy's fort is found to be too strong for the six-pounders attached to the Legion, consequently the Legion is encamped out of short distance, till heavier guns come from Sipree, when I have no doubt the Legion will give them a lesson a lesson they will not forget. Young as this corps is, officers and men behaved yesterday in a manner that would have done credit to any European corps. The steady coolness with which they faced the enemy's heavy fire, before they drove them from the heights, is beyond all praise. Capt. Watson has much reason to be proud of the officers and men under his command. Lieut. Warrepper, the officer with the advanced guard, had his horse severely wounded at the commencement of the action."

OF A LION.—A letter from Gwalior, dated the 13th inst., reports the following catastrophe. A sepoy of Lieut. Snook's company, of the 23d Native Infantry, yesterday wounded in a dreadful manner, his Subadar and a sepoy. As usual in such matters, a lady was in the case—who stood in the relation of wife, or in that which the ties are of Cupid not Hymen,—to the assaulter, whose nephew—the wounded sepoy—was the successful rival of his uncle, in his aunt's affections. The Subadar was wounded in interposing between the uncle and his darling nephew, and would have been killed, but for the timely assistance of another sepoy, who possessed himself of the assaulter's tulwar, after he had inflicted three wounds on the Subadar—one on the head, a very severe one.

SCINDS.—The following interesting items are the latest from Scinde.

The Navigation of the Indus is proceeding in a very successful manner, and it gives us great pleasure to be able to state that the Snake steamer of only 10 horse power, made her way from Sukkur to Char Char opposite Nutenkote, a distance (according to Burnes) of 170 miles, in 7½ days. The Comet, a fine boat of 60 horse power, and drawing two and a half feet water was to follow from Sukkur in a few days from the departure of the Snake, and it was expected she would reach Ferozepore in 21 days. The full depots had hitherto answered famously, and Mr. Hall of the Indian Navy, commanding the Snake, states that he encountered no difficulty in his passage to Char Char.

Hojar Khan Dookme, Dirja Khan Fakrannee, Beloonuck Boogtee and all the other noted plundering chiefs are safely in custody in Sukkur Fort. We are given to understand that Mr. Bell, to whom Government owe much for his indefatigable efforts in their cause, is using every exertion to establish an annual fair at Sukkur, and his efforts are likely to be attended with success; in fact, the public will have to thank Mr. Bell for numerous other arrangements about to be entered into for the security and advantage of British and Indian Commerce, and the treaty now ratified with the Ameers of Scinde (extracts from which we annex) affords assurance of the great advantages Western and Upper India will now reap so long as a proper selection of Political Officers is made.

Brigadier Stevenson has superseded Brigadier Gordon as commandant in Upper Scinde, and had gone upon a tour to his outposts of Bagh, Shereef, Phyrogee, &c. &c.

Lieutenant Baker, to whom we alluded in one of our numbers last, we are told, finished his line of levels along the Sutlege, with a view to canals being excavated for the irrigation of the neighbouring country.

We have but little news from Jellalabad, but a letter just received to the 29th February mentions the probability of the Shah returning to Cabul about the middle of march. Captain Macgregor with a part of the Shah's 3d Infantry still remained at Kunso. The report of the 37th and 48th N I being ordered to leave Jellalabad for Peshawar to escort the Convoy through the pass is confirmed.

Bikaner.—A party of twenty Bedawuts, attacked a village of Bikaner on the Bhaddi Frontier, and after plundering it of every thing they could lay their hands upon, made off. We are sorry to learn that the Northern portion of the Bikaner territory is infested with these villains, rendering that part of the country quite unsafe for travellers.

Bombay.

LORD JOHN KEANE.—Lord John Keane arrived at Bombay on the 25th of Feby.; afterwards in the H. C. brig Palmerston. His Lordship is in excellent health.

ACTION FOR AN ASSAULT.—In the Supreme Court on the 24th of February, a trial, of considerable interest to the Parsee community, was brought to a conclusion. The plaintiff was the Editor of the Chabook, Nowrajee Dabhojee, and the defendants, Cowasjee Burjorjee, and others. It was an action for an assault, alleged to have arisen out of a strong feeling entertained against the plaintiff on account of his writings; and for the defence it was contended that the Plaintiff was quarrelsome, and had originated the dispute which gave rise to the buffeting match, and that having got the worst, he began the action. The decision of the Court was a verdict for the Plaintiff, with one hundred rupees damages.

IMPROVEMENT OF THE ROAD BETWEEN AGRA AND BOMBAY.—The improvement of the road between Agra and Bombay, has been at length determined on, and they are about to commence forthwith upon the most difficult parts in the line. The contemplated improvements, however, will be very partial, and the expenditure limited to a very moderate sum.

PRINCE HYDER KHAN.—Prince Hyder Khan, second son of Dost Mahomed, taken prisoner at Ghuznee, arrived at Bombay on the 25th of February, in the H. C. brig Palmerston, and is now under charge of the Town Major. His allowance is said to be 1,000 rupees per mensem, besides a house, equipage, &c. The surveillance exercised towards him, is not to be at all rigorous.

NAVIGATION OF THE INDUS.—The following are the articles agreed to, between the British Government and the Ameers of Scinde, for the navigation of the Indus.

ARTICLE 11th.—No toll will be levied on trading boats passing up or down the river Indus, from the Sea to the Northernmost point of that Stream, within the Territories of the Ameers of Hyderabad.

ARTICLE 12th.—But any merchandize landed from such boats on their passage up or down the river and sold, shall be subject to the usual Duties of the country, provided always, that Goods sold in a British Camp and Cantonment, shall be exempt from the payment of duty.

ARTICLE 13th.—Goods of all kinds may be brought by Merchants and others to the mouths of the Indus (Ghorabaree) at the proper season, and kept there at the pleasure of the Owners, till the best period of the year for sending them up the River; but should any Merchant land and sell any part of his Merchandize, either at Ghorabaree or any where else, (except at the British Cantonment,) such Merchant shall pay the usual Duties on them.

SUBSCRIPTION FOR MRS. WIFFEN.—The subscription at Bombay, for the relief of Mrs. Wiffen, amounts now to 3,000 rupees.

We remark thus, at the same time we do not vouch that something political may not be at the bottom of it particularly as Col. Duhamel, late Russian Consul General in Egypt, is now chief adviser, or rather Russia's minister to the Shah of Persia.

MURDERERS OF CAPT. WHIFFEN—It is said, that two of the Coiviera—identical partners who committed the murder—have been apprehended and are now on their way to Bombay. A considerable portion of a bale of valuable silk piece goods, part of the cargo plundered has also been recovered, which will be a piece of acceptable news to the owner, a respectable Jew merchant.

Burmah,

MERQUI COAL MINES—It is in contemplation to work the Merqui coals mines more effectively than it was at first intended, and every exertion is to be made to obtain a considerable supply before the rains fully set in. Lieut. Hutchinson, to whom the operations have been entrusted, has already made much progress in sinking shafts and laying a tram-road from the mine to the bank of Tenasserim river, a distance of about 1,200 yards only, and when supplied with more effective means, he will be enabled to meet all demands made on him.

RUINS OF ALAPPA.—The banks of the Salween river continue less subject to the depredations of the band of robbers congregated on the Burmese side than we last reported.

COURT MARTIAL.—A General Court-Martial, is about to be convened at Bombay, for the trial of an Officer of the Indian Navy, on charges connected with the late fire in the Steamer Atalanta.

IRON STEAMER.—An iron steamer was launched on the 21st of February.

ARABIAN.—Letters from Arabian state, that the Burmese frontier in the neighbourhood of Aeng pass was still in a state to require the constant attention and watchfulness of our Commissioner. The commandant of the Arabian local corps had been called upon to state what assistance he could afford at a brief notice, and there was every expectation, that a slight demonstration would become necessary to drive the encroachers within proper boundaries.

Singapore,

Singapore papers received during the week, state, that the expected landing at Singapore, of the troops composing the Chinese expedition, had caused the denizens of that not over-stocked little island much anxiety, as something tantamount to a famine was apprehended there, from the unusual demand that would be made on the stock of provisions in the island, on the arrival of the soldiery. We would not be surprised to hear of prices something like what prevailed in Burmah during the war there—three rupees for a fowl, and a rupee for a couple of fresh eggs, &c.

China,

Singapore papers to the 6th of February, have been received, which give news from China up to the 15th of January, but nothing of importance has occurred in the celestial Empire. The introduction of British goods, on American and other vessels, had been seriously prevented, the Chinese authorities had promised to release Mr. Gribble the 5th of January, and the Voltage had proceeded to the Bogue, with a view of blockading the port in the event of China detaining him a day beyond the time named for his emancipation. Four Chinese junks had arrived at Singapore, from different parts of the coast of China, the men on some of which state, that every thing was quiet in China, that the opium prohibitions were rigidly enforced.

It appears from accounts subsequently in a Singapore paper received during the week, that Mr. Gribble had been liberated by the Chinese, and that he had, after his liberation, asked permission of Captain Elliott, to remain in Canton, for the purpose of carrying on business there; but his request had been peremptorily refused. The Hyacinth had entered the inner harbour of Macao, in consequence of the arrival there of Chinese troops, under the new Intendant of Macao, with a view of surrounding and capturing all the English residents. The Hyacinth took up a position which enabled her to command the Mandarin's quarters, and Intendant Fie, thereupon, marched his troops off at double quick, his march being quickened by the assurance of the Portuguese authorities, that if the Chinese proceeded any further in their intended operations the English would take Macao from both them and the Portuguese.

A private letter from Macao gives the following:—Our latest news from China is, that most of the English are living at Macao, which they will not again quit, and if force be attempted, they will repel it as well as they can. The Hyacinth was in the Tyne, whither she had gone in consequence of the arrival of Chinese troops (in Macao we believe). In Canton, dollars which had been taken there by American ships, had been seized under some idle pretext, and deposited in the Consol House. The Cambridge had been bought by the Chinese, and two Danish ships seized and confiscated, and it was understood they were intended for Chinese men-of-war. Mr. Gribble was released, and had arrived on board the Voltage on the 26th of February. We have seen a letter dated Canton 25th February, and then the American ships were taking tea down for some British ships. There is a report of the arrival of the Arctik, with despatches to Capt. Elliott, but we cannot trace it to any authentic source.

EGYPT.

The following summary of news from Egypt, is borrowed from the Herkura.

Jan'y 31st.—There are 2 or 3 subsidiary cases of plagues to be heard of occasionally, but nothing to give rise to any extra precaution.

Feb. 4th.—The French steamer due this day arrived, the only news she brought was an order of the Sultan's deposing the Captain Pasha of the command of the Turkish fleet now in this harbour. His successor is Mahil Pasha, uncle to the pre-ent and brother in law to the late Sultan, who performs his newly appointed duty by deputy in the person of Mustapha Pasha, formerly second in command. Mahomet Ali has made no objection to the new appointment. The late Captain Pasha is now a simple individual out of command and without funds. We hope for the sake of subordination he may never hold another post of confidence, his treachery being of so disgusting a nature as to deprive him of consideration from any quarter.

13th.—Egypt, as we stated in our last, is aimed at all points and is anxiously awaiting the ultimatum of the five powers. A little time, perhaps on next month's letter, may communicate their decision, on which decision hinges the future peaceful or warlike attitude of Mahomet Ali.

The corn trade, which for the last ten years had mostly ceased in Egypt, has again revived, and corn is now shipping in quantities to all the Ports of the Mediterranean. Sufficient vessels cannot be had to ship the great quantity now on hand, and which is now in great demand in the different European markets. The cause of the sudden revival of this branch of trade is owing to the decline in the prices of cotton, and consequently what was again shown in many places in lieu of it, which will account for the present large supply of corn from Egypt.

An Envoy from the Persian Court delivered his credentials to "Mahomet Ali," accompanied by a costly present—a magnificent and well chosen one. We do not believe this Envoy has any Political Mission in view, as Persia and Egypt being both Mahomedan countries, this presents and a kind of courtesy of this nature occasionally take place.

MEMORIAL OF THE BOMBAY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

We have been favored with a copy of the published Memorial of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, to be transmitted by this day's mail to the Honorable the Court of Directors and the Board of Control to the COURT OF DIRECTORS OF THE HONORABLE EAST INDIA COMPANY.

The Memorial of the Chamber of Commerce of Bombay.

Respectfully Sheweth, That presented as your Honorable Court is aware, among other objects, to promote and protect the general trade of the Presidency, your Memorialists feel it their duty to bring to the notice of your Honorable Court, the very serious injury done in respect of that commerce by the Proceedings of the Government of India in regard to the Bank of Bombay.

That your Honorable Board must be aware, that in the increased and fast increasing trade of this Presidency, the greatest inconvenience has long been felt from the heavy monetary transactions of the port being restricted to a silver coinage of the small value of one rupee or two shillings sterling, as such a system necessarily entails great loss of time as well as risk, in the collection, shrinkage, custody and transport of large sums of money.

That of eighteen European Mercantile firms here, three only were opposed to the establishment of a Bank, and these solely, it is believed, under a natural apprehension of their own particular business suffering by its institution, for even these firms by their application for an issue of Treasury notes, admitted the evils which arose from the existing system.

That of a vast body of Native Merchants, Bankers and large Capitalists, none were opposed to the institution of the Bank, excepting three or four, whose transactions were intimately connected with, and whose views were naturally influenced by the European Houses last referred to.

That so strong however was the general conviction of the advantages, say, the necessity of a Bank in Bombay, that in three days from the first announcement of the proposal the whole original capital fixed at 30 lacs or £300,000 was subscribed for, and when, to satisfy the great and still unabated demand for shares, the local Government made it a condition of incorporation by charter, that the capital should be increased to 50 lacs, this large additional capital of 20 lacs was also subscribed for within 10 days.

That an institution thus favorably received, and by this reception proved to be so much needed, and to promise so many benefits, it was confidently expected, would at once have been established; and its success in every way promoted by those entrusted with the Government and welfare of this country; but your Honorable Court, though highly approving of the institution, as is evident by the subsequent concession of the charter, was induced by circumstances which are out within the knowledge of your memorialists, to delay granting this charter for eighteen months, during which prolonged period of suspense, the greatest anxiety was suffered by the proprietors, a considerable monthly expence kept up for which there was no return, and not only so much valuable time lost at an important crisis for banking operations, but by the doubts engendered by this delay, the confidence in the undertaking became shaken among the Native capitalists, and its future utility thus affected at the outset.

That during this period, in a country subject to constant fluctuations in Society from death, and return to Europe, so numerous a body of proprietors could not but undergo some changes, and the arrangements, consequent upon these changes among themselves, the proprietors considered they had the right to make at their public meetings, duly advertised and formally convened, at which every original proprietor had the opportunity of attending either in person or by attorney, and the proceedings of which were regularly published in the different newspapers.

That this right, however, has been denied them, and though your Honorable Court, in finally according a charter, declared it to be granted to "the proprietor," meaning, evidently a body already existing, yet by a most strange, and to your Memorialists, unaccountable, mode of reasoning, the Calcutta Government declared the charter thus granted was granted to a body which had no existence, but was yet to be created at its own will and pleasure; all the shares of the Bank, to obtain the establishment of which it had cost the proprietors so much, were accordingly ordered to be sold by public auction for the benefit of the Government, which announced the extraordinary intention of thus levying (according to its own calculation) the sum of 14 lacs of rupees, or £1,400,000 as a fee upon the act of incorporation.

That on the appeal of the proprietors to the Right Honorable the Governor-General, the latter authority, as appears from the published documents, refused his assent to this act of wholesale spoliation, and referred the subject home, on which reference your Honorable Court, seeing the manifest injustice contemplated, lost not a post in peremptorily directing the Government of India, to abandon the project of putting up the charter for public sale, and grant it at once to the already existing proprietors.

That though no official Copy of the Court's orders have been published—there is a general belief entertained here, that your Honorable Court intended the body of proprietors, as regulated among themselves and as existing at the date of appeal and reference; the Government of India, however, interpreted your Honorable Court's order to be in favor of the proprietors precisely and rigidly, without the alteration of a single name or share according to the letter of the original list, which went in with the application for the charter, refusing to acknowledge any of the subsequent proceedings and resolutions of the proprietors among themselves, owing to which the proprietary list had been partially modified.

That worn out with vexatious opposition from a quarter so powerful, and influenced by their anxiety to see the Bank at length established, almost on any terms, the proprietors yielded in despair their right on this point, praying only, as the condition of such abandonment, for the immediate opening of the Bank.

That regardless of this prayer, or of the suffering already incurred, the Government of India delayed for eight months more, the first step towards its establishment, and only on the 2nd December last, published the draft of an act with the names of the proprietors and fixed the payment of the whole capital of 50 lacs by the 29th of February on penalty of absolute forfeiture of the shares.

That your Honorable Court must be aware of the immense amount of capital locked up in opium and cotton in China, and in unsaleable stocks of opium in India; that the returns of silver from China are wholly stopped by the interruption of the trade, and the recently oppressed state of the Joudpore territory (in which is situated Paluee, the great mart for British imports for central Asia) has produced similar results in that quarter, while the operations in Afghanistan have caused a considerable drain of the currency in that direction. Your Honorable Court need not be informed that the withdrawal of so large a stream of capital from the circulation of the Presidency, must necessarily cause great distress, and that the collecting the means of paying in so short a time to the sum as 47 lacs of rupees or $470,000 could not be a matter of difficulty.

That to provide funds for paying up the large capital in time, heavy sacrifices have been made. Company paper has been disposed of at a loss of 5 per cent., and as much as 2 to 3 per cent has been sacrificed in exchange, while all the profits arising from the use of the money in discount transactions, have been necessarily abandoned—yet no sooner was the greater part of the capital lodged in the Treasury, than the Government of India again changed their determination. Though this authority had declined to allow the Bank Committee to settle disputed claims and refused to entertain any of the claims suggested by them—though it had declared and published the names of the shareholders to whom alone the charter was to be given and made the immediate payment of the capital necessary under pain of forfeiture, it has now once more stopped all proceedings in consequence of an appeal from certain parties against the claims of which very parties (when advocated by the Committee) it had already recently decided.

That in consequence of this last most inconsistent interference, it is doubtful if the Bank can now be opened on the 1st March, and should it not, the immediate payment of the capital was unnecessary; but in the absence of all notification on the part of Government, modifying the penalty of forfeiture in case of non-payment by 20th February, as declared in the Draft Act, published, and test by a sudden act of the Supreme Government, such penalty should be enforced, even though the opening of the Bank be delayed beyond the prescribed day, and the proprietors and their Agents are still compelled to pay the money into the Treasury, or to hold it ready and unemployed in their Offices.

That the withdrawal from the circulation of the money now thus paid or kept ready to be paid into the Treasury, and in both instances equally useless to the owners, increases the tightness in the money market now injuriously affecting commerce, and depressing the value of every article in trade.

That Government Bills, having but a short time to run, can in the present state of the money market, be sold at 8 and 9 per cent. per annum, and parties having money in their hands are divided and perplexed between their unwillingness needlessly to neglect such a favorable opportunity of using it, and the danger on the other hand of forfeiting their shares.

That while the general trade of the place is thus suffering from this unnecessary contraction of the money market to such an extent, that British imports are selling for half their ordinary price, a general mistrust in the Government is also beginning to be felt, which cannot but be detrimental to the prosperity of this Presidency; and it should deter parties from engaging in public speculations depending for success on the good faith of Government.

That the injury to the Bank itself is a considerable one, especially being lost for the probable employment of the capital in speculations, and in fact such an aggregate of public and private loss and loss of property is now suffered, that your Honorable Court, in behalf of the community, should feel it imperative duty to direct the Government to alter the charter, and the most speedy interference in the property of every shareholder.

That it appears in your Honorable Court that the Council of India have overruled their power, and the orders of your Honorable Court, in the matter of the charter, and that they have taken the property of the shareholders, while the former retain their rights to their estates, such property, and demand remedies regarding it, which being purely the province of Judicial Courts, which neither the Government of India nor the Legislative Councils are.

That similar questions might again arise in the advancing progress of this country, and it becomes of the utmost importance to its welfare and prosperity, that the powers of the Government to modify or alter the rights of proprietors, when constituting Charters, be strictly defined.

That the interference in property which has taken place, is a disturbing place in other countries, causing in a great many instances to the exertions and capital of public and incorporated companies; and much might be done in India by such associations if not arrested in their efforts by vexatious and unjust interference with the right of the individual shareholders.

That your Memorialists confidently rely on the interest which your Honorable Court feels in the welfare of this country, and all that affects the prosperity of its inhabitants, for the speedy application of a remedy to the injuries complained of by issuing such instructions as will at once put an end to such vexatious, undignified, and oppressive proceedings on the part of the Government of India, and prevent it in future from such vexatious dealing with the most serious interests of this Presidency.

Wherefore your Memorialists respectfully pray, that your Honorable Court, taking the above premises into your consideration, will be pleased to issue such orders as may remedy the evils now complained of, and by strictly defining for public information the powers of the Supreme Government and Legislative Councils in such matters, prevent their future recurrence.

ADDRESS TO LORD KEANE.

TO LIEUTENANT-GENERAL THE RIGHT HON'BLE LORD KEANE, G. C. B. AND G. C. H. &c. &c. &c.

"MY LORD,—We esteem it a high privilege, in being permitted to address you, on the present occasion. You have returned to Bombay, crowned with victory, and honored with the marked approbation of our august Sovereign, and must permit us, your Native friends, to add our most sincere congratulations to those, you have received, and are receiving from all classes of people.

John saying farewell to his mother, who was truly a devoted and faithful friend, and to his dear wife, full of parental kindness and affection, and to his dear friends and relatives long loved and valued, and to his dear friends and neighbors that have been witnesses of his life.

"With great respect, and most affectionate remembrance we have the honor to subscribe ourselves, Sir, Yours your Lordship most faithful and obedient servant.

TO, NOWROOZ JAMSHIDE, BLO. FRANKLIN COWARDEN
ESQ. AND THE OTHER GENTLEMEN, CC. & CO. LTD.

"GENTLEMEN.—I have to thank you exceedingly for this visit, it is a flattering pledge of the good opinion which I am proud to possess of the Native Causemen of the Province of Bombay—in the circle of whom I have many friends.

" During my interview with the said, Elmaghribi, a deep interest in the well-being and welfare of the Native Communities, and its expression in acknowledging freely and candidly that the interest was increased and being much appreciated, by my compliments, that your place was credible and useful, and that your character and conduct collectively and individually, entitled and gained for you the respect and support of the Government and the friendship of the British authorities to the number of whom I am elevated, and I came with great truth assure you, that it ever will be source of real gratification to me, to hear of the prosperity of the Native Communities, whom I now address, and to be considered in the number of your best friends.

Esplanade, March 22d, 1840.

[Bombay Courier, March 28.]

The Army of Bombay—from which Presidency Lord Keane this-day takes his departure will feel pleasure in reading the address to them of their late Commander-in-Chief in which he says "farewell."

It is published, as follows, in the General Order of Residency:

BY THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.

Boston, 31st March, 1840.

Lord Mountbatten, the Thomas McMahon, has great pleasure in presenting to the Army the following address from the Right Honourable Lord Keane, G. C. B. on the occasion of His Lordship's departure from India.

By Order of the Excellency, the Commander-in-Chief, (Signed) STANFORD BOWELL, Lieut.-Col.

Adj. Gen. of the Army.

Bombay, 29th March, 1840.

General Lord Kenna, being about to take leave for home, and the circumstance of his having relinquished the command of the army of the Madras at the period of the arrival at Bombay of his successor, Lieutenant-General Sir Thomas McMahon, K.C.B., now Commander-in-Chief, His Lordship requested the services of His Excellency to accept of the position of acting with the Bombay Army, which he has had the honor to command for nearly six years. Lieutenant-General McMahon has most readily acceded to Lord Keane, during his command, having visited all parts of the Presidency, with the exception of two of the other divisions, had had the opportunity of seeing and becoming acquainted with the whole of the Bombay Army, and he is happy to say, that the more he saw of them the more he had occasion to admire their good qualities as soldiers, who are renowned throughout in quarters, and in conversation, for their discipline, or the alacrity with which they perform all duties; and he is confident, that to that part of the Bombay Army, which served under his own immediate eye in the field during the late campaign in Afghanistan, who are inferior to no other, but equal to the soldiers already mentioned, combined with their those cheerful and good humour under every privation to which they were subject, and which may not, few, and His Lordship has been convinced that his part of the Bombay army, which he had the good fortune to share in that Campaign, would have acted in a like creditable manner had they been so.

Lord Keane requests the General officers, the officers of the several departments and Staff officers generally, to accept his warm thanks for the support they have afforded him during his command. He also wishes to thank Commanding officers and all other officers of regiments, for their correct discharge of their duties, but to call their attention to himself personally whenever he has been, and he cannot forbear mentioning that he has derived peculiar gratification from witnessing the good feeling on which the different regiments conducted their regimental Messes, an institution proved by experience to be highly conducive not only to comfort, harmony and good feelings, in a regiment, but also to discipline.

In saying farewell to the Bombay army, he here to assure the officers and soldiers that he will feel a deep interest in their welfare throughout his after life, and that he will reflect with pride and satisfaction on the period he has passed among them.—Bombay Courier, March 31.

THE SANS SOUCI.

THE SECRETARY'S BENEFIT, — APRIL 6, 1840.

The brilliant career of the little Sans Souci is drawing to a brilliant close. The performance on Friday night, was, or at least was understood to be, the penultimate one. It was for the benefit of that most deserving individual, the Secretary, and if every man, woman or child was worthy of "a bumper," he must assuredly was. And he had in truth a very good house, though it was not quite full. Lord Alton and the Misses Eden did not come, and it is thought that those who were absent shall present them with addresses of condolence on the untoward engagement event, or occurrence which robbed them of a society a cachination as ever exercising their aristocratic muscles.

The pieces represented on the occasion, were the farces of THE RINGDOVE and THE PARTICULAR DESIRE. THE RINGDOVE. The first is one of those effective little pieces manufactured expressly for Madams Vestris and her compagnie dramatique, and several of which have been so successfully pressed into the service of Mrs. Leach and her little band. It would hardly be possible to cram into a piece in one act and one scene, more fun than there is in this trifling little farce of THE RINGDOVE. It shows how Sir Harry Ringdove, an old gentleman after the Secretary's own heart, has in his old age determined to espouse a demure and apparently most taciturn damsel (Verdita, Mrs. Leach) for whom this most eligible match has been obtained by the earnest endeavours of her aunt Miss Longstock, whose interminable "few words" amply make up for the seeming lack of conversational power in her niece. The old gentleman has a nephew Harry Ringdove, of whom he is very fond, and to whom he fears this matrimonial alliance of his rich old uncle will be a very severe blow. He fears in fact, that if this nephew comes to hear of the intended match, he will use his utmost exertions to prevent it. The nephew is in London, and with the intention of keeping him there till all is over, the uncle sends him a handsome remittance, part of which the affectionate nephew uses in conveying him to his uncle's seat. While there, his suspicions are awakened by sundry signs and tokens; he becomes inconsequently inquisitive; the old gentleman attempts by stratagem to get rid of him, but the young one is too wide awake; he pretends to start for London but lingers about the house, pumps out of the Irish servant Shelley (named for companions "odorous" and otherwise) that Sir Harry is going to be married; falls in with Miss Longstock whom he mistakes for his uncle's intended, and by whom the mistake is kept up. The youth approves of the old man's choice, and is glad that matters are no worse. Presently, however, he stumbles upon the real lady, who, it is hardly necessary to say, is his own beloved. A counter plot is formed through the agency of Mr. Mooney, who from the several parties receives no less than one hundred pounds sterling for services rendered, in forwarding their various designs and wishes. A few minutes before six, the hour appointed for the ceremony, the old gentleman receives a letter from his nephew on his road to London, and containing alarming hints against the bride elect. Sir Henry hastens to the place appointed by his nephew as the scene of a further disclosure. There he finds another note telling him that, hastening to fulfil his important mission to London, Harry has gone forward, and that his intended is another man's wife. This is, in fact, true, for at the time Sir Henry reads the letter, the youngman have been married; the bridegroom having borrowed his uncle's dress and appearance for the occasion. The countess Sir Henry makes his appearance on the stage, and a tolerably close imitation of the original he is. There is, however, a slight hint to the probability of his part of the plot, in the great unlikelihood of the old gentleman having two wedding dresses so exactly alike. The encounter is however a highly comical one. The old gentleman is in danger of being treated as a swindler, being disowned even by his faithful Shelley. The matter is however cleared up at last to the satisfaction of all parties, the disappointed baronet submits to his loss with a good grace, and bestows on the young folks his benediction, and the promise of inheritance, and becomes reconciled even to the quidam Longstock.

The secretary's representations of such characters as Sir Henry Ringdove, were uniformly excellent; that it is difficult to say anything new in commendation thereof. Suffice it to declare, that on this occasion he exerted himself as was to be expected, most strenuously, to please his patrons, who testified their approbation of his endeavours in a most unequivocal manner.

If the amateur who acted Harry Ringdove was, as the Liverpool Mercury and their representatives affirmed, making "his first appearance," he certainly gave great promise of future excellence. There was none of the embarrassments of the debutant about him. His style was very natural and graceful. When he becomes better acquainted with his capabilities, and acquires a little more energy, he will no doubt make a first rate "lover."

The amateur Dennis de Mowbray overdid his part, just as Irish servants are generally overdone at the Sans Souci; a good Irishman has ever been a desideratum there. Some points, however, of his performance won him well deserved applause.

Mrs. Leach as Cecilia, whether in her active or her passive state, was, as usual, admirable. Such an insipid simplicity as she did look at her first introduction, and such an energetic character as she subsequently became. The change was startling, and was beautifully represented. Verdita, however, is only a secondary personage compared with her aunt, Miss Longstock, who was powerfully represented by Mrs. Francis, who is first rate delineators of this description. There is a spirit and energy in Mrs. Francis's delineation, together with an absence of exaggeration that makes them look like little sketches of real life.

This was the first representation of this farce in Calcutta, and took a first night's success of tolerably well. The voice of the prompter (a particularly gruff one it seemed) was occasionally heard to about the middle row of the stalls; but such blemishes are almost inseparable from a first performance.

THE WHATEMOORE is already well known here as the piece, in which that popular amateur Algernon first created a sensation. In the character of Tristram Finkle, he first shook off that stiffness which clung around his previous attempts. His representation of the character on Monday night, exhibited all the improvement which time and practice have made in his theatrical powers. The various metamorphoses of the versatile young gentleman, were given with increased effect. The barrister's speech was particularly admired.

Old Fickle was enacted by the Harry Ringdove of the first piece, and though the actor seemed much less at home in character of the careful matter-of-fact old father than in that of the brisk young lover, it was a tolerably successful attempt in that particular line. The chief defect was the hard monotonous tone which the performer assumed, and which though it might be somewhat natural to the character, was beyond a doubt unpleasant to the audience.

Madame Croquet was in the hands of a first-rate actor. He had much to do to be sure, but what he does is complete with another. There is fun in every word, every look, every motion. Such quiet satirism too, and so keen without being in the least overbearing of whom Byron speaks when he says—

There was a laughing power in his eyes and in his lip, and in the corners of his cheek,
The secret of the old generation. Barister Bright said little but made the audience laugh a great deal. It is a characteristic if not well done is nothing, and the effect which it has, will atone for the manner of its performance. It was to use the learned gentleman's own best, but emphatic commendation, "good."

Mrs. Leacham-Ford, whether in the character of the fantastic "bony-gurdy girl," or the grave and staid quakeress, was equally fascinating. The snatches of song which she gave in the former character, made the audience wish for a little more of the same sweet sort. Her wealth, though it may have detracted from the power of her voice, has, it anything, added to its touching sweetness. In the character of the quakeress the dress and demeanour was equally correct, and what of caricature there was, must be attributed not to the artists but to the author. The part of Ready is unworthy of the talents of Mrs. Francis, but what is to be done when there is no one else to relieve our best actresses from such drudgery? All that it required, however, was to be fit it by Mrs. Francis, but it was but a poor part after all.

This piece went off with great effect, the various performers showed a sufficient acquaintance with the text of their parts, as well as with the action, &c. and the communicative gentleman in the wig, found that his occupation was gone.

The next last performance at the Sans Souci is to be for the benefit of that Corymbus of the orchestra, and prince of comic composers Bullin, when it is to be hoped that all who have seen him or heard of his fame as Mr. Puggi or Brutus Hair-brain, will take the opportunity of testifying their admiration of his peculiar farcical powers. Illustrations, April 8.

THE HINDU COLLEGE.

The annual distribution of prizes to the alumni of the Hindu College, took place at the Town Hall on Monday evening. Almost all the most distinguished individuals of Calcutta were present to witness this interesting exhibition. There were Lord Auckland and Miss Eden, Sir Jasper Nicolson, Sir Edward Ryan, Sir John Peter Grant, Daniel Elliot, Esq., Drs. Grant and Cameron, and a great number more of the learned, and the great. There was also a very numerous attendance of the native community, and among them was the honorable prince of the Ionianian, the young Raja of Burdwan. With this crowded and very numerous assemblage, a better arrangement should have been observed, but as it was, such confusion and buzzing was the consequence, that none but those immediately near the table, could hear a syllable of all that was said and spoken. It is to be hoped that on future occasions, something may be done to avoid similar hubbub and confusion.

The business of the evening was opened by Captain Richardson, the Professor of Literature in the College, informing the audience, that the students had written answers to historical questions put to them, which answers were drawn up impromptu, without the help of books and under the immediate surveillance of the teachers at the College. These questions were read aloud, the student repeating the questions, and Captain Richardson giving the written solutions, which were of a character highly creditable to the teachers as well as their alumni, and as highly calculated to convince the public of the sterling education imparted at the Hindu College; for these questions were by no means such as are too often paraded in public examinations, being the part and parcel of a cut and dried catechism for the occasion, but they were of a higher character, including the more extensive ranges of history.

As usual, the exhibition was greatly enlivened by recitations, which consisted of selections from the best

English writers. Some of these pieces were well enunciated, collectively and with proper emphasis, and it appeared that the younger students were by far the more clever in this line. There was one young fellow particularly, who recited Moore's "Reflections at Sea" with confidence, elegance and correctness. The "Dancing Master" from the Tutor, was likewise well done, and we the more confidently pronounce this opinion, as it coincides with that of a Thespian friend, who approvingly pronounced it good.

There were some prize essays likewise on various subjects, being the unassisted production of several of the advanced students. The characteristic features of these essays was that, they were composed of a vast variety of thoughts and expressions culled in the hours of study, and strung together in the pieces in brilliant array. But there was one essay different from the rest. It was on "Moral Courage," written by Baboo Dyalchand Roy, and consisted of sentiments and views, expressed in appropriate language and style, and altogether finished in a way, which would have done credit to any other English student of his age, in any country in the world.

In addition to the above exhibitions, there were a number of maps and plans, executed by the boys, displayed on the table, which were all got up in a style at once beautiful and neat, and such as our brother reporter of the Englishman says, he never saw at the Honourable Company's seminary at Adencombe.

The prizes were distributed in due order, by Lord Auckland, consisting of medals and books. After these had been all distributed, his Lordship rose, and in a neat speech passed a handsome eulogium on the Professors and Teachers. The substance of what his Lordship said, was as follows.—His Lordship returned his thanks to Captain Richardson for the pleasure he derived from the exhibition of the day. He expressed the great gra-ification he experienced from the satisfactory essays of the students, and no less from the accurate answers made to the historical questions His Lordship was also highly pleased at the progress made by the students in their mathematical studies. His Lordship concluded by returning his thanks and approval to the professors and teachers, for their exertions, to which was indebted the present efficient state of the Institution.

With this ended the exhibition, and there was to have been a pyrotechnical display in the College Square at night, which was prevented by the unexpected inclemency of the weather. —Mark. April 22.

THE BANK OF BOMBAY.

At a Meeting of the shareholders of the Bank of Bombay held at noon on Thursday, the 12th instant at the Town Hall, for the election of 6 proprietary directors.

It was proposed by David Greenhill, Esq. seconded by Dr. Henderson, and,

RESOLVED,

That John Skinner, Esq. do take the Chair, and that W. W. Cargill, Esq. be requested to act as Secretary to the Meeting.

Mr. Skinner, having accordingly taken the Chair, read the notification calling the Meeting, as published in the Supplement to the Government Gazette of the 9th instant.

It was then proposed by David Greenhill, Esq. seconded by H. G. Gordon Esq. and

RESOLVED,

That the following Gentlemen be appointed, Scrutineers—viz.

Dr. Henderson, and W. S. Grey, Esq. as Scrutineers of Votes, and T. R. Richmond and Thomas Cardwell Esq. as Scrutineers of Proxies.

The Chairman read from this day's Government Gazette the nomination of the three Government Directors.

Mr. Greenhill read a letter addressed to him by Judge Southwell, Esq. dated this day, requesting that his name may be withdrawn as a candidate for the Dissection.

The Chairman then suggested, that with the view of preventing confusion, and to preserve regularity, each voter should present a list of the six candidates whom he intended to support, with his signature attached, and which on being certified, by the scrutineers as correct, he could then record, which arrangement was agreed to.

The Chairman also intimated that Captain J. Swanson, had consented to be put in nomination in addition to the parties recommended by the Provisional Committee.

The voting then commenced and the Chairman having taken down the results, declared the first six Gentlemen of the following, lastly, elected to serve as Directors of the Bank of Bombay in terms of Act III. of 1840.

Proprietary Directors.	H. G. Gordon, Esq.	222	Votes.
	James Wright, Esq.	217
	Lieut. Col. G. Moore.	216
	P. M. Davidson, Esq.	216
	Manjee Gowajee, Esq.	207
	Captain Swanson.	132
	Dattabhoj Pestonjee, Esq.	109

The three following gentlemen are Government Directors:—

J. H. Crawford, Esq. —Accountant General.

L. R. Reid, Esq.—Financial Secretary to Govt.

W. R. Morris, Esq.—Secy. to Govt. in the Genl. and Persian Depts.

It was then proposed by F. M. Davidson Esq. Seconded by W. S. Grey, Esq. and

RESOLVED UNANIMOUSLY.

That the thanks of the Meeting be given to the Chairman for his able and impartial conduct to the Chair.

(Signed) J. John Skinner, Chairman.

Time, March 12.

At a General Meeting of the Shareholders of the Bank of Bombay held at the Town Hall on Thursday, the 12th March, 1840, and presided by Brigadier General V. A. Smith, in the Chair.

The following Report was read by the Secretary to the Provisional Committee.

REPORT TO THE SHAREHOLDERS.

The Committee beg to lay their proceedings since the last General Meeting before the Proprietors.

2. The whole of their correspondence with Government, until that of the last few days having been open to the perusal of the shareholders, it does not seem necessary to allude particularly to it— suffice it to say that all the efforts of the Committee have entirely failed in inducing the Government of India to recede from its intention of taking the whole management of your affairs into its own hands; and your Committee placed in so unrepresented a position, in consequence of the Legislative power being also vested in the Government, have of late been of no other service to their constituents than by furnishing in a Ministerial capacity merely, the details called for by the Government, which they did without loss of time, in order that there might not be any pretext for delay.

3. The Committee regret to find that notwithstanding all the details required were furnished with the greatest accuracy, that the Schedule of the Act contains many errors, not only in the names inserted, but by the omission of parties whom the Committee must assume to have had an equal pretence to inclusion as many of the others, but by the increase of shares to a party, to whom it is the belief of the Committee it was not the intention of the Government, to grant the increase.

4. The Government of India has, however, wisely preserved to itself the right of correcting errors up to the 1st of May next, and this power will no doubt enable the Council to correct some of those that have occurred, but the principle on which the Schedule has been made being that of Proprietorship on the date of the Dispatch of the Court of Directors (viz. 29th Sept. 1838) sanctioning the Charter, as declared in the 1st Clause of Article 1st, from which no deviation can be legally made, the promulgation of Act III. of this year, has denuded the Government of all power to do more than to admit excluded parties who were Proprietors on the above date, and to exclude any who may have been erroneously admitted under a supposition that they had been actual Proprietors at that time. The Committee were at first disposed to think that a short Act altering this one might be passed, but this seems more than doubtful, as Article XL. provides specially against any change before the year 1847.

5. The Committee beg to read the following letter from the Secretary to the local Government, and of their reply on the subject.—

No. 175 of 1840.

TERRITORIAL DEPARTMENT, CALCUTTA.

To W. W. CARROLL, Esq.

Secretary to the Provisional Committee of the Bank of Bombay.

Sir,—As it appears from the Report of the Governor in Council that the Schedule of Names appended to Act III. of 1840, published in the Calcutta Government Gazette of the 24th ultimo, is very incorrectly printed, I am directed to request that you will favor Government with a corrected copy, to which that it may be forwarded, without delay, to the Government of India, for republication.

I have the honor to be, &c.

(Signed) L. R. RHID, Chief Secretary.

Bombay Castle, 9th March, 1840.

A copy of the Supplement to the Calcutta Gazette is herewith enclosed.

To L. R. RHID, Esq.

Chief Secretary to Government.

Sir,—In reply to the request contained in your letter of yesterday's date, I am directed by the Provisional Committee to furnish you with the accompanying List of names in addition to those already in your possession as extracted from the Bank's record, and which you will observe contains one more name than the schedule of the Act.

2. Nanabhai Framjee Cowasjee is a holder of 9 Shares in the 20 last list, and was regularly inserted in the Analysis of 15th July 1839, in the list of 26th January last and also in lists No. 1, 2 and 3, transmitted in my letter of the 4th ultimo.

3. The Committee desire me at the same time to point out for the information of Government, that to Dababhai Ruttonjee who applied for 25 Shares, only 4 are allotted instead of 25, and to Dr. A. Young an applicant for 10 Shares, 18 are allotted in place of 9.

4. The insertion of these as above stated will increase the total number of Shares to 5,227, exclusive of the 300 belonging to Government.

5. The 3rd clause of the 1st article of the act now become Law, provides for "the replication of any errors in the schedule, so that no alteration be made in the principles upon which such schedule has been framed," and requesting you to draw the attention of the Honorable Board to the 1st clause, which declares, that the principle on which the List of Proprietors is formed, is the order of the Court of Directors, which the said clause represents to require, that those who were Proprietors at the date

Purshottamdas Prajoosadas,
G. A. Prinsap,
Major P. L. Few,
Col. S. Powell,
Capt. W. Spratt,
G. Snithland,
W. H. Taylor,
C. W. Truscott,
John Vaughan,
A. Young.

of the Despatch which contained the sanction for the Bank, &c., shall receive the charter, I am instructed to point out for the information of the Governor, General of India in Council and the Legislative Council, that the individuals whose names are inserted in the margin, were not Proprietors at the date of that Despatch, never were Proprietors at any time, and never pretended to be so.

6. The Committee direct me formally to declare this fact, and to appeal to the Governor General of India in Council and the Legislative Council, to exclude those individuals from the schedule, under the 3rd clause of Act III. of the current year, as inserted both erroneously and illegally, being contrary to the declared principles on which the schedule is framed, and in opposition to the declared instructions of the Honorable Court of Directors.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

(Signed) W. W. CARROLL,

Secretary to the Bank.

7. The Committee have thought it their duty to propose a Protest against the increase of the Capital of the Bank, the same being they conceive, an illegal act, as well as injurious to your property, but it is far from their wish or intention to interfere with the continuation of the Bank, it being rather intended to furnish any ulterior measures you may deem it advisable to adopt with a view to obtain remuneration. And the adoption of the resolution need not interfere in any way with your proceedings to day, nor with the opening of the Bank as provided for by the Act.

8. Your Committee cannot take leave of their Constituents without once more expressing their deep disappointment, that the course the Vice President in Council of India has adopted towards the Proprietors of the Bank of Bombay, has caused them so much vexation, loss, and embarrassment and your Committee must also deplore the serious efforts it has had on the Commercial interests of this great Port, which, in fact, cannot be separated from yours. Nevertheless your Committee have at last the gratification of seeing their efforts brought to a successful issue. As far as regards the main object in view, against the most powerful opposition, and they will now look forward to those benefits which have invariably followed the establishment of well managed Banks in every part of the world.

9. The Treasurer's accounts are laid before the Meeting.

10. Your Committee seize this last opportunity to offer you their cordial thanks for the unwavering support they have received from you in the many difficult situations in which they have been placed during the struggle, and but for which they must long ago have yielded to higher influence.

D. GREENSTADT,

Chairman of the Provisional Committee.

Bombay, 12th March, 1840.

It was moved by Thomas Cardwell, Esq., seconded by Captain Swanson, and unanimously

Resolved,

That the Report now read be approved and confirmed, and that it be published for general information.

Proposed by Colonel Griffith, seconded by Dr. Henderson, and

Resolved unanimously,

That the best thanks of the Proprietors be given to the Chairman and Members of the Provisional Committee, for the able and indefatigable manner, in which they have watched over the interests of the Bank.

The following Protest of the Shareholders, was then proposed and read to the Meeting, and having been seconded by W. S. Grey, Esq., it was passed Nem-Con.

PROTEST.

Before proceeding to the election of Directors for the Bank of Bombay in the terms of Act III of the current year, we, the Proprietors of the said Bank, do formally protest against that clause contained in the first article, which provides for the capital being more than fifty Lacs of rupees, on the following grounds :-

Because the Hon'ble Court of Directors sanctioned the Capital to the fifty lacs only, and issued their precise orders to that effect, (see paragraph of Court's Despatch of 20th September 1838, furnish in Government letter of 27th November 1838) it being illegal by Act 3rd and 4th William IV. Chap. LXXXV. for the Government of India to act contrary to such authority.

Because the proprietors, trusting to the inviolability of the Law and the paramount authority of the Hon'ble Court in the matter, did acquire and dispose of property on that faith, but which property has now been depreciated by what, they are firmly of opinion, is an illegal act of the Government of India and Legislative Council.

Because parties have been admitted to participate in property, who were not Proprietors of the Bank Stock, contrary to all usage, and inconsistent with the Commands of the Hon'ble Court of Directors, in as much that the Hon'ble Court directed the Charter to be granted to the Proprietors only.

Proposed by H. G. Gordon, Esq., seconded by David Greenhill, Esq.

Resolved;

That the thanks of the Meeting be given to Brigadier General Valiant, for his polite and impartial conduct in the Chair.

(Signed) T. VALIANT, Chairman.

THE NATIVE HOSPITAL.

A meeting of Subscribers to the Native Hospital was held, pursuant to advertisement, on Saturday, at the "Hospital House." This we found to mean the surgeon's House adjoining the Hospital; for after kicking our heels for 15 minutes in the anti-room, the patient public were "admitted," with other public patients, into a spacious Hall, formerly we believe, used as a dining room.

With some difficulty having procured a chair from an adjoining-room, we arranged our tablets on our knee, not being able to find room at the table. The company assembled on the occasion consisted of 16 persons, all of whom, with the exception of our noble self and our double from over the way, besides Drs. Gordon and William O'Shaughnessy, were either Governors or Officers of the Institution.

The chair having been taken by Sir John Grant, a number of desultory reports, and petitions, were presented by the Secretary, the latter of which were all referred back to the Governors for consideration. The following are the statements in the report.

From this report of the Surgeons to the Hospital and the Dispensaries, it appears, that the number of daily applicants for out door relief, was about 250 at each; the number of admissions into the Hospital during the year had been 800, whereof on an average 50 were under treatment at one time. The report on the state of the Funds was so imperfectly given, that we could make nothing of it, except that there was a difference of 1 rupee and 1 anna between the Secretary's accounts and the Bank Book. In reply to a question, by Mr. G. J. Gordon, as to the actual number of paying subscribers, and the amount derived annually from that source, apart from the Government donation of 1,600 rupees a month, and the interest of the Funded Capital, he was referred to the Account Books, the Secretary being unable to inform him. Dr. John Grant then announced ratando ore, that Mr. McFarlan, the chief Magistrate of the city, had become a Subscriber annually of 50 rupees.

Four vacancies were announced among the Governors, by the resignation or retirement from India, of Sir Edward Ryan, Dr. Simon Nicholson, Mr. G. Udney and

A conversation then followed as to the course to be adopted in filling up these vacancies, when Mr. C. W. Smith having stated, that it had been usual, he believed, for the Governors to invite gentlemen to join them without consulting the Subscribers, Professor O'Shaughnessy remarked, that if such was the rule, it was a very bad one, and the sooner it was altered the better.

Dr. Stewart quoted the Regulation 14 of the original Statutes which states, that an annual Meeting of Subscribers is called expressly for the purpose, of receiving reports, auditing the accounts, and filling up vacancies, &c.

It appeared in the course of the conversation, that the Regulation, which states the qualification for becoming a Governor to be either a yearly subscription of, 100 Rs- or a donation of 1,000, has long fallen into disuse or has been cancelled.

There was likewise a letter brought to the notice of the Meeting, addressed by Mr. P. O'Brien, the present first assistant of the Hospital, to the Governors, bringing to their knowledge his long and meritorious services, and, on the information that some new arrangements were soon to take place in the management of the institution, in the appointment of Assistant Surgeon, tendering his claims for that nomination. The consideration of Mr. O'Brien's letter was deferred until the annual report shall have been made.

An application was also read from Mr. R. O'Shaughnessy, tendering his services as Second Medical Officer of the establishment, which was also put off with the above.

The Report was then about to be put to the Meeting, but as it had not been approved of or passed by the body of Governors, it was determined on, to submit it first for the consideration of the Governors, before laying it before a General Meeting of the Subscribers.

Several lists of names to fill the four vacancies were then handed to the Chairman, and a great deal of desultory conversation ensued, in which almost all present had a small share, and which, among other points, related to the nomination of Governors. It was then, at a late hour, proposed by Dr. D. Stewart to adjourn the Meeting till Friday the 2d of April, which motion by general consent was carried, and the Meeting accordingly broke up, thanks being returned to the Chairman for presiding on the occasion.—Hulk, March 23.

The postponed meeting of the subscribers to the Native Hospital, took place on Tuesday evening, at 4 o'clock. The attendance was better on this occasion than the last, and also on this occasion, unlike the last, there were no lack of chairs nor any difficulty in attaining the table.

Sir J. P. Grant having been called to the chair, stated, that this Adjourned Meeting of Subscribers was called for the purpose of electing Governors to fill up the vacancies now existing in that body, to the number of five, that the accounts of the hospital had been presented at the last meeting, and that there were no reports to be presented.

Dr. D. Stewart expressed his unfeigned astonishment at the last declaration from the chair. As a Subscriber he claimed for himself and that body, a liberal interpretation of Regulation 14, which provides, that "an Annual Meeting of the Subscribers shall be held, for the purpose of receiving reports on the proceedings of the Governors, for auditing the accounts, and for filling up vacancies." It was very possible that he was wrong, and he would state his own interpretation of these provisions, with perfect submission to the chair; but, it did certainly appear, to his plain judgment, that to receive reports, meant that reports were to be made; and that there were to be submitted for the approval and adoption, the disapproval or protest of the Subscribers, that to audit accounts meant to correct errors and mistakes in them, and to check extravagant, or unauthorised expenditure of the funds, and that the last clause gave to the Subscribers, and to them alone, the privilege of electing Governors.

Were this construction of the Regulation wrong, the Subscribers were in the position of persons, who having eyes to see were expected not to perceive, and having ears to hear were not to understand anything more of their own affairs, than the Governors by themselves elected, thought proper to enlighten them with.

Sir John Peter Grant, in reference to what had fallen from Dr. Stewart, explained shortly, that the report he (Dr. Stewart) alluded to, was the Sub-committee's report, intended for the Governors only, and presented with them, whether it was to be brought before a General Meeting of Subscribers or not, as such, therefore, the present Meeting had no right to call for the report referred to by Dr. Stewart.

Dr. Stewart here, with all submission to the Honorable Chairman, begged to enquire, whether the Governors had a right to withhold what report they chose?

Raboo Dwarkanath Tagore observed, with regard to the point mooted by Dr. Stewart, that the meeting had no right to demand the private minutes of the Governors, and that the report of the Sub-committee, alluded to by Dr. Stewart, being of that nature, could not be produced.

Mr. J. G. Gordon rose to remark, that he agreed with Dwarkanath Tagore, that a General Meeting of Subscribers had no right to call for the private papers of the Governors in their Sub-committee; he still, however, was sorry, that the report called for by Dr. Stewart was not produced, as it was as well to let the public know whatever was going on, and that all was good and consistent.

Dr. John Grant explained, that a report had been prepared by the Governors, and would be presently presented. It had by some inadvertence of the Secretary been left at home. The report he alluded to was, what is called the Annual Report, and had reference only to the proceedings in 1839. It was not the intention of the Governors to lay before this Meeting any report of these proceedings, since the commencement of the present year. These would come under review at the next Annual Meeting in 1841.

Professor W. B. O'Shaughnessy here got up to speak, but was cut short by a question from the chair, if he (Dr. O'Shaughnessy) was a Subscriber, which being replied to in the affirmative, the question was followed up by another, and another, the one referring to the terms of Dr. O'Shaughnessy's subscription, and the other to the extent of time he has been a Subscriber. These questions at first Dr. O'Shaughnessy deemed entirely irrelevant and such as should not be put; and if put, he would not answer; but after some further conversation he said, he would treat the subject good humouredly, and with this view informed the Chair, that he was a three years-subscriber—as to the time, however, he still declined to enlighten the Meeting, and the books were called for and were about to be examined, in regard to the point on which Dr. O'Shaughnessy declined answering, when that gentleman resuming his seat the question was dropped.

A little desultory talk followed, after which Mr. Richard O'Shaughnessy was about proposing an adjournment, when he also was cut short, by the question being put from the Chair if he was a subscriber. The reply was, in this case also, in the affirmative, and, in order to ascertain to what extent of time and money he was a Subscriber, the Subscription book was produced, and on the last page of it the Chairman observed Mr. O'Shaughnessy's name but no amount. It thus appearing from the face of the entry, that Mr. O'Shaughnessy was bona fide a Subscriber, the question was put, how Mr. O'Shaughnessy happened to be a subscriber, without the sum of his subscription being specified. Mr. O'Shaughnessy explained, that the Secretary not having sent him a receipt, of course he could neither state nor send the amount of his subscription. The Secretary's explanation on this point it was, to the effect, that Mr. O'Shaughnessy had merely written to be set down as a Subscriber without, in any way intimating, for what amount, and the Secretary consequently was unable to send a receipt, not knowing to what amount.

After a little talk, Mr. O'Shaughnessy was permitted to deliver himself of what he had to say, and it was observed, that there appeared that barely a year or two had been made to the list of subscribers, and a few

he could see into the matter, he thought this was, owing to the neglect of the Governors and Officers of the Institution on this head

Mr. Gordon got up to observe, in reference to the observation made by Mr. O'Shaughnessy, that the funds of the hospital, were in a state to meet the expenses, and the expediency of sending out for Subscribers, therefore, not appear necessary to be resorted to. Mr. Gordon then went on to observe, on the report, which was to be brought before the Meeting, in respect to which he said, that he hoped the establishment and progress of the plan of the proposed Fever Hospital and the Kidderpore Dispensary, were noticed in it. This proposal had for a long time been in abeyance, and he hoped to find them included in the report to be brought before the Meeting.

Dr. Guden had remarked, that if every subject connected with the Institution, was to be brought before the present Meeting, there would be no end of discussion. He trusted, therefore, that the immediate business before the Meeting would be proceeded with.

Dr. J. Grant then rose and said, that Mr. Gordon was going on a subject quite foreign to the purpose and intention of the present Meeting. Besides, he thought, that the establishment of Joint Dispensaries itself was apart from the original object of the Institution when first founded, which was, that it should be only a Surgical Hospital. This intention was departed from in the establishment of the Branch Dispensaries at Gurnahutta and Park Street, and, no doubt, with good reason for so doing. But, this was no reason, why the immediate and primary object of the Institution should not be attended to before farther departures from the original plan. The speaker then took the opportunity of expatiating at some length on the prejudice that has always existed among the natives against becoming in-door patients, and this prejudice he traced to the fact of the accommodations afforded in the Hospital being of an indiscriminate nature, without regard to caste, disease, or even sex. To remove this defect, certain plans were under consideration by the Governors, which, when matured and carried into effect, will act towards the improvement of the Institution, and tend to more extended and enlarged relief to the poor. These points, therefore, being at present before the Governors, Dr. Grant thought their attention should not be distracted by urging them to reference to the plans of the Fever Hospital and Kidderpore Dispensary alluded to by Mr. Gordon. At all events, Dr. Grant thought that they should proceed to the election of Governors as one of the legitimate objects of the Meeting.

Sir John Peter Grant next observed, on the proposed establishment of a third Dispensary, which was generally approved of, but postponed until the Municipal Committee have made their report. Sir John then also explained, briefly, the original object of the Institution, which was, that it should be only a Surgical Hospital, but this intention has been departed from, and that with extended charity and benefit to the poor. As a Medical Hospital, applications to it were rare. As a Surgical Hospital, such applications at present are numerous. It is then the poor would be in the greatest need of relief, and Sir John concluded by remarking on the beneficial improvements which are in contemplation of the Governors.

Dr. Duncan Stewart here rose, and after a very lengthy and rather desultory speech, adverting to the obscurity of many of the Rules and Regulations, he produced a document, with which he had only that day been favored, although bearing date November 1832 the legal opinion of an eminent counsel upon the existing constitution and organization of the Institution. After reading this to the Meeting, Dr.

Stewart politely handed it to us for publication. The document ran as follows —

OPINION REGARDING THE RULES OF THE NATIVE HOSPITAL.

I have never yet had to advise on the Rules of any Institution so exceedingly defective, as those of the Calcutta Native Hospital; the meaning of many of them is obscure, and several others admit of a double construction.

Before I answer the question on the 4th Rule, I must remark, that the 3d Rule prescribes the qualification necessary to vote for a Governor, yet there is no rule requiring any qualifications whatever for a Governor, and if the qualified subscribers choose to elect an individual to be a Governor, who never had subscribed to the Institution, they would not violate any of the existing rules.

The 1th Rule directs that the Governors shall be appointed for three years, and as an appointment for three years, is not an appointment for four, they would be acting without any appointment, should they continue exercising an authority after the commencement of the 1th year, without a re-election; the correctness of this construction will become more evident, by a reference to the 14th Rule, which provides for the filling up of vacancies by death or otherwise.

I must answer the 2d, 3d and 4th questions together. I consider, that the 7th relates entirely to the annual income of the Institution, that is, the proceeds of the subscriptions, and the interest of the capital (I believe there are no rents, but if there are, they would be included) I think it very doubtful whether it extends to donations — Courts of Equity have held that these ought to be invested. This part of my opinion is confined to the 7th Rule, which is quite at variance with the 13th, for the 13th distinctly permits the Company's paper to be sold, or otherwise disposed off "with the consent of the Governors at large." The meaning of this expression surpasseth my understanding, nor can I conjecture whether the consent of every Governor is necessary, or the consent of the majority of them collecting the opinions of all. But the 1th resolution is at direct variance with the 12th, which seems to be framed for the object of preventing the Governors from transferring the funds from 3 per cent. paper to any other securities without the consent of the subscribers. This may not be obvious on the first reading of the 12th Rule, but as it commences, with stating that the funds are all exclusively in one's paper, and then goes on to say, that if 5 per cent. interest should not be procurable in the manner above prescribed, (i. e. by 3 per cent. paper) then a general meeting is to be called. The object of the Rule is evident. So much contradiction in so short a space I have never met with.

Under the 4th and 13th Rules I am of opinion, that the Governors cannot elect each other, and that the triennial, or other vacancies, can only be filled up by the subscribers.

LONGUEVILLE CLARK.

Calcutta, Nov 1832.

After some farther general remarks, Dr. Stewart proposed the following resolution, which was seconded by Mr. Gordon and carried unanimously.

"That an Annual Report by the Governors be presented to the Subscribers, setting forth the state of the funds and an epitome of all proceedings carried into effect as in contemplation of the Governors for the benefit of the charity, and that this report, after adoption by the Subscribers, be published. And also, that a list of Governors and of Subscribers be published with the report."

Mr. Gordon, in seconding this resolution, observed, that his chief object in putting such a resolution to the Meeting, was the consideration that the more the institution was brought to the notice of the public, and the more the public understood the extensive good it was calculated to confer on the poor, the more would it be patronised and the greater the support it will receive.

Bahoo Dwarkanath Tagore here remarked, in reference to the resolution, that, if Dr Stewart had only waited a few minutes, he would have been satisfied, that a resolution to the same purport would have been proposed in the due course of business.

The Annual Report for 1839 was then read, from the statistical statements of which it appeared, incurred from the 1st January to the 31st December, 1839, amounted to 17,424 rupees, the subscriptions amount to 13,859 rupees, and the balance on hand 19,571 rupees, the last item exceeding the balance on the hands the preceding year.

Bahoo Dwarkanath Tagore then proposed, that the following elections in the room of the vacancies be made —

In the room of	Proposed
Sir Edward Ryan,	H. F. Prinsep,
G. P. G. P.,	D. C. Smith,
Dr. Nicolson,	Dr. Gordon,
Col. Young,	W. P. Grant,
Honble C. T. Robertson,	J. P. Leith.

Amendments were proposed by several gentlemen present to this resolution, which were these —

Professor O'Shaughnessy, after a flattering eulogium, proposed Mr. Gordon in the room of Mr. W. P. Grant.

Mr. Gordon proposed Mr. D. McFarlan, the Chief Magistrate, to supply the vacancy of Mr. Uday.

Dr. Stewart proposed Professor O'Shaughnessy, instead of Mr. Leith.

All these amendments, however, were respectively put and lost, and the original resolution proposed by Bahoo Dwarkanath Tagore, was carried by a majority.

In the course of voting for this resolution, Dr. Grant voted for Mr. Parker by proxy, and this occasioned some discussion, whether a vote by proxy was authorised by the institution, but it appearing that there was no rule against it and that on many occasions, the practice was allowed, it was settled, that votes by proxy could be received.

Thanks were then returned to the Chairman, for so ably and impartially presiding on the occasion, after which the Meeting separated.—Herald, April 16.

ASIATIC SOCIETY'S MEETING.

The usual Monthly Meeting of the Asiatic Society was held at their apartments last evening and rather thinly attended—in the absence of the President, Mr. H. F. Prinsep took the chair. The officiating Secretary, Mr. Sutherland, read the proceedings of the last Meeting, which were confirmed. Professor Street of Bishop's College, and Raja Krishenath Roy, were elected members of the Society.

Mr. Prinsep mentioned, that in accordance with the resolutions of the last Meeting, candidates had been invited to send in their applications to the Committee of Papers for the office of Curator—several applications had been made but their attentions were not considered sufficient for the duties of the situation—they were under consideration just now, and it had been determined to allow another month for further applications, and he hoped that he would be able to report to the next Meeting the actual choice of a Curator having taken place.

Presented by Government, a volume containing the astronomical observations which had been taken at the Fort St. George presidency during the past year, on behalf of that Government.

With reference to this Mr Prinsep begged to mention, that the British Government had sanctioned the appointment of three Observers—in order that the observations might be extended over a wider field than they are at present—namely, one at Simlah, one at Singapore and one at Madras (where there already exists an officer and an observatory.)

Received from Government the 13th No. of Dr Wigh's Illustrations of Indian Botany, &c.

A letter had been received from the Colonial Secretary of the Colombo Government, in compliance by a register of the tides at Trincomalee.

The subject of the tides which exist on various parts of the coast and at the numerous islands near India, seems now to be attracting general attention. Several registers of tides have been received from Singapore and other places, and now comes this from Trincomalee, where it is remarkable that there exists but a single tide during the day, whereas at all other places there are two. Nobody has yet been found here to undertake the duty of examining into these details and to hold out what may be the causes of the existing difference—but Sir John Herschel, who lately returned to Europe from the Cape, is preparing some instructions on the subject, and Mr. Prinsep thought it would be better to wait till these instructions were received, before going into the subject fully here.

A fine specimen of Albatross was presented by Colonel Cogson.

Some specimens of curious kinds of ferns were received from Major Davidson, of Sumbulpoore.

Read a letter from Major Osely, dated Camp Iccrah on the banks of the Hutson river, sending to the Society some specimens of a coal which he had found there, and of which there exist extensive fields at the bed of the Hutson, about a mile from Kutch. The coal contains a considerable quantity of gas and was pronounced to be a good and promising coal.

Read the Report of the Secretaries of the Review of the Society's proceedings during the past year, the following are the only points of any public interest, in the number of ordinary members the Society had been nearly stationary, twelve new members having come in, and twelve having, by death and return to Europe gone off the list—of honorary members they had to lament the deaths of two very distinguished men, M. De La Haye and De Sacy. In original publications the author volume of the muharrir had been completed, beside three or four other oriental works. In the Museum, several additions had been made during the year, in birds, fishes and skeletons—of minerals fifty specimens had been received from Cornwall through Dr. Spry. The number of animals got up in the twelve months, was 377. Regarding the Society's Journal, many valuable contributors had withdrawn in consequence of their removal from their domestic circles to Camp, where no doubt they are now collecting materials of research, which will be of the greatest interest and use to us in future. In finance, the Society's affairs showed a balance of about 9,000 rupees to their credit, if the arrears of subscription, &c, now due did not prove bad debts. The accounts were then passed by the Meeting.

Mr. H. W. Torrens mentioned, that he had brought down with him a slab (about 3 feet in length) of the flexible sandstone from a new locality, and some well preserved and valuable specimens of the hill pheasant, which he would, if they were worth accepting, present to the Society.

The third volume of the Alif Leila was on the table for the inspection of members.

The thanks of the Society having been accorded for all the foregoing donations and presentations, the Meeting separated.—Calcutta Courier, April 2.

THE SAILORS' HOME.

The adjourned meeting was held on Monday, a 4 o'clock, on the Home premises, Mr. A. Beattie was called to the chair, Sir John Peter Grant, who had promised to preside, being detained in court from a press of business, which circumstance he estimated to the meeting.

The business was opened, by Mr. Grant, the Honorary Secretary, being called upon to read the proceedings and resolutions passed at the last meeting, which had been adjourned to the present occasion.

Mr. Henry Chapman then, as one of the Select committee appointed to investigate and report on the charges brought forward by the Rev J. Atkins, read the report of the Select committee on the subject.

Mr. Atkins then rose and observed, that the Secretary himself could testify as to the correctness of what he had spoken on the former occasion, relative to the bar. He was confident that so long as the bar was permitted to exist, no good could possibly result, and with the existence of the bar it would be impossible to enforce the observance of the regulations of the Home, unless the Secretary himself presided, and that too with a body of constables. Mr. Atkins, moreover, was able to assure the meeting, that during his connection with the Home, there was not a month that the laws were carried out. He had used his best endeavours to limit the amount of liquor but without avail.

Mr. J. W. Cragg here got up to propose the first resolution.

1. That the report of the sub-committee be received.

In proposing this resolution, Mr. Cragg alluded to the notorious fact of the many unpleasant differences that had arisen between the committee, but much as this was to be regretted, it was also a subject of regret that there should exist many irregularities in the cash book accounts. Mr. Cragg had not gone through the details of the cash book, but on turning over its pages incidentally, had discovered an inaccuracy of 240 rupees on the debit leaf.

Mr. Atkins here begged to explain, in reference to the error pointed out by Mr. Cragg, that the books were not made up by him but generally by Mr. Phillips, though the deficiency in question was not entered by Mr. Phillips but by another individual, while Mr. Phillips was unable to attend to his duties from illness, and that this individual had been detected in a dishonest attempt and dismissed. Mr. Atkins also begged to remark, that the cash book was always laid on the table and was accessible both to the governors, visitors, and general committee and that the error was never discovered by him, nor by any other gentleman, till it was first pointed out by Mr. Vos.

Mr. Deane observed, that he, as one of the committee, never saw the cash book on the table before the general committee. He had seen weekly abstracts of accounts, but not the cash book, and he was unable to say if these abstracts were regularly and correctly entered into the cash book. He also said, that so far from the error pointed out by Mr. Cragg, being the only one he had just been able to find another mistake of 116 Rs on the credit leaf.

Mr. Cragg's resolution which was seconded by Mr. C. Diarie, and about to be put to the meeting, when

Mr. Grant, the Secretary, proposed an amendment to the effect that the part of the Sub-committee's report which proposed the management of the Home being connected with the Chamber of Commerce, should be omitted. Some conversation arose on this point which was scarcely concluded, when

Mr. Atkins rose and drew the attention of the meeting to the fact, that though the statements he had on the former occasion brought before the meeting, had led the Sub-committee to a conclusion different from his own, yet the statements themselves were not disputed, nor their truth questioned, but were entirely admitted by the tenor of the Sub-committee's report. Mr. Atkins then went on to recapitulate at some length the various points of his former address to the meeting, after which he returned to allude to the sub-committee's report, and in reference to that part which stated, that an improvement was apparent from the last four months, observed, that this was attributable to no other cause than their bringing a less number of residents in the Home. Mr. Atkins was next about to urge the considerations why the resolutions he had formerly proposed should be adopted, when he was called to order as going off to a point apart from the immediate question before the meeting.

Mr. Grant, the Secretary, then rose and remarked, that he and his colleague had drawn up a report in relation of the charges brought against the present management of the Home, which report he said he had not intended to bring before the meeting, but as Mr. Atkins had recapitulated his allegations, he begged the attention of the meeting while he read it. Accordingly he began to read this report, which was a very long and uncommonly comprehensive document, and before he could come to the bottom of it, Mr. Grant was called to order, and after some conversation on the subject, it was argued that there was no time for Mr. Grant to read the report of himself and his colleague, however the Meeting might be disposed to allow him that privilege.

In the course of what had been read by Mr. Grant, of the lengthy paper, some allusion was made to the difference of opinion in regard to having prayers in the Home. And in reference to this point Captain Vincent said, that at the last adjourned Meeting, the Revd. Mr. Atkins had said, that he, Captain Vint, had done all the prayers and had threatened to throw the Revd. Mr. Hoaz out of the window, or into the river, or even into one of Captain Johnson's Steam boilers. Such language, he begged to observe, he had never made use of. In forming the rules of the Home, in Committee, it had been proposed, that Jack should be compelled to attend prayers every morning, and he had resisted that proposition, and said, that several of his friends, who were well disposed towards the Home, would not support it, if a measure so obnoxious were carried into effect.

Mr. Cragg's resolution was here put and carried, that the sub-committee's report be received.

Mr. Chapman then proposed a resolution, to the effect that the Secretaries of the Home be empowered to address the Chamber of Commerce and to make a proposition in the spirit of the suggestion put forth, by the sub-committee in this report.

Mr. Cragg seconded Mr. Chapman.

Mr. Atkins observed, that the present Meeting, thinly attended as it was, in comparison to the great body of the subscribers, was incompetent to empower the Secretaries for the purpose proposed by Mr. Chapman. He opposed the resolution, and would rather that the management were made over to Government since Government subscribed more than half of the funds of the Institution.

Mr. J. W. Alexander proposed the following amendment to the resolution put forth by Mr. Chapman, the amendment being seconded by Mr. Grant.

That with reference to the last paragraph of the report of the select Committee, the management of the Institution be confided, as hitherto, to a committee chosen out of the general body of subscribers. Some conversation on the subject ensued, after which Mr. Chapman's resolution was lost, and Mr. Alexander's amendment carried by a majority of eight against three.

It having grown dusk by this time, great impatience was evinced by the majority present, and a variety of resolutions were simultaneously proposed, Mr. Hoaz proposing the adoption of his own report as partly read by Mr. Grant, some proposing an adjournment, others proposing a committee,—Captain Balston enquiring to whom he was to look to for the wherewithal for the management of the Home, Mr. Grant referring Captain Balston to the balance of 19 rupees in hands, and various other points and subjects, which were too numerous and intricate to allow our taking notes of. At length the following resolution was proposed by Mr. Whyte, seconded and carried:—

That the following gentlemen be elected as a working committee of the Home, namely—Captain Vint, Charles Deane, J. W. Cragg, Captain Balston, Captain Johnstone, W. S. B. Scott, John Porteus, John Storm, H. Chapman, Captain Leach, Jas. Church, and John Cowie.

Thanks were finally voted to the Chairman and the meeting separated.—Hark, March 8.

STEAM TUG ASSOCIATION.

The half yearly Meeting of this Association was held at the Secretaries' office yesterday, at 11 o'clock. Mr. W. S. Smith in the chair.

Mr. Prinsep then read the report of the Secretaries, Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co., a very lengthy document, from which it appeared that the Association have been obliged in some measure to depart from the terms of the new subscription, and have deemed it expedient, as a more equitable arrangement, in consequence of the expenses of the Dumkonth and Adrius Henderson having exceeded expectations, to make an equal division of the profits of the past half year, between old and new subscribers, while the profit itself has amounted to more than 6½ per cent. per annum.

As regard to the steamer it appeared, that the Forbes has been under engagements and has worked satisfactorily with only one interruption, which was occasioned by the necessity of supplying her with a new piston. The Sylakond has, however, been less fortunate than the Forbes, and is at present under repairs, in consequence of her having met with a serious accident by the bursting of a boiler. By reason of the heavy compensations claimed for the vessel, it has been rendered necessary to reduce her price of hire from 400 to 300 rupees. With regard to this steamer, it has also been determined on to get out a more efficient and suitable set of engines for her. The next steamer noticed in the report, was the Andrew Henderson, in regard to which it was stated, that she had been to some extent injured by two serious accidents which happened to her. One was by an unaccountable ignition having taken place among the timber works, and the other by her going foul of the Mahomed Shaton, a few days ago. It is intended to put her under repairs and ascertain, if possible, and remedy the recurrence of another spontaneous ignition. The other vessel mentioned in the report, was the Dwarkanath, which was brought into play in February last, and which is found to be in every way efficient, except that she is somewhat crank, and this defect it is intended to repair, if practicable.

The state of the funds appeared to be thus:—Receipts Rs. 2,53,096 15. Disbursements Rs. 2,42,570 14. Assets Rs. 5,89,534 3 6. And profit Rs. 33,294 2.

The resolutions were then put and carried, and were as follow:—

Proposed by Mr. Colquhoun and seconded by Mr. McGregor—

That the accounts be approved and passed, and the Secretaries' report be published—

Proposed by Baboo Prosonocoomar Tagore and seconded by Mr. Prinsep—

That out of the half years' profits of Rs. 33,294-2-1 a dividend of Rs. 20,000 or 60 per cent. per share, being at the rate of 10 per cent per annum, be paid upon new and old shares equally; and that the balance of profits upon the half year (Rs. 13,294-2-1) being a further profit at the rate of about 6-10 per cent. per annum, be carried to credit of a reserved fund on equal account of new and old shares, to meet eventual liabilities and contingencies.

Proposed by Mr. Cragg and seconded by Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore—

That a plan of the Seetakoond Steamer be immediately sent to the Agents of the Secretaries in London, and that they be requested to engage Messrs. Fawcett and Preston of Liverpool, to make new engines for her of as great power as the capacity and construction of the vessel would (with any slight alteration that might be indispensable) admit of. The engines to be of the very best and approved principle, and under the reservation only that they be as simple as possible in construction, so as to meet our imperfect means of repair and management; and also that they be as little expensive, whether in respect of brass bright work or ornament as the complete efficiency of the engines will admit of.

Proposed by Mr. Colquhoun and seconded by Mr. Prinsep—

That should Capt. Henderson be in England and able to devote his attention to the engines required for the Seetakoond, the Agents be requested to get him to superintend their construction, and to allow him a commission of 2½ per cent., if he will undertake to do so at that rate of remuneration.

Proposed by Mr. Mc Gregor and seconded by Prosonocoomar Tagore—

That the thanks of the meeting be given to the Committee for their services during the past year, and that Messrs. W. Bruce, J. Colquhoun, J. Cullen, K. B. McKenzie and Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore, be elected the Committee for the current year.

Proposed by Mr. Cragg and seconded by Dwarkanath Tagore.—

That it be an instruction to the Committee to take in consideration the expediency of purchasing the Satellite Steamer and should they entertain the subject, that they report the same to a meeting of proprietors to be summoned for the purpose.

Thanks were then given to the Chairman and the meeting dissolved.—Hark. April 17.

CIVIL SERVICE ANNUITY FUND.

A Special General Meeting was held at the Town Hall, this day, the 21st April, 1840, under rule 25, to consider the Resolutions proposed by the Requisitionists who signed the Advertisement officially notified under date the 7th of March last and subsequent dates.

PRESENT—

Messrs R. H. Rattray, C. Davison, J. H. Patton, D. C. Smyth, O. Tucker, H. M. Parker, J. P. Grant, J. Curtis, J. G. B. Lawrell, J. S. Torrens, I. C. Loch, J. Pattle, G. A. Bushby, T. R. Davidson, H. Moore, T. P. Biscoe, T. Taylor, J. F. Hawkins, F. J. Halliday, J. Miller, J. H. Young, J. Lewis, Richard Walker, J. F. M. Reid and H. V. Bayley.

Mr. Rattray was unanimously called to the Chair.

The Chairman read the Requisition and Resolutions above referred to.

Mr. H. M. Parker moved that the above Resolutions be adopted.

Mr. Grant seconded this motion.

Mr. Bushby moved as an Amendment—

“That a Memorial be prepared for the consideration of the Subscribers to the Civil Service Annuity Fund, and after adoption by them, be submitted to the Hon'ble the Court of Directors, setting forth the confidence which the Subscribers repose in the liberality and the wisdom of the Regulations which the Hon'ble Court will enact with reference to the Memorial of the Subscribers to the Hon'ble Court, dated the 7th April 1838.

That the Subscribers think it probable from their not having received any reply to that Memorial, that besides the specific solicitations contained in it, the question as to the number to be allowed of annual retirements from the Service, may be under the consideration of the Hon'ble Court, and that the decision of the Hon'ble Court on this point, will be regulated by the policy and intentions of the Authorities in England as to the permanent complement of Civil Servants which shall be deemed adequate for this Establishment. If less than the number of Servants on which the original Scheme of the Fund was based, then the Hon'ble Court will proportionately diminish the number of annual retirements. If more they will be proportionately increased.

These being matters for the cognizance and judgment of the Home Authorities, it would be premature in the subscribers at this moment to suggest, that any fixed number of retirements shall be prescribed per year.

But the Subscribers beg permission to express their belief, that the present number of six per annum is not sufficient to meet the growing demands of the Service on the purposes of the Institution.

Looking to the financial condition of the Fund they repeat their humble opinion that the resources are ample for the grant of a number of Annuities to the limit of nine per annum.

In modification of their former Memorial the Subscribers would suggest, that on the subject of refund of excess contribution, which question they will also confidently leave to the superior wisdom of the Honorable Court, the amount of the excess retained should be fixed on the principle of making this extra charge a sufficient penalty for not retiring at the time when an Annuity shall be available to the party, and that it shall be fixed on a moderate scale, adequate to that object, and to go beyond such object.

The Subscribers are of opinion, that if it shall please the Honorable Court to extend the Boon of quarter valuation-payment to permanency, it would be a severe hardship and one not contemplated by the Subscribers to the Memorial of the 7th of April, 1838, to levy from the unfortunate Members of the service who should be disabled from retiring in due course an unlimited excess of subscription beyond the value of the thing for which the subscription was made, especially as it is one of the rules of the Fund that a subscriber, a Civil Servant, cannot retire from the Institution. It will not escape the observation of the Honorable Court, that there will be instances of Servants willing to retire after completing their prescribed period of service and residence, but unable to do so in consequence of the limit of available Annuities, and the effect of the favourable terms by which their predecessors have benefited. It will not be just to exact in these cases as penalty, the unlimited excess of their contributions beyond the value of the Annuity allowed.

Mr. Biscoe seconded this motion.

Mr. Grant then moved—

“That Mr. Bushby's Amendment be not put by the Chair, because it enters into matter not adverted to by the requisition under which this Meeting is assembled.”

Mr. H. M. Parker seconded this motion.

Mr. Pattle moved as an Amendment—

“That the consideration of the propositions for which this Meeting was assembled, be postponed pending an answer from the Honorable the Court of Directors to the Memorial of the service of the 7th April 1838.”

This Amendment was seconded by Mr. F. R. Davidson

Mr. Pattle's Amendment being put from the Chair, there appeared—

AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA.

A General Meeting was held at the Society's Room, Town Hall, on Wednesday, the 18th of April, 1840.

The Hon'ble Sir EDWARD RYAN, in the Chair.

(TWENTY MEMBERS PRESENT.)

The Proceedings of the last General Meeting, were read and confirmed.

The gentlemen proposed at the March Meeting were elected Members of the Society, viz.

Dr. Douzell, Messrs. F. S. Brown, Alex. S. Brown, C. J. Newcomen, F. R. Hampton, A. S. Gladstone, and Thos. Ilugon.

The names of the following gentlemen were read as candidates for election.

D. W. Fraser, Esq., of Gwah, proposed by Major Catter, seconded by the Secretary.

Henry Moore, Esq., C. S., proposed by Dr. Strong, seconded by the Secretary.

Henry Pilcock, Esq., C. S., proposed by Mr. Thos. J. Turner, seconded by the Secretary.

Lieut. G. L. Cooper, (Commanding Artillery, Shah Soojah's contingent,) proposed by Dr. Spry, seconded by Dr. Strong.

John Elliot, Esq., (Firm of Livingston, Syers and Co.,) proposed by Mr. Hodgkinson, seconded by the Secretary.

A. Murray, Esq., proposed by Mr. W. F. Ferguson seconded by Dr. Spry.

R. Barnes, Esq., of Purneah, proposed by Mr. H. Piddington, seconded by Mr. W. Byrne.

PRESENTATIONS TO THE LIBRARY.

A Copy of the Proceedings of the Quarterly General Meeting of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of Madras, held on the 15th January, 1840—Presented by the Madras Agricultural and Horticultural Society.

MUSEUM

1. Seven large and fifteen small packets of grape seeds of sorts; fifteen large packets of musk-melon seed; four ditto water-melon; one ditto large Istambol, or scented melon; three ditto small Istambol or miniature scented melon; three ditto large pomegranate seeds; two ditto small shah tooth or royal mulberry; three ditto apple pips; one ditto pears, one ditto quince, and 2 ditto large pumpkin.

This handsome consignment of seeds has been received from Affghanistan from Colonel Stacy, who resides at present at Candahar. The flavour of the musk-melon is delicious. The Istambol melon is not eaten, but is carried in the hand, to smell to, as this variety, especially the little Istambol melon, is much esteemed for its fragrant scent. The shah tooth, or royal mulberry, is nearly the size, and has all the flavour of the English kind.

These seeds were freely distributed to the members present, and but few now remain for applicants.

2. A small bundle of flax, prepared from the Ricca plant (urtica nivosa) of the Province of Assam.—Presented by Captain Jenkins.

This fibre is described by Captain Jenkins, as being in universal use for the manufacture of fishing nets and lines. At present there is little trade in it, it being only grown in such quantities as the fishermen require, and the present cost is 10 rupees a maund, but as the plant can be grown with the least possible trouble, and the preparation of the flax from it is a very facile process, Capt Jenkins states, that there is no doubt, the flax can be grown at half this price. In texture, it is remarkably strong, and is very likely to make good linens.

3. A sample of the root of a plant which the natives use as "glue" and call "serais." The plants is not cultivated but grows wild in quantities near Candahar.—Presented by Col. Stacy.

Dr. Spry mentioned, that he had tried some experiments with this gelatinous root by boiling and macerating it in water, but he had been unable to extract any strong adhesive quality. Further trials would probably give other results.

4. Samples of tea from Assam, consisting of "Young Hyson," "Toichu Peko," "Pouchong," "Hoson," "Chatear," "Souchong," "Big Gunpowder," "Hyson Skin," and "Little Gunpowder." Presented by the Secretary.

The Honorable the President, on these samples being submitted, begged to mention to the meeting, the circumstance that the Society was indebted for these samples to the Secretary, who had obtained them from the Assam Company as one of the shareholders; whereas the Society who had made an application for a supply two months ago, had not received a particle, although he understood that some was coming. He thought in future, whenever the Society had any application of this sort again to make, it had better go direct to Government instead of applying indirectly through committees.

5. A large bale of acclimated Upland Georgia Cotton.—Presented by Colonel Skinner.

6. Three samples of indigenous cotton from Sown in bundlekund.—Presented by Captain Shewers.

7. Specimens of two kinds of gum, one known by the people of the jungles as the Pissal or Bysesar, very much resembling the kind of the Butea frondosa, of a beautiful lake color, and the other the gum of the Bahera tree.

Lieutenant Kitoe, who presents these to the Society, states that the leaf of the tree whence the Pissal is obtained, yields a yellow dye as well as the chips of the wood. The Bahera tree* yields an immense quantity of gum, which appears in quality to resemble the ordinary gum Senegal of Commerce, and is largely partaken of by the Choors and Coles as food. It could be collected, Lieutenant Kitoe states, in large quantities in the Madoapote forests. The Pissar, another tree of these parts, yields a very hard adhesive gum of a clear white color, and there are several gigantic creepers that also yield gum. In the Pases there are many fine Saul timber trees, and the mountain Ash thrives well, and is much esteemed by the natives for banghies, bows, &c., &c. Ebony also is plentiful, and there is a powerfully aromatic grass, resembling the famous oil grass of Whow. The country (Upper Baumunghatin) would do well for any kind of cultivation.

9. The plant and fibre of the "Moongah."—Presented by Mr. D. W. H. Speed.

The fibre is a good deal used by the Natives, and appeared on examination to be the Sansevieria Zeylanica of Roxburgh. Mr. Speed found that it was prepared from the leaves which were gradually beat, either after or without soaking in water. On testing the strength of a single fibre, Mr. Speed found that the thicker bore 7 ounces while the fine broke at 5 ounces. The juice of the root of the plant is esteemed in fevers by the Hukeems.

10. Minute specimens of China Nankeen Cotton and Beerbhoom Brown Cotton.—Presented by Mr. Laidlay.

Mr. Laidlay in a recent visit to the Straits has been able to obtain some seeds direct from China of the Nankeen cotton plant, and is now engaged in experiments upon the usefulness of this variety of the plant in the climate of Bengal. The brown cotton of Beerbhoom of which Mr. Laidlay furnishes the sample is the indigenous sort that he is anxious to supersede.

11. Nine Brazil yams brought to India in the Ship Allerton Presented by Mr. Bellairs.

Mr. Bellairs has taken a part of the supply and finding them very superior to what Bengal furnishes, he thought they might be worth the acceptance of the Society.

Dr. Spry mentioned, that he had lost no time in forwarding a moiety of the supply to the nursery and distributing the remainder, where attention was likely to be paid to their cultivation.

12. Two Apricots (Juglans) grown at Batpore.—
Presented by Mr. Humphrey.

13. A bundle of fibre prepared from the plantain tree, and a small quantity of hemp from the aloë leaf.—Presented by Mr. Betts.

In his note which accompanied his present, Mr. Betts states, that having been attracted by a remark in the London Price Current of the 2d December last, from the respectable house of Messrs. Fry, Griffith and Co., that considerable supplies of a new sort of Hemp from the stalk of the plantain tree had realised from 6d to 8d per lb., he turned his attention to it and endeavoured to prepare the article; but the process he adopted was very slow, and he thought that it would not answer. Mr. Betts asks for any suggestions that the society might be able able to offer, and it was mentioned, that the mode of preparing the fibre in Manila, as described in the 1st Vol. of the transactions of the society, might be recommended.

14. Apricot, cherry, melons, cabbage, clover (three sorts) almonds, cypress, quince, and China aster seeds from Afghanistan.—Presented by Col. Smyth.

Colonel Smyth fears that few of these will grow in a Bengal climate the rains being so heavy. Neemutch and Ashow are, he thinks, the finest climates for acclimating cold country plants in, and considers it a pity there is not a horticultural garden at these stations.

15. A log of oak, walnut, and cedar (deodar), from the Himalyas.—Presented by Captain Cairns.

REPORT ON SOME SAMPLES OF ACCLIMATED UPLAND GEORGIAN COTTON, GROWN AT HANSI; OF INDIGENOUS COTTON FROM JALOWN, AND THE THIRD GENERATION OF ACCLIMATED PERUVIAN OR PERNAMBUCCO COTTON.

The Members of the Cotton Committee having had the samples of cotton lately received from Mr. Hurry, Captain Showers, and Colonel Skinner, before them for examination, have individually reported as follows:

Mr. Willis' Report.

Calcutta, April 2, 1840.

I have examined the several specimens of cotton sent in accompaniment with your circular, of the Members to the members of the Cotton Committee, dated the 19th March, and find them as follows: The three specimens Nos 1, 2 and 3, from Captain Showers, A D C of the Governor-General, stated to be the produce of Jalown, are remarkably clean and well gathered: excellent in colour and complexion, indicating thereby healthiness of growth. Each very flexible and from very fine for No 1,—down to fine for No. 2; and good fine for No. 3. Remarkably short in fibre, and even much shorter than specimens of Bundelcund cotton frequently to be met with as an ordinary mercantile commodity for sale in the bazars. It is rather deficient also in strength. The No 1, is rather better than the No 2, and the No 2, rather better than the No 3.

That the specimen No. 4, of Peruvian had 3d generation of acclimation, is very creditable and valuable. It is gathered remarkably clean; it is good in colour, though I think it deficient in that hue which indicates the best and most natural grain cotton. It is neither flexible nor fine, but, on the contrary, harsh and unsound. It has good fair length and good fair strength of fibre; but as I have seen one or two specimens of imported Peruvian, from cotton possessing all the merits of great flexibility and fineness: great length and also great strength of fibre, I consider this specimen to be degenerate, notwithstanding its greatly superior value, when compared with the ordinary cottons of this country.

That the specimen No. 5, of large bale sent by Col Skinner, from Hansi, is satisfactory; first, inasmuch as it represents the article gathered in a considerable mass, and apparently without any care in regard to a separation of the dirty and leafy particles and stained cotton, from that which is clean. It appears to be the produce, of the American green seed, or Upland Georgia cotton, though in what year of generation or descent from the original imported seed, is not stated.

As observed, it is gathered altogether as it comes from the pod, and therefore unclean and stained, and consequently greatly prejudiced in value. It is flexible and fine; it has good fair length, though rather too short a fibre; and it is somewhat deficient in strength; and though in all these respects it is superior to much of the ordinary cotton of this country, I think it inferior to the general mass of Upland Georgia cotton, which is usually imported into England from the United States.

(Signed) Jos. WILLIS.

Mr. Huffleagle's Report.

Calcutta, April 6, 1840.

In accordance with your wishes as per "Circular," I beg to add my remarks upon the samples of cotton sent, although not much reliance can be placed upon my judgment. I know very little about the article, and particularly of its value in the Liverpool or London markets.

Nos. 1, 2 and 3 Jalown.—Fine, weak, and of extremely short staple, and as the value of cotton depends very much upon the length of fibre, these specimens must be considered as very inferior, although the colour is good, and the cotton appears to be free from remnants of seeds, leaves, &c.

No 4, Peruvian.—Has comparatively a strong and long staple, and is greatly superior to the ordinary cotton, we meet with in the bazars.

No. 5, Hansi.—This specimen, I think, the best,—it has lustre; and in length of fibre equals the last, (No. 4) without its harshness; it has been very imperfectly cleaned, and contains remnants of crushed seeds, besides being much discoloured.

Of the value of each I can say nothing, (Mr. Willis can tell us all about it,) but I do not think that the best would have a comparison with the ordinary American cotton, exported for the English market.

(Signed) CHARLES HUFFLEAGLE.

Mr. Owen Porter's Report.

Calcutta, April 7, 1840.

The cottons you have sent me for report, may merit the following remarks.

Nos. 1, 2, and 3, all short staples.—No. 1, the best, 2 next best, and 3 the worst—none of them equal to the bulk of the Gujarat cottons, sold in England under the general term of Surats. 2 and 3, are quite unsuited to manufacturing purposes, but No. 1, might meet with a limited consumption to mix with other cottons of longer staple but inferior color. The bulk of Jalown cotton, never comes to market so free from leaf and seed as these samples.

No. 4, I have reason to doubt being Peruvian cotton, and am inclined to think it Pernambuco. The seeds of the latter cluster, of the former they do not. The staple is regular, but not so long as generally characterises this description of cotton. It is harsh, does not open freely, and is not as silky as it ought to be. The cotton of Peru is always irrigated. This cotton I believe has not had that advantage. In growing this cotton, which I believe to be the production of a standard tree, it becomes a matter for consideration whether the same quantity could be produced on the same ground as from the annual plant, now generally cultivated in India.

No. 5, has one great fault, viz., that the staple is very irregular, portions of it being as short as No. 1, (Jalone) and part longer than No. 4, (Peshian). The fibre is fine, silky and tolerably strong; but the color is dull and unhealthy looking, it is stained, leaky and needy.

No. 4, if from Peshian or Pernambuco seed, and No. 5, if from Georgian, have certainly both degenerated, but the Peshian or Pernambuco not so much as the Georgian.

(Signed) OWEN PORTER.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON AGRICULTURAL STATISTICS.

The returns which have been received from the different Medical Officers who have been so good as to favor the Society with replies to its circular, on the subject of the prices of the chief Agricultural products of the country, having been arranged by the Committee, the formula for the presentation to Government was submitted and along with it a map, in which the places whence the returns have been sent are marked with the chief geological features of the main mountain ranges and the plains.

THE NEW BUILDING.

The Hon'ble the President took an opportunity of observing that although he was not empowered to communicate explicitly the pleasure of Government, relative to the site for the intended new building, yet he believed he might safely announce, that by the next Meeting, the information would be fully before the Society. It might be the cost of the building might exceed that of the estimate given. Should such be the case, it would not be right to appropriate any more of the fixed assets of the Society, and the more preferable plan would be to ask the assistance of members individually for a small contribution. While they were about it, it was in every respect desirable, than a handsome building should be reared, that should be an ornament to the city and give ample accommodation to the institutions for which it was destined.

INFORMATION IN REPLY TO THE CIRCULAR REGARDING THE NATURAL PRODUCTIONS AND INTERCHANGES OF PLANTS.

A large collection of returns of a most valuable kind were laid on the table, bearing on the subject of the plants of the country, and such as could be introduced with the prospective advantage to the welfare of the country; among these were some highly valuable communications which had been received from Sir James Cairnes, Bart., the present Governor of Bombay, who on receiving the circular of the Society, had been pleased to direct letters to be addressed to some of the leading botanists under his Government; and from whom the information now transmitted was received in reply.

The Hon'ble the President, in calling the attention of the meeting to these documents, begged to recall to the notice of the members, that in the month of June last year, a despatch had been received by the Society from the Supreme Government of India, in which the intentions of the Home Government to transmit seeds and plants for the purpose "carrying on extensively, experiments for naturalizing in India useful and desirable plants indigenous in other countries," were communicated, that to give every support to so desirable a resolution, a committee has been appointed by the Society; and at its suggestion, a circular letter was addressed to many of the residents in the Empire, asking them to furnish information regarding the production of their part of the country, and what they deemed might be introduced with advantage. The replies now received were the result, and he begged to move that these papers should be referred to the committee for its examination and report, which was accordingly done.

PROMOTION OF AGRICULTURE IN THE AZIMGHUR DISTRICT.

Three very interesting communications were read from Mr. Tucker, Officer Collector of Azimghur, in which that gentleman draws the attention of the Society to the efforts he is making by the offer of rewards to promote the advancement of the agricultural resources of the district. Mr. Tucker deeming it necessary to encourage artificial planting throughout his district, as being an object of great public interest and utility, in consequence of the jungles and groves being fast destroyed to furnish fire wood to the sugar boilers has undertaken to offer through the Azimghur Achar, on his own account, two rewards of 200 and 100 Rs. each, to any person who should make the most extensive plantations this year of which the young trees should be well and healthy by the end of the dry season of 1841. Mr. Tucker would feel much gratified if the Agricultural Society would add gold and silver medals to these premiums. A schedule is also afforded by Mr. Tucker, as secretary of the Branch Society, in which the handsome sum of one thousand rupees, assigned in various sumas as prizes to exhibitors of the best Agricultural and Horticultural products, and a request is preferred for the grant of one gold and five silver medals from the Parent Society as a contribution. Mr. Tucker remarks, that "when the residents at a small station can raise upwards of 1,000 rupees for the encouragement of Agriculture, the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of British India cannot surely refuse the grant of six medals." With reference to the annual grant of 50 rupees made by the Parent Society, Mr. Tucker mentions, that he never contemplated using these funds after the Branch Society had once got over the first weakness of infancy. Having had frequent enquiries made of him by planters and others as to the cultivation and preparation of flax, which there is every reason to hope will become of the staple production of his part of the country. Mr. Tucker intimates that he has drawn up a brief account of the best modes of operation. The weavers of the Azimghur district are anxious for the success of the experiment, and many of them have taken from Mr. Tucker, samples of linen cloth for imitation. Mr. Tucker proposes that the Society should print the memoranda, and distribute them as a pamphlet.

The Hon'ble President thought the Society was much indebted to the indefatigable exertions of Mr. Tucker in so ably assisting in the great work of improvement throughout the district, and every encouragement consistent with the rules of the Society should be afforded to him.

With regard to the allotment of medals much conversation ensued, and it was at length determined, that seven silver medals should be placed at the disposal of Mr. Tucker, to distribute as he liked best; but that the Society only awarded gold medals to individuals in direct communication with the Society, and on very special occasions. It was decided that this could not be given.

The notes on the flax were referred to the Flax Committee.

SECOND MONTHLY MEETING OF THE ASSOCIATION AT BARRHAMPUR.

The last communication presented was a report from the secretary of the Barrhampur Branch Society, of the Exhibition held at Bhopalsabad, on the 29th ultimo.

Five English and five Native gentlemen were present, and three silver medals and seventy-two rupees were awarded as prizes to the native gardeners.

For all the above contributions, the thanks of the Society were awarded.

INDIGO PLANTERS' ASSOCIATIONKALLIGONGA (ON THE BILAKULLY) JESSORE.

15th APRIL, 1840.

Pursuant to a notice, a meeting took place at Kalligonga this day, at 11 o'clock, of parties interested in the Indigo Planters' Association, and in the formation of a Jessore district committee.

Mr. Thomas Brae was called to the chair.

MEMBERS PRESENT. Messrs. T. Brae, G. Rowe, G. Roots, A. A. Dunlop, J. Dunlop, E. Laplene, D. Lethangoe, E. G. Dubus, E. Dubus, J. Watson, H. Saubolle, E. Saubolle, J. H. Tesendie, Wm. Reid, H. G. The chairman then addressed the meeting on the propriety of choosing a fit person for a Secretary, who although he might now be a paid one, ought to be so at some future period, and also that this District Meeting, with others, to petition Government on the subject of making Ryots fulfil their contracts, by passing some Act, which shall be equally binding to the Planters as to the Ryots; and against the illegal proceedings of Magistrate's ordering the breaking up of sown lands, on the more immediate consideration of the Ryots; and of this being taken under the immediate consideration of the committee, and also of suggesting to the serious consideration of the committee to join the General committee, and other District committees in the formation of an Indigo Planter's Benevolent Fund.

Proposed by Mr. T. Brae, and seconded by Mr. G. Rowe, and carried nem. con. That Mr. M. S. Bell be requested to officiate as secretary.

Proposed by Mr. A. A. Dunlop, and seconded by Mr. D. Lethangoe, and carried unanimously, That the Jessore District Committee will most warmly co-operate with the General and other District committees in the formation of the fund for the support of Indigent Planters, and widows and children of the Members of the Indigo Planters' Association.

Proposed by Mr. Laplene, and seconded by Mr. J. Dunlop, that the next general meeting be fixed for the second Monday of September next, and that the General Meetings take place three times in the year; namely, on the second Monday of the months of February, May and September.

Proposed by Mr. Brae, and seconded by Mr. H. G. French, that the 14th and 16th rules of the General Meeting, be adopted by this Meeting.

Proposed by Mr. H. G. French, and seconded by Mr. G. Austin, that the 8th rule of the general committee be adopted by this Meeting, with exception of the words "one-third," and that "two" be substituted.

Proposed by Mr. Brae, and seconded by Mr. G. M. Smith, that the first Meeting of the committee, take place at Babookally, on the 20th May next, when the future Meeting will be regulated by the Members.

Proposed by Mr. Brae, and seconded by Mr. G. Rowe, that three form a quorum, but that no rule passed by the committee at one Meeting, be considered binding, until confirmed by a subsequent meeting.

Proposed by Mr. A. A. Dunlop, and seconded by Mr. E. Laplene, that it be left to the committee to furnish the Secretary with a pen, and funds for stationery and postage, these expenses to be laid before the next general meeting, for approval.

Proposed by Mr. A. A. Dunlop, and seconded by Mr. H. G. French, that the thanks of the meeting be voted to the chairman.

THE CHIEF MAGISTRATE'S POLICE REPORT.

To F. J. HALLIDAY, Esq.

Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal, Ind. Dept.

Sir,—I have herewith the honour to submit the following statements and remarks relative to the Police of the town of Calcutta, in the year 1839..

No. 1. General Statement shewing the number of cases of heinous crimes committed in the four Divisions of the Town, from 1st January to 31st December 1839, the number of persons apprehended for those offences, and the number punished, released, or committed to the Supreme Court for trial, the computed value of property stolen, and of that recovered during the same period, with entries at the foot, shewing the distribution of the totals to each Division of the Town.

No. 2. General Statement of the number of cases of misdemeanors brought forward in the four Divisions, and Chief Magistrate's office, from 1st January to 31st December 1839, shewing the number of persons tried and punished for such offences during that period, with entries at the foot, shewing the distribution of the totals to each Division of the Town, and to the Chief Magistrate's Office.

No. 3. Statement shewing the number of cases disposed of in the Conservancy Department.

No. 4. Statement of fees and fines and excheated property, transmitted to Government for the official year 1838-39.

No. 5. Abstract Statement of Commitments to the Supreme Court, shewing the number of persons convicted and acquitted, and a comparative view of commitments from 1829 to 1839.

2. The following is an abstract of the number of cases which have been brought to the knowledge of the Magistrates, the number of persons apprehended on account of them, and the number of punished by the Magistrates, and by the Supreme Court in the year 1839.

12. The statement of crimes for the year under crimes is favorable, compared with the preceding one; a reduction appears in the amount stolen, viz. Rs. 13,766-11-5 less last year; the amount recovered is the same.

13. In Appendix B. is given a statement of Fires that occurred in the Town of Calcutta, during the years 1837, 8, and 9. The cost of the Fire Engine Establishment is on the present arrangement.

For one Engine from 16th J. to 15th Oct. Rs. 780 0 0
For five Engines from 16th Oct. to 15th J. ,, 5,864 0 0

Total per year Rs 6,644 0 0

From the statement, it appears, that the number of Fires during the cold months is small, compared with those that occur in the four following months. The services of 3 Engines would be sufficient for all purposes during those months (in which very large fires have taken place even during the monsoons). The saving thus effected in the establishment could be well employed in manning two additional Engines, for the months, when Fires are most prevalent, thus :-

Engine Establishment from 16th June to 15th October.....	Rs 780 0 0
With the Establishment of three Engines from 16th Oct. to 14th February.....	2,084 0 0
With the Establishment of seven Engines from 15th February to 15th June.....	3,860 0 0

Total per year Rs 6,644 0 0

By this change there would be no additional expense entailed on Government. As the above number of efficient Engines are now in the Police, the salaries of the Establishment would remain as at present, the only difference would be the period for drawing them. I propose that this arrangement take place from 16th October next, the period having now arrived for entering the full complement, and it approved of, I beg that directions may be given to the Civil Auditor to that effect.

POLICE REPORT.

The Police Report for the Town of Calcutta for 1833, proposed the attainment of two objects as of paramount importance to the easy working of the Judicial business. The first was, that the Judicial authority, confided to Magistrates, should be exercised by one Magistrate instead of two; and the second, that their power should be extended to enable them to dispose of petty thefts. The first of these objects was attained by Act No. IV of 1835; and the second, by Act No. XXI. of 1839.

This latter Act came into full operation in the beginning of December last, a formality in the issue of a new commission of the peace having been omitted.

The column, " Punished by the Magistrate," as entered in the statement of offences will, it is hoped, henceforward be less open to question in its details than it was in former years.

Much is still wanted to facilitate the administration of criminal justice. The Criminal Sessions of the Supreme Court meet 4 times a year, the dates being as per margin.* If the 18th February, 17th August Sessions close as they often do, on the first week of August, 4 months elapse before they open again. In this interval, as well in the other quarters, prosecutors die, or witnesses abscond to the injury of the cause of justice, and it often happens, that the Magistrate has to elect between committing the prosecutor to jail with the thief, or putting a bullock on the forms of justice, by binding over a Frenchman to prosecute, who tells him plainly that he will be half way to France when the accused is called for trial.

The following are memoranda of cases that happened lately.

A Pick-pocket robbed a gentleman of a watch, worth 300 Rs. early in January, on the Calcutta Race Course. The Person robbed was an Indigo planter, his return to Calcutta, on the 18th February, would be to him a source of greater loss than if he had not recovered the watch at all.

A Box of Indigo, value, 1,200 Rs., was gutted of its contents on board of a boat, along side a French ship on the 16th December last; there was a fair chance of convicting the boat vandals, could the evidence of the owner, (a French Gentleman,) and the officers of the French ship be secured. This could only have been by the commitment of these persons in default of their finding heavy bail, to prison for 2 months, involving, to them, the utter derangement of their mercantile engagements.

In the case of Juggutdoolub Sing, tried at the 1st Sessions of 1840, witnesses had to be examined, who were residents of Dacca. Their first examination took place in December before the Magistrate, it was impossible to keep them till March in Calcutta, their houses and business being at Dacca. They failed to return in sufficient time at the end of February, and only saved the confiscation of the sumis stated in their recognizances, by their appearance a few hours before they were wanted.

The mate of a sea-going ship was robbed of 3 Rs. by his servant; the case was clear enough, but the Magistrate under the new law, which gives power to punish a simple larceny only, could not dispose of it. The ship sailed in a few weeks and the magistrate had to lect whether he would commit the mate to jail for six weeks for having been robbed by his servant of 3 Rs., or leave the case unprosecuted. With monthly Sessions all this would have been avoided.

Magistrates are familiar with the hardship of such cases, especially in a place like Calcutta, which is remarkable for its large proportion of fluctuating population. Officers in the civil and military services of the country, Indigo planters and their numerous native attachés, and the very large class engaged in the shipping interest, are continually called to and from Calcutta, and if they are at any time robbed to an extent exceeding 30 rupees, or by their servants, it becomes, unless by a lucky accident, impossible for the public to obtain the chance of bringing their plunderers to justice.

In another view, this delay is most injurious; cases constantly occur, where the evidence before the Magistrate for the guilt and against it, of any party, is very equally balanced. There may, in the Magistrate's mind, be good reason to expect a final acquittal, and yet the law requires him to send the prisoner to jail, for the evidence may not be of that weak description where bail is authorised. In these cases the benefit of a speedy trial is very great and most important to the cause of justice.

On these grounds, as well as on account of the multiplication of chances of escape to the guilty, arising from all delay whatever, it would be most desirable to alter the present (nearly) quarterly sessions to monthly sessions.

An average of 9 years presents the annual Criminal Police business of the town at 77 cases; this divided by 12, gives 6½ cases per month, or with the addition of private baits, say 7 cases per month. The recent enactment for the disposal of petty theft, will keep that average where it is now, or very slightly enhance it. This would be work for half a day for the Grand Jury. They would set too at 12 o'clock on the first Monday of every month, and be discharged at 3. Of this no one could justly complain, though they well may complain of being detained 3 or 4 whole days consecutively, or nearly so, as they now are. In the same manner 21 days or at most 3, would suffice for the disposal of those seven cases by the Petty Jury. The pressure of civil business would or would not allow of its interruption for 2 or 3 days in the beginning of each month. This is not a question to be discussed here, but it would be a manifest relief to the Petty Jury, could it be so arranged.

What is now proposed would be in strict analogy with the principles on which the central Criminal Court of London was established. In such a place they have many judges of various kinds and orders, as may be seen in the 1st Sec. of the Act. 4 and 5, William 4, Chap 36. Here we have not, and difficulty will stand in the way of this alteration. From the occupation of the time of the Court on the civil side, the criminal business of the 1st sessions of 1840 has extended 7 days into the civil term.

The above would be a substantive improvement and might be carried into effect, without any reference to a diminution of the labor of the Grand Jury as proposed below.

It would be a great improvement to relieve the Grand Jury of the mass of criminal business which now, very needlessly, is made to press upon them. The Grand with a floating addition of civil Servants who happen to be in Calcutta, about 40 are escape serving. Those who are compelled to serve, do so with reluctance. The more conscientious and patriotic sacrifice much of their time, but the bulk evade attendance, or when they do attend. The Foreman has to send round his threatening letters, and the common spectacle, afforded by the Grand Jury room, is, that of the Foreman and one or two others assisting in the examination of a case, whilst the bulk are reading, or writing letters, or engaged in conversation, having no relation to the business in hand.

It is certainly a great pity that so grave and serious a matter as the administration of criminal justice should thus be disposed of. But, it is a still greater pity, that the law or ancient custom, should condescend to put men into a situation where they will, from (it may almost be said) the necessity of the case, so act in all times coming, until the system is altered.

In Calcutta, in the year 1840, there would be small advantage in inquiring what was the history of the Grand Jury institution, how it grew up, whether it was feudal, and a portion of the power of the great barons, who would not allow a man to be tried if they did not like it, whether it owes its existence to the power of the twelve, with whom a single justice could not cope, and who required 23 such justices, in secret conclave, even to acquit them. These are antiquarian questions, but none of them very important to the inhabitants of Calcutta, who are interested only in having speedy, pure and effectual justice, and as a preliminary question in considering how far a Grand Jury adds to any of these objects, in the great bulk of cases,

If we trace the operations of a Grand Jury for the last nine years, we find that out of 839 cases sent up by the Magistrate, they have thrown out only 35 Bills, or 1 in 24. I have no return of Bills presented by private individuals, they are few in number, and cannot greatly affect the per centage of Bills thrown out.

They have found some presentments on extraneous subjects, such as the state of the drainage of the town, its dirtiness, &c. For 8 years they have never once visited a jail.

In the small per centage of Bills thrown out, we may trace a modicum of good. The delendants, in these cases, were saved being put into the predicament of standing at the public bar of the Supreme Court, and for this small amount of good 828 Gentlemen have been kept from their business, on an average of 4 or five days each.—839 prosecutors, and probably, 4,000 witnesses, have been obliged to spend days of useless attendance upon these Gentlemen at the Supreme Court.

We may well ask, what is the amount of this modicum of good, compared with the labour and inconvenience to others. Small indeed. Supposing the Grand Jury to have justly thrown out the Bills which they did throw out, would not the decision of the petty Jury have been as just and still more honorable to the accused, from the full disclosure of all the facts connected with the case? Would not the intended victims of some perjury have pointed with greater pleasure to the full and open verdict of a Petty Jury, who heard all the case, than to the secret investigation of a Grand one, where the charge, that was preferred against him only, but no particular of the reasons of not allowing him to be tried, were known? Again, the decision of the Grand Jury of the day, does not bind their successors. The efforts of the enemy during this quarter, though unsuccessful now, may not be so next quarter, and the institution is thus made a means of long continued suspense, to any one who has a powerful and unprincipled enemy.

Mr. Fullerton, when he was a member of the house of Alexander and Co., used gladly to pay the fine imposed by the Court for the failure of his attendance on the Grand Jury. How many other Gentlemen were able, and willing, to follow his example, we need not inquire.

Another fiction of the Grand Jury theory is, that the Bill found "true" by them becomes their's; it is no longer the Magistrate's act or the private party's act. Assuredly any Magistrate, or private party, if they had private ends to serve, would desire no better cloak, under which to work. A couple of false witnesses, sent before a Grand Jury, will generally, if managed with tolerable tact, procure a bill of assault, or minor offence, against any obscure individual; for the statements of the accused cannot be heard, and the witnesses of the defence are not allowed to appear. What a scandal that a tribunal, recognized by law, should exist, capable of being turned to such purposes! How disgraceful that the most respectable members of society should, every now and then, be thrown into circumstances that may make them the involuntary agents of such fraud!

Again, the very fear of being so used, may well throw men off their proper balance, and lead them to discard even true cases for very fear, lest they should be made agents in fraud.

NOTE.—The Petty Jury List amounts to persons	746
Of these are Government clerks	281
Merchants do	100
Tradesmen, mechanics and shopkeepers	180

	746

Upon the whole in the eye of reason and common sense, it would be a great advantage if the strength of the most enlightened wealthy and liberal inhabitants of this place were employed, not on the preliminary, but on the actual business of the Court; if, instead of settling, whether the man should be tried, they should be called upon to take their share of the labor of settling whether he is guilty, or not.

In calmly considering the operation of this institution, in the present days of enlightenment among the community, and of active public spirit, we may safely say, that where a Magistrate commits to prison, or holds to bail for the trial of an offence, a Grand Jury is useless. In all such cases it is better for the party that he should be let go by a Grand Jury. If the last mentioned tribunal would have had no grounds to send for trial, we may be very sure that the Petty Jury would have had none to convict. The labor of the Grand Jury might, therefore, have been saved,—the evidence before the Petty Jury would have settled the point finally, and the proceeding of the Magistrate, if grossly faulty, would have openly appeared to be so to the judge and the public.

Strenuous advocates of the Grand Jury will doubtless say, that by abolishing it we remove a stone of the Palladium of English liberty. To any one who has for many years seen the working of Grand and Petty Juries, it will be plain that the removal of a Grand Jury inquiry in cases sent in by a Magistrate, is a removal of one source of delay and trouble to prosecutors and witnesses, and affords not in the least the status of liberty which it is most desirous to preserve.

Indeed I can conceive no better means of preserving the real benefits of trial by Jury than by removing whatever incumbrance it, and subjects it to just annulment.

The only real use (and it is a most important one) of the Grand Jury, is to put men upon their trial in cases in which the magistracy might refuse to do it, or in which it would be improper to apply to the magistracy to do so, either because of the minuteness or fineness of the points at issue, such as libel, having, political, hearings, or because the persons accused were of the magistracy or closely connected with the Government. Let the Grand Jury meet quarterly, or as now, for the disposal of all such cases, and for making presentment on any subjects of general public interest, but relieve them of the mass of judicial criminal business in which they uselessly impede the course of justice.

Exception may well be taken against the English system of Petty Juries, that it very imperfectly carries out the principle of trial by one's Peers. What can be a more striking inconsistency, abstractedly, than to say that Calcutta tradesmen, and clerks in Calcutta offices, European or native, are the peers of a Mofussil Magistrate or Collector of the Civil Service? They are in one point of view his Peers, because they are well educated honest men; but, it is clear, that the law would give the Mofussil Magistrate, trial by his Peers in a more true and emphatic sense, if the really adjudicating Jury included some of the members of the Grand Jury List, the Merchants, Civilians and great landholders of the place.

In Scotland, which has been supposed to be more aristocratic in the feeling of its gentry than England itself, the whole body of landholders, except perhaps, Peers of Parliament, are contained in one Jury List. Thus all intelligent and well-educated men, whatever their differences of wealth or station, combine together in the pursuit of practical justice, and this surely presents to the mind a picture more grateful than that of England, where we have one class of commons taking an easier, and to their minds more honorable part, leaving the heavier labor to be done by a lower class.

Supposing the Grand Juries, with the reduced work above described of meeting 4 times a year, and hearing a trial case, or charge against a Magistrate once or twice a year, to be detained 4 days in the year. The difference between this and the time they on an average have given to the Grand Jury work in former years, might be bestowed on Petty Juries.

Perhaps the best way of attaining this, and it would be well on general grounds to do so, would be to act up to the Grand Jury rule of admission with great strictness; the effect would be to relieve Petty Juries, who have at present to attend before the Coroner, as well as the Supreme Court, to a considerable extent.

An ancient institution, such as the Grand Jury, would not, in all probability, be much affected by the speculations of any single individual; and it would be well, that the requisition for alteration should come from Grand Juries themselves.

In England they have not been discontinued, in all probability from the circumstance that Grand Juries are abundant, and the institution does not press on the people. The aristocratic prejudices of landholders is also flattered by it. It has, however, been exposed to rude attacks, and it is curious that no public writer has apparently taken up the question of the use of Grand Juries at large. Among the old writers, Millar, on the English Government, remarks, that the services for which they were originally intended, are no longer required from them, and that they serve a collateral purpose of preventing corrupt charges. It is shown above, that they are actually a screen for such charges. DeLolme, also praises them as a part of the general structure of English liberty. Blackstone and Chitty mention the legal use of them, but say little more.

Upon the whole, the important improvements to be effected in the administration of justice with Calcutta are.

1st. To hold monthly sessions without Grand Juries.

2nd. To discontinue the sending, before a Grand Jury, of all cases committed or held to bail by a Magistrate. A Grand Jury meeting quarterly, as at present, for the disposal of cases not sent up by a Magistrate.

3rd. To transfer gradually into the Petty Jury List, a great proportion of those now on the Grand Jury List.

I have the honour, &c.

Calcutta Police Office, March 28th, 1840.

P. S.—Whether Jail Deliveries should be also monthly, may deserve consideration, there would be no harm in that, provided the Judges acted in cases brought up monthly in the same manner as they now do, in cases postponed over from one sessions to another.—Hark, April 11.

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's Apartments, the 4th April 1840.

Present J. Sawers, Esq., C. Egerton, Esq., Dr. Stewart, W. Grahame, Esq., Dr. Spry, and Dr. Goodeve.

The following Gentlemen of the Bengal Medical Establishment, were proposed as Members of the Society.

SUDDER NIZAMUT ADAWLUT.

March 26, 1840.

(Before R. H. Rattray, Esq.)

This day three appeals came on to be heard, arising out of a sentence passed by Thomas Wyatt, Esq., late Judge of East Burdwan, in a criminal case, appealed from the decision of the magistrate by Moha Rane Komole Comaree, in a case in which she was the prosecutrix and Dukhinarunjun Mookerjee and others, were defendants.

The charge was, for forcibly taking the Rane Busant Comaree away from the Rajbarie, with property to the amount of four lacs of rupees, and was tried before the magistrate on the 27th of May last, who acquitted all the defendants without hearing witnesses on their behalf. Moha Rane Komole Comaree appealed against the magistrate's decision to the Judge, before whom and two assessors the case came on to be tried on the 22d of June last, on which occasion it appeared, that the principal defendant put in a defence submitting (amongst other things) that the province of the court on a criminal appeal, especially, when in the court below the case had been gone into on one side only, was either simply, to confirm their decision, simply to vacate it, or to direct a new trial when the proceedings appeared defective, to pass a contrary decision on matters of fact without giving the defendant an opportunity of proving his innocence would, as he submitted, be a novelty in appellate proceedings of the most dangerous tendency.

The Judge (Mr. Wyatt) however proceeded to pass sentence in the case without further proof, and the following is a copy of his order on the occasion :—

"As the case is within the meaning of Sec. 2, Regulation 7 of 1819, it is ordered, that a fine of 200 rupees be imposed on the defendant Dukhinarunjun, and in the event of his not paying the same, that he be imprisoned for the space of two months, and as that defendant is not fit to hold any employment under the Rane, he should not be permitted to continue any longer in her service, and that the magistrate do communicate this order to the Rane."

Against this order both parties appealed to the Sudder, the prosecutrix praying for an extension of punishment, and the defendant appealing on the ground that the Regulation quoted by the Judge could not possibly apply to the present case, as the Rane was a widow and above the age of 15 years, the Regulation in question applying to unmarried females under that age.

After the whole of the proceedings of the Magistrate and Judge had been read, and the Vakeels of the parties having been heard, the Judge (Mr. Rattray) stated, his opinion to the following effect :—

I am clearly of opinion, that in these proceedings there is no evidence whatever against the defendants to convict them of any of the charges preferred against them, and that, therefore, the sentence of the Judge (Mr. Wyatt) imposing the fine of 200 rupees must be set aside. It is not necessary for me to decide the case upon the Regulation mentioned by the Judge in his roobacary of the 22d of June; but I am of opinion, that it does not apply to this case, the Raneu being of full age and a widow. The Judge had no right to order the Raneu not to employ any person she pleased, and as this could not form part of a final sentence, I shall set aside the whole sentence altogether. The Vakeel for Komole Comaree contends that she has a right of controul over the young Raneu, as being the guardian, appointed by the late Rajah.

I am not aware by what right any person can be the guardian of a person of full age or exercise a right to confine her against her will. I have already stated my opinion, in another case, that the Raneu has a right to go where and do what she pleases, and I still think so.

The Vakeel for Komole Comaree then prayed the Judge, that the cases might be sent round to all the Judges of the Court.

Mr. Rattray.—No, that I will not do; but as the case is pressed, I will send the proceedings to a second Judge.

The Raneu Bussant Comaree's appeal against that part of the order of Mr. Wyatt that directed her not to employ the defendant then came on, and was disposed of in like manner.—Harkaru, April 1.

APRIL 4, 1840.

(Before Eduard Lee Warner, Esq.)

MOHARANE COMOLE COMAREE, v. DUKHINARUNJUN MOOKERJEE AND OTHERS.

The appeals in this case against a sentence passed by Thomas Wyatt, Esq., late Judge of East Burdwan, on the 22d of June last, came on this day, before Mr. Lee Warner, in consequence of the proceedings having been sent, by Mr. Rattray, before whom the case came on, on the 26th ultimo, for the opinion of a second judge.

After the proceedings had been read and the views of the respective parties heard, the Judge proceeded to pass his orders to the following effect:

In this case there is no evidence whatever against the defendants, and as to the fine imposed upon the defendant, Dukhinarunjun, by the Session Judge under sec. 2, Reg. 7, of 1819, I am of opinion that the Regulation quoted does not apply, and that, therefore, the order of the Session Judge of the 22d of June, must be set aside. With respect to that part of the order, which directs that the Mookerjee is not to serve the Raneu, it is quite clear, that the Fouzdary Court have nothing to do with the matter. Consequently, the order of this Session Judge, touching the fine and service, is not fit to be upheld. I agree in the opinion given by Mr. Robert Hallam Rattray; and, therefore, pass a final order, which is, that a copy of this proceeding, with a copy of the proceeding of the other Judge, (Mr. Rattray) and the papers of the case, be transmitted to the Session Judge of the East Burdwan, intimating, that if the fine has been paid in, the same should be returned, and further that the requisition calling for the appearance of Punnah and Dyah, be stayed.—Harkaru, April 11.

INSOLVENT COURT.

APRIL 14, 1840.

(Before Sir H. IV. Selon.)

IN THE MATTER OF ANDREW HARVEY.

It appeared that subsequent to the last order in regard to the matter of this insolvent, who is a Lieut. Colonel in the Company's army, for the deduction of one-half of his pay, which is a thousand rupees, the insolvent has received an augmentation to his allowance of four hundred rupees in consequence of his removal to Arracan in charge of a military force stationed there. In respect to this, an application by the assignee has been made, for the deduction of one-half of this augmentation also for the benefit of the creditors.

Mr. Clarke appeared on behalf of the insolvent, to show cause against this application being passed, and the grounds of opposition brought forward by Mr. Clarke were these: That subsequent to the last order of the Court, the insolvent has been located in Arracan, in charge of certain regiments, and that consequently on this new appointment, an additional allowance of four hundred rupees has been granted to him by the state. That the Assignee has no right of interference with this allowance but only because no fresh order has been issued by the Court to that effect; but also that the additional allowance has been granted to enable the insolvent to meet certain extra expenses connected with the nature of his new appointment. That formerly it was customary for the state to allow the sum of four hundred rupees, specifying the several items to which they were understood to be appropriated, such as for writers, burkous, horses, &c. but that since this practice of enumerating the items has been discontinued, though the aggregate sum of the whole, namely four hundred rupees continues to be paid for the same purpose of meeting the real expenses of the officer. That the four hundred rupees additionally allowed to the insolvent, therefore, will be swallowed up in actual expenses belonging to the duties of his appointment. That under these circumstances, if the Court granted the application, it would greatly distress the insolvent and be in reality a further deduction from his original pay. A part of the net invested the Court, with the discretionary power of taking what it thought a reasonable deduction, and then Mr. Clarke urged, that under these circumstances, and for the reasons stated, a deduction of the half of four hundred rupees would by no means be reasonable.

The Court enquired of Mr. Sandes, who appeared for the application, if he could point out any precedent to authorise the sanction of the application for deducting half of the additional allowance of the insolvent.

Mr. Sandes replied in the negative.

The Court then seemed inclined not to disturb the allowance received by Major Harvey while on command at Arracan. No decision of the question, however, was given, but the papers were taken to consider.

IN THE MATTER OF JAMES JACOB.

This insolvent appeared in person of receiving his discharge this morning, and seemed much anxious during the whole of the time the case remained before the court.

Mr. Prinsep opposed his discharge on the ground that certain property was farther discovered, and that certain entries in the Schedule required to be accounted for, and on these grounds he requested the insolvent to be remanded.

Mr. Stretell, Attorney for the insolvent, requested to see the affidavits, which was consented to by Mr. Prinsep.

Some conversation then took place regarding the property of which some concealment was alleged, and which required to be properly entered and accounted for. But it appearing that this excepted property was allowed by the consent of the assignee, and for so long a time no objection was urged, the Court believed that now it was very late to interfere.

Next, in reference to the matter of this insolvent, an attachment was applied for against Mr. W. D. Shaw and Mrs. Jacobs, for contempt of Court, in resisting the proceedings of the Assignee. Mr. Prinsep was for the attachment, and the Advocate-General and Mr. Leith opposing it. The point was discussed at some length, though in rather a desultory manner, and the grounds urged on either side was in effect as follows :

Mr. Prinsep urged, that the assignee had gone to the house of the Insolvent in Dhurrumtollah, to enquire into and examine certain property said to be concealed, and that while in the exercise of this discretionary power, which the Assignee was invested with, Mr. W. D. Shaw, Mrs. Jacobs, and young Jacobs, forcibly ejected him from the premises, an act which was in direct contempt of the Court.

Contra. It was urged that the assignee was in the first place without a warrant to authorize his instituting research on the premises, and that if he were shot in thus trespassing it would not be murder.

Mr. Prinsep then, after some further conversation, would leave the matter in the hands of the Court, observing that he expected there would be more discovery and examination in the case.

The court then, after making a few general remarks on the authority of this court, with its power to deal with cases of fraud and corruption, said, that there was no doubt that the Insolvent was guilty of dishonest concealment of property, there was no doubt that he had attempted to defraud his creditors, there was no doubt that he had not only withheld the truth from the court, but had been guilty of deposing to that which was false; there was no doubt that he had made those false statements on oath, and that to confirm them had brought the members of his family, his wife, his children, his servants, his friends, and every person connected with him in business, and had involved them in the same guilt and peril in which he had involved himself. That the court had the power to consign the insolvent to imprisonment for three years, but that in looking into the case, and without comparing what imprisonment in England to what it is here, the court's order was that the Insolvent remain in imprisonment for two years from the date of his petition being filed.

This order, however, was not to be considered absolute, but that the Insolvent might be discharged by the consent of the detaining creditors,

IN THE MATTER OF MANUCK MALCOLM MANUK.

The Advocate General, appeared for this Insolvent, and Mr. Leith against, and the question before the court was to decide on an application made by DeSouza and Co., creditors of the Insolvent, for an adjudication of Insolvency.

Mr. Leith urged for the application, that there were certain properties concealed; that the Insolvent had made an affidavit in the Supreme Court contrary to that filed in this court; and that the Insolvent had absconded from the jurisdiction in January 1838, to avoid payment of his debts, while he knew that a process was out against him. That he went to Serampore and afterwards removed to Cossipore, a place though only four miles distance, yet out of the jurisdiction, and this to prevent his creditors from availing themselves of legal remedy.

The Advocate General for the Insolvent, said, that his client had left about one year and three months ago, and asked why application was not made then. And in regard to the want of faith alleged against the Insolvent, he explained that the affidavit made in the Supreme Court was in consequence of some difference arising between the Insolvent and his trustees, Mr. Ford, regarding a change of attorneys. That the discrepancy alluded to in respect to the two affidavits was alleged only and was not real, the Insolvent having said the same thing in effect then as he swears to here.

The origin of the difference which led to the affidavit, was of a nature so as to induce the Insolvent to make the affidavit in the Supreme Court, Mr. Ford applied to the Insolvent's attorney, Mr. Sanders, asking the consent of the Insolvent to ensure his life for the benefit of his creditors generally. This consent was granted and Mr. Ford, instead of ensuring the Insolvent's life for the general body of the creditors, did so in benefit of his own firm only; that of Eglington, McClure and Co. That this circumstance led to differences, and the consequence was the affidavit in the Supreme Court. Next in regard to the absconding, the Advocate-General observed, that the fact was otherwise. That the Insolvent having given over business, had made arrangements with the general body of his creditors, if not with all of them, and then retired to Serampore, and thence removed to Cossipore. And that, therefore, after such arrangements as in fact was sufficiently evidenced by a deed to that effect, subscribed to by all his creditors but DeSouza and Co., would clearly testify that there was no absconding to evade justice in any manner. The Advocate General likewise alluded to the concealment of property which he said was in toto not the case.

The deeds and papers were then handed to the Court for further consideration.

It is the intention of this Insolvent to appeal to the Supreme Court if he does not obtain the redress he seeks in this court.

IN THE MATTER OF PETER FOSTER.

It appeared that in the matter of this Insolvent, that thirteen river sloops were under mortgage to a native for eleven thousand rupees, and the question before the court was an application from the mortgagees for the proceeds of these sloops. The Advocate General appeared for the application and Mr. Prinsep against.

After some desultory discussion, it was agreed upon, with reference to this question, that the sloop should be publicly sold before the ensuing rainy season, and the proceeds to go to be given to the mortgagee. That the creditors be allowed to bid, that if any balance arise it should go to the assignee, and if a deficiency an application be made in court and a balance proved.

IN THE MATTER OF RAJESORE GAIN.

Mr. Princep appeared for the Insolvent and Mr. Morton against him, and the question was why Insolvent should not be permitted to occupy a half of his family dwelling house at a monthly rent of 40 Rs.

Mr. Morton against the application urged, that the court should not interfere in such parish affairs, such trumpety questions, frivolous and trivial in the extreme, and if once recognized in court, was calculated to establish a mischievous precedent, for fifty such applications from trumpety matters every week. The assignee besides was invested with, power to settle such small matters, and it was left to his sound discretion how to act in regard to them; the court, therefore, should not interfere in them, unless some absolute misconduct or dishonesty was approved against the assignee. But in the present case, the assignee had good reason not to let the house to the Insolvent. First of all, the Insolvent was an improper tenant, as he had refused to pay his share of the assessment bills, and one that would not pay the assessment money might at least be expected to withhold house rent also. Another reason why the house should not be let to the Insolvent is, that it is to be sold soon by a decree of the supreme court, letting the house for the reduced rent of 40 for half of it, would deteriorate from the value of it.

Mr. Princep on the contrary urged, that had the house been sold all question would be set at rest. But the house was not sold and the creditors thought the offer by the Insolvent as sufficient and the creditors themselves wishing it, no objection could be set on enough against the Insolvent's being permitted to occupy the half of the house. Besides it was their family house, and it could not be let to any one but those belonging to the family, and the renting of it by the Insolvent, therefore, could not possibly deteriorate from the value of the premises. And again, which would be of mere advantage to the creditors having no rent as at present or letting the one half for 40 Rs.

The court refused the application and left the matter to the discretion of the assignee.

IN THE MATTER OF WILLIAM HENRY GILBERT.

Mr. Morton was in this case on behalf of the assignee, and Mr. Leith for the insolvent.

The Insolvent on being examined by Mr. Morton, deposed to the following effect.

That Mr. Skinner, one of the creditors of the firm, was absent from Calcutta from the end of May to the 16th June last, and had returned to Calcutta in consequence of having been taken ill at Benares. That the Insolvent was not aware of any message having been sent to him by Mr. Skinner. That two days subsequent to Mr. Skinner's return to Calcutta, he put a seal on the house.

That he, the Insolvent, removed no property during Mr. Skinner's absence or at any other time, excepting only some cloths which were sold to Mr. Turner for 800 Rs., and this was when Mr. Skinner was in Calcutta. That he, the Insolvent, never made any proposal to Mr. Skinner to the effect that if he would put him (the Insolvent) in prison he would take Mr. Skinner for a partner when he again set up in business; but that all he had said was to the effect that rather than see Mr. Skinner a sufferer, he would give him an assignment. That in May 1837, he gave two bonds to Mr. Guest, one for the Calcutta, and the other for the Meerut concern, which bonds have not been entered in the amended schedule. That the insolvent's partner, Mr. Peterson, had mentioned that the amount of the first bond was paid in full, namely 19,000 and odd hundred rupees. That the other bond had not been entered in the books because the Meerut account were not with him. That he applied to Mr. Stretell for a copy, but he did not obtain it, but had been promised this day in court to be furnished with it to morrow. That he was aware of the accounts being with Mr. Stretell, but could not speak as to their correctness till he had conferred with Mr. Peterson on the subject. That he frequently called upon Mr. Stretell for the accounts, but was always told that they were not yet ready. That since the failure he had drawn sums on his private account, to the extent of about 4,000 and odd hundred rupees. That Mr. Guest, his partner, drew 37,000 rupees. That he never had any silver plate, nor did he purchase a buggy and horse at the time of his marriage, but the buggy and horse he had, he sold on the previous day to the failure. Prior to the adjudication of insolvency, sums of money had been received by him, for the joint concern of which he sent an account to the assignee. That since the adjudication, he had received the sum of 300, Rs. which he made over in his attornies, Messrs. Burkingyoung and Barwell. The sums received previous to the adjudication, amount to about 11,000 rupees, 440 rupees of which he spent on his own personal account, and the rest was appropriated to the payment of servants' wages and other small bills, which were due at the time. That he sent four pieces of Oxford grey cloth to be shipped by Mr. Turner for Madras which were not mentioned in the schedule. That by the copartnership deed he drew 250 rupees monthly for his private expenses. That he had purchased furniture, &c. at the time of his marriage which was all sold with the property of Guest and Co. That in 1837 he had been admitted a partner in the business. That there were bill books kept but he could not say what became of them when the seizure was made, at which time he was at dinner and the whole of the books, including the cash book also were taken away. That he has no recollection if there were any drafts in June last on Colville, Gilmore and Co. That in the accounts he rendered to the Assignee there was a balance of 400 rupees with which sum he supported himself and family from June to November last. That this sum did not appear as a balance on hand but as a balance spent. That he received certain sums in June 1839, and that the sums in the book here, namely of 172 and 50 rupees respectively, ought to have been entered in the cash book.

This examination being concluded the Insolvent was remanded for further hearing.

Since the above report of the Insolvent Court was penned, we have been able to ascertain, that the miserable Insolvent Jacobs, has at length been fortunate enough to obtain the consent of his detaining creditors for his discharge, and has had a period put to his wretched incarceration.—Huskyn, April 15.

SUPREME COURT.

TUESDAY, MARCH 31-

Their Lordships sat in Court this morning at the usual hour. Nothing was done but the taking of a few motions. Their Lordships then adjourned and held a sedes vacante in Chambers.

The Advocate-General, Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith were heard at considerable length upon certain questions relating to the taxation of costs.

The Court intimated that they would deliberate and pronounce their opinion to-morrow upon the points raised.—Harkness, April 1.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 1.

Sir E. Ryan, C. J.—This morning pronounced the opinion of the Court upon the questions of taxation of costs raised. Their Lordships had thought it advisable that the argument should be heard in Chambers, that the mere business of the Court might not be interrupted, but they wished to deliver judgment in open Court. Their Lordships were perfectly satisfied that the Taxing Officer had acted in the conscientious discharge of his duty, although upon some of the questions raised, the Court differed with him in opinion, and the Attorneys had acted very properly in raising the questions for the decision of the Judges. Questions upon the taxation of costs in this Court are not questions of discretion—they depend upon the application of specific rules. By the 2nd Taxing Office Rule, no fees or charges were to be made by Attorneys or Officers of the Court, except such as were established by the Substitution Rules, and no alteration of the rules could be made even by the Court itself without the concurrence of the Governor-General in Council. According to this rule, therefore, where a question arose as to the allowance of a particular charge, it must depend upon the circumstances whether any rule general or special was to be found in the Taxing Office Rules or in the Table of Fees. If none the charge could not be allowed, under any circumstances. With respect to the 3d Taxing Rule, which directed the Court in the cases where the rules of the Supreme Court are not sufficiently explicit, to take the rules in practice of the Superior Courts in England for its guideline, the meaning of it was thus:—In the Table of Fees for example, for every necessary attendance a fee of two rupees or its anna was allowed, and in a question as to what was a "necessary attendance," the practice in England would be the guide if there was no specific rule. Something had been said yesterday in argument about the comparative rates of charges in this country and in Europe here being less, as a matter of course, but it was clear that this question could not arise as the Officers had no power whatever to adopt any other rate than such as is specified. [His Lordship then proceeded to apply the general principles laid down to the cases before the Court.]

1st. The first question related to a charge for receiving notice of motion. This was disallowed by the Taxing Officer on the ground, that the charge was not allowed in the Court of Chancery in England, and he mentioned, that his Lordship the Chief Justice had intimated that charges appeared to have been allowed in a Court which were not sanctioned in England. The Chief Justice had never mentioned any specific item, but had merely intimated to the Officer that some charges appeared to have been allowed which were not allowed in the Court of Chancery, but this did not apply where the case was governed by a specific rule. And the Court were of opinion, that the charge came within the 14th Taxing Rule, and was, therefore, improperly disallowed. That rule provided that no charge was to be allowed for the receipt of letters, notices, &c., except in cases where it was necessary to serve the same on the Attorney.

Objection allowed.

2d. Charge for receiving notice of interrogatories filed. This was allowed upon the same principle.

Objection allowed.

3d. Charge for drawing and fair-copying interrogatories. The charge for drawing had been allowed by the Taxing Officer, but the charge for fair-copying disallowed. The Court thought there was nothing in the Table of fees to allow the charge for fair-copying as a matter of course, though there might be cases in which it might be necessary. At home it was usual to engross a document from the draft, and no charge for a fair copy was permitted.

Disallowed.

4th. Charge for attending a witness in equity (one of the Attorneys of the Court,) and requiring him to attend upon his subpoena at the Examiner's Office. The Court were of opinion, that as the witness was bound to attend without any special requisition, and in order might have been obtained at once to compel his attendance, this charge could not be allowed.

Disallowed.

5th. Charge for receiving admissions made in the cause. As it was not necessary to serve these on the Attorney, the Court considered that the case did not fall within Rule 14, and the charge was therefore

Disallowed.

6th. Charge for receiving notice of producing witnesses. This came within the 14th Rule, and was accordingly

Allowed.

7th. Charge for receiving order nisi.

Allowed.

8th. Charge for attending, and for bespeaking and obtaining grounds of motion. The Court had great difficulty on this point, but upon the whole they were of opinion, that it was proper to allow it.

Allowed.

9th. Charge for attending, and receiving order made absolute. This the Court allowed on the same principle.

Allowed.

10th. Charge, receiving notice to reply.

Allowed.

11th. Charge of two sicca rupees attending calculating interest, and indorsing amount on writ of summons. There was nothing, either general or specific, in the rules or tables of fees to authorize this charge. The Court did not say that a rule might not be reasonably introduced for allowing such a fee, but this was not for the Court to consider now, and in the absence of any rule, general or special, authorizing the charge, it must be

Disallowed.

12th. Charge for engrossing notice of trial. The drawing had been allowed by the officer, and the Court thought that the engrossing ought to be allowed also.

Allowed.

13th. The officer had struck off one gold-mohur from each of the bills to counsel in a common law cause, both as between party and party, and between attorney and client. The fees in this case were four gold-mohurs and three gold-mohurs. The Court thought that the Officer had done right and that a higher rate of fees than the rate at home was not to be allowed in taxation ex officio between attorney and client, except where the attorney produced an express authority from his client to allow a certain rate.

Disallowed.

14th. Charge for instructions to the Sheriff to execute writ and advertise. The Court thought there was no authority for this. The Sheriff was bound to execute the writ without instructions; and, besides, all the charges for execution were to be found in the table of fees under the separate head of 'Costs of Execution,' in which no such charge as this was included.

Disallowed.

15th. Attending client to take instructions as to advertising. This the Court considered proper, and allowed the charge.

Allowed.

16th. Receiving notice of claim from the Sheriff, and calling upon party to indemnify. This the Court

Disallowed.

CHITTEI DOSS v. MUTHOOORE DOSS.

This was an action upon the common counts. The defence was that the defendant was a partner in a certain cootee, and that there were readjusted accounts.

The defendant had been arrested upon mesne process in the suit, and was still a prisoner in the custody of the Sheriff. After the case had proceeded some length, it was agreed that it should be referred to arbitration, and that the defendant should be liberated upon being commended.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Sandes for plaintiff.
Mr. Lenth for the defence.

Referred.

HUANG-ONG BARNOW, RAJAH HONGMEE ATEY KHAMN.

This was an action for the value of certain Chinthee Shaws, agreed to be purchased by the defendant on the 1st of Co's Rs 8,500.

The Advocate General and Mr. Sandes for plaintiff.
No one appeared for the defence. The plaintiff had a verdict.

Verdict for plaintiff.

P. A. CANTOR v. JUDGUTHOORE SING.

In this case there was judgment by default, and the cause came on upon a writ of inquiry to assess damages. The Advocate General and Mr. Sandes for plaintiff.
Damages Co.'s Rs.

S. W. ALEXANDER, ASSIGNEE OF BEAUMONT V. J. HOLMES, AND OTHERS.

This was an action of Prover brought by the Assignee of the insolvent, Beaumont.

The property in question which consisted of three cases of Vithari Accountants, was consigned in 1839 by Hambroger and Co. in London, to Beaumont. The latter, being in difficulties at the time, handed over the goods soon after their arrival to a merchant at Cawnpore, for the benefit of the consignors, and they were now held by the defendant, as the agents to the consignors and for their benefit.

Mr. Beaumont in 1839 took the benefit of the Insolvent Act, and the assignee brought this action to recover the property, on the alleged ground that it had vested in the insolvent and that the transfer was invalid.

There were few disputed facts, and the main question was the validity in law of the assignment by the insolvent.

Mr. Choke and Mr. Sandes for the plaintiff.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Lenth for the defence.

The Court would express no opinion now, but would give a verdict for the plaintiff with liberty to the defendants to move upon the point of law raised.

Verdict accordingly — Hockm, April 2.

THURSDAY, APRIL 2.

COSMINATH DOSS, v. GOODHOOPERASUD CHOSE & ANOTHERS.

This was an action upon a promissory note, to which infancy had been pleaded, and a ratification after full age, had been replied by the plaintiff.

Mr. Pinnsep and Mr. Johnson appeared for the plaintiff.

Two witnesses proved promises made by the party, in January, June and July 1838, and in September 1839. Upon the pleadings it was stated, that the party only came of age in August 1838, and as the plaint was filed in April 1839, none of the promises proved would have been applicable.

Mr. Morton, for the defence, submitted that the day laid in the pleadings must be taken as conclusive. But he was instructed that he should be able to shew clearly, in fact that the day when the defendant came of age was the 9th of August 1838.

The defendant's own witnesses, however, proved point blank that he came of age in August 1837.

Mr. Morton submitted, that nevertheless the day of coming of age must be taken to be admitted, on the record.

Per curiam. No. The onus of proving the date of his coming of age was upon the defendant.

Verdict for the plaintiff.

GOHAI BHOOND v. PREWBOOK AND RADAKISSEN.

Mr. Morton opened the pleadings.

The Advocate-General for the plaintiffs, said, that this was an action of libel between Hindoos. The libel complained of was of a very serious character, and contained passages charging the plaintiff's wife with open adultery, and the plaintiff himself with having at first acquiesced in his own dishonour and afterwards murdered the alleged paramour. No justification was attempted but the general issue alone had been pleaded, with notice to dispute the jurisdiction.

The jurisdiction was first proved. The original libel in the Hindustanee language and Deva nagree character was proved to have been signed by the defendant. Several copies were proved to have been printed and circulated, and two witnesses swore to having received printed copies from the defendant himself. The plaintiff and defendant were both persons of wealth and consideration, and appeared to have had a mutual feud for some years past, the plaintiff having procured the excommunication of the defendant from two caste to which they both belonged (the Bannya Agurwallia case) by the decision of the Panchayat.

The Court was crowded with natives of the Agurwallia caste (distinguished by their gay turbans of every hue and colour) amongst whom the proceedings seemed to create the most intense interest.

Mr. Clarke, (with whom was Mr. Leith,) for the defence, after commencing upon the plaintiff's evidence, proceeded to call witnesses to prove that the defendant Premsook could not read or write a word of the Deva-nagree character.

The witnesses concurred in stating that Premsook read and wrote the common Nagree, but was unacquainted with the Sanscrit or Deva-nagree.

The Advocate General in reply, observed that it was utterly immaterial whether the libeller himself understood the language in which his libel was printed or written. If an Englishman circulates amongst Jews a libel in the Hebrew language upon a member of the Jewish persuasion, the Court would not inquire whether such person was himself acquainted with Hebrew or not! The question was whether the libel was understood, and meant to be understood by the persons amongst whom it was circulated. It was hoped that the Court by their verdict in the present case, would show that they considered that a party, grossly insulted and libelled, came before the Court in a far better position as a plaintiff in an action of libel, than as a defendant in a criminal prosecution or upon a writ of habeas corpus for incarcerating the offender and taking the law into his own hands!

Sir E. Ryan, C. J.—The Court find a verdict for the plaintiff with five hundred rupees, damages.

Verdict for plaintiff, damages Co.'s Rs. 500.

PRAWAKISTO NONNANJER, v. DESILVA.

This was an action of assault. There was no plea but the general issue pleaded.

The witnesses proved a very trifling assault.

The Advocate General and Mr. Morton for the plaintiff.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith for the defendant.

Ryan C. J. Expressed the opinion of their Lordships, that this was not a case which ought to have been brought into this Court. There must be a verdict for the plaintiff, with twenty rupees damages, and each party must pay his own costs.

Verdict damages 20 rupees — Hurr. April 3.

FRIDAY, APRIL 3.

REDEE TAJUN V. SOOBERNONJY DABER AND OTHERS.

Mr. Morton for the plaintiff, moved for leave to compromise this case. The leave of the Court was necessary as it was a pauper case. No one appeared for the defendants.

Compromised.

RAMSABHICK MULLICK V. T. DESOUZA AND CO.

This is the Opium case, in which the most important of the pleas was tried upon dummett last term. The issues of fact now came on for trial.

Mr. Clarke opened the pleadings.—The plaint was upon a guarantee of the safe returns of a consignment of Opium. The defendants had pleaded, first, the general issue denying the contract of guarantee; secondly, that there was no written agreement within the Statute of Frauds, wherein the consideration was set for; and thirdly, that a "reasonable time" for making the returns had not elapsed at the time of commencing the action.

The Advocate-General for the plaintiffs, stated, that the action was brought by the plaintiffs as the consignors of the 65 chests of Opium, valued at about Co.'s Rs. 58,000, consigned to Messrs. Gemmell and Co., the agents of the defendants at Canton, upon the guarantee of the defendants of the safe returns of the consignment in Sycee Dollars or Government Bills. The Opium had been given up by Gemmell and Co. to Mr. Elliot, the Superintendent, and the only returns made consisted of certain scrip which the plaintiff had refused to accept. The two first issues raised would be decided by the written contract of guarantee given by the defendants, and with respect to the "reasonable time," it would be shewn that six months was considered a reasonable time, and at all events, it was apprehended the defendants were estopped upon this point as certain returns (such as they were) had been made before action brought. The measure of damages was to be regulated, it was conceived, by the price actually given for the Opium in question.

A number of documents were put in and proved on the part of the plaintiffs. Among them were the invoice and bill of lading, a letter from plaintiff to defendants, dated the 11th of January, and a letter from the defendants to the plaintiff, dated 16th January, containing the guarantee. The latter was in these words:

"We have to acknowledge bill of lading for (the Opium a question)"—which has in compliance with your request been consigned to our agents at China, Messrs. W and L. Gemmell and Co., to be disposed of immediately on your account, and the proceeds remitted in Sycee Silver dollars or Government Bills—if in specie under insurance. Commission at 2½ per cent will be charged on the whole transaction, as agreed upon, and we hereby guarantee the safe returns of the consignment."

Baboo Nulty Loll Seal was called as a witness and proved that 5 or 6 months was the usual period for his returns, but he said he spoke only of times when sales could be effected without difficulty, not of times when peculiar circumstances intervened to reduce the prices to a nominal quotation or to interrupt the traffic altogether. Mr. J. Crooke spoke to the same facts. Witness knew of returns made in August 1839, but this was not a regular sale in the ordinary course of business, but in order to make up the quantity required by Commissioner Lin!

Mr. Charles Kemp Dove, the Deputy registrar of the Opium Board, proved the price given for the Opium in question at the sales of January 1839. In cross-examination, witness said that in the May and June following the prices had fallen to about rupees 200 from the 800 to 865, which had been commanded in the January sales.

Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore deposed, that in China on the Coast 800 or 900 dollars had been obtained in certain adventures. In cross-examination witness said that those were recent transactions, the barque "Sir Edward Ryan" which arrived in January last, having been the first which brought intelligence of the high sales. For a long time subsequent to the stoppage of the trade, no sales had been effected at Canton or Amoy, and prices were merely nominal there. Without specific instructions an agent at China would not be authorized to carry the Opium from Canton to the coast for sale. Up to the sailing of the "Sir Edward Ryan," the general prices in Calcutta were not higher than from 2 to 300 rupees per Chest. The scrip sold from 300 to 400 rupees. It was bought on speculation as to its probable ultimate value.

Mr. Leith (with whom was Mr. Morton) for the defence, took several grounds. In the first place three was a question whether the contract proved corresponded with the contract as laid in the plaint. The learned counsel submitted that the letter written by the plaintiff, under date the 11th of January, was not sufficiently connected with the letter of the defendants of the 16th, containing the guarantee, to form any part of the contract or to bind the defendants in any way. It would be proved by the book-keeper of the defendants, that there was a conference between the parties between the 11th and 16th and that the 2½ per cent. was to be received by Gemmell and Co, not by the defendants. If so, there would be no consideration moving to the latter, and the agreement would be insufficient under the statute of fraud. Independently of this, it was submitted that the guarantee was only intended, and was so to be constructed, as a security against the insolvency or willful default of the agents, and moreover that the guarantee-liability was not to attach until after sale. It was clear that the defendants did not intend to guarantee the safe arrival of the goods in China, and it was equally clear that they had not guaranteed that any specific price should be obtained or indeed that any sale should be effected at all, but merely that if a sale should be effected, the returns should be secured to the plaintiff. With respect to the time elapsed,—there had intervened but nine months between the shipping of the consignment and the filing of this plaint. This might have been more than a "reasonable time" for making the returns under ordinary circumstances, but it had not been shown to be a reasonable time with reference to the utter stoppage of the trade and other recent events in China. Returns might yet be made according to the strict letter of the contract. As to the amount of damages, if the Court should be of opinion that the plaintiff must recover something,—it seemed clear that the verdict must be confined to nominal damages only, or else to the minimum value of opium at Canton and Canton about the period of the surrender. The price which the buyer may have given for his chests of opium in Calcutta, had nothing whatever to do with the question. The criterion was, not what the opium had been got for, but what could be got for the opium.

A witness was called for the defendants, who stated that between the 11th and 16th of January, it was verbally arranged between the plaintiff and defendants, that the 2½ per cent. commission was to be received by Gemmell and Co, and that no part of it was to be received by the defendants.

The Court were of opinion that there must be a verdict for the plaintiff upon all the issues, and for the present they would take the estimate of damages according to the price proved to have been given for the opium, as being the most certain and definite criterion. The question of amount of damages was the most difficult question in the case. The defendant might move for a non-suit or a verdict upon the points of law raised, if satisfied, or else to reduce the damages to a smaller sum.

Verdict for plaintiff accordingly.—Hukaru April 4.

SREEMUTTY KISTNOMOHAYE V. DISONAUTH DISWAS AND OTHERS.

This was a plea of defect of parties, and came on for hearing upon evidence. The only question was, not whether the persons mentioned in the plea were necessary parties to the suit, but whether they were subject to the jurisdiction of the Court.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Clarke for the plea, contended that it appeared even upon the complainant's own evidence, that the parties in question were subject to the jurisdiction. There was a joint family dwelling-house in Calcutta, at which some members of the family were resident at the time of filing the bill, and where all had occasionally resided.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Leith said, that the issue raised was a singular one. The complainant had no wish to prevent the parties from being brought before the Court if they really were subject to the jurisdiction; on the contrary it was the wish and interest of the complainant that they should be brought before the Court. Originally indeed they had been charged to be subject to the jurisdiction, but a subpoena to appear and answer had been refused by a learned judge, upon an affidavit disclosing the very facts which now appeared by the complainant's evidence.

The Court said that the plea must be allowed, with leave to amend, and costs to be reserved to the hearing.

Plea allowed.

BAGRAM AND OTHERS D. JORDAN AND OTHERS.

This was a suit to carry into effect the trusts of the Will of G. P. Bagram deceased.

Among the questions raised, was, whether the second marriage of the widow of the testator, who was the testamentary guardian of the infant children, was a sufficient ground for the appointment of a new guardian, or at least for referring in the report and enquire whether the lady still was a fit and proper person to be the guardian.

The eldest son, one of the defendants, was of age and claimed the guardianship, alleging that his mother had married a person much younger than herself in indifferent circumstances in life.

The Court observed, upon this point, that they should be disposed to grant a reference for their own satisfaction, not on account of any allegation concerning the circumstances of the second husband, but because by her subsequent marriage, the widow became in effect a different person; and guardianship was of course a personal trust.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Nott for the complainant.

The Advocate General and Mr. Morton for Mrs. Jordan and her husband.

Mr. Leith for the eldest son, Mr. Bagram.

The Court directed the counsel for the different parties to put in the minutes of the decree which they respectively proposed.—Huk. April 6.

JUTIN ALEXANDER EVERALL V. BUDDINAUTH GHOSAL,

This was a motion for an injunction to stay proceedings in an action of trespass for mesne profits. It was alleged by the bill, and the affidavits in support of the motion, that a certain pottah had been granted of the land in question by the defendant to one Kistnomohun Ghose, who had assigned it to the complainant, and that this pottah had since been lost or stolen out of complainant's possession. The two subscribing witnesses were dead, but the pottah had been proved upon their examination in certain Mufussil proceedings.

The affidavit of the defendant denied that he had ever granted such a pottah, and stated that if any such instrument ever existed, it was a forgery.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Morton for the complainant, contended, that although the main fact was completely denied, there were incidental and collateral matters admitted or left unnoticed, and that the complainant was entitled to injunction until answer at all events.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith contra urged, that the affidavit of the defendant must be taken as true for the purposes of this motion, and that the defendant would be in no better position, if the answer were now, in as far as related to the discovery which he sought in the action, at law.

The Court said, that according to the recent practice of allowing cause to be shewn against an injunction upon affidavits before answer, the affidavit substantially denying the statements upon which the injunction was moved was sufficient to dispose of the motion, and this was the same whether the injunction was to stay proceedings at law or for any other purpose. It might be advisable to reconsider the rule, but while the rule stood, a different practice could not be applied to any particular case.

Order discharged.

DISSENTING OPINION OF MR. JUSTICE.

This was a suit by a mortgagee against the mortgagor and prior mortgage.

The questions raised were mainly two,—first, whether any consideration had been given for the alleged prior mortgage (which was by a husband to his wife);—and secondly, whether the second mortgage had notice of the prior mortgage.

The Advocate-General, Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith, appeared for the complainants.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Morton for the defendants.

DISSENTING OPINION OF MR. JUSTICE.

In this suit the case for the complainants was closed yesterday, and the whole of the defendant's evidence had been concluded, except the proving of certain exhibits, which the defendant had obtained an order to prove in vacuo at the hearing.

This morning a difficulty arose upon this point. One of the two defendants was in contempt, and of course could not appear at the hearing. The other defendant had obtained an order upon the co-defendant to produce certain exhibits (two letters) admitted by the answer of the latter to be in his possession, for the purpose of proving them. These letters were now in the possession of the attorney of the latter, who claimed a lien upon them for costs, and declined giving them up while his claim was unsatisfied.

The Court said, that they could pronounce no opinion and pass no summary order whatever. They could only direct the cause to stand over, and in the meantime the master might be brought before the Court upon affidavit.

Stand over.

STEPHENS V. HUME.

This cause was called on again for the purpose of hearing the Counsel for the different parties upon the proposed Minutes of the interlocutory decree.

The Court made some alterations in the proposed Minutes. The chief alteration was the substitution of a reference to the Master to inquire and report whether the property was real or personal, instead of the reference as to the nature and particulars of the title. The latter reference had been objected to by all the parties, as there were doubts concerning the sufficiency of the title, and the inquiry, it was apprehended, might raise a host of claimants and lead to endless litigation.

Decree accordingly.

ECCLIASTICAL SIDE.

IN THE GOODS OF DOMINGO DE SILVA DECEASED.

Probate of the will of the Testator was applied for by the second son of the Testator's eldest son, and a caveat was entered by his eldest brother. The question turned entirely upon the construction of the will, though other matters were raised upon the affidavits, which it was not necessary to go into.

In one part of the will, the Testator, appointed his two sons Executors, and gave them several specific directions as to the execution of the trusts. In another part of the will, (which was very long and exceedingly obscure) he appointed his two sons, Managers and Administrators of the real property, and of a certain fund which he called the "General Fund," and in the event of their death, he appointed his grand sons managers and administrators when they should come of age.

The sons were dead. The eldest grand-son had obtained probate without opposition, on coming of age, limited however to the "General Fund."

The Advocate General, Mr. Leith and Mr. Morton of the caveat, contended, that the distinction between Executors of the property generally, and Managers of a particular fund, was carefully preserved throughout the will. The clause as to the General Fund merely created a trust, and mere trustees were not necessarily Executors.

Mr. Prinsep, for the petitioner, contended, that no precise words were necessary for the appointment of an executor. The petitioner was at all events entitled to the limited probate, which had been granted to his brother, as they both stood in the same position.

The Court thought, that the words merely created a trust. Expressions far less strong would be amply sufficient for the appointment of executors, but the will itself adopted the distinction in plain terms. When probate was granted to the present caveator, the attention of the Court had not been called to the whole will. The caveat must be allowed, but without costs.

Caveat allowed.—Hark. April 9.

AREYNAB NANNOO V. MOONSHER BOO ALLY AND OTHERS.

This was a plea to the jurisdiction of the Court. The bill stated, that the defendant, Boo Ally, was an inhabitant of Calcutta, and therefore subject to the jurisdiction, and that he was also specially subject thereto by reason of having caused to be prepared a certain fraudulent and forged bond and warrant (the subject matter of the bill) in the names of his co-defendants, and having entered up judgment and sued out execution in their names but for his own benefit; and that he was also specially subject by reason of having purchased the property in question in his own name, and having contracted and agreed with the Sheriff of Calcutta, a British subject (who was not a party to the suit) to be subject to the jurisdiction in respect of the property so purchased.

The defendant, Boo Ally, pleaded that he was at the time of the filing of the bill a Mahomedan inhabitant of Sealah, a place out of the local limits of the Supreme Court's jurisdiction, and that he was not then an inhabitant of Calcutta, and that he was in no wise subject to the jurisdiction.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith for the complainant. This case is different in many respects from the recent case of Bissessar Bonuerjee v. Ramrutton Roy. The judgment of which an abuse was there charged to have been made, was at least genuine, whereas in the present case the bond and warrant upon which the judgment was entered up, were charged to be forgeries. It was clear that Boo Ally would be subject to the criminal jurisdiction, either upon an indictment for forgery, conspiracy, or fraud.—Again, the purchase at the Sheriff's sale was in his own name. Then, with respect to the form of the plea, it was bad. The plea did not traverse any of the averments relating to the alleged jurisdiction, except the averment of inhabitation. There ought to have been a demurrer to the rest accompanying the plea.*

The Advocate-General and Mr. Morton were about to argue in support of the plea in form.

Mr. Clarke said, that to save expence he would waive the question of form, as his clients wished to take the opinion of the Court upon the substantial question.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Morton, upon the substantial question of jurisdiction, were stopped by the Court.

Sir E. Ryan, C. J.—We are of opinion, that the case is not distinguishable in principle from the decision in Ramrutton Roy's case. The fraud charged may be more gross, but the degree of fraud is not the question.

* Query whether such a demurrer would not overrule the plea, as the plea is to the whole bill. The averment of "jurisdiction may be considered a single averment, although made up of a variety of component allegations; and it should seem that the plea to the 'jurisdiction' generally, ought simply to meet such of the allegations as are material.

As the plea is defective in form, and the question of form is waived, each party must pay his own costs.

Sir J. P. Grant.—With deference to the opinion of my learned brethren, I retain the opinion which I expressed upon the former occasion; but I quite agree with the learned Chief Justice, that the two cases are not distinguishable in principle. The decision of the majority must of course be taken to be law in this Court, until overruled by a higher tribunal.

Sir H. W. Seton was also of opinion, that the case was governed by the former decision.

Plea allowed, by consent, each party paying their own costs.—Hark. April 10.

GUNGOABIND BOSE, V. WATLIN AND EARLE.

This cause was heard yesterday. The bill was filed for an account. It appeared, that an account was signed by the complainant, who received about Rs. 4,500 as the balance, but it was charged by the bill, that this was not a true account, and that it was acknowledged and signed by the complainant under circumstances, which made the acknowledgement a nullity.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Sandes appeared for the complainant.

The Advocate General and Mr. Leith for the defendants.

The Court ultimately directed, that the account should stand as a stated account and that upon the reference to the Master, the complainant might be at liberty to surcharge and falsify, the proof of the surcharges in the first instance to be upon him.

Decree accordingly.

COLLYDOSS GUNGOADHIA AND OTHERS V. SIBCHUNDER MULLICK AND OTHERS, &c.

In this case a Bengallee mortgage of certain landed property was granted in 1828, by one Gunbindchunder Day, and the title deed deposited with the mortgagee. The mortgagor, Gunbindchunder Day, afterwards became insolvent, and the assignee of his estate and effect was a party to the present suit. An action at law was instituted against Gobiachunder in 1832, for the principal and interest due upon the loan, and judgment was obtained for the amount; but this judgment had never been satisfied. A prior judgement had been obtained by another party, at whose suit the mortgaged premises were advertised for sale in execution in August, 1833. Notice of the mortgage was given at the time, and the property was sold by the Sheriff, subject to the claim, of the mortgagee. The defendant, Sibchunder Mullick, had taken an assignment from the purchaser at the sheriff's sale.

The bill prayed, as against Sibchunder Mullick, that the mortgage security might be deemed a valid and binding charge upon the lands, and that he might be decreed to satisfy the sum due for principal and interest, or that the lands might be sold and the proceeds applied in liquidation.

There were other parties to the bill, the representatives of Nundololl Day, who had become surety for the amount of the money lent. The bill had been taken pro confesso, against the assignee of the insolvent mortgagor and against two of the representatives of the surety.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Bhandas appeared for the complainant.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Clarke for Sibsunder Mullick.

Mr. Morton for an infant party, one of the representatives of Nunpholoh Day.

The Court were of opinion, that the case was similar in principle to the case of Annudharain Ghose v. Ragschunder Neoghy, decided in this court in April 1837. There was no case in this Court in which Bengallee mortgages, had been treated as equitable mortgages or as giving any lien upon the lands. Those instruments had always been looked upon as agreements, of which specific performance might be decreed in equity, or upon which actions at law might be brought for the recovery of the money. They were received as evidence under the common counts in assumpsit. No doubt the deposit of title deeds constituted an equitable mortgage between British subjects; but this was a question between Hindoos, and according to Hindoo Law a pledge must be accompanied by actual transfer of possession.

Bill dismissed.

DISCHAMBER SEAL V. RAMDRONG SONERJEE AND ANOTHER.

The further hearing of this cause (which was postponed on account of the refusal of the party, in whose possession certain exhibits were, to produce them) was continued this morning.

The exhibits (two letters) were now produced and proved.

Mr. Morton, the junior counsel for the defendant, was then heard.

The Advocate-General was heard in reply.

The court took time to consider upon the decree.

Sunds over for judgment.—Harkara, April 11.

SATURDAY, APRIL 11.

COLLYDOSS GUNGOPADHIA AND OTHERS V. SIBCHUNDER MULLICK AND OTHERS, &c.

Sir E. Ryan wished to mention, with respect to the decision of the Court, pronounced by him in this case yesterday, that Mr. Justice Seton concurred in the opinion of the rest of the Court, only so far that he considered the case was governed by the former decision. Upon the abstract question involved, (had it been res integra) the learned Judge pronounced no opinion.

The Advocate-General said, he believed it had been so understood by the bar, when the Learned Chief Justice pronounced judgment yesterday.

Mr. Prinsep took occasion to observe, that the late Advocate-General and himself had been the counsel for the defence in Ragschunder Neoghy's case, and that they had been very much surprised at their own success!

T. DICKENS, &c. v. A. F. SMITH AND C. BUTCHER.

Mr. Morton moved for an order for substitution of service of subpoena to appear and answer. The defendant, Mr. Adam Fries Smith, had sailed for England, leaving two partners in Calcutta, Mr. Ballour and Mr. Huddingle. The suit related to certain trust property, and had no relation to partnership matters, but, it was stated, in the affidavit, that the partners had the control of the trust funds in question as the agents of Mr. Smith. The other defendant, a co-trustee, had been served and had entered his appearance; and the present motion was that service on the partners at the partnership premises should be deemed good service on Mr. Smith.

The Court at first directed that a copy of the subpoena should also be served upon the co-trustee; but, it being stated, that he had left Calcutta for Dacca, they directed that the subpoena should be served on one of the partners at the partnership premises, and that should be deemed good service.

Granted.

F. BURNEY AND ANOTHER V. BAOSNAW AND OTHERS.

This was a suit instituted by one of the legatees under the will of Sir John Arnold.

The will bore date in 1834. There was a Schedule of the Legacies and bequests, in which the following entry occurred: "To the eight children of my daughter, Mrs. Colonel Doveton, at 20,000 rupees each, 1,60,000."

One of the eight children was the complainant, Mrs. Burney. There was a clause in the will, immediately following, directing "that all advances made to my grand-children, either in England or India, are to be deducted from the legacies (of those) to whom such advances have been made."

In 1831, the sum of rupees 20,000, had been settled by the Testator upon his grand-daughter, Mrs. Burney, on her marriage. The question, therefore, was now raised, whether this sum was to be "deducted" from the legacy.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Nott, for the complainants, contended that the Testator must be taken to have meant advances subsequent to the date of the will. In all the cases relating to "ademption" of legacies the advances were subsequent not prior. If any other construction were put upon the will, the clause bequeathing this sum to Mrs. Burney would be rendered null and absurd. The legacy would be given and taken away in the same breath. If the testator intended the prior settlement to exclude Mrs. Burney from the legacy, he would have written: "To my seven grand children, &c." and the sum total would have been less by 20,000 rupees.

Mr. Leith and Mr. Morton for the executors and adult legatees, and Mr. Johnson for the infant legatee, contended, that the Schedule was evidently introduced into the will for the sake of uniformity, and in order to shew that altogether, either by way of legacy after the Testator's death, or by advance in his lifetime, each grandchild was to receive the same share out of the estate. If the complainant were to receive the legacy, she would take a double portion. The apparent inconsistency arose only from the coincidence of the sums being equal. If the sum settled, had happened to be 19,000, there would have been no difficulty in the case, and it had actually happened that another grandchild had received a prior advance of 5,000 rupees, which had been deducted from his legacy without demur. The word "deducted" was incorrect, and created the apparent difficulty, where the two sums were exactly the same. The law of "ademption" of legacies was inapplicable, because the doctrine of "ademption" was founded only upon presumption. It would of course be absurd to speak of a legacy being "adeemed" by any but a subsequent act. The question here arose upon the express words of the will, and the construction contended for by the other side would only be upheld by a complete change of the apparent meaning, and converting past into future.

* Memo. According to this decision a Bengallee mortgage is not worth a cowrie, as a mortgage. It is worth as much as the promissory note of the borrower and no more!

A question also arose as to the tenure of certain bungalows at Barrackpore, and whether they were personal property passing by the will, (not executed, so as to pass real property,) or descended to the heirs at law.

The Court took time to consider upon the former question. As to the latter, there must be a reference to the master, as the facts were not sufficiently before the Court, — especially as the heirs at law were out of the jurisdiction, and not parties to the suit.

Stands over.

BREEMUTTY RAMARUNGINEE DOSSEE V. GOOROODERS ROY

This was a motion for a receiver. The property, which was of very considerable value, was joint, — the complainant was admitted to be entitled to one fifth share, but she claimed more. The defendant was the manager of the family, and admitted by his answer, that the complainant had received no share of the property since her husband's death, but he denied that he had excluded her against her own inclinations.

The Advocate General, Mr. Lath, and Mr. Morton, in support of the motion, contended that upon the defendant's admissions, the complainant was entitled to a receiver, at least as to one-fifth.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Clarke, contra, urged, that it had been decided in this Court that the case of a Hindoo manager was not like the case of executor, and that a receiver would not be appointed, except in cases of gross mismanagement.

There was a question raised by the original bill in this suit, as to the validity of a will under which the complainant claimed a right to adopt. It was agreed this should be tried by an issue at the Sittings after next Term.

The Court said, they should grant a receiver unless the defendant consented to give security to pay one fifth of the net produce to the complainant.

The Counsel for the defendant consented, and the order was so drawn up.

Order accordingly.

This was the last day of the Sittings.

SATURDAY, APRIL 18,

IN EQUITY.

BAHAM V. JORDAN,

In this case, which was heard in the Sittings, (vide report in the Hurkaru) the judgement of the Court was pronounced this morning by the Chief Justice.

The decree of the Court in substance was, that the will of the Testator should be established and the trusts carried into execution. That the heir-at-law was bound to make his election between retaining the after-acquired real estate, and taking any benefit under the will. That it be referred to the Master to take an account of the rents and profits of the real estate, and an account of the personality with the exception of certain personal property specified in the ninth clause of the will, to which the widow was absolutely entitled. That it be referred to the Master to enquire and report what was the highest rent obtainable for the house occupied by the eldest son, and that he pay the difference in amount. That the widow be entitled to a life interest in the real and personal estate and property, subject only to the maintenance of the children. That the executors pay into Court the Company's Paper and monies admitted to be in their hands. That it be referred to the Master to enquire and report whether the widow (having remarried) was a fit and proper person to be continued as guardian of the infant children. That a Receiver be appointed; and all further directions reserved.

Decreed accordingly.

BURNEY V. BAGSHAW,

This case was heard last Sittings (See Report in Hurkaru), and the main question was whether Mrs. Burney, the complainant, was entitled to a legacy of Rs. 20,000 under the will of her grandfather, Sir John Arnold.

Sir E. Ryan, C. J. This question has been argued for the complainant as if it were a question of "adeemption" of the legacy. No such question, however, arises, the settlement being anterior to the will, and the whole matter depending upon the express words of the will. For the same reason the cases upon the law of "double portions" are not applicable, the question now being one of presumption, but of mere construction. If indeed it had become a question whether the case came within the rules relating to double portions, it would have been of importance to ascertain whether the testator stood in loco parentis in respect of the legatee; and it is curious that the matters necessary for the determination of this point do not appear upon the face of the bill and answer. For example, it does not appear whether the father of Mrs. Burney was living at the time, and whether the Testator acted generally as the guardian or quasi parent of the grandchild. Our decision, however, is independent of this, and as far as the ground of the decision is concerned, it would be the same if the testator and legatee were entire strangers to each other. We think, looking at the whole will, that the clear intention of the testator was that each grand-child should receive the specific sum of Rs. 20,000 out of the estate, either by way of provision and advancement in his lifetime, or legacy after his death. The words clearly relate to advances already made. The whole difficulty arises from the coincidence of the exact equality of the two sums, which makes the word "deducted" ambiguous. If the advance had been of a sum at all smaller in amount, there would have been no doubt or difficulty whatever. The complainant, therefore, is not entitled to the legacy. The parties had an undoubted right to take the opinion of the Court; and the costs of all parties must be paid out of the estate.

Decree accordingly.

J. F. HYDE AND OTHERS V. J. J. CORNELIUS.

This was a motion on behalf of the complainant, to show the legatees under the will of L. Cornelius had assigned all share and interest in their legacies,) that he might be allowed to pay into Court money in his hands belonging to the Estate, instead of paying it over to the defendant the surviving executor. The affidavits of the complainant charged a devastavit, against the executor, and that a large balance was due by him to the estate. This was denied by the defendant in his affidavit, and it was sworn by him that a considerable balance was due to him from the estate, for repairs to certain houses in which the testator's widow (lately deceased) had a life-interest under the will, and to which the legatees were entitled in reversion. These houses, had been sold upon the widow's death, and the complainant had been the purchaser of two—the purchase-money still in his hands being the debt in question which he applied for leave to pay into Court.

Mr. Clarke and Mr. Leith for the application. The executor has been guilty of a devastavit upon his own showing. The tenant for life herself ought to have repaired the houses, and the executor, therefore, can have no claim against the estate for payments improperly and unnecessarily made by him. This money is the proceeds of a specific legacy to which the complainants' title is undoubted, and they only seek to have it brought into Court for sale custody. It is almost a motion of course for the executor to be ordered to bring into Court unapplied funds belonging to the estate in his hands.

The Advocate General and Mr. Morton contra. This is a motion for which precedent is to be found. The money in question ought long since to have been paid by this party into the hands of the executor, and at all events, therefore, the complainants can be in no better position than if the motion were for the Executor himself to pay in money in his hands. Now the latter motion is never granted, except upon a clear and undisputed case of misappropriation of this property established against him, or upon a distinct admission in his answer that there is a clear balance in his hands. Rutherford v. Dawson, (2 Ball and Bealey Rep.) Nothing of the kind appears here, and the Executor positively swears that a balance is due to himself.

The Court were of opinion that the money must be paid into the Court.

Order absolute.—Hark, Feb. 20.

APRIL 18, 1840.

The Sessions for the present year, opened this day. A full bench were present, and the Grand Jury being impanelled, Sir H. W. Selon delivered the usual charge in but a very few words. After a general remark or two customary on such occasions, his Lordship alluded to the state of the calendar for the present sessions. In particular only one case was noticed, that of murder; and in regard to the rest, his Lordship remarked, that among them he was sorry to say there were some serious cases on which, however, he was not in a situation to make any comment, as he had no time to look into them sufficiently.

The calendar before the Grand Jury stands as follows

1. Ramneedy, charged with having on the night of the 24th or the morning of the 25th February, burglariously and feloniously stolen from the godown of Petumber Haura, situated in Hautkhola, fifty-nine bags of rice valued 77 rupees.

2. Peeroo, charged with having, on the night of the 12th March, burglariously and feloniously taken from the house of Ramdhone, situated in Shambazar, a brass latal and sundry other articles belonging to the said Ramdhone.

3. Huirimohun Ghose, charged with having on the night of the 11th, or the morning of the 12th March, burglariously and feloniously stolen from the house of Unnoon, situated in Comartolah, a gold necklace, valued 50 rupees, and various other articles of value.

4. Ramchand Mookerjee, charged with having feloniously stolen from the dwelling house of Lollucoomaroy Mullick, on the night of the 17th March, a silver hooka bottom, value 30 rupees, and other hooka apparatus of value.

5. Mirza Hannam, charged with having on the 14th March, feloniously stolen from the house of Meerbux Ally, situated in Jann Bazar, 16 rupees in cash, a latal and other articles of value.

6. Peter Burke, charged with having on the 22d March, at a place called Kurrackpore, in Midnapore, maliciously and unlawfully assaulted one Roopchand Potldar, and having discharged a loaded gun at the said Roopchand Potldar.

7. Jacob McCowan, charged with having on the day and date above mentioned, aided and abetted Peter Burke, in doing bodily injury to the said Roopchand Potldar.

8. Edward Hughes, charged with the murder of Ounce Koomiee, and the unlawful imprisonment of fifteen others.

9. Joynarain Roy, charged with having on the 16th March, burglariously stolen from the house of Soorjemonee, various articles of jewellery, to the amount of about 200 rupees in value.

10. Aijun, Fakshee and Gunny Sing, charged with having on the night of the 7th April, stolen from a house in Burabazar, twenty-nine bundles of thread, value 90 rupees, being the property of one Sunkarlo.

11. Madoosodun Doss charged with having on the 6th February, feloniously stolen four notes of the Union Bank of 100 rupees each in value, from the premises of the General Assembly's Institution, situated in Cornwallis square.

12. John Edward Hicken, charged with having on the 24th February, attempted to pass a forged and fabricated paper, purporting to be a Bill of Exchange, drawn by Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co, of Madras, on the firm of Messrs. Gillanders, Arbuthnot and Co, of Calcutta.

13. Teeruckchurn, charged with having on the 3d October, 1839, unlawfully administered a certain fruit called long pepper to Eliza Rondeau, which article thus administered caused the death of the said Eliza Rondeau.

14. Charles McDonald, charged with having on the 3d April, feloniously stolen jewellery to the value of about 55 rupees belonging to one Matthew DeCruz, living in Bowbazar.

15. Ramdhone Chatterjee, charged with having on the 27th February, feloniously stolen from the premises of Baboo Dwaniknath Tagore, a Cashmere shawl, of the value of 100 rupees.

MONDAY, APRIL 20, 1840.

Three natives named Arjoon, Bungshee and Gunnee Sing, against whom the Grand Jury found a true bill, were brought up for trial to day. The charge against them was for severally having burglariously and forcibly entered the godown of one Sunker Sing and his partners, on the morning of the 7th April, while it was yet dark, and having therefrom stolen twenty nine bundles of thread value 90 rupees. On the prisoners being arraigned, they all pleaded not guilty; and after a short trial the two former were convicted and sentenced to two months' hard labour in the House of Correction, and the last, Gunnee Sing, was found not guilty and discharged.

Peeroo, charged with burglariously entering the dwelling house of Ramdhone, in Shamm bazar, and stealing therefrom cotton, wearing apparel and a lotah, value rupees 2-12, was found guilty of simple larceny, and sentenced to hard labor in the House of Correction for 3 months.

Charles McDonald, charged with stealing from the dwelling house of Mathew DeCruz, gold ornaments value 55 rupees, and 25 rupees in coin, the property of one Zeenauth, was found guilty and sentenced to hard labour in the House of Correction for 3 months.

ADJOURNED SITTINGS.

WOMACHURN DOSS AND ANOTHER V. ROSSMONEY DOSSAM AND OTHERS.

Judgment in this cause was delivered this morning by the Chief Justice. It will be recollected that the suit, which was brought for a partition of the alleged joint estate and property in the possession of the widow of Rajchunder Doss, was heard upon evidence in the past Term, and occupied several days. The property involved is said to amount to forty or fifty lacs of rupees.

Sir E. Ryan, C. J. The prayer of the original bill is that the complainant, Womachurn, be declared entitled to the moiety of one-third, and the complainant Roy money to one-third, of the alleged joint estate. No question of law arises in the case, but the mere question of fact, whether the property is joint or separate. It is clearly settled that where one member of a joint Hindoo family acquires property entirely by his own exertions, the other members are not entitled to share in such self-acquired property, and it is equally clear that if property is acquired by the use and employment of patrimonial funds, all the members of the joint family become entitled to share. The complainants' Counsel, in the present case, have only asked for issues at law to try the question of jointure, possibly from an apprehension that no very strong case had been made out. The Court are satisfied that there is no necessity for granting an issue, and there are many strong reasons for dispensing with an issue if possible, in the present instance. The common ancestor died, seventy years ago, and the chief endeavours of the complainants have been directed to establishing the fact that patrimonial funds descended from him. Another object of the complainants has been to endeavour to show that there were joint acquisitions. Now the talook of Mokimpore was purchased so long ago as 1801, and it does not appear to have been purchased out of joint funds. There is certainly contradictory oral evidence on some points; but on other and material points both parties agree. It is certain that the family were living with their relations, the Monnals, and supported by them for some years after the death of Kistnoram, the common ancestor. The decree of 1811, confirmed upon appeal to the Sudder in 1816, in effect establishes that the estate was not joint. This decree, indeed, is not conclusive even as against Collypersaud, because it only relates to a particular talook in a particular zillah; it appears, however, clearly from the decree, itself reciting the pleadings and evidence, that the substantial claim then was precisely the same as the claim now, and if Collypersaud could have established what he there contended for, viz. the general jointure in estate of the family, the decree must inevitably have been in his favour. Then the subsequent conduct of the different members of the family, shows acquiescence, and all the documents produced (except the letters proved at the hearing) tend to show that the estate was not joint but separate. All the title-deeds are in the name of Pritram. All payments are made to him. Pritram is styled zemindar and Ramonoo thesildar. The youngest of the three brothers, Collypersaud survives the other two, and yet allows Rajchunder, the son of Pritram, to assume the management of the whole estate and property. Ramonoo and his widow, Roymoney, acquiesce from first to last, and the latter advances a claim for the first time less than three years ago. Upon the whole, we believe the case of the defendants, and disbelieve that set up by the complainants, and we consider an issue quite unnecessary. The bill, therefore, must be dismissed with costs.

Bill of complaint dismissed.—Hurkaru, April 21.

APRIL 21.

Ramneedy, charged with breaking into the godown of Petumber Iluzrah and stealing therefrom 59 bags of rice, value 70 sicca rupees, the property of Lollimdhona Shaw, of Zillah Mymensing, was found not guilty and discharged.

Joynarain Day, charged with stealing from the dwelling of Soorjoomoney various articles of jewellery, value 564-4, her property, were found not guilty and discharged.

Dunnee Sing, charged with stealing a pair of pedestals from Rung Lall, a shopkeeper in the bazar, was found not guilty and discharged.

Ramdhone Chatterjee, charged with stealing Cashmere shawl, the property of Dwarkanath Tagore, was found guilty and sentenced to hard labour in the House of Correction for three months.

Ramchund Mookerjee, charged with stealing from the dwelling of Collycoomar Roy Mullick, silver hookah articles value 32 rupees, was found guilty and sentenced to hard labour in the House of Correction for three months.—Hurkaru, April 22.

APRIL 22.

During this day the Grand Jury deputed their Foreman to apply to the Court for information regarding the case of abortion. The purport of the enquiry was, whether there being sufficient evidence against the prisoner, she was to be brought in for murder, or in any other manner.

The Court very explicitly explained the matter, remarking, that if the Grand jury were satisfied that the prisoner had administered the noxious drug with the full intent of causing the fatal results which did follow, they were to bring her in for murder. If, on the contrary, there did not appear any such intent, and if the evidence still went to implicate her as the cause of the death, she was to be brought in for a lesser crime. Several authorities were cited and alluded to by the Court, explanatory of the point; and among others, the third fourth, and seventh clauses of the New Criminal Act, were adduced.

During the day, the Grand Jury also made their Presentation of a true bill against Edward Hughes, a European over-see, on the Hazaribag Road, for the willful murder of Oorain Coomree.

Harrymohan Ghose was tried this-day on a charge of having burglariously entered the dwelling house of Auntee Raur, and feloniously stealing therefrom, a gold neck chain, sundry pieces of wearing apparel and various other articles, altogether to the value of 74 rupees and a few annas. After a protracted trial, which lasted the entire day, Mr. Clarke being for the prosecution and the Advocate General for the defence, the Jury returned a verdict in the evening of "not guilty."

Only seven cases more remain for trial in the present Sessions.—Huskur, April 23.

APRIL 23.

Moodonsudun Doss charged with stealing four notes, value 100 rupees each, the property of the institution in Cornwallis Square, under the authority of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, was found not guilty and discharged.

Lalogram, charged with stealing property, gold and silver ornaments, and current coin, to a large amount, the property of Ramchand Misser, was found guilty, and sentenced to be imprisoned in the House of Correction for 3 calendar months.

Teluckchorh, charged with administering a noxious drug to the wife of one John B. Rondeau, from the effects of which she died, was found guilty, and sentenced to be imprisoned in the House of Correction for 12 months.

Grand Jury discharged.—Husk. April 24.

APRIL 24, 1840.

THE FORGERY CASE.

John Edward Hicken, was brought up for trial on the charge of having on the 24th February, uttered a forged and fabricated document, purporting to be a bill of exchange, for the sum of Company's rupees 200, with the intent of defrauding Messrs. Gillanders, Arbutnot and Co., or Francis Henry Moran. The prisoner being arraigned—pleaded not guilty.

William Hart.—I know the prisoner, who was born in Ceylon, and am aware, that his father is an Englishman; but I cannot say, if the prisoner be a legitimate child of his, nor do I know what country woman his mother is.

Francis Henry Moran being sworn, deposed, that on the 24th February last, he received a bill from one of the young men of the band of the 21st, named Edward Wellesly, for which he paid him 193 rupees, the bill being for 200 rupees. He then gave the bill to Sergeant Major Paddie, to ascertain its accuracy, who wrote saying, that the bill was a spurious one. He next took the bill, who presented the bill, and went to the lodgings of the prisoner, whom he gave in custody. The prisoner at the time mentioned that he had received the bill from his father, and shewed the postscript of a letter to that effect. I perceived also, at the time, that the postscript did not appear to be in the same hand-writing with the body of the letter. He added, that the prisoner returned 50 rupees out of the money paid him.

The letter alluded to, was read by the Clerk of the Crown, which was addressed to the prisoner by his father, A. Hicken, at Pullicat, from which it appeared, that prisoner had improperly left the vessel on which he was apprenticed, and being involved in trouble, had written to his father for the assistance of 200 rupees, to extricate him from his difficulties. The parent letter was a reply to that communication, and contained a plain but pathetic rebuke from the old man to his son, who had acted so imprudently, and whom he suspected of having done something criminal. The old man also impressed his son with his embarrassed situation, and inability to meet the request of his son, and concluded by commending him to the mercy of God. The postscript, however, spoke about remitting a Bill of Exchange of 200 rupees, which apparently and clearly was in a different writing from the body of the letter.

David Paddie deposed to having received the Bill of Exchange to be examined. The bill being on the house of Arbutnot and Co., he took it to their office, where, one of the gentlemen told him, it was forged.

Edward Wellesly stated, that about the 24th February, a young man named Hart, came to his quarters in the barracks at Chiosurah, and brought a bill of exchange, and asked him if he could get it discounted. He took it in consequence to Sergeant Moran, and sold it at a discount of seven rupees. About 4 o'clock of the same day, he received the money, which he paid into the hands of Hart. The bill at first was not indorsed, but it was afterwards given to him again, with the prisoner's name on the back of it.

William Hart being again examined, said, that on the 24th February, he received an order from the prisoner, to get this bill produced to be discounted. In consequence he took it to the last witness, Wellesly, whom he accompanied to Sergeant Moran's, though he did not enter the room. It was then returned to him for the indorsement, which he afterwards got done by the prisoner. About 4 o'clock, of the same day, he afterwards got the money from Wellesly, namely, 193 rupees, which he duly delivered to the prisoner.

Adam Stuart Gladstone, one of the partners of the house of Gillanders and Co., being sworn, said, that the bill was presented to the house, but payment was refused, as the signature it bore was not that of any member of the firm, either here or at Madras. The prisoner in his defence stated, that the forgery was not done by him, but that out of charity he had entertained the witness Hart, in his house, who, he believed, had added the postscript to the letter, which was knocking about the house, and had drawn up the bill.

After the court had briefly summed up the evidence, the jury retired, and in three hours, returned a verdict of "guilty," on the second count of the indictment, namely uttering a forged note with the intent to defraud Moran.

The prisoner was then sentenced to seven years' transportation to Van Diemen's Land.—Husk., April 25.

APRIL 25, 1840

(Before Sir H. W. Selon.)

TRIAL OF EDWARD HUGHES FOR THE WILFUL MURDER OF OCTUM COOMREE.

The prisoner was brought up and placed in the bar for his trial. The indictment was read to him in due course, which accused him on two counts, the first as the principal perpetrator of the crime, and the other as an accessory before the fact. The indictment also stated the circumstances under which the murder had been committed, and the cause which was the foundation of the whole was a robbery committed in the bungalow of the prisoner on the night of the 4th April. It appeared in consequence of this robbery, the following morning, the prisoner suspecting several of the men employed under him up the road, ordered them to be confined. These persons, sixteen in number, were all suspended on a beam placed across two posts erected for the purpose, and kept in that situation above fourteen hours, and all the time subjected to the most exquisite tortures with a view to extort a confession from them. That the deceased was one of the sixteen men thus confined, suspended, and tortured, and being most suspected, suffered the most severely till the infection aided in his death. That the immediate perpetrator of these cruelties was a subordinate superintendent of the prisoner, named Nemya moonshhee, who has since been convicted and sentenced to five years imprisonment by the Madras authorities. The prisoner pleaded "not guilty" to this charge, and had Mr. Prinsep for his counsel, opposed to the Advocate-General, and Mr. Clarke, who were for the prosecution.

In opening the case, the Advocate-General made an eloquent speech, stating the chief features of the case. He said that the prisoner, stood charged with the gravest offence a man could be charged with, namely, the death of a fellow creature. This offence, under any circumstance, was enough to command the attention of the jury, but in the present occasion the particular attention was required as the circumstances of this case varied more than ordinarily. He went on to state, that the prisoner was an assistant overseer on the Hazareebag Road. That his house was robbed in the night of the 4th April, and that in consequence of this robbery, he had directed the confinement of a number of persons. That there was one man brought to the prisoner on suspicion, and on this man's hands being tied, he gave certain information about the deceased. That in consequence the deceased was sent for and also confined with his hands tied together. That the deceased was next made over in charge of Nemya moonshhee, along with fifteen others, who instead of being handed to the Police, were kept in illegal custody. The learned Advocate here observed, that these facts would show that the prisoner was an accessory, but besides these facts it would be proved that these sixteen men thus illegally imprisoned were not only bound, but suspended and tortured. That posts were erected for this purpose and a beam placed across and these men suspended on this beam. That it would be further proved that these persons were suspended with their legs off the ground and beaten and tortured. That all this was done in the compound of the prisoner's bungalow, and was continued from the afternoon of the 5th to the morning of the 6th, and that the prisoner was in the bungalow at the time. That during the whole of this illegal confinement the prisoner was once taken down to discover some property, which failing to do, he was again suspended and the torture resumed. That on the deceased's a second time promising to discover the locality of the property, he was taken down, but again failing, he was again tied and again tortured. That the following morning, Nemya moonshhee, in the presence of the prisoner, thrice kicked the deceased on the side. And lastly, that under all this punishment the deceased died at half past 5 o'clock on the morning of the 6th. The Advocate-General concluded by remarking that he admitted that there might not have been any deliberate intention on the part of the prisoner to deprive the deceased of life, but death had ensued from a course of illegal confinement and infliction of cruelties imposed by the sanction of the prisoner, which was enough to establish him as the accessory to the deed. The learned speaker also alluded to the legal authorities of Lord Hale and Sir Michael Foster, on the subject, it being clearly defined by the latter that if a servant at the order of his master beat a man without the intention of causing death, yet if the man die the master becomes an accessory to the deed.

The Advocate-General concluding his address, of which the above is a meagre outline, here sat down and the following witnesses were examined for the prosecution.

Patrick Daly, examined by Mr. Clarke, being sworn, said, that he knew the person, and had heard from him that he was born in Dublin.

Athmaram, examined by Mr. Clarke. I knew the deceased, who was my brother, and who died in Mr. Hughes' bungalow about 8 months ago. I did not see him expire as I could not approach him, there being a guard around him; but after his death, when the thuganah people came, I saw the body. The day preceding his death, I saw him when he was taken hold of, and put down by four or five bearers, by the prisoner's order. These bearers were in the employ of the prisoner, and all this happened at about 3 p.m. The deceased was taken to Mr. Hughes' bungalow. I followed and remained in ambush at the distance of about 60 paces. Twelve men were taken at that time and bound, namely my brother, the deceased, and two others, who, on entering the boundary of the bungalow, were beaten by the prisoner with the flat of a sword. Afterwards I observed, three posts erected, a beam placed across them, and on this beam, I saw sixteen men suspended by the hands. I remained in this ambush till night, and hearing the report of a gun I went away, I did not return again because from the lashing of canes and karahs, I had no hopes of the deceased, my brother, surviving. While this infliction was being made, I heard the men calling out for mercy. At the time I first reached the ambush mentioned, I saw the posts erected about the same time, I observed the prisoner pacing up and down. The posts were at a distance of ten paces from Mr. Hughes' bungalow as I measured afterwards. And from this distance it was impossible for a person in the bungalow, not to know what was going on in the spot where the posts were erected. The annual of that division is more or less three or four miles from the bungalow. After the death of my brother, I saw the body and on it saw a great number of marks as of burning, lashes, blows, &c.

By Mr. Prinsep.—The ambush I have mentioned is about 60 paces from the bungalow. I could not see Mr. Hughes all the time on account of the fence round the bungalow. The posts were inside this enclosure. During the whole time I lay concealed, I saw the prisoner from time to time. The bungalow has a veranda which is on the south not towards the road, on the north. My position was near the road. All I have described took place within the fence. In consequence of the trial of Nemya moonshhee, I went to Hazareebag. He has been sentenced to five years imprisonment. I do not know that the prisoner got Nemya confined, and sent up for trial.

Newan, Lohar, examined by the Advocate-General. —I knew the deceased who was suspended with me. I was tied up before him. The prisoner got my hands tied by one of the bearers. On that day at the time my hands were tied the posts were also put up. I saw the prisoner at that time and he was present when my hands were bound. When the deceased was brought, I do not remember, as I was insensible, being suspended myself. During the suspension I could not see Mr. Hughes as my face was up, but I heard he was going in and out. Although there were sixteen persons suspended, who all remained in that state from mid-day to the end of the night following. Blows were dealt out on us; and I could not observe anything. But after I was taken down in the morning, I saw Ootum Coormes lying dead near a post. The bearing I have alluded to was kept up from mid-day, and the whole of the night. The area between the posts and the bungalow was of about the breadth of this room. All of us were suspended with our feet off the ground, and during the time we were all calling out for mercy. And these cries were loud enough to be heard by a person in the bungalow.

By Mr. Prinsep.—I am not aware what Nemye's employment was. I am blacksmith and keep a shop in the road side, and know that Nemye used to superintend the workmen on the road. I did not see the deceased brought. There was another gentleman also. Nemye was the party making the inflictions and the people were complaining of him.

Sontpal Doss examined by Mr. Clarke.—I know the prisoner and also knew one Ootum Coomree who is dead. I saw his corpse in the afternoon. I also saw him suspended by his hands which were tied, while his feet were off the ground. I saw Mr. Hughes pacing, and from his situation he could undoubtedly have seen the men suspended. I saw about three or four persons only, there having been a great crowd around. After the deceased expired, I was sent for by the darogah, who pointed out the body to me, which was close to a post. The posts were at a distance of about 10 paces from Mr. Hughes' bungalow, and any one in it could see the men suspended. I heard the lashing of whips and karas and the men crying out for mercy, all which certainly must have been heard by Mr. Hughes from the situation he was in.

By Mr. Prinsep.—I saw all this from near a tank in the neighbourhood. I was sent for by the darogah to witness the enquiry as I was considered one of the respectable men of the village.

Golab Doss examined by the Advocate-General.—I remember the death of Ootum Coomree, whom I was acquainted with. At the distance of about a musket shot from the prisoner's bungalow I saw the post erected. On the day previous day I went to the neighbourhood but did not see the post; on the afternoon of the following day only, I saw the post. On that day I did not see the deceased, but the day following saw his body in Mr. Hughes' compound. I saw the parts extending from the navel downwards to the legs continuously marked as burnt. The whole body also was covered over with marks like those from whips, kicks, slaps and blows, from the flat of a sword, leaving no space unmarked. From the distance I have stated, I heard cries proceeding from the bungalow, appealing for mercy. I saw the prisoner also issue from the direction of his bungalow and again return. At the time I saw him come out, I heard very great noise of beating &c., which could not but have been heard by the prisoner.

By Mr. Prinsep.—The prisoner sent intimation to the darogah the following morning.

Re-examined.—I do not know when the darogah was sent for by the prisoner, but I was sent for about three hours before the close of the day. I do not know who went for the darogah or how he was sent for?

Msthabar Ally examined by Mr. Clarke.—I know the prisoner and was in his employ in Bhadur last. I went to Mr. Hughes's to inform him of dinner being ready, at which time I observed sixteen persons suspended in the compound. I laid the dinner-table which was placed on the north side of the bungalow, in the compound, about half-a-dozen yards from the place where the men were suspended. At seven o'clock the prisoner came and ate his dinner. Before this time I heard no cries, but while at dinner, the prisoner asked the persons who had suspended the men. They answered, that Nemye had done it. The prisoner ordered them to be unripped and kept in the bungalow, giving orders at the same time, that if the men restored the Government papers stolen, a hundred rupees should be given them. A theft had been committed on the previous night; and in the morning, these men being suspected, were taken up by the prisoner. At 11 o'clock no posts were there. When I came back in the evening, I saw the posts erected; I did not know the deceased; but on the following day, I saw his corpse, and discovered numerous and extensive marks of burning, &c., on the body. When I left the house at night, I saw the men still suspended and the following morning, I also saw all the men suspended except one man, the deceased, who was lying on the ground.

By Mr. Prinsep.—They were not taken down nor fed, I left the place immediately after my master was done dinner. I did business for Mr. Nicholls as well as Mr. Hughes, and Mr. Nicholls was staying the whole of the day with my master. On the following morning when I went to the place, I heard my master enquire, who had burnt the deceased, when Nemye said, he had done it. Shortly after, by the consent of a native doctor, some gin was administered to the deceased. The prisoner also gave orders to prevent the escape of Nemye. I have been nine months with the prisoner, and never saw him even violent with the people.

Nunesah, by the Advocate-General. I am the widow of the deceased.

[The witness after answering the above single question, appearing altogether obdurate of every circumstance, even that her husband had died. The Advocate-General resorted to various forms of interrogation to elicit something from her, but to no purpose. She was at length requested to retire.]

Bedaseo examined by the Advocate-General.—In the month of Bhado last, I was in the employ of the prisoner. A robbery took place in the bungalow of the prisoner. I was in consequence sent for from where I was on duty; on arrival I was asked, if any one came to me during the night, on my answering in the negative, I was dragged by the leg by Nemye moonshhee. Afterwards I did mention, that Ootum, the deceased, and two others had come to me. This was at about two o'clock and no person was tied up; though, subsequently, I observed several tied. I saw also Ootum brought, and I was one of the persons sent to bring him, as well as the two other, already alluded to. On my return I saw several persons tied, and suspended as a cross beam. That was the first time I saw the posts. Nemye moonshhee gave me orders to bring the deceased. At this time I did not see the prisoner. I did not come down to Calcutta at the same time with Mr. Hughes. After Ootum had been tied up, water was poured on him, and he was beaten with bricks, &c. and burnt with torches. At night he was taken down to discover a certain spot, and then brought back again, and again beaten and tortured. Nemye also gave him three kicks, which quite disabled and exhausted the deceased. The beating commenced at about candle light with severity, and during the whole time deceased cried out. I was also suspended and did not observe Mr. Hughes, having become insensible, and I also cried out. The beating and burning was kept up till mid-night, when the prisoner was taken away, but when he was brought back, the punishment was resumed.

By Mr. Prinsep.—I was then employed about ten months under Mr. Hughes, whom I never saw sit out any one; but the cruelties I have described, were all done by Nemye.

By Mr. Turton.—Nemye moonshhee was employed by Mr. Hughes, and the property stolen was Mr. Hughes'. I never before saw persons suspended in Mr. Hughes' compound. I never knew of Nemye moonshhee punishing people in Mr. Hughes' compound without his leave.

Beenup Lohar, by Mr. Clarke.—I was one of those suspended, I was brought away tied by Mr. Hughes' hearers on that day to Mr. Hughes' compound, when, on the arrival of Nemye moonshhee, I was suspended. This was in the afternoon, and about this time I saw the prisoner going in the bungalow from the compound. I was provisions, which altogether amounted to seventeen pice. That out of these seventeen pice, only thirteen were paid, and the balance of four pice, were refused to be paid by the prisoners. That the prisoners, in consequence of two hours' proceeding on their course, and were followed by the moon-dee, who had to receive the four pice, together with several others. That these made their demand for the four pice, and kept following the prisoners, till they reached about two arrow-shots from the bazar, when the prisoner, McCowan, who had a loaded gun in his hand, handed it to the other prisoner, Burke, who discharged it, and the contents were received by Roopchand Potdar, the moon-dee, by whom the four pice were to be received.

The learned Advocate then, descending on the collateral circumstances, as well as the defence made by the prisoners before the magistrate of Midnapore, sat down, and the following evidences were after that taken:

Roopchand Potdar, examined by Mr. Clarke.—In the month of Choith last, I was in my shop in Khurruckpore, and, on the 12th of that month, the prisoners went to my shop. It was at dusk that they came, and their object was to procure from me some provisions. They were travelling in a bullock cart. They got the provisions from me and from others. What I supplied amounted to seventeen pice, out of which I was paid only thirteen pice. The balance of four pice I demanded, but did not receive them. About two hours after they proceeded on their course, upon which I spoke to the chowkedare and sirdar, who, with me, followed the prisoners, while I kept demanding my due. We followed up at a distance of about 10 paces from the cart, in which the prisoner, Burke, was, at the time, and the other prisoner was outside. The musket also was inside the cart, I suppose. When I was fired upon the distance from the village was about two musket shots. Before being fired at, the prisoners said nothing to me, and if they had told me anything, I should certainly have heard it, and retreated. The shots which hit me, were on the arm and about the chest. I fell down insensible and do not know what occurred, till I found myself in Midnapore, with a European doctor tending me.

By the Court.—There was light, but I do not remember if it was moon-light. The cart could be distinctly seen from where I was.

By the Prisoner, Burke.—I saw you arrive in a cart. The other prisoners made the calculation. You did not come to my shop, but the other prisoner. I cannot say if you aimed or not, but I received the shots. You had no dispute with me.

By the Prisoner, McCowan.—You did not come to my shop, but I took the articles to you. You did not tell me to give anything to the cart-driver; but he came to me and said, he was requested, by you, to take some rice dust. You paid the thirteen pice for the articles I delivered to you.

Doolal Bearer, examined by the Advocate General.—I am the nab sirdar of Khurruckpore. On the 12th of Choith, I saw the prisoners, who arrived at the place about the close of day. They came to me and asked me, who could give them supplies, upon which I introduced them to the last witness. I procured their milk, eggs, and fowls also. The other supplies were made by the moon-dee Roopchand. They left the bazar in the night, after making the accounts of the purchases which amounted to seventeen pice, out of which thirteen pice were paid, refusing to pay the four remaining pice. Upon this, the moon-dee, myself, and others, followed the cart, a short way behind, to a distance of about two musket-shots. McCowan was walking, a gun was in his hand, and he knew me as belonging to the bazar, and that we were following. After proceeding at a distance of about two musket-shots, the moon-dee asked for his pice, when the reply was, that he could get no more pice. Upon this, the prisoners spoke together in English, and McCowan then handed the musket to Burke, who fired at us, and the shots were received by Roopchand. I then after disposing of Roopchand, who was insensible, proceeded to take measures to stop the prisoners, which was done the same night, at Samulpore. On going up to them, Burke threatened us with a gun, and a large clasp knife, desiring us to stop them. The next day they were taken by us to Midnapore.

By the Prisoner, Burke.—I produced Roopchand before you both, and do not know if the articles were delivered to you. I asked for the four pice when following you; when you answered, that we would not get them. You did not voluntarily go to Midnapore, but you are compelled to do so by us.

Buddoo Sabun, Pyke, examined by Mr. Clarke.—In Choith last I was, pyke in Khurruckpore, when I saw the prisoners, one of whom asked me to procure them milk, eggs, &c. Two hours after night-fall, the prisoners ordered the bullocks to be yoked in the cart, at which, there being a balance of four pice due from them to the moon-dee, we asked them for the amount, which, without paying, they left the village. Burke going inside the cart and McCowan following on foot, whom we accompanied demanding the four pice. On coming up near the cart, which was at this time about two arrowshots from the bazar, we appealed to Burke for the pice, when we were told to go away. After this, the prisoners spoke together in English. McCowan then handed a gun to Burke, who discharged it, and the contents of it were received by Roopchand Potdar. The prisoners were afterwards arrested at Samulpore, and forwarded to Midnapore. When Burke fired, McCowan was near the cart.

George Shakespeare, examined by the Advocate General.—I am the magistrate of Midnapore, and took the examination of the prisoners in writing, before asking which I warned them duly, and held out no inducement to them. I have heard McCowan say, that he was an inhabitant of Lenh, and have heard that Burke is a native of Dublin.

The examination of the prisoners (as taken before the magistrate of Midnapore) was here read by the Clerk of the Court. Burke said, that he took the people to be robbers, and had fired to frighten them. If he wanted to kill, he might have fired with balls, which he had with him. McCowan stated, that the men talked about stopping the cart, &c. and he had mentioned what he heard to the other prisoner.

James Pagan, Assistant Surgeon of Midnapore, examined by Mr. Clarke.—He examined Roopchand, and found on his person a wound, as from gun shots. The wound was severe but not dangerous. The wound seemed to have been as from a gun fired from near.

John King, examined by the Advocate General.—I am the Jailor, and have been told by Burke, that he is a native of Dublin. The prisoners then made their own defence, after which the Court charged the Jury, who, retiring, in a few minutes, brought in a verdict of "not guilty," in regard to McCowan, and of "guilty," against the prisoner Burke, strongly recommending him to the mercy of the Court.

The sentence stands over.

Hofahauli Mookerjee, a respectable native, stood at the bar, indicted for having committed a violent assault on the first of April, Co. the prisoner of Ramchand, a fish-vender, with the intent to murder the said Ramchand. The prisoner pleaded "not guilty" to the charge, and from the general loss of the evidence adduced, they perceived, that at day light on the day in question, Ramchand was coming to Calcutta through Soobahazar road, with a basket of fishes, together with two boys, following each of them with a basket of fishes, when they were met by Horonath Mookerjee, the defendant, and another person, unknown. On this meeting the defendant, stoppel Ramchand and demanded from him the fish, (a description of illegal, though customary, toll, in kind.) The fisher was refused, and the fish-vender enquired, who Horonath was. Horonath answered, he was a police man. Upon which, the complainant offered to give a chulak of two fishes from each basket. But Horonath Mookerjee, dissatisfied at this, demanded twenty fishes. In this way a dispute ensued; till the defendant inflicted several blows with a stick on the fish vender, which stunned him.

There were counsel on both sides, Mr. Clarke being for the prosecution, and the Advocate-General supported by Mr. Morton for the defence. As might have been expected, a great deal of discussion arose during the trial, not only between the opposing Advocates, but also with the bench.

But that which ought to be more particularly noticed is: that when in the usual course, the jury returned a verdict of "guilty of the assault," a kind of colloquial debate arose, the Advocate General objecting to the article 1st, and proposing in substitution thereof the article 2nd. The Court at length postponed the determination of the point till the Judge had consulted on the subject. It, therefore, remains to be determined, whether the article 1st or the 2nd shall be used in rendering the verdict in the case, though the simplest way appears to be to use neither, and only to enter it "guilty of assault."—Hark, April 29.

In passing sentences on Wednesday, Sir Henry Seton delivered himself as follows to the three prisoners Hughes, Burke and Horonath Mookerjee respectively.

Edward Hughes, you have been proved guilty of an aggravated and disgraceful offence. If not by your express orders, under your authority and with your concurrence no less than sixteen persons were, during several successive hours, subjected to torture of the most revolting kind, and which were only put an end to by the death of some of them. During this time you were not restrained by the sight of their sufferings, the bearing of their cries, from your ordinary indulgence, eat and slept in all the carelessness of confirmed inhumanity. If such a case-stated organisation by the relation in which you stood to these parties, not only as a subject to natives, but as yourself being in the employment of Government, and having these persons immediately subjected to your control? Do you, therefore, they had a right to look for protection and support, but found only tyranny and oppression. It is due to common humanity, it is due to public justice, it is due to the native community, whom you have thus cruelly outraged, to inflict upon you a severe punishment. The sentence of the Court, is that you be imprisoned for two years in the common jail of Calcutta.

Peter Burke, you have been found guilty of shooting at the prosecutor with the intent to do him some grievous bodily harm. This of itself a serious offence and is aggravated by the circumstance of its having been committed by a European against a native. The mode in which natives are subjected to the control of Europeans in this country, together with their offensive character, which ought to be the means of protecting them from ill treatment, is unfortunately too often the means of exposing them to it. It is necessary that such conduct should be repressed by a severe punishment. Add but for the recommendation of the jury, I should have felt it my duty to have dealt with it. In consequence, however, of that recommendation, the sentence of the Court is that you be imprisoned for one year in the common jail of Calcutta.

Horonath Mookerjee, you have been found guilty of an assault of a disgraceful kind—assault upon a poor man by a rich one—upon an industrious man by an idle and dissolute one, and upon a native by another native who has thrown off the restraints imposed upon him by the habits and manners of his own country men, only to adopt those of Europeans, in those respects in which they are most discreditable to them. The sentence of the Court is that you be imprisoned for three months in the Common jail, and pay a fine of 500 rupees.—Hark, May 1.

MISCELLANEA.

Calcutta.

DACOTS, &c.—This month too, the commission of several dacoities has been reported, and in one instance, a whole gang of the robbers, was captured in the neighbourhood of Dum-Dum, in attempting to rob the house of a Brahmin. In Calcutta, the "long-fingered gentry" have been very industrious. On one occasion, they managed to get under the foundation of a house in Bechar Bazar, by means of a public sewer, and, cutting a hole in the floor, took away articles of millinery, to a large amount, the property of a Mrs. Bennett, who has just come out to India as a milliner.

THE POLICE INDICTED FOR DACOITY.—A criminal indictment has been filed in the Supreme Court, against seven of the leading native officers of the police, for robbing and plundering the property of a respectable zemindar, of Dacca, at present located in Calcutta, and beating and assaulting his servants so severely, that the ribs of one of them was broken by the infliction. Another indictment will soon be filed against the Chief Magistrate, for dismissing the case, and the Advocate-General has been retained for the prosecution.

MILITARY ITEMS.—The gallant 49th embarked on the 6th of April, at day light, on the five vessels assigned for their passage, namely, the Sulimany, the Mahomed Shaw, the Blundell, the Mermaid and the Isabella Robertson. A number of ladies and gentlemen, and officers belonging to other corps, were present to witness this regiment bid adieu to Calcutta for the east, and the sight, though by no means very imposing, was certainly a touching one. In consequence, however, of two of the transports, the Isabella Robertson and the Mermaid, having come in contact with one another, while proceeding down the river, the troops have been disembarked, to permit of the vessels going into dock to be overhauled.

COCHIN CHINESE MAN-OF-WAR.—A man-of-war from Cochin China is now here. She has a Messard, two Captains, and one hundred and eighty men on board, and she carries 30 twelve pounders and several swivels. She had also a number of English muskets, and her cargo consists of copper, tin, cinnamon, and a goodly supply of dollars. The main object of her visit to our port, is said to be to effect the purchase of a Steamer for the Cochin Chinese Government.

AGGRAVATIONS, &c.—THE EFFICIENCY OF THE POLICE.—Several cases of burglary have occurred during this month also, and it is strongly suspected, that the chowkedars are leagueed with the thieves. The following is an admirable illustration of the efficiency of the chowkedars. Two chests of indigo belonging to the house of Messrs. Carr, Fagors and Co., were taken from the export godowns of the Custom House on the night of Saturday last. Through the connivance of some of the watchers of the property in the Custom House, the export godown, in which a number of chests of indigo belonging to the firm mentioned is deposited, was broken into, and two chests having been burst open, their contents were put into gunny-bags and properly secured. These bags were next, by the joint assistance of the thieves and the thannah people, handed over the Custom House wall into the street. They were then conveyed into the Tank square, and then again handed over the balustrades near the statue into the street, and lastly deposited in a godown in Wellesey-place. The principals then, about 4 o'clock in the morning, of Sunday last, hired a brown berry and took it to the godown where the indigo was kept. These men, who are apparently sincere, then proceeded to throw the bags of indigo into the brownberry, and the driver of the brownberry observing this uncommon feat, being put into his vehicle, remonstrated and said, that his gurry was intended to carry men and not bags, and even called out to a chowkedar who was sitting but a few paces off and looking on; but the guardian of public life and property, only replied by telling the driver, that he was a fool for making a noise, and enjoining him to silence. The driver, therefore, remained quiet, and, in all probability, the whole might have been carried off with impunity, but for the accidental circumstance of a town-guard burkundaz passing that way at the time. This burkundaz observing the gurry with bags near it, was led to make enquiry, and soon discovered the real character of the work going on. Being honest—an uncommon thing among police chowkedars, he despatched a man who was with him for assistance, and by gun-fire the brownberry, indigo, and the two principals were all in custody.

The house of a gentleman attached to the Bengal Hurkara Office, was, on the night of the 30th ultimo, broken into by a gang of thieves, who entered the premises, by cutting a hole about three feet square, in the wall, and carried off silver spoons, and other property, to a large amount. The thieves were hotly pursued, so closely, indeed, as to be induced to drop several articles on the road, in their flight, but yet managed to escape. A chowkedar, of the Foltollah banna, hailed from close to the spot whence the thieves effected their egress; but, of course, neither he, nor the chowkedars at the corners of the lanes the thieves must have passed with bulky articles, know any thing of the affair. It is, of course, quite impossible they could have connived at the robbery.

The gentleman robbed, called upon Capt. Birch, the Superintendent of Police, and from him received the most prompt and ample assistance. Capt. Birch, though unwell, immediately accompanied him to the site of the robbery, examined the place minutely, and summoning the chowkedars of the division, directed them to trace the thieves, on pain of dismissal, in case of failure; as from the position of their stations, they either must have conceived at the robbery or have been very inattentive to their duties, if not asleep at their posts.

THE CONWAY.—The Conway has just returned from the search after the recently reported wreck; but she has not fallen in with any but that of the Richard Bell, on the Nicobar, a part of whose cargo she has brought round.

ABOLITION OF SEVARD JUSTICE.—The Chief Magistrate, on the ground of its total ineffectuality, has made a proposition to Government, for the abolition of Sevards Justice.

MR. D. W. STAY.—Mr. D. W. Stay, the collector of moulvi-magistrate, being married, has been absent twenty-three days during the week, for visiting a man who would not vend his wife in his life. Mr. Stay's basar.

EXCESSIVE PRIDE.—A serious case of assault and riotous conduct against four of the chief police jemadars, has been decided by the Chief Magistrate. The complaining party was a respectable Mahomedan proprietor of the Embarree in Nulpooh; and the following was a brief outline of the case:

It appeared that the defendants, through blindness of high caste, took it into their heads, out of fear, to get up a grand Mohurram procession, and on the last ashura day were out in grand parade, with a large number of Police burkundazes, on the Circular Road, mixing all the religious display of Mahomedans, in mockery of the names of Hussain and Hosein. That about the same hour when the jemadars' party were in the head of the Embarree Road, the complainant's party also, with a tabereah, and about a thousand of twelve hundred persons following it, arrived at the same spot, and in attempting to pass on found their progress hindered by a row of hackeries placed athwart in the street. For a considerable time the Embarree party waited expecting the jemadars' procession would go on—but they waited and waited and were at last disappointed, for the jemadars and burkundazes still stood in the way as well as the hackeries. There being a narrow passage through one side of the street, between the hackeries, some of the Embarree party attempted to go from that way. In making this attempt they were fallen upon by some of the burkundazes, and in a short while more, a general row ensued. The burkundazes and jemadars, who were armed with cudgels, had the mastery over the opposite party, who were not provided with any weapons of offence or defence. Constable Becket was on the spot, and all he could do was to take those in custody within the jemadars' mentioned, so that by this means the affair soon ended in the discomfiture of the Embarree party, who were obliged to take to flight, leaving certain ornaments and shawls in the possession of the jemadars.

Mr. Stretchall appeared for the complaint, and after a great deal of investigation and consultation in which Mr. Blaquiere the magistrate also had a share, the case ended in the conviction of the defendants, the principal of whom was fined two hundred rupees, and the other three in one hundred rupees each. And in this expensive way terminated the grand imnaka of the Police jemadars.

SERIOUS AFFRAY.—A very serious and daring affray happened in Wellesey Square, on the 28th instant, the particulars of which are as follow:—It appears that a European from Dum-Dum, on horse back, and from all accounts, an Artilleryman, arrived in Wellesey Square, on Saturday forenoon. He was enquiring after some bootwoman's whereabouts, and was directed by a cooly, through a mistake, to the house of a moonshoe living in the neighbourhood. The European, according to the information, alighted from his horse, entered the moonshoe's premises, and, unluckily, happened to make his way into the kitchen. He soon, however, was made acquainted with his mistake, by the inmates coming upon him with shasas and blades. Upon this he made a quick retreat, and mounting his steed was soon out of danger. The increased moonshoe and his people, disappointed in wreaking vengeance on the European, fell on the poor coolie, that had ignorantly given them the wrong information as above stated. This unfortunate fellow, of course, was unable to take his own part, and as there was no one to take his part for him, the vengeance of the moonshes and his men, was wreaked upon him with cruel severity. Two young gentlemen, the sons of Mr. Catania, observing the unmerciful maltreatment of the unresisting coolies, were induced, from humanity, to go to his rescue and assistance. They endeavoured to extricate the poor fellow from the inhuman caustigation, and on this endeavouring, averted the blows from his head, to fall upon their own. Such desperate odds being against them, they were obliged to make a hasty retreat, however, in doing this the moonshes party got more exasperated and pursued them. The two young men, however, had time to enter the house and bolt the gate behind them. But this was not sufficient to cut off the pursuit of the desperate party, who burst open the gate and entered Mr. Catania's house, and might have subjected the young men to some serious personal inconvenience, but for Mr. Catania and his sons bringing out pistols, and threatening to shoot the moonshes if they ventured to advance further. This expedient had the desired effect, and the moonshes party having no idea to stand gunpowder, they instantly left the house, and, going out, showered into it volleys of brickbats.

During the whole of the above circumstances transpiring, some injury had been sustained by one or two of the moonshes party, and some slight oozing of blood also happened. Making out a case from this circumstance, the moonshes forthwith drew up a doleful petition, addressed to Mr. Blacquiere, the magistrate, whose interference and protection they supplicated, saying that they were in intense bodily fear, every moment expecting to be shot by Mr. Catania and his sons. On the receipt of the application, the Magistrate instantly despatched Constable Weir to go and ascertain the precise state of things.

According to orders, therefore, Constable Weir, accompanied by about half a dozen chowkedars, repaired to Wellesley Square, and on the house being pointed out to him by the moonshes, he went in and spoke to the Catanias on the subject, showing them the petition presented by the moonshes, and directing their attention to the charges brought against them. Upon this the matters above related was explained to Constable Weir, who also had ocular demonstration of the brick-baiting and the consequences thereof, on the glass shutters and windows of the house. Constable Weir then, requesting the attendance of the two young gentlemen at the Police on Monday, left the house. On coming out he still observed a large concourse assembled, whom he ordered the chowkedars to disperse. This was done, and in a short time the mob was gone as well as the chowkedars, and Constable Weir was also going away, when a European gentleman residing in the neighbourhood, came up and complained, that the chowkedars had been striking his servants. Weir expressed his sorrow at the chowkedars having done so, and was going to Mr. Robertson's house (for that is the name of the gentleman) to confront his servants on the subject, when he perceived a young Mahomedan put himself just in front, and impudently trying to stare him out of countenance. Weir asked him his purpose and intention for standing there, and in that way, when the valorous pig used a certain impolite expression to Weir. Not being inclined to punish his impudence, Weir first asked him to go about his business, and then gently pushed him away. The consequence was, that in a few minutes before Weir could enter the house of Mr. Robertson, a large body of men came up, armed with bludgeons, and without farther parley commenced an attack on Weir. For some time Weir faced a foe, but the thoughts oppressively striking him, that the better part of valour was discretion, he very prudently ran into Mr. Robertson's house, though not without being first a little hurt in several parts of his body, especially his left arm, which has been severely injured. On Weir's disappearing, the desperate gang fell on the unoffending Mr. Robertson, who has been so seriously hurt, as to prevent his stirring from his couch.

The case is pending before Mr. Blacquiere, and will, come on as soon as Mr. Robertson is fit to move out.

SHAJOUR AFFRAY.—There was a serious affray at Kidderpore lately. Some natives, apparently without cause, attacked a body of sailors belonging to the Queen, and severely wounded them. The offenders are in custody.

MELANCHOLIC AFFAIR.—An unfortunate woman named Rondon, the wife of a clerk in a public office, who had lost several children at a very early age, was brought on by the mental agony she endured, on account of their untimely demise, to adopt the desperate resolution of destroying the embryo she had again conceived; and she accordingly consulted an ignorant native midwife, who administered long pepper to her to effect the desired object. Instead of the desired end being obtained, however, Mrs. Rondon was killed by the long pepper administered, after suffering the most excruciating agony for some days. The midwife is in custody, and will be tried at the sessions.

During the month, Mr. Storckeler, the Editor of the Englishman, has endeavored, with the aid of his printer, to fix Mr. Johnson, the Editor of the Quarter, with the commission of plagiarism. Mr. Johnson has flatly contradicted the statements of both parties, and Mr. Storckeler does not cut a very enviable figure in the affair.

ASSISTANT MAGISTRATES.—On this, that reference having been made to the home authorities regarding the appointment of Assistant Magistrates, their sanction of the measure has lately reached the Government of India, and that, before long, it is expected to be carried into execution.

THE PAUMBAM PASSAGE.—The Paumbam passage is growing of increasing importance to the Ceylon and Madras coasting craft. Light vessels are continually taking advantage of the passage, and some upwards of eighty tons in burden are now enabled to pass through with the greatest ease. During the four last days of February and the first five of the present month no less than fourteen vessels, varying in burden from thirteen to eighty three tons, besides eighty seven dhories, have availed themselves of this cut, which con siderably abridges their voyages and affords them, consequently, increased advantages to what they before enjoyed.

RAMAN KOMOLE COMAREE v. BUNJUNT COMAREE—On the 26 instant three appeals came on to be heard, in the Sadler Nirmul Adalut, arising out of a sentence passed by THOMAS WRATT Esq late Judge of East Burdwan, in a criminal case, appealed from the decision of the magistrate by Moha Rane Komole Comaree, in a case in which she was the prosecutrix and Dukhin-arunjun Mookerjee and others, were defendants.

The charge was, for forcibly taking the Rane Bunsunt Comaree away from the Rajbarie, with property to the amount of four lakhs of rupees, and was tried before the magistrate on the 27th of May last, who acquitted all the defendants without hearing witnesses on their behalf. Moha Rane Komole Comaree appealed against the magistrate's decision to the Judge, before whom and two assessors the case came on to be tried on the 22d of June last, on which occasion it appeared, that the principal defendant put in a defence submitting (amongst other things) that the province of the court in a criminal appeal, especially when in the court below the case had been gone into on one side only, was either simply to confirm the decision, or simply to vacate it, or to direct a new trial when the proceedings appeared defective. To pass a contrary decision on matters of fact, without giving the defendant an opportunity of proving his innocence, would, as he submitted be a novelty in appellate proceedings of the most dangerous tendency. The Judge (Mr Wyatt) however, proceeded to pass sentence in the case without further proof, and the following is a copy of his order on the occasion—

"As the case is within the meaning of Sec 2, Regulation 7 of 1819, it is ordered that a fine of 200 rupees be imposed on the defendant Dukhin-arunjun, and in the event of his not paying the same, that he be imprisoned for the space of two months, and as that defendant is not fit to hold any employment under the Rane, he should not be permitted to continue any longer in her service, and that the magistrate do communicate this order to the Rane.

Against this order both parties appeared in the Sadler, the prosecutrix praying for an extension of punishment, and the defendant appealing on the ground that the regulation quoted by the Judge could not possibly apply to the present case, as the Rane was a widow and above the age of 15 years the Regulation in question applying to unmarried females under that age.

After the whole of the proceedings of the Magistrate and Judge had been read, and the Vakile of the parties having been heard, the Judge (Mr. Rattray) stated his opinion, to the following effect—

I am clearly of opinion, that in these proceedings there is no evidence whatever against the defendants to convict them of any of the charges preferred against them, and that, therefore, the sentence of the Judge (Mr Wyatt) imposing the fine of 200 rupees, must be set aside. It is not necessary for me to decide the case upon the Regulation mentioned by the Judge in his report of the 22d of June, but I am of opinion, that it does not apply to this case, the Rane being of full age and a widow. The Judge had no right to order the Rane not to employ any person she pleased, and as this could not form part of a final sentence, I shall set aside the whole sentence altogether. The Vakile for Komole Comaree contends, that she has a right of controul over the young Rane, as being the guardian, appointed by the late Rajah.

I am not aware by what right any person can be the guardian of a person of full age, or exercising a right to confine her against her will. I have already stated my opinion. In another case, that the Rane has a right to go where and do what she pleases, and I will think so.

The Vakile for Komole Comaree then prayed the Judge, that the case might be sent round to all the Judges of the Court.

Mr. Rattray—No, that I will not do; but as the case is pressed, I will send the proceedings to a learned Judge.

The Rane Bunsunt Comaree's appeal against that part of the order of Mr Wyatt, that directed her not to employ the defendant then came on, and was disposed of in like manner.

FIRES—Several very extensive fires have occurred during the month, in the out skirts of the Town and the Twenty four Pargunnah, by means of which property to a large amount has been destroyed, and one or two people have been burnt to death.

THE MADRAS MISCELLANY.—His periodical is now defunct. Its career was brilliant though brief.

LEVEE AT THE GOVERNMENT HOUSE.—Between the hours of three and four o'clock on the evening of the 9th instant, a levee was held by the Right Honorable the Governor-General at the Government House, which was intended exclusively for native gentlemen of rank. The Nabob of Chitpore, the young Rajah of Burdwan, Mahalab Chund Bahadur, Rajah Radhaskup Bahadur, Rajah Kalihusen Bahadur, Rajah Narsing Chunder Bahadur, Rajah Rajnarain Roy, of Ansool, and Baboo Praonkissen Mullick, were present. After these gentlemen were seated in their proper seats, the Governor-General made his appearance and took his seat in the state chair, when the visitors were, according to their respective ranks, introduced to His Lordship, who received them with his habitual kindness and urbanity. Khelauts were given to some, and Rajah Mahalab Chund Bahadur, received the best and most valuable amongst them. Two of the native functionaries, namely Baboo Sittanauth Bose and Baboo Shitensarain Bysack, the one belonging to the establishment of the Political Secretary, and the other to that of the Government House, had also a Khelaut of five parghas each.

COURT MARTIAL.—A native general court martial has been ordered to assemble, on an early day, at Dum-Dum, for the trial of several privates of the Goolundaz Battalion, who some time ago peremptorily refused to perform certain duties connected with the Magazine department. Six of the privates had been selected for trial, but they, associates in the mutiny stood by them and insisted, to the number of about twenty, on "following their leaders" into duress. Captain Macher is to conduct the proceedings.

THE HINDU COLLEGE.—It is said that Lord Auckland has expressed himself greatly pleased with the essays on moral courage produced by the two upper classes of the Hindu College, without any preparation and without the use of a single book of reference. A number of prizes are to be distributed on the occasion. The public examination of the students of the Hindu College, it is reported, will take place in about eight or ten days.

A GREAT SHRAUD.—On the 3rd instant, Baboo Gourchurn Coondoo, of Mourey, near Andool, performed the shroud of his late mother, at an immense expense. He is said to have distributed 16,000 rupees worth of quarter and half rupees to beggars on the occasion, and, we have heard, from a credible source, that the entire expenditures attending the ceremony, would exceed 50,000 rupees. The Baboo is a self merchant of Calcutta.

DR. HALLER.—News has been received in town of the death of Dr. Haller. This enterprising naturalist had, it appears, landed on the Andaman Islands, where he was murdered by the natives. Mrs. Haller was left at Rangoon of Tennessee.

Letters from Dooeling, to the 1st of April, state that the hotel was opened on the 31st of March, when a grand dinner was given by Doctor Campbell, to the station, for the benefit of the establishment, and the room where the company sat, was reduced to a pleasant temperature, by the aid of two fires and a grand display of lights, the thermometer being 65°, on the chimney-piece. The greatest conviviality prevailed, the company were regaled with music and singing, and several bumper toasts were drank, Mr. and Mrs. Warman are said to be quite adapted for their situation—being polite and attentive without approaching to obtrusiveness, and there is every hope of the hotel turning out a profitable speculation.

The facilities for travelling are daily increasing, and provisions, workmen, &c., are pouring in constantly. The road above Malderum is rapidly progressing, and will soon be opened. The reservoirs at the springs are commenced upon, and the barracks, court-house, hospital, and other buildings, are nearly completed, and men have been sent in for the station road. In a short time, every thing will be ready to woo the heat-oppressed Indian to the cool "bright spot."

Lieutenant Collins, 25th Regt. N. I., on Reserve Guard Duty, Fort William, on Sunday evening, after dinner, stepped over the railing of the window at the top story of the Royal Barracks, when of a sudden he disappeared, and was discovered on the pavement below, a distance of nearly 40 feet! He was perfectly sensible on being taken up, and on examination his jaw-bone was found to be smashed to atoms, and his knee-cap broken. Although in a dangerous state, it is expected he will ultimately recover. The only wonder is, that he was not dashed to pieces.

KITTY THORNHILL'S ESTATE.—Bahoo Motes Lali Seal has purchased, for one lac of rupees, the beautiful but long neglected property at Cosquepo, that goes by the name of "Kitty Thornhill's Estate." There are at present but four habitable gentlemen's residences on the property, but it is proposed by the new proprietor, to build six or eight new houses near the river, that may be each let at a moderate rent.

SALT SMUGGLERS.—On the 6th instant, Mr. Tynan, a salt darogah, succeeded in seizing a large quantity of salt, at a village near Dum-Dum, after a battle with the smugglers, who considerably outnumbered his own party.

ENIGMA BATTLE.—Enigma Battle, of the 48th Regiment N. I., was drowned on the 11th instant, in the river, opposite to Barrackpore, by the sudden upsetting of his pleasure boat.

PUBLIC LIBRARY.—AGRI-HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.—It is said, that Government propose devoting upon certain terms, the buildings and site of the present Sudder House, for the purpose of erecting the Rooms of the Public Library and of the Agri-Horticultural Society.

ASSISTANT PRIVATE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNOR GENERAL.—It is said, that Mr. D. W. Fraser, late Collector of the Pugin Tax at Gyah, has been appointed an Assistant to the Private Secretary to the Governor-General, until the scheme for the introduction of a reformed Police in Behar shall be sufficiently matured, to allow of his being appointed Inspector General in that quarter.

THE CHINA EXPEDITION.—The Madagascar steamer, left Calcutta, on the 17th of April, for the Straits and China. Her equipment is of the most complete, and beautiful description, her large guns over her stern and bow in particular. She was followed by the Queen, whose sixty-eight pounders will no doubt soon thunder in the ears of the inhabitants of the Celestial Empire.

CHINA EXPEDITION.—The Mormon and the Head Quarters of H. M. 49th Regiment, left Calcutta on the 16th instant, in prosecution of her voyage to China. Sir J. G. Bremer and the Staff left in the Madagascar Steamer on the 17th, and H. M. Ship Argo, with a Division of the Volunteers, will sail from Calcutta in about a week or ten days.

LETTERS OF THOSE ENGAGED IN THE CHINA EXPEDITION.—Government has decided on passing all letters of the officers and men of the China Expedition, free of postage.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—A serious accident, attended with the loss of several lives, occurred on the river off Serampore. A native boat, filled with natives was on its way upwards, when a large blur, proceeding the contrary way, and which had become unmanageable from the strength of the wind, came in contact with the other and caused it to capsize. Mr. Marshman, who saw the accident, immediately sent off his bullock to the assistance of the poor beings in the water, which succeeded in rescuing eleven from a watery grave, but twenty-two unfortunately sunk to rise no more.

ASSAM TEA COMPANY.—The pathway of the Assam Tea Company is every day becoming smoother. Some of the frontier tribes of Assam, from whom hostility, rather than friendliness, was anticipated, have lately manifested a desire to patronize the speculation in their vicinity.

THE KIDNAPPED EDITOR OF THE BHASKAR.—Sreenath Rale, the kidnapped editor of the Bhaskar, has at length been liberated. He has made the circuit of the newspaper offices, and made the following statement. That in the afternoon of the 28th of April, at about 4 o'clock, Raja Rajnarain Rale, after compelling him to swear that he would refrain from all legal proceedings against him, and taking from him a written promise to that purport, set him at liberty. That he had been in close confinement in the Raja's house in Andool, ever since his capture, imprisoned in a room from which the day-light was excluded, and the floor of which was damp and unhealthy in the extreme, and which room he had only left for a short period, on one occasion, on which he had been brought to the garden of Chateau Baboo, alias Aushooras Day, from which, in consequence of his refusing to conform to the terms proposed by Raja Rajnarain, he was conveyed back again to Andool and replaced in the prison from which he had been taken. That on his first being captured, Raja Rajnarain had directed his minions to convey him to some secret place, beyond the scrutiny of any one who would give information, and there to decapitate him and secrete his body; but that the Raja's men were afraid to carry his orders into execution. That the men then, at the instigation of the Raja, pounded his; Sreenath Rale's, right arm, with an iron bar, till they broke it at the wrist, and then proceeded to apply fireballs to different parts of his person, and, tying his arms behind his back, introduced the iron bar between them, and, by twisting it about, endeavoured to wrench his shoulders out of joint. That this treatment, coupled with the innumerable kicks and cuffs, he thus received from the Raja, and from others at his instigation, nearly deprived him, Sreenath, of life, and that he certainly would have fallen a sacrifice to the ill-treatment he received from the Raja, if the press had not taken up his cause, and, by frightening the Raja, induced him to afford him better treatment. That on his case coming on in the Supreme Court, the Raja endeavoured, by the offer of large bribes, to induce him to forego his complaint, and got cohetrajes or native doctors, to attend him, and would not consent to his liberation till almost all his wounds had been healed. Sreenath Raie further, exhibited sundry marks about his person, which he said were caused by the fire-balls that had been applied to it. It is the intention of Sreenath Raie to institute a suit in the Supreme Court, against Rajah Rajarain, for assault, false imprisonment, and mutilation.

ALLEGED MURDER.—A man named Rutton Paramanick, it is said, has been beaten to death, by Ramcomar Bissau and Goroopershaud Mitro, for non payment of revenue. The supposed murderers are in custody, but strenuously deny the charge, and say, that the dead body of Rutton Paramanick was brought into, and left in their residence, by a band of men, who robbed them of four hundred rupees.

NEW NATIVE DISPENSARY.—A greater spirit of enterprise is being instilled into the natives, and they are coming forward to compete with Europeans, in branches of trade hitherto not ventured on by them. Two of the alumni of the Medical College recently opened, for the first time by natives, a dispensary of English medicines—two more of the students of the same institution, named Ramcomar Das and Gobind Chunder Geopto have followed the example, and opened a dispensary in the How Bazar.

THE WEATHER.—In consequence of bad weather down the river, the dak-boats were at one time, unable to communicate with the vessels off Saugor, and several ships were obliged to put back, some of them in a damaged state.

All communication with the opposite side of the river, ceased at two p. m. on the 4th instant in consequence of the roughness of the river from the strong breeze. Up to six p. m. the dughees remained hauled up on shore, after which the rain came on and changed the weather completely.

The weather during the past week has been very tempestuous, and few boats have consequently been plying on the river. Several of those that ventured to cross it have been capized, and many lives have been lost. Several showers of rain have fallen, which have revived the burnt up vegetation, and if the indigo planters have been ruined by these showers, a good indigo season may be expected.

A contemporary journal had published the following details of the gale, which occurred on the 1st instant :—

“The strong South-easterly gale which blew the whole of yesterday, has, we are sorry to say, done much damage here and down the river. The lower arm of the Semaphore at Diamond Harbour has been broken off, which partially interrupts our telegraphic intercourse. The greater part of the station was completely inundated yesterday, and from appearances, it was likely that the damage would prove far more extensive. We greatly fear, from the state of the wind and the height of the tides at this time, that serious consequences may be apprehended, if a change for the better does not shortly take place—the disastrous events of the same month of 1832 and 1833, from the same causes, are fresh in the memory of many of our readers.

The following is an extract of a letter relating the particulars of the inundation at Diamond Harbour :—

Diamond Harbour, May 1.—With deep regret I have to inform you, that at 9 o'clock this morning with hard gales at S. E. the land of this station and several tracts round has been completely inundated—all the bunds have been much damaged and some of the villages have been washed away—a great quantity of paddy and rice has shared the same fate. A number of cattle of various kinds are also missing, supposed to have been carried away by the flood.

The coal depots belonging to the Hon'ble Company and the Steam Tug Association have suffered much from the salt water having got to them—a great part, moreover, has been swept away altogether by the water.

The water is still rising, and I fear there will be greater damage done during this night than has already taken place—the villagers have taken the alarm and gone off in a mass inland twelve or fourteen miles.

In addition to the above, we have received another letter from a gentleman in the Sunderbuns, who thus describes the damage done to the Salt Works set up by the late Mr. Prinsep at Narainpore, a place only twenty miles distant from Calcutta.

Narainpore, May 1.—The hard gale which we have had here has been attended with a severe inundation—about three of the fields belonging to the Salt Works here have been overflowed; the canal leading from the works has burst through the embankments, and if the gale does not abate to-night, I much fear that the whole place will be under water.

The tides of yesterday and to-day were very high off Calcutta, particularly that to-day—about noon the water came tumbling over the Cause more than knee-deep, and inundated a considerable portion of the plain near the Fort.”

KONWAR KISENNATH ROY AND THE MEDICAL COLLEGE

—A correspondence has been carried on for some time, between Dr. Goodere, of the Calcutta Medical College, and Baboo Dignunier Mitter the Dewan of Konwar Kissenath Roy, regarding some plan for distributing prizes among the students of the Medical College, which that liberal and enlightened native proposes to give. The prize are to be five in number, and their value will be 2,000 rupees. They are to be awarded to the students who may prove most successful at examinations.

THE HINDU COLLEGE.—The distribution of prizes to the alumni of the Hindu College, took place on the 22d instant, the principal part of our aristocracy were present. The Governor-General, at the close of a brief examination, expressed himself in highly eulogistic terms of the improvement the boys had made, and complimented Professor Richardson and the teachers, on their success in imparting instruction to the lads.

LYING-IN HOSPITAL, &c.—The daily papers have published, during the week; a prospectus for the formation of a Hospital for the reception of parturient and sick women and children, and a Dispensary for the accommodation of indigent females at their own residences; and also for the instruction, under a Professor of midwifery, of both men and women, in the science of midwifery, on the system followed at the great Lying-in Hospitals of London, Paris and Dublin. A more praiseworthy or philanthropic undertaking, could not have been contemplated, nor one, in the carrying through of which the public is more imperatively bound to aid. The sum required for the accomplishment of this truly great object, is about twenty thousand rupees, of which amount nearly twelve thousand has already been subscribed in Calcutta, and we hope that the remainder will be quickly forthcoming. Dr. H. H. Goodere is to hold the Professorship of midwifery, in consequence of which he will reliquish one of his offices in the Medical College, a better selection could not have been made, as Dr. Gooden's peculiar aptitude for imparting instruction, and his well-known quality of manner and kind-heartedness, eminently qualify him for his situation.

MR. LINTON'S ORATION.—Mr. Linton's Oration at the Town Hall on the night of the 20th inst., was pretty well attended, and went off very successfully. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, the Chief Justice, Sir J. P. Grant and several other persons of distinction were present.

MR. W. F. NOYENHO.—This gentleman, who was once member of a respectable firm of lawyers, and who has thereto professed the tenets of that sect of Christians called Baptists, on the 19th instant, at St. Xavier's College, in the presence of a numerous and respectable congregation, underwent a religious emigration from his former faith to that of the Roman Catholic Church.

A DREADFUL STORM.—On the authority of a native contemporary we learn, that on the night of the 5th instant, several places and especially Gronanundee Poorachundee, &c. within Sippura zillah, were visited with a dreadful storm, accompanied with hail and lightning, which threw down house, &c.

DARJEELING.—Letters from Darjeeling state, that a number of Annamese labourers, ready to take service as pioneers and clearers, have arrived at the Bright Spot, having been collected for Government purposes; but not being at this moment urgently wanted for such purposes they are available to the public at three and four rupees a month per man. Six hundred convicts were engaged on the Maladah road.

Mr. Halkett has constructed a temporary bungalow, half way between Dinapore, in Titulya, and placed a khimutgar and a bearer in attendance. A new bungalow is in the course of being built at Neechintepore, another at Dinapore and a third half way to the Ganges, on the line of road now under repairs.

FORGIVENESS.—A European named Monson, has been committed to take his trial, for forging a draft for two hundred rupees on Messrs Mackenzie, Lyall and Co.

CIVIL SERVICE ANNUITY.—The Civil Service Annuity is to be allowed for two years more at quarter rate—that is a payment of 25,000 Rs. and all beyond that sum, that has been paid by an annuitant taking the annuity, to be refunded to him, in order that the Hon'ble Court may obtain from this country more information before deciding finally in respect to the memorial of the service sent home in April 1838.

CIVIL SERVICE ANNUITIES.—Of the nine civil service annuities available on the 1st instant under the old rule, viz., at half premium rate of purchase, only two have been taken up. Messrs. Robert Pary Nesbet and Charles Phillips, (both in England) are the two gentlemen who have been declared by the managers successful in obtaining annuities of 1840-41. The sixth and last annuity of the series of 1339-40, accrued to Mr. Archibald

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF THE MILITARY DEPARTMENT.—It is rumoured, that the Registrar of the Military Department, Mr. A. Heberlein, will succeed Capt. R. J. H. Birch, as assistant Secretary of that Department.

Another report states, that Captain MacGeorge (71st N. I.) of the Judge Advocate's Department, is to succeed Captain Birch, on the elevation of that Officer to the Deputy Military Secretaryship.

MR. BELLEW'S HOTEL.—Mr. Bellew's Hotel at Kurugog, a place about twenty-five miles from Dargajing and two hundred and fifty miles below its situated, is now opened for travellers.

TIGERS.—The deaths of Dr. Woodford and of several natives, from wounds inflicted by tigers, have been reported during the month, and a tiger has been shot at Seakhola, Bundipore.

AN EXTRAORDINARY PIGEON.—A young pigeon was lately hatched at the house of Baboo Ooduschand Ghose, at Babba Bazar, with four tails and three eyes. It did not survive beyond a few minutes.

NATIVE CONVERTS.—A Hindu weaver and his wife have been converted to Christianity.

THE ROYAL NUPPIALS.—Salvos of ordnance were fired from the batteries of Fort William, and from H. M. S. the Comary, on the 24th instant, in honor of the Royal Nuptials.

THE QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.—It is said, that a Tomasha, upon a magnificent scale, will be given by the Governor-General, on Her Majesty's birth-day—or the day after, as the anniversary happens to fall this year on a Sunday. Great preparations are making in the pyrotechnical department, and the consumption of meal-powder, from things, &c., is expected to be enormous. It is said, that there is to be a general illumination.

THE SCOTCH BURIAL GROUND.—A new road has been made to the Scotch Burying ground, by Messrs. Burn and Co., which greatly facilitates access to the cemetery.

LORD JOCELYN AND CAPT. OSBORNE.—Captain the Hon'ble W. G. Osborne, and Lord Jocelyn, who lately arrived in Calcutta, have proceeded to China in H. M. Ship Comary.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief will certainly proceed to the Upper Provinces in the cold weather.

LORD MINTO.—A private letter says, "It is current at the clubs, that Lord Minto will proceed to China in the Pique, and when his mission thither is completed, that he will succeed the Earl of Auckland in India."

LIBEL.—The editor of the Chundricer, having lately published an article calculated to throw a slur on the character of Baboo Juggeenauth Persaud Mullick, nephew to the late Baboo Mathoornanji Mullick, of Bankimchurn, as a Hindoo, the Baboo is about to institute an action for libel against him in the Supreme Court.

DYING FROM THE BITE OF SHARKS.—On the 26th instant, about ten o'clock in the morning, as several persons were bathing at Juggeenauth Ghaut, two of them were bitten by two sharks on their legs, at one and the same time, when they screamed out for help. They were immediately taken out of the water, but did not survive long.

MATERNAL AFFECTION.—On the third of April, a Mo-ulman boy, the only son of a widow, who lived at Annundboyra, in zillah Mymensing, died of spleen, when she shut herself in her house, and, setting fire to it, burnt herself to death with the remains of the boy.

A DESEETER.—A deserter was brought up on the night of the 26th of April from the Shepherdess, by Perry, of the river police. This man belongs to the Company's recruits that were wrecked on the unfortunate Duke of Buccleugh. Through some connivance he managed to embark by the consent of the Captain on the Miranda, and was to have gone home in her, but the Miranda putting back, the fugitive was transferred to the Shepherdess. Information of the fact having been lodged at the police, Perry was immediately empowered with a warrant to apprehend the deserter. Before this information, however, was given, the Shepherdess was already on her way down the river, and it was not till she had run down as far as Saugor, that Perry overtook her and captured the run away captive, whom he found completely metamorphosed from a soldier to a sailor. He is in custody now for investigation into the connivance through which he so nearly effected a complete escape.

A NEW BANK.—Not Calcutta only, but all Asia, is threatened with the infliction of another Bank. Lord Clare, has been declared Chairman. Five thousand (only) of its shares are to be sent out to this devoted country, and a board of directors is to be formed here. The scheme has been gotten up, by Mr. Robert Henry Montgomery Martin.

SIR H. FANE.—Letters have been received from the Cape, which mention, that the health of Sir Henry Fane has not improved since his departure from Bombay, and that he was, at the time of writing, in a somewhat precarious condition.

CAPTAIN R. J. B. BIRCH.—The Governor-General has conferred on Captain R. J. B. Birch, Assistant Secretary, the appointment of Deputy Secretary to the Government of India, in the Military Department, vacant on the death of the late lamented Major Cebbi, and Captain Birch is also to have the official rank of Major.

CAPTAIN HILL.—Captain Hill, A. D. C. to the Governor-General, succeeded to the office of Military Secretary, on the departure of Capt. the hon'ble W. G. Osborne to China.

Mofussil.

CHITTAGOON.—There have been some dreadful fires at Chittagong lately, and the magistrate has promulgated an order in the bazaris, that in future all fires should be put out after nine p. m.,—a regular revival of the old Curfew system; and he has threatened imprisonment to the person who may be so unfortunate as to have a fire break out of his house. This has done some good, for the fear of that punishment has made the natives more careful.

AGRA.—The Metcalfe Testimonial village is finished shortly, when it will be opened by a bill from the Members of the Station Civil Service to the Lieutenant-Governor.

The Rana of Ondecpoor, with a camp consisting of 6,000 followers, 1,200 horses, and escorted by Captain Loftie of the 70th Regiment Native Infantry, is about to pass through the Agra district on a pilgrimage to Benares and Gya.

The Metcalfe Testimonial is now complete at a cost of rupees 15,000, which is 2,000 beyond the funds subscribed, and to meet which a rateable subscription will, it is supposed, be called for.

A Mr. Lee Favre, of the Secretary's Office, had his skull fractured by a fall from his horse, and was in much danger.

A subscription has been got up, for the relief of Mr. Billoo, whose house was recently burnt.

Mr. Woolaston's resignation has been followed up by the Rev. J. Moore's acceptance of the Office of Secretary to the Agra School Book Society.

Hajee Khan Khakur has returned to Meerut en route to Landour, much changed for the worse; he is dying they say with chagrin, and declares his innocence of treachery, and that he is punished for speaking the truth. He cannot long survive.

HAZAREEBAGH.—Letters from Hazareebagh state, that the loss of property on the occasion of the late fire in the barracks, has not proved so great as was at first supposed. Cholera of the very worst kind had made its appearance at the station in the middle of this month:—one man of the second Europeans had died on the 16th, and several were carried into the hospital. Up to that time the corps had been tolerably healthy, only one man having died since its arrival at the station—a result that is attributed to the extreme care and attention of the medical officers attached. The Draft from the 1st European Regiment arrived at Hazareebagh on the 15th of April after a march of six months from Cabul. The men are said to be taller and of a better description than those who came out last season.

JESSORE.—At a meeting of Indigo Planters, held at Kaligunge, in Jessore, on the 15th of April, the following resolutions were adopted.

1st. That Mr. M. S. Bell be requested to officiate as Secretary.

2nd. That the Jessore District Committee will most warmly co-operate with the General and other District Committees, in the formation of the Fund for the support of Indigent Planters, and widows and children of the Members of the Indigo Planters' Association.

3rd. That the next General Meeting be fixed for the second Monday of September next, and that the General Meetings take place three times in the year, namely, on the second Monday of the months of February, May, and September.

4th. That the 14th and 16th rules of the General Meeting, be adopted by this Meeting.

5th. That the 8th rule of the General Committee be adopted by this Meeting, with exception of the words "one-third," and that "two" be substituted.

6th. That the first Meeting of the Committee, take place at Babookilly, on the 20th of May next, when the future Meetings will be regulated by the Members.

7th. That three form a quorum, but that no rule passed by the Committee at one Meeting, be considered binding, until confirmed by a subsequent Meeting.

8th. That it be left to the Committee to furnish the Secretary with a press, and funds for stationery and postage, the expenses to be laid before the next General Meeting, for approval.

MEERUT.—The following are extracts from a letter dated Meerut 19 April, 1840—

"Some sepoys, I believe as many as 11, have been lately shugged near Haupper, and Lieut. Mills has gone to enquire into the matter. The poor fellows were on their way to their homes, and came, I believe, from Joodanah and Kunnah.

The 31st arrived here last Friday, (the 10th April). A knot of, en route to Mynpoorie. The Generals Doctor Sahit, gave an entertainment that evening, to the heroes of Khelat. They had also invitations from 11 M. 16th Lancers, the 33d N. I., &c. they continued their march on the 13th.

"People up here are any thing but pleased at the late attack upon our gallant general, in the Agre Ukbar, and the Englishman. The general, I am sorry to say, has not been in very good health lately.

Native States.

MORADABAD—MILITARY MOVEMENTS—We hear from Moradabad that the Nawab of Rampore is hourly expected to die, and a wing of the 21st is held in readiness to march at a minute's warning under Major Campbell and Captain Farmer.

JEYPUR, JODHPUR AND BIKANER—The accounts received from Jeypore, Jodhpore and Bikaner, are not altogether satisfactory. Major Thoresby is represented as most indefatigable in his exertions for the better regulation of the former state, but his efforts are continually thwarted by the insidious underworkings of the Nathawats and their party, who oppose every measure of reform. The revenues are said to be sadly in arrears, and the troops at all remain as worthless a set of vagabonds as ever, joining, whenever they have an opportunity, with bands of plunderers who outrage, uncontrolled by an inefficient Police, render travelling in the District very unsafe.

Nothing beyond promises, it appears, has hitherto been got out of Mani Sing, who, for the third time, is playing his game like a wily old fox as he is.

The Thakoor is represented to be a great thief as ever. In Bikaner matters appear to be even worse—only complaints are brought forward of devastation and robbery.

The Bedawats are more outrageous than ever, and a band of these villains not a long time since, burnt down the village of Khasolee, after having plundered it, and carried off some of the inhabitants as captives. Our frontier is rendered very unsafe, for the travelling merchants and others, who look to the British for protection from these outrages.

JALORE—Letters from Jalore to the 26th March, state, that General Ventura has been ordered to Murree to collect a debt due of four years' tribute by the Raja of that place, and it is hoped that this expedition some particulars may be made known of the iron mine there. General Court has been sent along with the second Minister of State, Raja Singhtangh, to bring the tribute money from Rinnu. Prince Shersing replaces General Avitabile as Governor of Peshawar.

A Pishoor has been holding out a paltry mud fort, called Chawa against Maun Sing's "riff riff." The bearing is cannot take it and the Thakoor laughs at his ruler's army. These internal squabbles do not say much for our final settlement of affairs, and some urgent measures will be necessary to bring Marwar into a state of tranquillity.

SCINDIA—It has been arranged with His Highness Meer Roostum Khan, that an annual fair, to continue during one month, shall be held at Sukkur in the territory of the Umceers of Upper Scinde. The month of January is fixed on, as that in which the merchants of Bombay, Affghani, the Punjab, Western India, Rajputana, may more easily resort to Sukkur. The first annual fair will commence on the 1st of January 1844.

Under the engagements which have been entered into with the Umceers of Scinde no levy will be levied upon the merchants, not their own subjects, on goods in transit on the river Indus. In addition to the foregoing advantages, and with the view of still further facilitating trade, His Highness Meer Roostum Khan has engaged, that no duty shall be levied on merchandise landed and exposed for sale at the Annah Fair held at Sukkur, nor on such portions of it as shall be re-embarked from the place where sale is held, nor re-landed in Scinde.

Colonel Chalmers was daily expected at Ferozepore to take command of the 38th N. I., and a report prevailed that the 2d N. I., were going back to their station.

The arrival of the Snake has broken in upon the monotony of the place, and several trips have been made in her, much to the amusement of the Ferozeporeans, who stare at her magic powers.

The following is from a letter dated Jullalabad, March 26th—"All quiet here, save an atrocious attempt at murder and robbery which occurred last night. Three Native Doctors were returning from the Town to camp, and when about mid way and pretty close to the Hospitals, some villians rushed out of a sort of garden and cut them down. One of the Doctors received 13 or 14 very severe wounds, and this wonderful how he survived for a second: nevertheless he was alive this morning. The other two got off better, but all owed their escape to some people who were on the road, not far behind them. The robbers hearing voices, took to their heels. There was another affair in which several of the King's people were attacked on one of the roads near the town and six or seven wounded.

A letter from Quetta, of the 24th of March, states, that the country around is perfectly tranquil, and the pretty valley of Shawl, is putting on its mantle of green. The political agent is introducing, through the assistance of Dr. Talker, all kinds of European vegetables, especially potatoes. More land has been brought into cultivation this year than has been known for years. The climate is enjoyed by every one, the thermometer never rising 4 degrees in the 24 hours, and in a house the warmest period seldom above 75d. The Bala Rangers are spoken of as a very useful body of men, always conveying their charge in safety through the pass. So little drink is now apprehended, that officers, form small parties, and go on fishing excursions in the neighbourhood of the Pass.

JULLALABAD—A letter from Jullalabad, dated 26th ult., states, that the person of Doi Mahomed had been violently seized on by the King of Bokhara, and that the Doi is now in close confinement. It appears that though under surveillance and closely watched, he still enjoyed the range of his own camp, and the free intercourse of his followers. Things were in this state, when a night attack was made upon the Camp by a body of the Bokhara troops, in which two of the Doi's sons were killed and he himself seized and placed in rigorous confinement. Information of the event, reached Sir W. Macgibbon on the 24th of Feb.

Another letter says:—"With regard to the Russians, we have had various reports—one that comes from Ashroob, viz. Herat, and given out by the Envoy is, that the Russian advanced Division of 16,000 men was attacked at night by a horde of horsemen and severely hampered; that cholera had broken out in their camp, and they were hauling 40 miles from Khiva. This report is strictly denied, but if a horde of plunderers can beat 16,000 Russians, they will stand but poor chance with our troops. Some time ago a report of this sort reached us from Bokhara, another, and the latest, is from Herat, who says, that the Russians are again moving. The general opinion is, that their object is to get to Bokhara—and if they succeed in reaching Khiva after marching over so great an extent of country, it will be an easy journey from Khiva to Bokhara, and at the latter place they will procure cattle and supplies in abundance, in fact every thing they require, and from Bokhara to Khoktum is about 30 marches, their route would be through a country, particularly fertile, so that they would have no necessity for a Commissariat. But from Khoktum to Caubul, a distance of 250 miles, the road leads over passes 12,000 feet in height, in other places through narrow gorges, and for many miles, is so narrow that 2 horsemen cannot ride abreast and several officers, who have been that road, say, that it is impossible for any army to force those passes if they are occupied by our troops—therefore we ought to have a few strong regiments of infantry always cantoned at Caubul, or Chogjar. As for cavalry, they are perfectly useless, and only in the way in this mountainous country and require infantry to protect them. In fact between Ghuznee and Peshawar, there is not a single piece of ground that cavalry could act on to any advantage."

Letters have been received from Sir Alexander Burnes, asserting that a Russian army of 24,000 cavalry and infantry, with 70 pieces of artillery, had positively arrived at Khiva, and were making every arrangement for their onward progress to Bokhara. Sir Alexander places implicit reliance on this, and strongly urges, that should it prove true a British army should cross the Hindoo Caucasus. Despatches to this effect have come down to the Governor General, and, it is conjectured, that as a first step an army of observation consisting of four regiments of infantry, one regiment of cavalry and some artillery will be formed.

A letter from Jellalabad, of the 3d April, confirms the report of the Russians being at Khiva, and of their intention to march upon Bokhara, as well as the imprisonment of Dost Mahomed at the latter place. Every thing at Jellalabad was tranquil, and officers were in the habit of riding from Candahar to Jellalabad, attended only by three or four horsemen. Captain Conolly, in his way, joined the Envoy. The Shah and the Mission were to have marched for Caubul on the 20th instant. Sir W. Cotton with the 2d Light Cavalry and 2d and 5th N. I. on the 25th, the European Regiment and 4th N. I. proceeded to Kussu, about 25 miles from Jellalabad."

A late letter of the 9th instant, from Jellalabad, states, that the great convoy had arrived there on that morning, without having experienced the least molestation from Khyberces, or having suffered in any kind.

Myra—The following is an extract of a letter from the Khyber Pass, dated 15th March—

"You ask me what I think of the Shah's service, I think it is decidedly a good service, and one which in the course of 2 or 3 years will be much sought after. The pay is good, the duties not very heavy, and when we receive our supplies regularly, we shall get on very well. At present we have considerable hardship to contend with, but there is one consolation—one is saving money from the sheer impossibility of spending it.

"The Khybernes have been playing their pranks again—murdering the unfortunate Cameron, who was brought into our camp with seven, and not forty wounds, as the Delhi Gazette has it; but they were fearful cuts, the head nearly severed from the body, and the worst of it is, we are likely to gain little satisfaction for the outrage. The Khybernes have agreed to restore the plundered property, but refuse to deliver up the perpetrators of the deed. This they should be compelled to do, or we may look forward to many other similar acts of cruelty. Every thing is quiet there, however, a report, that the advance of the Russians had been attacked by the Khiva horse, and got sadly mauled, and that the main army had been obliged to halt, in consequence of cholera having broken out in their ranks."

Caubul—The last advices from Afghanistan reach to this 25th ultimo. The friendly treatment of Dost Mahomed, by the King of Bokhara, who, it is now said, is about to send an embassy to the Russians, is confirmed.

It is given out, on the authority of the politicals, that the Russians, have not been checked, beyond the delay caused by the severe cold and the great loss of camels, and that they are again in active advance, while tears are entertained of their reaching the vicinity of Bokhara—to which it is now positively asserted their views point—by the end of the approaching summer. The Chief of Khoktum has taken fright at the designs of Bokhara, whose ruler threatens to attack him, and has sent a deputation to Dr. Loid, earnestly entreating immediate assistance.

This aspect of affairs is somewhat different to what has been reported for some time past, and has increased, it is said, the Envoy's desire of concentrating the forces in Afghanistan at Caubul, and even the talk of advance upon Balk is again revived; while a reinforcement of troops, viz., a Dragoon corps and two of infantry, with a proportionate number of Native regiments, some of which are to come from Bombay, is insisted upon as about to take place.

Another Caubul report, and the latest, gives out that Khivah has actually fallen into the power of the Russians, and that the latter, have committed great atrocities upon the inhabitants. This, in the absence of intelligence from Captain Abbot, which, however, is daily looked for, cannot be tested as very authentic, though such an event is far from improbable.

BAMIAN.—The following interesting account of the capture of a mount fort by the Bamean detachment, has been published during the month.

Bamian, March 16.—Branching off from this in a S. W. direction is another valley, that of Fouladi, running to the foot of the Snowy Hills. At about seven miles distance are a considerable number of mud forts, the majority being situated on some table land at the base of the mountains. These forts belong to two chieftains, Akor Moheb and Shah Nusser Beg, of whom the former is nominally supreme. The valley of Fouladi is well cultivated, and from it we have lately obtained a considerable quantity of forage, the forts in our immediate neighbourhood having been nearly exhausted. The inhabitants have previously shewn themselves very willing to supply our wants, but, on the 13th, as our Commissariat Agents were, as usual employed in the purchase of forage and a few cows attached to the mission had gone to a fort belonging to Shah Nusser, to procure a small quantity of grain, much to the surprise of our people, the Hazarehs, not only refused to supply them, but, having assembled in considerable numbers, commenced shooting at them, and finally drove them off. To a threat from one of our men, their only answer was, "that we were hajj-fers, and might bring our fouze and guns, as soon as we pleased." The Political Agent immediately sent to Shah Nusser Beg, to inquire what his intentions were, and to ask whether he wished to be considered a friend or foe; in the mean time however, troops were held in readiness to march against the refractory Hazarehs, should it prove necessary, and about noon, the next day, no conciliatory answer having been received, the party marched out. The detachment consisted of two six-pounder guns horse artillery (under Lieutenant Mackenzie) city-hut horse artillery troops as cavalry, 50 Afghan sowars, and four companies the 4th light infantry (under Captain Hay), the whole being under the command of Captain Garbett. The Political Agent accompanied the detachment.

The first fort, which we reached, was 450 yards from the base of the table land (which I before mentioned), the summit of which was crowned by men, armed with matchlocks. The inhabitants of the fort immediately shut their gate; and, on Lieut. Rattray (Assistant to the Political Agent) advancing to parley with them, refused either to open 'or to come out'. All attempts at an amicable arrangement having thus failed, the Political Agent requested the Commanding Officer to try what he could do; and, accordingly, the guns were brought up; one was placed in position to bear upon the gateway within twenty-five yards, covered by flanking parties of infantry, and the other gun opened a fire of shrapnell at 400 yards, on the party crowning the heights in front. Unfortunately, the entrance to the fort was directly opposite to this table land, so we were exposed to fire both from front and rear, and soon after we had commenced, a third fire opened on us from some heights on our left. Those in front at first cheered and seemed inclined to come down, but they contented themselves with keeping up a fire from matchlocks and jinnahs, while they fired away from the loopholes in the lower bastion. For a short time, the fire was rather warm; but some few rounds of shrapnell and round shot soon cleared the heights in front, while a party of infantry and Rattray's Afghan horse, charged up there on our left, and drove the Hazarehs before them. Meantime, Lieut. Mackenzie had succeeded in breaking down the fort gate, and had likewise fired several rounds into the lower bastion, from which the defenders kept up an annoying fire. As soon as the entrance was clear, Lieutenant Broadfoot led in the storming party; and, in less than an hour, from the commencement of operations, the fort was in our possession, but the Hazarehs still held out in the tower, with the most determined obstinacy. The Quartermaster Sergeant and some of the Gorkahs, made several attempts to force an entrance, but from the narrowness of the door to the upper story, (in which the defenders were) they were unable to accomplish this. Yield they would not but continued to fire on our men, till at last we were obliged to have recourse to the dreadful expedient of setting fire to the husa in the lower part of the tower, but even this failed to have the desired effect, they still continued resolute. At length their fire ceased, and we sent an Hazareh to them to tell them to come forth. The answer was, that not a man was living, none but women and children. Such was the case, the obstinate fools had resolutely suffered death, and from among the defenders of the fort only one man lived to tell the tale; this one was taken prisoner in one of the houses. The women and children, driven up by the fire, sorted themselves on the top of the tower, and with considerable difficulty we at length succeeded in getting them down in safety. In the mean time, the men who had been driven from the hills on our left, were pursued by the Afghan horse, until they sought refuge in some forts on the table land. These were the property of Meer Mohab, and on Lieut. Rattray meeting that chief, he declared that the men were not acting under his orders, promised that we should receive no further molestation from his forts, and vowed, that Shah Nusser was a fool, and that he would bring him in himself,—by force, if necessary.

Although the capture of the fort scarcely occupied an hour, yet, before the works of destruction and of saving were completely accomplished, the day was so far advanced, that it was determined, that nothing further could be attempted that day. In order to reach those forts of Shah Nusser situated on the heights ahead, we should have been obliged to haul the guns by manual labour upon an exceeding steep hill side, this would have occupied so much time, that it would have been night-fall before we could have opened on any of the forts a head; each being the case, and Hamzan being not little more than six miles distant, the detachment returned to the lines, to await the result of some further endeavours, which the Political Agent wished to make, to put an end to the business without more bloodshed.

The troops behaved very well throughout, and the steadiness of the young Gorkah sepoys did them infinite credit. They were for some time exposed to three fires, while they could do but little in return; indeed, with the exception of the flanking parties, who were employed in checking the fire from the fort, they were obliged to remain inactive for a considerable time. As for the Hazarehs, those without the fort displayed the most resolute courage, it is difficult to find any reason—any motive for this obstinate resistance which they made. Lord had previous to our moving out against them, made every exertion to settle affairs amicably; wishing to investigate into the cause of the quarrel, and promising that justice should be dealt to the offender, of whichever party he might prove to be; but every attempt was fruitless; they were resolutely bent upon resisting, and actually went so far, that if we wanted husa we must send our guns! Perhaps the forced security of four walls gave them confidence. However, they have now learnt their mistake and by all accounts they are in great consternation, and ready for flight to the hills, should we again make our appearance. Meer Mohab has come in, but Shah Nusser has not yet shown himself; he thinks his head in jeopardy at present; and is, they say, waiting till our wrath shall have cooled a bit.

Considering the short time that this affair lasted, and the small number of men engaged, our loss has been rather severe.

Killed—Artillery.—1 European Laboratory Man, (Gunner 4th Company 21 Battalion.)

Wounded Horse Artillery.—1 Trooper, 1 Syce, 1 Horse, (since dead.)

Gorkah Corps—14 Privates, (2 since dead.)

Afghan—Horse.—1 Suwar.

The European was shot through the head by a gnat ball from the hill in our front, while trailing the gun directed against the fort. All the wounds are gunshot, and most of them severe—two more of the Gorkahs are expected to die. It is difficult to gain any accurate information as to the loss sustained by the enemy. One account says, that they have lost 40 men, viz., 10 killed in the fort, 1 killed and 4 wounded by the Afghan horse, on the heights of our left, and 31 killed and wounded by shrapnell on the hill in our front. Another account states their total loss at 53.

HERAT.—The defences of the city were proceeding well, and it is supposed, they will, when completed, render Herat impregnable, though a sum of about ten lacs will be expended upon them. Kamran is still the slave of his Vuzer, Yar Mahomed, who exercises unbounded control over his Master, and insults our Officer and Politicals at every opportunity. From all accounts he appears to be a running rogue and not devoid of talents. It is suspected that he is in close correspondence with Persia and perhaps with Russia, and certainly, has it in his power, should his inclination point that way, to play us false by selling his Master and the good and well fortified city of Herat to one or other of the abovementioned powers. The account of the race of selling his Prince's subjects—men, women and children—into slavery, is corroborated, and he is represented as having almost depopulated the beautiful valley of Herat by these means. The Finot, Major Todt, and the other Officers, are scarcely better off than prisoners, working on the ramparts, and if they ever get away, it must be secretly and by flight. Kamban has no participation in these arduousnesses; he sticks to his bottle, and drowns his accumulating cares, but on every opportunity evinces attention and respect for our compatriots. It is said that he has invested the Major with a star worth 18,000 rupees, and has presented the other Officers with valuable shawls.

Madras.

CHOLERA.—Cholera is raging in the district of Poodo-paak.

MYSON.—Cholera has made its appearance in Mysore and was raging dreadfully.

THE CHINA SERVICE.—The artillery intended for the China service, marched down to the Presidency early on the 13th instant, and embarked on board the ship Rustonjee Cupisjee. The men appeared in high spirits, and were cheered all the way.

The Sappers and Miners, with the Carnatic Ordnance Artillery, embarked on the John Adam at the same time.

The whole were attended to the Beach by Sir Hugh Gough, K. C. B., the Adjutant General, and a large portion of the staff at Head Quarters. There was also a large concourse of spectators to witness the departure of the troops.

Bombay.

DESPERATE AFRICAN.—On the 18th instant, at a quarter past nine, P. M., a Seedy endeavoured to pass the Bazar gate, having in his possession a sword and cress which he was desirous by the sentry to go back and to deliver them up, in conformity with the regulation, of the garrison. He refused, and an attempt was made by the Havildar to take them. The Seedy drew the sword and made several cuts at the Havildar and sentry; the musket of the latter hit cut six times, besides cutting his belt and coat in two or three places. The Havildar, seeing the sentry in such danger, called on him to charge bayonet. He gave two thrusts and the Seedy fell dead. An inquest was held, and the verdict was justifiable homicide.

BANK SHARES.—Some Bombay Bank Shares were sold by public auction, on the 20th of March; the first lot was sold at 25 per cent premium, the succeeding lots at 22 and 21 per cent, the average of the whole was 22 per cent.

LIEUTENANT GIBBARD.—A Court-Martial was held on the 30th December, on Lieutenant William Gibbard, 15th regiment native infantry, placed in arrest, and brought to trial by order of the Commander of the Forces, on the following charge, viz. For highly irregular conduct, most disgraceful to the character and reputation of an officer, in having between the 22d and 31st December 1838, at or near the village of Kowtunge, within the State of Sewant Warree, when in Command of a Detachment of troops on duty there, atrociously caused 5 persons, who had been taken Prisoners by a party of irregular troops under his command, to be summarily put to death, by being shot, without due authority and warrant for so doing.

The Court found the prisoner guilty and sentenced him to be dismissed the service, which sentence has been confirmed.

PILOT, POTTER.—Lieut. Potter, of the Indian Navy, who was in charge of the Semiramis when she ran on shore, has been dismissed.

MR. WM. MCCALLUM.—Mr. William McCullum, the Editor of the Bombay Gazette, died of Cholera on the 27th of March, leaving a young wife unprovided for.

WRECK OF THE HANNAH.—The Hannah, was wrecked at the mouth of the Haymree, a branch of the Indus, on the 17th of March. The crew and passengers were saved, but property to a very considerable amount, was lost in her.

WHIRLWIND.—The James James states, on the authority of a private correspondent, that the city of Baroda was visited on the 29th ultimo, by a whirlwind which left several of his Highness' large subjects uncovered, having carried away the roofs or thickets of sundry domiciles as well as a double-poled tent from the Residency. Some old trees also, remarkable for age and strength, are said to have been laid in the dust.

PIRACY.—The Chubook reports another case of piracy in the neighbourhood of Bombay, but does not give his authority. It is said, that a small craft named the Tander Bar, Dolbha Linal, belonging to Merwanjee, Vagoojee, Merchant of this place, carrying a few chests of treasure, jewels, goods and other cargo, to a considerable amount, which left the harbour on the 31st ultimo, had proceeded as far as Bassein, when it was attacked by an armed boat. She was not only completely plundered, but seriously disabled.

STEAMERS FOR THE PACIFIC.—Two steamers are to be despatched from Bombay to China with all practicable despatch. The Atalanta is now being fitted up for service, and will start for the Eastward in the course of this month.

MONUMENT OF THE LATE SIR ROBERT GRANT.—The Atalanta has brought the marble monument which was some time ago voted by the Chamber of Commerce, in honour of the memory of the late Sir Robert Grant. It is to be placed in the Cathedral.

THE LAST STEAM MAIL.—The overland mail left London during the night of the 4th of March, and the Steamer Atalanta came to anchor at 3 o'clock in the afternoon of Thursday in the harbour of Bombay, so that the time of passage was 35 days an unprecedentedly short period.

CAPTAIN McMAHON.—Captain McMahon, military secretary and aide-de-camp to Lieutenant General Sir T. McMahon, Bart., K. C. B. has been appointed to act as Deputy Adjutant General to Her Majesty's forces at Bombay, on the departure for England of Lieutenant Colonel Macdonald.

HIS LATE HIGHNESS THE ANGRIA OF CHANARA.—The death of the young posthumous son of his late Highness the Angria of Chanara, took place on the 9th instant, after a short illness. According to the treaties existing between the Angria's state and the British Government, the territory will descend to the next collateral heir, Sambhijee Angria, who is now holding a prominent position at the court of Semdia.

THE RAJAH OF SATTARA.—The Rajah of Sattara, who intended to pay a visit to the Governor and the goddess at Prabar, has been obliged to give up his intention, at present, in consequence of a disturbance having broken out in the Konar Patta. His highness has despatched some horse and foot under the command of Doulut Khan Rauldar, to suppress the sedition now.

IN DISOBEDIENT MOVEMENT.—A detachment of one hundred and fifty men from one of the regiments of native infantry, proceeded on the 16th April, at a few hours' notice, to Jigud, in the southern Cancon, to quell some insubordinate movement in that part of the country.

CHOLERA.—The cholera is still committing its ravages in Bombay. The mortality in the native regiments amounts to seven or eight men daily.

PORTUGUESE EXPEDITION TO MACAO.—Letters from Goa, state, that orders from the Portuguese Government came by the Overland Mail to the Governor of that settlement to prepare a body of troops, and to send them, with all possible despatch, to Macao, in order to aid in the defence of that city.

IMPORTANT TO MARINERS.—His Excellency the Governor of Bombay has been pleased to direct, that the following table of the latitudes and longitudes of several places in the eastern seas, furnished by Sir Gordon Bremer, captain, H. M. S. Alligator, be published for general information:—

Lizard Island (Torre's Straits) watering place.—Latitude 14. 41' 16" S., longitude 145. 27' 42" E.; variation, 5 24.

Dilli (cruiser house).—Latitude 8. 35' S.; longitude 125. 40' 55" E.; variation, 0 24.

Dubha Point (harbour).—Latitude 5. 45' 45" S.; longitude 134. 20' 10" E.; variation, 3 30.

Olhat (Timor Lieut.).—Latitude 7. 54' 45" S.; longitude 131. 29' 33" E.

Ki Doula (Ki Island).—Latitude 5. 33' 40" S.; longitude 132. 55' 1.

Ki Island (N. extreme).—Latitude 5. 15' 20" S.; longitude 133. 16' E.

Vardate (N. E. Extreme).—Latitude 6. 55' S., longitude 132. 5 E.

Port Esington.—Point Smith, east entrance, latitude 11. 55' 50" S., longitude 133. 11' 42" E.; variation, 1 16. Pierre Head Victoria. Latitude 11. 21' 35" S., longitude 132. 12' 27" E.; variation, 1 4.

Burmah.

RANGOON.—From recent accounts received from Rangoon, it appears, that the British and foreign merchants, as well as all foreigners residing in that place, have been placed in a very unpleasant dilemma, by the promulgation of a ludicrous order of the new Governor. Actuated by a superstitious idea, that a wily has thought proper to put his veto on the sale of poultry, and to impose a fine upon such of the subjects of his golden footed Majesty, as may happen to disobey this order. This act of superstition on the part of the Governor, is attributable to his belief in metempsychosis, or the doctrine of the transmigration of souls, which Pythagoras is said to have borrowed from the Burmese. Hereupon, the English, Armenians, Chinese, Moguls, Jews and Chulians, who are used to submit upon poultry, finding themselves thus cruelly deprived of their comforts, have presented a petition to the Governor, praying the rescission of this obnoxious order, which is both unnecessary and uncalled-for, as far as it regards the foreigners.

CORONATION OF THE RANGONER.—The intelligence of ships having arrived from Madras lately with troops, connected with the withdrawal of the Residency from Rangoon, and the reported imminent detour to China, is said to carry conviction into the minds of our friends on the opposite side, that mischief of some kind is concocting for them.

WARRIORS ARMED.—There are rumours current of some considerable number of men having been marched down from the upper country to below Prome, but it is difficult to assign the degree of credit to be given to rumours of that kind, for an armed host sent down from the Capital to Rangoon or elsewhere, with dispatches, is often magnified into numerous war boats full of troops. The most probable report among the many that are current, is that of the King being too much taken up with the ceremony of his approaching coronation to trouble himself about his neighbours.

Penang.

Penang papers to the 28th of March, have been received during the week, from which we perceive, that Government had been laying in a stock of several hundred pigs, oxen, &c., at Puaung, for the Chinese expedition, and their purchases, had caused the price of provisions, in the island, to rise very considerably. Our grateful and faithless allies, the Siamese, were endeavouring to throw difficulties in the way of the Prince of Wales' Island Commission, in the collection of provisions, by prohibiting the exportation of every description of cattle from their territories, and they had actually stopped two hundred head of oxen, which had been collected and were on the point of being transported to Penang. The Steamer Diana, accompanied by a sloop-of-war, had proceeded to the Northward and Eastward, in quest of a famous pirate named Frank Mamund Sand, who had lately seized one of the Bird's Nest Islands, which had been farmed by a British subject from the Siamese Government, and it was expected, that the steamer and her consort, would succeed in falling in with the pirate's fleet.

Singapore.

Singapore papers to the 30th March, have been received, during the week. They state, that the two seamen, Williams and D'Cruze, who murdered Captain McGill, of the Bugard, have been tried, found guilty, and executed. The conduct of Mr. Ball, the Chief Officer, during the time the murderers were murdering his Captain and brother officer, was, according to his own showing, most pusillanimous, and deserving of the severest reprehension. But for his extreme cowardice, the lives of the Second Mate and Captain might have been saved. Although armed with half a dozen pistols, he was afraid to come out of the cabin, where he had taken refuge, though he resorted to the brandy bottle for spirit.

DUTCH SETTLEMENTS IN SUMATRA.—It is said that the Dutch possessions in Sumatra are no longer to be dependencies of Java, but created a separate and independent government, and that Java was to furnish out of her own revenue a sum of four millions of guilders to establish and maintain the new government. It also says, that a new governor-general was on the way out.

Siam.

Advices from Bangkok to the 29th ultimo, have been received and the commercial intelligence, is anything but of a satisfactory nature. The king had, it seems, come to the determination of being the only merchant and ship-owner in his dominions, and in that capacity had resolved that no one should be supplied with produce until he himself had completed all the purchases he wished to make. Boat loads of sugar that had been purchased and paid for, by the Bombay ships, were seized, while on their way down the river, and a government agent put on board of each, with others to compel them to proceed along-side king's vessels and deliver their cargoes on board—a proceeding which had been remonstrated against in vain both by buyers and sellers. The trade of Siam must soon be extinguished under a continuance of such a system as this, and his Majesty has begun to conceive himself entitled to regard the claims of foreign merchants, for a continuance of intercourse on the accustomed footing, with the same disdain that is manifested by his majesty of China, whose recent measures he is kept well informed of, and seems desirous to emulate.

China.

News from China to the 13th of March, has been received.

SIR GEORGE STAUNTON.—A report has obtained among the Chinese, that Sir George Staunton has been appointed Agent for the British Government in China, and is now on his way out. The Hong merchants have already addressed a letter to him to be delivered immediately on his arrival. The Chinese likewise are anxious to know whether the report they have heard, of Capt. Elliot having incurred the displeasure of his government, be true.

CHINESE FLYING FROM MACAO.—A great many Chinese families have left Macao, being apprehensive of the threats held out of the Portuguese by Lin being carried into effect. Nothing has, however, yet happened to disturb the tranquillity, and the Keun-min too informed the shopmen of the bazar, that they might quietly continue their avocations without fear of an attack from the soldiery, who would, for the present, not be allowed to march upon Macao.

STOPPAGE OF ALL TRADE.—An edict from the emperor was received at Canton on the 12th of February, enjoining of the local Government as to the policy of excluding the trade of all foreign nations without exception, and authorizing the governor, to give effect to the interdiction without referring to Peking, should he deem it politic so to do. But the most intelligent Chinese are of opinion, that there are too many opposing interests to admit of such course being adopted.

THE WARREN.—After the Hong merchants had settled for the purchase of the Danish ship Norden, for Sp. drs. 45,000, the government have receded from the bargain on the ground of her not being worth so considerable sum. It is thought in Canton, that they do not mean to persevere in their project of employing foreign shipping.

ACCIDENTS, OFFENCES, &c. ABORTIVE ATTEMPT OF THE CHINESE TO BURN THE BRITISH TRILL IN TOONKOO BAY.—About 10 o'clock on Friday morning, two small junks were observed to arrive among the shipping in Toonkoo bay. About half past one on Saturday morning, they were observed coming down from the eastern end of the bay in flames; but the wind being too southerly, they drifted in shore of the shipping through the mass of small Chinese boats and foreign schooners; one touched the Derat schooner, and set fire to her bow, but the crew succeeded in extinguishing the fire with the loss of the jib and damage to the bowsprit. These junks, or rafts, were filled with all kinds of combustibles—cotton, oil, bamboo gunn, or rather tubes, thickly mounded in several tiers, that threw out fire balls as the fire reached them. Some of the ships shipped their cables, and the Cowessee Family was aground for a few hours, but without receiving any damage. It is the opinion of an experienced eye witness that had there been twenty such junks chained together the shipping would have been greatly injured.

This abortive attempt, however, has had the good effect of awakening the captains and officers of the ships to the danger to which they are exposed, and they are therefore, more on the alert; several have bent sails, shifted their berths, and got springs on their cables.

Another attempt was made to burn the fleet on the succeeding night, but from some was unknown cause, was not persevered in.

About $\frac{1}{2}$ past 9 on Saturday evening the 22d ultimo, an English gentleman was knocked down and stunned by some Chinese in the street at the back of the Piazza Grande, and then robbed of a gold watch and chain valued at Sp. drs. 205, and of six dollars in cash.

On Friday last, about eight o'clock in the evening two Portuguese soldiers were attacked by Chinese banditti near the Sincio square, one of the soldiers was dangerously wounded, and is now in the hospital.

On Sunday evening Captain Dunbar, of the Cowessee Family, shot Mr. Milne, the chief officer of that vessel, in a mutiny. Captain Dunbar is in custody on board H. M. S. Volage.

Reports have reached Macao of an affray between some of the crew of the Balcarras and the Chinese on shore; two lascars of the Balcarras were speared, and are said to be mortally wounded; but we do not know the full particulars of the affray.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT OF THE ATTEMPT TO FIRE THE FLEET AT TOONKOO.—On Friday night the 28th of February, at about ten o'clock, two junks on fire, to which a number of smaller boats filled with combustibles were attached, were seen to drift towards the shipping from the Cupping moon passage, but wind and tide carried them clear of the shipping, nearer in shore, among a number of small Chinese boats, some of which were burnt. The only damage sustained, was by the schooner Derat having her jib and bowsprit set on fire, which was, however, soon extinguished, and by the Cowessee Family, in shipping her cable to avoid the fire ships, having got aground, but she got off again without sustaining any damage. The boats of H. M. S. Volage were employed in towing these fire ships out of the line of danger. They burnt out, after having drifted on shore, without explosion, though it is said that they were filled with bamboo stuffed with gunpowder, broken glass, small stones, &c. On the following night another attempt at firing the fleet was made, but without success. The tide on Friday night was very slow, and the weather fine, two circumstances much in favour of the fleet, which might have suffered considerably, had the attempt of the Chinese been on a larger scale and better managed. As it is, however, this first trial will but too likely be followed by others which may possibly be more dangerous, the Chinese, from experience, being enabled to give a finer direction to their fireships.

On Saturday night the 29th February, Captain Dunbar, of the Cowessee Family, shot the chief officer of that vessel, Mr. Milne in a mutiny and wounded him so badly, that his life is in the greatest danger. Captain Dunbar is at present in custody on board H. M. S. Volage. The quarrel which led to this melancholy event, is differently reported.

EXPULSION OF THE SHAHADAH FROM SHIRAZ.—Letters from the Gulph state, that Shiraz was in a state of anarchy and confusion, bordering upon rebellion, in consequence of the intolerable despotism exercised by the Shahsadeh upon the people.

This worthy, it appears, had taken it into his head to rule his peaceable subjects with an iron rod, and the latter, no longer able to bear this galling yoke of tyranny, had men en masse against the despot, and threatened to expel him from the city! The shops were shut for several days, and every thing was at a standstill. During this civil broil, about one hundred persons fell on both sides, and the wounded amounted to upwards of two hundred. A Minister Plenipotentiary having arrived from the Court of Teheran, took the earliest steps to quell the disturbance, by insisting upon the irreligious Shahsadeh to quit the city instantly, and thus to dissolve a connexion which subsisted between him and his subjects, and which had proved so unkind to the latter. Mirza Nebi Khan, for so is the Minister called, endeavoured to conciliate the inhabitants of Shiraz, by pouring healing balm upon their griev'd hearts, and promising to use his influence in promoting the general welfare and happiness of the governed. He had put himself in correspondence with the cabinet of the Court of Teheran, and awaited the instructions of his Royal Master as to the appointment of a mild and peaceable prince or nobleman in the room of the expelled tyrant.

DISTRICT CHARITABLE SOCIETY

This meeting was a special one, and was convened to receive the Report of a Select Committee appointed to consider the best mode of carrying out the proposition of establishing an Alms House and a Work-House for the paupers of this city. There were about forty gentlemen, European and Native, present, and Sir Edward Ryan presided.

The President opened the business by reading an extract from a former Report of the Society, stating the origin of the question, which they were on the present occasion convened to decide upon. It was in a former meeting determined to appoint a Select Committee to investigate the subject and to call a Special Meeting, after three months to receive the Report of this Committee. The Report had accordingly been drawn up, and the present was a special meeting to receive it. But ere putting the question of establishing an Alms-House to the meeting, the President desired to learn the opinion of the Native Gentlemen in regard to a Vagrant Law, which it was proposed, should be suggested to Government for enactment, and without which, there would be no use of an Alms House. Mr. McFarlan framed a Vagrant Act with this view, and the substance of it, the President would read to the Meeting for the opinion of the Native Gentlemen present.

Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore here took the opportunity to intimate to the Meeting, that he was fully advised to say, that the Native Community at large were unanimously favourable to a code of Vagrant Laws applicable to this country. That so far from their being at all opposed to it, a Meeting had been convened by them some time ago, for the consideration of this subject, which arose in this way. A great backwardness becoming apparent among the Native community in regard to Charitable subscriptions, a Meeting had been called to enquire into the cause of this backwardness, when it appeared, that the general impression was, that the present mode of bestowing charities was entirely inefficient, beggars being permitted to roam the streets and lanes, and annoy people at their private dwellings. Besides, by the present system, imposture was but very profitably encouraged, so that charities conferred were in effect unclaimed at all. Hence arose the general dissatisfaction of the Native Community to make further donations. It was in consequence canvassed, and to some extent decided, to erect an Alms House, Baboo Mohitlal Dey volunteering to give up a suitable spot of ground for this purpose, and Rustomjee Cowasjee coming forward to defray the expenses of the building. It was at this Meeting also decided, that in order to carry out an Alms House effectually, some restrictions would be necessary to prevent the wandering of beggars in the streets, and that, therefore, a Vagrant Law was indispensable. While this question was pending before the Native Committee, the proposition of the District Charitable Society was started, and, in consequence, the proceedings at the former were kept in abeyance, to await the issue of the subject moved by the latter. It would hence appear, that the native community were altogether favourable to a Vagrant Act, particularly as the annoyance of beggars in the native division of the town far exceeds what it is in the European division.

Sir Edward Ryan here read the substance of the proposed Vagrant Act, by which the following acts will be interdicted, prostitutes wandering about the streets or indulging in riotous conduct, &c. Persons wandering in the streets for the purposes of begging or encouraging children to beg, any persons making a view of a person in a degrading manner, any person making indecent exposure of their persons or making any obscene gestures with a view to insult females; persons exhibiting wounds or sores with a view to exact charity, &c.

Some discussion arose whether in regard to the second clause above mentioned, namely, preventing beggars from going about the streets, &c. It would not be viewed in the light of an oppression by the Native Community. But it was soon settled, that all classes would be glad to get rid of the importunate and serious annoyance resulting from the practice of the beggars infesting the public streets and bazars, and asking alms from door to door.

Some conversation also took place as to how far Native police-officers should be empowered to act in respect to the Vagrant Law, by which, it appeared, that to prevent abuses, the authority should be as limited as possible. That Native Officers should only be authorised to take vagrants into custody, only when they are put in charge by some respectable complainant and not at their own accord; but that European Police men might be empowered to take up vagrants whenever and wherever they may fall in with them.

The Honourable President next proceeded to put the question of the Alms-House, and, in regard to this question, he intimated the Meeting, that Mr. McFarlan had framed Resolutions to propose, which were as follows, and were moved by Mr. McFarlan, and seconded by Baboo Dwarkanath Tagore.—

That the present practice of the Society, which distributes relief almost wholly in money, is inherently liable to abuse, and has had injurious effects in the encouragement of pauperism. Proposed that it be discontinued.

Public charity should provide nothing for the poor beyond wholesome food, decent raiment, and necessary shelter, so that it should invariably exact an adequate return of labour from all able bodied paupers who receive relief.

Resolved, that the principle be acted on in the administration of the Funds of the District Charitable Society as soon as the following arrangements are completed.

To carry out this principle—

Resolved, that a new and Alms-House be erected.

A moderate sum of money will be required for the purchase of ground and the construction of buildings.

Resolved, therefore, that Government be petitioned to grant to the Society an adequate portion of ground within the limits of the town, on which may be erected the requisite buildings, and that subscriptions be opened to provide a building fund.

This Meeting being of opinion that a Vagrant Act is now urgently required for Calcutta, and since it seems probable, that the first effect of the plan of distributing Alms now proposed will be to increase the number of vagrant poor.

Resolved, that Government be petitioned to pass a Law restraining persons from begging in the streets, bazars, and thoroughfares of the town.

Resolved, that on receipt of the reply which the Society's trust Government will accord to the 4th and 5th of these Resolutions, a General Meeting be held to consider the course hereafter to be adopted.

In reference to the first of these Resolutions, some further conversation arose, at the close of which Mr. W. Prowse proposed an amendment, which being put, was lost by a minority of twelve, opposed by twenty one. The amendment was as follows:—

That the Society be restrained as much as possible from the granting pecuniary relief, but that the Central Committee should continue as heretofore to exercise a discretionary power in offering pecuniary aid in such cases as may appear to them proper.

The only other business done on the occasion was the passing of the following resolution, which was in due course adopted:—

Resolved, that it be referred to the Special Committee, whose Report has now been received, to prepare an Address to the Government in communication with the President, suggesting that a Vagrant Act be passed and that assistance be given to the Committee in carrying out the above sketched plan by the grant of ground or otherwise, as to the Government may seem proper, and that Messrs. Ponnomo Konnar Thakoor, Rastmojee Gowaje, and Moore Lall Seal, be added to the Committee for the preparation of the Address.

The meeting dissolved about noon.—Hark. May 1.

THE HINDU BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The annual examination of this institution was held at the Bishop's Palace yesterday morning. The Venérable the Archbishop, and several other clerical gentlemen, he noted the examination with their attendance and took a very active part in the business of the day. As the designation implies, this is a charity school, intended for young native youth, and, considering all circumstances—that the monthly expenses of the institution does not exceed eighty rupees, that the management is entirely native, and that the principal visitor is the literary Rajah Kishor Bhanuwar, Secy., considering all these circumstances, the instruction imparted in this school, is no doubt good in its way, though inferior to similar native institutions in Calcutta.

The first class were examined in the History of Greece—this is in the justling style of who was Salom? and if any person by the name of Xerxes was ever born or written? They were also questioned in the denonims of mechanics and Murray's grammar. In regard to the former, they appeared to know just as much about it as the "young men" of the Merchant's Institution, and in grammar, one of the youths gave a hand some specimen of mental acuteness. He was asked what part of poetry was nothing—in which he replied, that nothing was not a substantive, because a noun must be a thing—nothing was not any thing, ergo, not a substantive.

There were essays also—one on the Advantages of the British Possessions in this country, which was noticed of polysyllables on abstrusely stringing together the venerable Atchidion was left to enquire if it was the last of its own progeny. And then the whole was crowned with imitations, which were synonymised in the delivery, that the very authors of the pieces would have found it difficult to know them.

We did not remain to see the end of the examination, but, no doubt, it ended as creditably as it began.—Hark. May 12.

ASIATIC SOCIETY'S MEETING.

A Meeting of the Members of the Asiatic Society was held last evening and, notwithstanding the unfavourable state of the weather, was very well attended. The Hon'ble Sir Edward Ryan, President, in the Chair.

The proceedings of last Meeting were read and confirmed.

The President read a communication from Dr. O'Shaughnessy, the present Acting Secretary, desiring to be relieved from the duties of that situation, as he found the duties too onerous, and his time too much employed to him, as sufficiently devoted to them as he could wish, but Dr. O'S. would be happy to resign, and that he could in the Society's interest and in the physical department Mr. C. C. Seaford, from the same cause, also tendered his resignation of the Secretaryship in the Oriental Department, but would be happy to continue his assistance in far as was in his power.

Sir Edward Ryan then mentioned, that at a Meeting of the Members of the Council of Papers Mr. Forbes had been elected and he had expressed his willingness to perform the duties, as Acting Secretary to the Society—but was not taken into notice as a qualified person. Sir Edward Ryan was subsequently informed that the former Secretary would be able to resign. Under his name it is therefore proposed that Mr. Forbes be appointed. He doubted not that Mr. Sutherland, who is the only orientalist here having promised to continue his services, in that Department, and Dr. O'Shaughnessy also is in the physical, the Society's Journal would continue in as flourishing a condition and enjoy as great a circulation as it has hitherto done.

Mr. H. F. Prowse seconded the proposition, and also urged the Society to give to both the retiring Secretaries for the great attention they had placed the Society under for the last year, in their having conducted their duties with so much zeal and usefulness.

Dr. C. Grant concurred with Mr. Prowse in what he had expressed, and added that if any proposal had been made for the appointment of Secretary, he would have opposed it on the ground mentioned by the President, he was happy, however, to see only an Acting Secretary was to be chosen. The best thanks of the Society were due to those gentlemen who had now tendered their resignation—for he was extremely sorry for it, but his sorrow was a little mitigated by a hint which had been given if the Society would still have them and. For one part of the announcement he was particularly satisfied, as to the superior evidence of the Society's Journal, the Society was fortunate in having the services of a able and distinguished literary character as Mr. Forbes—its progress would be out of place, but he congratulated the members in having secured the talents of such an admission, and he deemed not the efforts would be adequate to their anticipations.

The resolutions were then put from the Chair—That the resignation tendered on behalf of Dr. O'Shaughnessy and Mr. Sutherland be accepted, and that Mr. Thomson offer to act as their Secretary be received. And that the thanks of the Society be given to the two Secretaries for the praiseworthy manner in which their duties had been performed.

The next question brought before the Meeting was the appointment of Curator to the Museum—the President mentioned that there had been many applicants for the situation—the Committee of Papers had gone carefully into the merits of each of the candidates, and had selected Dr. F. Thomson, whom the Committee now submitted to the Meeting as, in their opinion, the most eligible person and well qualified to be Curator. It was proposed that he be only acting Curator at present, but his residence here he likely to be permanent, when he can be employed—from the great demand there is just now for persons in his profession it is uncertain how long his stay may be among us, but at any rate his services will be secured for two or three months, and the President doubted not they would be attended with happy results, for Dr. Thompson was in every way competent to fulfil the duties of Curator, with satisfaction to all parties. It was, therefore, proposed by Dr. H. H. Smy and seconded by Mr. O'Shaughnessy—that Dr. F. Thomson be appointed to act as Curator to the Society.

There being no other business to get through, the Meeting separated.—Calcutta Courier, May 7.

MEETING OF THE ORIENTAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.

The half yearly meeting of the Oriental Life Insurance Company, was held last Saturday, at the Office of the Secretaries, Messrs. Feiginsan, Brothers and Co., J. W. Craig, Esq., in the Chair—

Various papers and statements were laid on the table for inspection, shewing the following in regard to the operations of the Company during the past half year, namely—New policies granted being in number 121 on 120 lives, and aggregating in Co's Rs. 1,01,200, policies renewed for the same without the aid of fresh certificates of health Rs. 2,07,990, policies outstanding on the 30th April 1860, Rs. 1,32,993, lapsed policies on six lives hence Rs. 11,103, balance in favor of the other policy 23th April, Rs. 31,242 6, Government paper £147 6 10 8, and surplus available for immediate distribution Rs. 63,671 7 4.

For report of the Secretary was also read, in the names of the directors, a report by the President, giving the statement of dividend of Rs. 12,500, which will yield Co's Rs. 75 per share, and separated.

Co's Rs. 12,500 to be divided rateably among shareholders who have distributed premium.

The following Resolutions were then proposed and carried unanimously.—

Proposed by Baboo Dwarka Nath Tagore, seconded by P. Davidson, Esq.,—That the account and statement submitted be passed as correct and satisfactory.

Proposed by C. Deane, Esq., seconded by Baboo Dwarka Nath Tagore,—That a dividend be made of Rs. 12,500 which will yield Co's Rs. 75 per share, and Co's Rs. 12,500 in payable dividends among shareholders, who have contributed premium from 1st November 1859 to 30th April 1860.

Proposed by Baboo Dwarka Nath Tagore, seconded by C. Deane, Esq.,—That the Members of the existing Committee of Management be requested to continue their services.

There's being voted to the Chairman, the Meeting separated.—Hind. May 11.

INDIGO PLANTERS' MEETING.

Proceedings of General Committee, May 4, 1860.

PRESENT.

C. F. RICHARDS, Chairman { R. I. R. CAMERON,
J. ALLEN, { G. VINEY,
J. BRUCE, { R. WILSON.

Mr. Comptroll presented a letter from Mr. Abadie, complaining of the interference by a number of individuals who have hitherto been respected, but in his reporting the avaricious by using the rate of rent which he offers in land to one up to per English.

The Comptroll in expounding to a number of the present representatives, has only recommended the rate of rent to be fixed at 10 per cent, upon the estimated value of the land, but in reducing the rate, and in preventing the present.

Read a letter from Mr. Abadie, complaining of the interference by a number of individuals who have hitherto been respected, but in his reporting the avaricious by using the rate of rent which he offers in land to one up to per English.

This matter will be proper for the consideration of the local Committee.

Mr. Brae reported that the Planters of Bessarabia, and with a number from neighboring districts, had been told and elected a Committee, and advised only to report to their association. At the meeting, which was generally attended, the members present expressed a willingness to provide a charity fund, provided that during one year per annum the first year, and once the fund, and afterwards four years per annum, and the assistance of the present, and the assistance.

Resolved, on the motion of Mr. Allan, seconded by Captain Vint, that the Committee congratulate the planters of Jessore, on the exemplary and commendable activity, with which they have organised an efficient Committee, and express its great satisfaction at the liberal disposition evinced by them for the provision of a benevolent Fund.

Passed six bills, for establishment for April, Rs. 36-6-10 rent of office for a quarter year, Rs. 120; a dozen chairs Rs. 60; box for papers and inkstand, with bottles, Rs. 35; almirah, Rs. 35; advertisements, Rs. 2.

According to notice on the 15th ultimo, by the General Meeting held at Collegunga, the Committee held a Meeting at Bahadurpally this day, at 12 o'clock, for the further consideration of the interests of the association.

MEMBERS OF THE COMMITTEE PRESENT.

Messrs. George Austin, Thomas Brae, A. C. Dunlop, E. G., Dubois, D. D. Lethbridge, and R. McNair
M. S. Bell, Secty.

VISITORS

Messrs G. Roine, E. Laplane, D. Oman, Rt. Wight, J. Driver, Wm McNair, and Surroop Roy.

Mr. George Austin (according to alphabetical rotation) was called to the Chair.

In furtherance of the views of the General Meeting on the 17th ultimo, respecting the illegal acts in many instances of the magistrates, it was resolved to require tangible evidence, upon receiving which, a proposition would be made to the General Committee in Calcutta in their future consideration, and to be circulated, throughout the different districts.

Proposed by Mr. A. C. Dunlop and seconded by Mr. E. G. Dubois, and carried, that the 7th proposition of the General Meeting on the 15th ultimo be considered to apply only to the proceedings of the Committee.

Mr. Brae mentioned, for the consideration of the Committee, that the General Committee, though warmly encouraging with them in their views towards the raising of a Charity Fund, were afraid that 5 per cent on the salary of assistants was perhaps too much. Mr. Brae also asked if it would not be fairer to establish a per centage upon the income of assistants instead of upon the salary, as it would then come equal upon all whether drawing salary and commission or merely salary.

The following Bye Laws and Rules (arranged partly on the Indian Association's) were then, after mature consideration, resolved upon by the Committee for the general use of the Planters in this district, and to be submitted to the next General Meeting, viz.

1st.—That planters or assistants, or Secretary standing in the Indigo line, be allowed a voice to vote, and after 3 years be eligible to any office.

2nd.—That as the value of a factory in Bengal depends on the proprietor's right to cultivate indigo over a certain tract of country, it is necessary for the welfare of factories that every Planter shall recognise this as an inalienable right of his neighbour.

3rd.—That where boundaries exist, specifically laid down by documents, sufficiently defined, which a Planter can produce, such boundaries are to be held as settled without the power of change, except by mutual consent of proprietors and without regard to distances.

4th.—That a village or land which has been once cultivated in indigo, for a factory, shall belong to that factory without reference to distance. The Planter cultivating for two seasons or crops, shall have a right then which cannot be annulled, but if of a less period, it may be reclaimed and decided by the Committee of this Association.

5th.—That when lands are newly formed in villages, or those that are not defined in the foregoing clauses of boundaries, nor have been cultivated previously, they shall belong to the Planter and factory that get a proper right to them, or they may be divided equally.

6th.—That a Planter has a right to build as many out works or factories as he chooses in his own bounds; but this gives him no claim or right to extend his cultivation to the injury of his neighbours. In case of a new country being entered into for the purpose of establishing new factories, that no new built factory shall be allowed to be within the distance of four coss or eight miles of an established factory.

7th.—That no Member of this Association shall purchase any factory, whether working or shut up, within the boundary of another, without his consent being first asked, and either obtained or refused, and in the event of any member purchasing or hiring a factory which has a right to cultivate Indigo, within the boundary of another, that he shall transfer to that other whatever may tend his line, at the same rate that it may have been purchased at, or at the valuation the Committee may think proper to put upon it.

8th.—That a Planter's bounds or boundary insures to him within its limits, whatever those limits are, the following privileges, viz. all cultivation as Indigo, advances for coolies, advances for boats, advances for carts, and all other things required to cultivate and manufacture indigo; this not to affect established claims to coolies, boats or servants of any kind which the Planter from time to time may have employed or been in the habit of advancing to in villages of other's boundaries. That right is to continue on the Gomasta system.

9th.—That all Planters referring any business or dispute to the arbitration of the Committee of Planters, shall enter into mutual penalty bonds as the Committee may direct, to whatever amount they may think proper. That in cases where any Member of the Committee may have an interest in the decision, he cannot act in the case, and that in all arbitration cases, three of the Committee shall form a quorum, and shall be named in the arbitration bond.

10th.—That all the Members of the Planters' Association, joining this division or district, shall not entice or encourage each other's servants to leave their employ or masters, nor employ such people within one year, nor allow them to be in their factories for that period. This includes every kind of indigo servant, either assistant, mullah or peon, and all such persons as are mentioned in clause 7th of these Bye Laws.

11th.—That any Member being knowingly guilty of breaking this foregoing clause (10th) shall not be fit to hold any office of this Association, and deviating from the foregoing rates, shall be expelled the Association.

12th.—That a registry of all assistants in want of situations be kept by the Secretary to this division, also of Gomastahs (and other servants) that may apply to the Secretary for employ, or any other persons that may apply for situations.

13th.—That the Committee and Secretary shall make out an estimated Registry of Indigo made yearly in this division, by the end of September each year, and forward it to the General Committee in Calcutta so that a general statement may not appear in London to Planters' injury, as it generally appears the brokers' interest to give an over-statement.

14th.—That there be monthly Committee Meetings on the 1st Monday of each month, to commence at 12 o'clock at Bahacolly, excepting those months that the General Meetings take place, and that all Members of the Committee be enjoined to attend on these days, unless prevented from ill health, or absent in Calcutta, &c, &c, and that should any Members not be able to attend, they intimate their reasons to the Secretary beforehand.

15th.—That no Member of this Association be allowed to threaten, abuse or ill use any one of the Association or go on disputing, but to refer to the Committee within the period of two General Meetings. If after the complaint be laid before one General Meeting and he not accede, then he shall be expelled the Association, and the Committee take up the matter and assist the complainant, with advice and influence, and should a proper case of necessity be made out then, that the Committee may, with the majority of the Association, take up the oppressed case, and even render pecuniary assistance to get justice done.

Several Members of the Committee, made mention of the ruinous effects proceeding from the orders of the Magistrate to break up Indigo; but as no statement of these illegal proceedings was shown, the Committee could only enjoin all Members to bring forward authentic documents.

Messrs Mr Dutt de Dombal and E. Dubuis de Saran, presented their entrance fees and subscription for 1840, and I Bihoo Sanyoohunder Roy was proposed to be a Member of the Association.

Mr. Brag presented for the use of the Secretary, stationery, &c., the expense of which and pens, &c will be submitted to the next General Meeting.

The Committee finding the first Monday in June to have very near at hand, resolved to change the next Meeting to the 1st Monday in July.

Thanks were voted to the Chairman and to the Secretary for having undertaken the duties thereof voluntarily.

[Hark May, 28.]

To the Editor of the Bengal Hurkaru.

SIR,—From the relation in which some of the agents in Calcutta stand, towards parties in England engaged in the commerce of this country, I beg to send you my opinion and award in two cases recently decided upon the provisions of a new enactment, authorising in every case the empanelling of jurymen or assessors, by which, as a precedent, your blue friends, and then supporters, will easily debate how matters stand.

I believe, that in both instances an appeal will be preferred in the end, but in a decision of award in the native, I do not think that the publication will or can in any way, bias or prejudice the real merits of the two cases at issue.

Yours obediently, &c,

Homo.

POUNCEY—1.

Richard Barnes, versus the Representatives of Eubank and Co

J. J. Cave, J. Brandt, Geo. Palmer, and C. Holmes, Esqrs., assessors.

Opinion and award.—We are of opinion, that Mr. Richard Barnes, the plaintiff, was undoubtedly the proprietor of one half of the Rangpore and Mysacolly concerns, but there is no clear proof of his having been dispossessed of his half share against his own consent; consequently, we do not find him entitled to the whole of the claims brought forward by him. It is, however, clear, that the whole of that concern is now in the possession of the agents of Messrs. Eubank and Co., and it appears, that Mr. Barnes has all along applied for the value of his half share, and not for the possession of it; and the defendants have made him offers and led him to expect arrangements of that nature. We therefore think him entitled to the original cost of his half share, viz., 15,000 rupees; and also to the interest on that sum from the time of Mr. Moore's bringing in charge of the concern (which we find to be the 1st of May 1834), to the date of payment.

It also appears, that the sum of 5,000 rupees was expended for various advances, for the concern, by Mr. Barnes, before he left the factories; to the half of which sum, viz., 2,500 rupees, we consider him justly entitled, with interest on the halves of each separate portion of the 5,000 rupees, from the effects of which the concern is debted with each of them, as per the memorandum at the foot of the account current with Mysacolly, interest to be calculated, as all interest charges in the transactions between the parties appear to have been, at 10 per cent. per annum.

We consider none of the other items of claims in this suit to have been clearly proved, Mr. Barnes not having clearly produced any regular accounts or books to prove them.

The defendants having produced no proofs of having paid 15,000 rupees to the plaintiff, as stated in their reply.

We consider Mr. Fitzpatrick merely a superintendent, and acting for the agents of Messrs. Eubank and Co., and therefore do not consider him to be in any way liable in this case.

PUNCEY—2.

Adam Scott and Co., the representatives of Eubank and Co., versus W. Duff.

J. J. Cave, C. Holmes, and J. Brandt, Esqrs., Assessors.

We are of opinion that Mr. Thomson and Award Henry took Thomson's half share in the Moharaj gunge concern, jointly with Mr. Duff, from the commencement of 1830. To this fact Pearson, Hudson and Holmes have given affidavits, and as the plaintiff has failed to produce to the contrary, we consider that the losses of 1830 ought to be divided equally between Duff and Henry.

It appears, that Duff has failed to prove that the indigo was shipped abroad without his knowledge, and it ensues after he made objections, the indigo was sold in auction.

It appears that the amount of cash drawn is the same on the accounts of both parties, with the exception of rupees 2000, on the 25th August, 1831, in the account of Rangapane, but which appears to be an error of half, as the totals of the accounts of both parties agree. The indigo also, in the accounts of both parties, agree in the number of chests.

We consider, that the agents are entitled to the usual charges of 2½ per cent. commission and that the 1 per cent. commission charged in the revised accounts is inadmissible, as it was not charged in any of the former account current furnished to Duff by Hurry.

It does not appear to us that Duff is entitled to receive any salary for the management of Moharaj-gunge concern, as we have no proof of any agreement being made between him and Hurry regarding salary.

It appears to us, that Malcolm, Buchanan and Co. advanced cash to Duff to carry on the Singesser concern after Hurry stopped payment, and that the sum of £2,134 3 8, the proceeds of cargo sold in London and also, a sum of rupees 1,632, an enormous entry is still due to Duff by Mr. Stewart's letter, against which sums there appears, a balance payable by Duff of rupees 1,933 6.

Messrs. Holmsey and Cave do not find any evidence that Messrs. Ewbank and Co. are liable for this account and think it may be a separate transaction of Messrs. Malcolm, Buchanan and Co., for though Messrs. Malcolm, Buchanan and Co. were appointed attorneys for Messrs. Ewbank and Co. in 1832, yet they were known as a house of business, independent of their dealings with Ewbank and Co. Messrs. Holmsey and Cave, therefore are of opinion, that Duff has failed to prove his claim of these amounts to be recoverable from the Plaintiff in the suit, viz., George Urs Adams, attorney of Ewbank and Co., but that it ought to be left to Duff to bring forward these claims against whomsoever may be concerned at a future time in a clearer form.

Mr. Brand is, however, of opinion, that as Messrs. Malcolm, Buchanan and Co., held a power of attorney from Messrs. Ewbank and Co., executed in 1832, and acted upon it, they advanced Duff after Hurry stopped payment as agents of Messrs. Ewbank and Co., and not on their own private account, which no documents on the file shew, therefore that Messrs. Ewbank and Co. are liable for the amount due to Duff.

LATE GANGES INSURANCE OFFICE.

A meeting was held on Saturday noon in the office of Messrs. Allan, Paton and Co., of the Solvent Members of the Ganges Insurance Office, to consider the disposal of the funds. There were present on the occasion J. W. Cragg, Rustomjee Cawasjee, K. R. McKenzie and John Allan, Esq. Mr. Allan informed the meeting that Mr. John Low, was unable to attend on the present occasion from severe illness.

He then directed the attention of the meeting to the balance sheet which was laid on the table and from which there appeared on hand 2453 Rs. in cash and 12,560 Rs. in Co's paper.

Mr. Allen, next brought to the notice of the meeting a letter addressed to him by McIntyre and Co., dated the 13th May, advancing a further claim on account of the goods shipped on the Phoenix. This letter was submitted to Mr. Limond for his opinion, who considered the claim advanced both "wrong" and contrary to equity.

The meeting, therefore after a short deliberation on the subject, was of opinion—

That the claim was inadmissible, because the underwriters do not insure the markets, nor guarantee the time, for the arrival of goods.

In reference to the disposal of the funds it was resolved,

That the remaining funds be divided among shareholders, who have paid up the 1,000 Rs. contributions, and that the claim on the partners of the late firm of Charterton, McKillop and Co. be left to Mr. Allan, to recover from the assignee, on such terms as he may consider equitable, without any responsibility to the shareholders. — *Hark. BONDED WAREHOUSE MEETING.

The half yearly general meeting of the Bonded Warehouse, was held on the premises yesterday at noon. There were about a dozen shareholders present, and J. F. Catherant, Esq., was in the Chair. The object of the meeting being to inspect the accounts, and elect Directors in the form of Messrs. Martin and White, account statements and lists of rather papers resembling such documents, were laid on the table, and taken up by the subscribers, but as they were not read out, we are unable to speak of the facts and items therein contained and developed.

The Secretary read a report, accompanied with copies explanatory remarks, which also is not more powerful in record, first, because we were apprehensive of mis-statements in reporting certain statements which were mouthably read, only secondly as we were not allowed to take an abstract of the report or even look at it, because we were unwilling to publish in full the details of financial statements, such legitimacy pertains to the advertising columns of a newspaper.

The vacant Directorships were filled up by the election of A. de H. Laipent and W. Earl, Esqrs.

In addition to the above, a proposition was made by R. J. Fagshaw, Esq., relative to certain overplus building materials, which caused some desultory discussion, but was finally referred to the consideration of the Directors. We do not give the particulars of this discussion, nor the apprehension that it might militate against the interests of the Institution.

Thanks being then voted to the Chairman, the meeting separated.

[With reference to the proposition brought before the meeting by Mr. Bagshaw, we have to assure the Secretary Mr. Limond, that had he simply stated his contention that giving publicity to that portion of the proceedings would in any degree prove inimical to the prosperity of the Bonded Warehouse, instead of enforcing his request for the suppression of it, by the uncoincidental threat of exclusion from future meetings if we published it, we should most willingly have attended to that or any other reasonable request politely made. But such was the apparently studied concealment of every thing from us by the Secretary, and such the particularly discourteous treatment we experienced, that it was pretty palpable that the presence of any one connected with the press was to their great annoyance and source of uncomfortable dissatisfaction. The meeting, however, was public, and that is the only reason why we were present; and we suggest to our friendly gentleman, whether when we attend a general meeting to the discharge of our duty, we should not receive a little more civility from their secretaries, than harsh and discourteous insinuations of exclusion and expulsion.—Rangpur Bengal, Buxar, —Luck, May 19.
